I. R. A, FAVORS EXCHANGE OF POLITICALS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 14.—Replying to the letter of the German workers' delegation to the Soviet government concerning the exchange of political prisoners with the capitalist states, the International Red Aid has sent the delegation an explanation from which the folllowing is extracted:

"We warmly greet your letter to the German trade unions and to the German social-democracy upon the proposal to move the German government to release the political prisoners. The International Red Aid has also sent a letter on the matter to the Soviet government asking if the latter is prepared to agree to an exchange of prisoners upon the basis of the letter of the International Red Aid to the Second International. The International Red Aid repeats its willingness to undertake measures with the Soviet government for the exchange of political prisoners upon the basis proposed by you.

"At the same time the International Red Aid declares its willingness to act as a mutual information center upon the situation of the political prisoners and to undertake a mutual assistance for the political prisoners."

PARK PALACE MEETING OPENS W. P. CAMPAIGN

N.Y. Socialists Reject All Unity Efforts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 14.— The opening gun of the New York mayoralty campaign of the Workers (Communist) Party took place at Park Palace, when Ben Gitlow, Communist candidate for mayor, was the main speaker of an enthusiastic ratification rally.

The meeting was presided over by Comrade Jack Stachel, who in his opening remarks, stated that the Workers (Communist) Party, does not hold meetings only at election time, like the other political parties, but participates in the struggles of the working class the entire years.

Wolfe First Speaker.

The first speaker, Comrade Bertram D. Wolfe, agitprop director of District No. 2, of the Workers (Communist) Party, said that if you examine the candidates for mayor, you find that Waterman, the republican candidate, is no hired man of Wall Street, but a part of Wall Street himself, a millionaire in his own name, who offers the rule of Wall Street to New York, which we must fight against, for we know what it has done in Latin-America, Europe, Asia and Africa.

Walker, the democratic candidate, while a member of the state senate, was a member of a committee which has as its purpose the regulation of the sale of food in the state, and at the same time he was on the payroll of the meat trust. The elementary question is separating the workers from the capitalist parties, and tonight, if the socialist party has any interest in the working class, they will join in a united labor ticket.

How did the socialist party answer the appeal for a united labor ticket? They refused and added one more crime to their many betrayals of the working class.

Weinstone Pans S. P. Slate.

William W. Weinstone, candidate for comptroller, said that the socialist party has nominated as their candidates, a reverand for mayor, and as his associates Solomon, a lawyer and Beardsley, a labor faker. Today, 6,000 textile workers in New Jersey mills have had their wages cut. Look into the platform of either the republican, democratic or socialist parties and see if you can find any mention of wage reduction.

Comrade Gitlow, in speaking, said that in this country labor does not think for itself, but follows either the republican or democratic parties. Any worker interested in his own interests should fight to do away with the exploitation, unemployment and all the ills of the present system of society. It is necessary for the working class to think and act as one unit.

The Communists in the United States come out, with the slogan of a labor party, amalgamation of the unions, recognition of Soviet Russia and for the end of the capitalist system and for the victory of the working class.

All workers should support the Workers Party in its fight for a labor party.

The meeting was also addressed by Shachno Epstein, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Julius Codkind, J. O. Bentall and Rebecca Grecht.

Before the meeting opened, four large open air meetings were held in the neighborhood of the hall to acquaint the workers with the fact that the ratification meeting was going to be held.

EXPERIMENTS IN PHILIPPINES WILL MAKE NATIVES SLAVES OF A GIGANTIC RUBBER INDUSTRY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 14.—Great Britain is to be seriously challenged in the world monopoly of rubber that she enjoys at present, if reports of experts on the potentialities of the Philippine Islands prove well-founded.

In the early years of the use of the automobile and the consequent rising demand for rubber for tires, shrewd British capitalists began stealthily to acquire control of the sources of this commodity, until recently that nation has been in a position to place such heavy duties upon her rubber industry, that it goes a long way toward paying interest on her great war debt.

American capital was so busy producing automobiles for the world market that it overlooked the vast fortunes to be made in the auxiliaries of motor cars.

Forces to Produce Rubber.

Now that the British monopoly on rubber has forced the price so high as to be almost prohibitive, it threatens the whole auto industry. Hence a mad scramble for new sources of raw material.

Experiments in the Philippines prove that rubber trees can be raised here equally as well as they grow in the tropics. The notion that rubber can be grown only within a radius of ten degrees of the equator is now exploded as a myth.

Supply of Cheap Labor.

A survey recently conducted not only proves that rubber can be raised on the Mindanao and Palawan islands, but that the cost per acre to bring the trees to full bearing age—seven years—is but $90 as compared with $400 on the plantations in Samatra, South America.

In addition to this advantage for capitalist investors, there is an inexhaustable supply of potential wage slaves and coolies that can be driven onto the plantations. It costs but $5 to transport a native workman from the island of Cebu to Mindano, and there are more than one million of them available.

The United States at present consumes 400,000 tons of rubber per year. This could be supplied by the product of 2,000,000 acres, less than one-third of the public domain in one province alone.

Thus the competition between the imperialist nations drives them to draw into the industrial hells of capitalism ever larger numbers of the colonial peoples already in political bondage to the great powers.

Moscow Chinese Hold Great Mass Meeting to Aid Canton Govt.

MOSCOW, Sept. 9.—(By Mail.)—A big public meeting in which many thousand Chinese participated took place hee on Sept. 6. Mr. Wang Leng summarized in his speech the latest events in China saying that English imperialists are endevoring to annihilate the Canton government by organizing assassination of its prominent leaders, and also by giving to Chang-Tso-Lin money in order to arm Chinese counter-revolutionists.

Beware British Prapaganda.

Referring to tactics of imperialists who are fighting against the revolutionary movement, Mr. Wang Leng said that furious campaigns of the English press against the U.S.S.R. tries to represent this movement as a product of "Soviet intrigues" and thus justify reprisals against Chinese revolutionists and thereby conceal the truth from the workers of Europe and America, whom they would like to leave totally ignorant of the tremendous wave of the nationalist movement in China.

Must Support Canton.

In conclusion, Mr. Wang Leng emphaized the necessity for Chinese revolutionists to rally together and and make stronger efforts, because the defeat of the Canton government would be a most serious blow to the movement.

After Mr. Wang Leng spoke Mr. Brown, representative of the British Communist Party, who pointed out out that the struggle of oppressed China excites lively response not only in Eastern countries but also amongst the European proletariat including the English.

All speches, were met with enthusiastic applause from the audience. The resolution was carried unanimously expressing protest against attempts of English imperialism to strangle the revolutionary movement in China, and calling upon the Chinese masses to take the only right way of a decisive struggle under the Kuomintang banner and in alliance with the U. S. S. R. against the imperialistic powers.

CHICAGO BANK CLERKS' OFFICIALS WARY OF GREEN

Afraid Charter May Be Revoked

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Repudiation of sponsorship for the radical resolutions introduced at the American Federation of Labor convention by their delegate and president was the principal action of the Chicago Bank Employes' Association executive board as soon as it could take action on the matter. The union is directly chartered by the A. F. of L. executive council and both its property and its existence are imperiled if it runs counter to federation policy.

Pres. Joe Shafir of the union (which is Federal Local 17,709) is one of the senior clerks at the Amalgamated Trust & Savings, Chicago's labor bank. He is a known red, his membership in the Workers Party being no secret. He was sent to introduce two resolutions on unionising bank clerks, both of which passed the convention.

But he then stood responsible for a sheaf of resolutions embodying the radical political and industrial program of the left wing, including hostility to labor banking that is not of a truly co-operative character.

The union board, when it learned of Shafir's action thru the press, wired Secretary Frank Morrison of the A. F. of L. that he was not under instructions to introduce the additional resolutions and that the union repudiated them. This action is expected to save the union charter tho it may not avert action by the A. F. of L. executive council to throw out known Communists from its ranks.

Austrian Delegation of Working Youth Is Impressed by Russia

MOSCOW, Oct. 14—The Austrian delegation of working youth returned to Moscow after visiting Kharkov, Baku and Tiflis. They declared that they had receivedverygoodimpressions concerning the general economic and cultural progress in the Soviet republics, particularly with regard to the youth movement, the care of the youth and popular enlightment.

The delegates declared themselves prepared to inform the Austrian working youth in detail upon the real situation in the Soviet Union. Several members of the delegation have declared their intention of leaving the ranks of the social-democratic working youth organization and going over to the Young Communist League.

Gagging Central Labor Councils

The American Federation of Labor convention, whose delegates holding the real power are officials of national and international unions, and who hate the remnants of rank and file expression provided by the city central labor bodies like poison, took another crack at the membership when they authorized the executive council of the A. F. of L. to take over the property of central bodies whose charters have been revoked.

This is a move against the left wing activities of a number of central bodies which, because of their closer relations with the union membershp, are more responsive to its wishes. It is axiomatic that what steps have been taken towards building a militant labor movement and arousing political consciousness among the organized workers have been taken by central labor councils. This has been followed by the threat to revoke their charters and after some difficulty they have been whipped into line.

The proposal to confiscate their properties (many central labor bodies own labor temples, office furniture, libraries, etc.) is designed to strengthen the hands of the conservative elements and give them additional argument against insurgent action.

The decision itself is proof of the fear of A. F. of L. officialdom of the growing left wing movement. A few years ago this issue could not have been raised because the only difficulty the executive council had with central councils was that they occasionally took the wrong side in jurisdictional disputes and had their charters revoked. But these incidents were only family squabbles without any difference in political policy.

Today the revolt of central bodies always centers around some issue like support of a labor party, amalgamation, sympathy for Soviet Russia, the presence of Communists as delegates from local unions—all of which are fundamental questions for the American labor movement and which indicate an entirely new trend of thought and action in the ranks of organized labor.

This is the real important thing in connection with the latest attempt of the A. F. of L. officialdom to hamstring and gag the union membership.

No Agreement at Locarno

The line of division at Locarno becomes clearer as the prophets of an early settlement are forced to explain in more detail the cause of the continual delay in reaching an agreement.

Germany is willing to sign the security pact as it affects the French and German frontiers provided no reference in it is made to her eastern boundaries. The capitalist press which has been devoting columns of space to the more or less minor differences over the Rhineland territory and trying to conceal the nub of the whole question—guarantees for the states on the Russian border, Poland in particular—is unable any longer to pervert the truth with platitudes.

Germany has so far refused to agree to a united front against the Soviet Union that would be implied in the signing of a document recognizing the present eastern frontiers and unless the allied imperialists can get her consent to this, the whole scheme for confronting Soviet Russia with a steel wall, which was to have been consummated at Locarno, falls to pieces.

In the meantime, both Germany and Poland seem to have been driven much closer to Soviet Russia, as evidenced by the new treaties recently signed by them.

Our impression is that the allied governments are now engaged in a last minute effort to save their faces and bring home from Locarno some kind of an agreement that can be hailed as a victory for their diplomats. Unless the German government representatives make a right about face and Poland is whipped into line or bribed by a huge loan from Wall Street, the Locarno conference will have failed of its object—to close the gap between the counter-revolutionary forces of western Europe made by the refusal of Germany to allow allied troops to march across her territory for a joint offensive with Poland against the Soviet Union.

Gold Movements and the Working Class

The new movement of gold from London to New York is further corroboration of what we have been saying of the continual decline of British industry.

British imports increased last month more than $30,000,000 over the preceding fiscal month, while her exports decreased $1,515,000 making a net increase in the adverse trade balance of $31,515,000 for the month.

The exports of heavy industry (iron and steel and kindred products) decreased $1,110,925 cmopared with the same month last year, and the textile exports dropped $922,355. Coal exports declined $10,391,000 compared with last September.

For the first six months of 1925 British imports increased over the same period last year by $281,032,985. During the same six months exports declined by $50,190,275.

These figures are conclusive proof that British industry no longer dominates the world markets. Even in her own colonies serious inroads are being made by the products of native industry and American firms.

Britain is no longer paying her obligations in commodities—she has to pay in gold.

Shattered British industry is not an attractive investment even for "patriotic" Britons and liquid capital will continue to leave Great Britain for the United States where the surplus of gold is causing the financiers to sit up nights devising schemes to prevent a wild inflation.

Foreign loans with their accompanying military adventures and increase in armaments, militarization of the American working class, are fruits of U. S. financial supremacy.

There is a world of tragedy for the working class in the following paragraph culled from a capitalist news service dispatch under a Panama date line:

> With the arrival of the troops yesterday afternoon virtually all disorders ceased altho a crowd returning from the funeral of a striker who was killed by Panama police Saturday attempted to hold a meeting. They were easily dispersed by the American soldiers.

Wall Street rules in Panama.

What Saklatvala Symbolizes - By William F. Dunne

ARTICLE V.

WHILE MacDonald was doing the dirty work for English imperialism in Bulgaria noted in the conclusion of the last article, the tories were preparing quietly but effectively to discredit the Soviet Union among the British working class. It was in the name of social-pacifism, "Peace on earth, good will to men," that MacDonald carried on the plot with the bloody Zankov government against the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.

It was in the name of social-pacifism again that MacDonald denounced that masterpiece of capitalist trickery, the forged Zinoviev letter, "as a Bolshevik conspiracy" against the British working class, which was starving to death quietly. Just as the tories had calculated, the labor party lost the election and, having eased the empire thru a severe international crisis, MacDonald was set aside to await a period when his services would be required again.

The world knows now that the Zinoviev letter was forged, the British trade union delegation to Soviet Russia satisfied itself that this was the case, but MacDonald to this day has said not one word to indicate that he knows it the case. In other words, he prefers to aid the British foreign office by his silence than to aid the workers' and peasants' government of Russia by telling the truth.

Saklatvala fought thru the labor party campaign in which the forged Zinoviev letter was an issue and he would have had some interesting things to say about it. No such first-hand testimony is wanted by either the British or American imperial governments.

MEANWHILE, the tory British government is getting ready for outright suppression of the working class. A dispatch to the New York Times of October 5, says in part under a London date line:

> How a newspaper spoiled the game of the crown law officers in dealing with the "Reds," was revealed today by Sir William Joynson-Hicks, the home secretary, in a speech at Liverpool.
> The utterances of Saklatvala and Tom Mann had been brot to his attention and he discussed them with the attorney general and public prosecutor. They decided that as the speakers were getting more violent each day, it would be better to wait a week or two till they had completed their series of speeches already announced. Then a certain newspaper published their plan and, said Sir William, "from that moment neither Mann nor Saklatvala opened his mouth in public."

Tom Mann and Saklatvala are Communists and it may be argued that such secret preparations apply only to acknowledged revolutionists. The MacDonald argument runs something along this line when he blames the Communists for the government's suppressive measures. But Sir William Joynson-Hicks knocks this socialist-pacifist argument for a row of Japanese ash cans. The dispatch continues:

> Then the speaker took up a defense of blessings he bestowed on a society known as an organization for the maintenance of supplies. This society, with Lord Hardinge of Penshurst, the late ambassador to Paris, as president, and on the executive such men as Lord Jellicoe and Sir Francis Lloyd, the general commanding London during the war, has been formed to draw up lists of men ready to maintain public supplies and necessaries in case of such an emergency as a general strike. Sir William, writing to a correspondent who consulted him about it had stated that the government considered it its duty to maintain supplies at such a crisis and had made plans long since to do so, but could see no harm in such a private organization and would be glad to use its services.

IT must be remembered that this open announcement of the recruiting and endorsement of extra-legal anti-working class forces was made in Liverpool where a few days before 3,000 British fascisti had been sworn in by the chief constable of the city and the statement made publicly that this force would act in strikes and other emergencies "as a separate force under their own officers."

The British capitalist press is not a unit in support of this assault on the fabric of bourgeois democracy which had so successfully fooled the workers up to a short time ago. The London Daily News comments as follows on the strike breaking scheme of the home secretary:

> We cannot conceive any enterprise likelier to provoke a breach of the peace or to incite the rapid development of class war. If a Liverpool watch committee enrolls the fascisti as police what is to prevent a labor watch committee from enrolling volunteers to form a labor defense corps, which labor politicians of advanced views regard as the only possible answer to self-constituted strike breaking organizations?
> The Ulster volunteers created the Sinn Fein volunteers and the Sinn Fein volunteers produced the Irish revolution and dragged the name of Britain in the dust.

BUT the preparations for a mass murder of striking workers go forward merrily. The Liverpool conference of the labor party under the leadership of the MacDonaldites failed to take a militant stand against the legalization of British fascism altho the labor press declared it to be a paramount issue.

The Sunday Worker for Septemher 27, makes the following detailed exposure of the government's plans:

> It means that scabbing and blacklegging are to be publicly elevated to the dignity of a patriotic duty; that any sort of trade unionism, or labor politics, that moves an inch beyond lickspittle subservience to the boss is to be officially regarded and (with or without the constitution) treated as a crime. That any sort of savagery, brutality, and impudent insult from any and every sort of hooligan will be applauded as "patriotism" and "loyalty" provided it be directed against the best and bravest in the labor movement.
> Maintenance of Famine.
> It is called "The Organization for the Maintenance of Supplies"—"O. M. S. for short."
> While its nominal function is to maintain under government control essential public services of food, heat, light, transport, and sanitation in the event of a general strike, its real function is evident from the very qualification introduced.
> It is to crush every workers' struggle that promises to reach success, and while filling the bellies of the bosses secure permanent famine and misery for the working mass.
> A Military Force.
> It will be a force raised, recruited, and equipped to use force.
> Its "Class A" (there are five classes) is to be recruited from men of military age, with military experience. It will be commanded by military men, and in addition to unspecified duties, this class will function to "protect men willing to work."
> "It is intended at present to recruit up to 30,000 of this class in London alone."
> Mussolini Out-Scabbed.
> Other classes will run trains, trams, power stations, gas works, road vehicles, and messages. Women are to be roped in for clerical duties.
> Flying squads of well-disciplined men will be organized to "take on duty at places where rough fighting is to be expected."
> Its council (impudently described as non-political) consists of men of title, rank, and wealth, who not only never have, but are never likely to have, the smallest grain of sympathy for labor rightly struggling to be free.
> And the whole scheme we are told "has the approval of the government."

SAKLATVALA! symbolizing both the British working class as a whole and its advance guard, the Communist Party of Great Britain cannot be permitted to expose with facts, figures and fiery eloquence such startling evidences of the desperation of the British rulers before American audiences of workers, citizens of a "friendly power."

Baldwin, Joynson-Hicks, Kellogg and Coolidge unite against Saklatvala and all he stands for.

The Working Class as the Leader of the Chinese Struggle for Freedom

By TANG SHIN SHE.

WHO will have the leadership in the event of a Chinese national revolution? This question has played a great role ever since the commencement of the present struggle for freedom, just as this was the case in Russia before October 1905. It was only possible to raise this question because up to now in China the class antagonisms had not made themselves very much apparent. A national revolution always bears a bourgeois character; but in the midst of present-day world capitalism, which has already developed to its highest stage, to imperialism, the young Chinese bourgeoisie cannot achieve merely a national revolution. It has been said on the other hand that the national revolution is not the affair of the working class, and that the latter, owing to the fact of its weakness, would be unable to undertake the leadership.

The United Front.

The Chinese Communists have declared right from the outset, that the working class must take part in the national revolution, because national liberation from the domination of foreign imperialism must precede the emancipation of the proletariat. Even if the working class is weak, it can neverthless, in relation to the Chinese bourgeoisie, be regarded as a considerable force. Hence, only the working class in China can take over the leadership of the national revolution. How right the Communists were in their view has been proved by the recent events of China.

IT is necessary to call to mind the reasons for the outbreak of the present struggle for freedom. Already in February of this year there commenced in Shanghai the strike of the textile workers against the foreign imperialists, and which was followed in April by the strike in Tsingtao. On the 15th of May the Japanese carried out a blood bath among the Chinese working class in Shanghai and on the 23rd of May the Chinese feudal military leaders, at the command of the Japanese, did the same thing in Tsingtao. This was followed by the shooting down of Chinese on the part of the English in Shanghai on the 30th of May. It is therefore clear that the present struggles for freedom were commenced, and will be continued, by the working class. The bourgeoisie and the petty bourgeoisie have been compelled to fight under the flag of national revolution, for the emancipation of the Chinese people from foreign rule.

Workers Leadership.

But every day the counter-revolutionary character of the Chinese bourgeoisie becomes more and more apparent. They declared at first that the area of struggle must be limited to Shanghai, and that there also the fight should only be directed against the English police in the foreign quarter of the town. The workers, however, extended the strikes so that today the movement already extends right through the lower Yang-tze valley from Shanghai to the upper Yang-tze at Sz-chuen, through the Hoang-Ho up to Honan, and through the Che-kiang district to Canton and Hongkong. Meanwhile the bourgeois have again opened their shops and offices in Shanghai, which amounts to a sabotage of the struggle for freedom. The working class, driven by necessity, agreed to the re-opening of the shops and offices, but on condition that the English and Japanese were boycotted. Thereupon the bourgeois came forward with the argument that English trade in China only amounts altogether to 1 per cent, and that the Chinese merchants, by boycotting the English, would do more damage to themselves than to the latter. As a matter of fact the boycott can only be carried out under the control of the workers and by the strike of the seamen and transport workers.

NOW the bourgeoisie is quite openly appealing for support to the tools of the imperialists, the Chinese military rulers. Chang Tso-Lin in particular is fulfilling with the greatest care these instructions to suppress the strikes and dissolve the fighting organization. At the end of July he caused numerous fighting groups to be dissolved in Shanghai and Tientsin, and in Mukden even the group of the Kuomintang.

The imperialists in China are making use of every means in order to crush the struggle for freedom. Although they all stand in one united front against the Chinese, they are attempting, one in this way and another in that, to suppress the movement for freedom. The English are proceeding with the most brutal means, whilst the Japanese, who were the main originators of the unrest, are attempting to cast all blame from themselves and to win the sympathies of the Chinese.

The Chinese bourgeoisie, the tool of the imperialists, at the instigation of the Japanese, is only opposing the English. The workers called a meeting for the 30th June in Peking in which a resolution was adopted condemning the action of the bourgeoisie. The workers are demanding a fight against the English and Japanese imperialists, and not against one party only. Thereupon, on the 18th of July, the bourgeois convened a meeting in Pekin, which again opposed the demands of the workers and only proposed the boycott of the English. The result of this was a collision, regarding which the bourgeois papers naturally reported that the people with the red flags were the cause of the disorders.

Communists' Program.

ON the same day the Communists issued the slogan: "Fight against the tool of the Japanese and against the betrayer of the people, Chang Tso-Lin," and put forward the following demands:

1. Abolition of the unequal treaties.
2. Disarming of the military rulers who do not wish to fight against the imperialists.
3. Guarantee of freedom of speech and press, and right of combination.
4. Abolition of the unequal treatment of women in the jurisdictional, political and economic sphere.
5. Abolition of the Likien system and other taxes.
6. Fixing of a maximum amount of landed property which can be held; any landowner possessing more than this quantity must give the same to the poor peasants and small holders; establishment of a maximum rent for land; abolition of the present custom of paying taxes on land several years in advance.
7. Unrestricted freedom for trade unions, right of strike for the workers; establishment of a minimum wage according to prices of food; legislation for the protection of labor.
8. The right of the workers and peasants to possess arms for their own defense.
9. Deposit of a definite sum in a bank for educational purposes.
10. Convocation of a real national assembly.

THESE demands represent the new fighting program of the Communists for the national revolution. The last horrible blood bath which took place on the 12th of August, in Tientsin was the first onslaught on the part of Chang Tso-Lin and his crew in the struggle against the Chinese proletariat. The workers in Tientsin have again turned against the Japanese and against Chang Tso-Lin. The answer was the blood bath. Tientsin is known to be the headquarters of Chang Tso-Lin in inner Shanghai-Kwan. When Chang Tso-Lin left Tientsin on 20th of July, he did it mainly as a result of the slogans issued by the Communists on the 18th of July. The dissolution of the fighting organizations in the different districts of China and the prohibition of the Kuomintang in Mukden mentioned above—all this took place after the 18th of July. Shanghai, Tientsin and Tsingtao are the most important industrial centers in China. In Shanghai there are Chinese, Japanese and English textile factories. In Tsingtao they are mainly in the hands of the Japanese, and in Tientsin these factories are, for the greater part, owned jointly by Japanese and Chinese. As regards the Chinese proprietors, the only difference is that the Chinese factories in Shanghai are mostly in the hands of the bourgeoisie while those in Tientsin are in the hands of the military rulers. In most cases the textile factories in Tientsin belong to members of the party of that military ruler who exercises the greatest power in the locality. Previously they belonged, for the greater part to the Chili people (the party of Wu-Pei Fu), today to the Anfuists (Tuan She Sui party) and Chang Tso-Lin. The factories of Tientsin are, therefore, to be regarded not only as economic factors, but also as political and personal-political factors. Hence, the oppression of the workers is particularly brutal. In Tientsin there are, in all, nine textile companies with 400,000 spindles and 20,000 workers.

The facts given above enable us to judge for ourselves in whose hands lies the leadership of the national revolution. Not only can the bourgeoisie not take over the leadership itself, but it is already counter-revolutionary; it is the faithful henchman of the imperialists. Today only the petty bourgeois and the peasantry and the students who have sprung from the peasantry can take part in the fight, and then only as the auxiliary forces of the workers.

Bulgarian Butchery Still Rages

EDITOR'S NOTE:—The following appeal has been issued by the Communist Party of Bulgaria to the workers of the entire world and reveals a continuation of the bloody reign of terror inaugurated by the Zankov government. It gives the lie to the press reports that the Bulgarian fascist government commuted the sentences of those doomed to die and is in reality murdering thousands of workers in the prisons.

WE are warning the world proletariat, peasants and public opinion that at this moment plans are being perfected by the military league, fascist bands and the Zankov government for new mass murders of the workers and peasants in Bulgaria. Death lists are made and hellish plans devised for carrying them into effect.

The regular prison crews are replaced by cut-throats. On September 25, 1925, in Varna, three men sentenced to death whose sentences had been "officially" commuted were murdered in prison by the fascist sentries placed there for that purpose.

We appeal to the world proletariat, to all intelligent and conscious workers to come to our aid and with quick action against the hangman and butcher Zankov, to prevent this new mass bloodshed. The murders have not stopped for a single day.

THIS appeal comes to confirm the danger which is based upon the following facts:

Telegrams from Sofia to foreign newspapers gave great publicity all over the world regarding the commutation of sentences of death to life imprisonment of hundreds sentenced by court martial. It was evident that this was done only to pacify public opinion abroad. The annbunced revocation of death sentences was merely intended to pacify the growing demand from the civilized world that public hangings of the victims of the white terror cease.

When the ttwo-year history of violence of the Zankov government is considered, it is no surprise that under the veil of magnanimity the revocation of the death sentences would be meaningless and they would continue under other forms and the victims, who could not defend their murders would be recorded as having committed suicide, attempted to escape, etc. The Varna case proves that this diabolical conspiracy is already being carried into effect.

THE recent threats of Zankov in the national assembly indicate that it is not a matter of murdering only those previously sentenced who have had their sentences revoked, but that there impends a general extermination of all those who dare oppose or have in the past opposed the Zankov regime and who had not already passed under the butcher's knife in the massacres of September, 1923; September, 1924 and April, 1925. The communication from Sofia that new lists are being prepared is evidence that the threat of Zankov—"Terrible bloodshed will agai ncome to the suffering Bulgarian land"—were not for a distant future, but for the present. That is the reason for the hasty adjournment of the session. It was necessary to give the rulers time to "work." General Russev not long ago declared that he has received "authentic reports" about the peasants and Communists who are again "hatching something," and soon too, so the government should take measures. It is well-known that such pronouncements by Gen. Russev always heralds new butcheries by the government.

THE democratic leader, Liapchev, by his conduct also heralds the coming slaughter. Only recently in his paper Preporetz, he suggested a change in the cabinet. It is an open secret that he hoped to come to power after the fall of aZnkv. But he now proposes to postpone the change in the cabinet for a few months until "necessary work" is done, this necessary work being the "cleansing" of Bulgaria from Comunists and revolutionary peasants.

This position of Liapchev is sustained with demonstrative support of Zankov at official and unofficial meetings. This delay means new murders, with the consent and activa assistance of the democratic leader.

It is our duty to give broad publicity to the preparation of this new blody crime and to urge the parties, trade unions, co-operative societies, leagues for human rights, and other bdies f wrkers and humanitarian people to take action by means of the press, mass meetings and protests to the Bulgarian and other governments and to arrange demonstrations in front of Bulgarian legations in order to prevent this new bloodshed intended by the Bulgarian fascist government.

By all means and with inexhaustible energy we must strive to bring about such decisive actions because every lost moment brings death to hundreds an dthousands of victims of this unexampled terror.

Providence Toilers Hold Benefit Affair for Chinese Relief

PROVIDENCE R. I., Oct. 14.—The Russian Branch of the Workers Party and the women's progressive organization of Providence, R. I. recently had a benefit affair for the Chinese strike relief. As a result they have sent to the International Workers Aid, 1553 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill., the sum of $38.45.

International Labor Defense Ball

The New York section of the International Labor Defense is arranging a grand costume ball on Saturday, October 17, at the Lyceum, 86th St. and Third Ave., in order to riase funds for defense.

The need of funds for the defense of the class war prisoners is growing daily.

The International Labor Defense protects all victims of the class struggle, who are sent to the capitalist prisons. The organization has a large number of cases on hand—the number is still growing.

Hence, in addition to enjoying one of the finest balls that have ever been arranged—and there will be dancing and refreshments—every comrade will be doing a great service to the working class movement.

For further information apply to the secretary of the International Labor Defense, New York Section, Rose Baron, 799 Broadway, Room 422, New York City.

Amalgamation Resolution Worries Fakers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

STEEPLECHASE PIER, Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 15—"Amalgamate the unions," was the challenge that was thrown into the convention of the A. F. of L. here, when the resolutions committee brot up the declaration on amalgamation, introduced by Delegate James V. Fitzsimmons, member of the Moulders' Union, sent here by the Canton, Ohio, Central Labor Union.

President Green was very much annoyed that anyone should dare speak for the resolution after the committee had urged non-concurrence. His exasperation grew when he saw not only Delegate Fitzsimmons on the floor ready to put up a fight for his resolution, but also Delegate Frank Basky, of the Stone Cutters' Union ready to support him.

Vote For Scab Hotels.

The amalgamation resolution came before the convention after a lengthy discussion on scab hotels frequented by A. F. of L. conventions, especially the Strand Hotel here, non-union from cellar to roof, that not only houses the A. F. of L. headquarters and many delegates, but was also the scene of the gathering of the union label department meeting that wants $100,000.00 to carry on a union label campaign.

The convention voted against an amendment offered by the delegates of the Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union, that urged that the convention city be changed hereafter by the executive council if it is unable to offer union conditions.

The report of the committee, offering to do better next time, as all A. F. of L. conventions promise was adopted, with the building trades workers incensed because they thot the hotel workers had not sufficiently stressed union conditions in construction of hotels as well as the unionizing of the kitchen and dining room help after the hotel was put into operation.

A Necessity—Not a Theory.

Delegate Basky referred to this petty bickering and craft divisions as he opened his plea for amalgamation.

"Delegate Woll says that the committee is not interested in theories," said Basky. "Amalgamation is not a theory alone. It is a necessity. We have had debates here arising out of jurisdictional disputes that are leading to destruction. What are you going to do about it?

"We are breaking down organizations and throwing out organizations," he declared in referring to the fight Tuesday between the Teamsters' Union and the railway clerks. "That condition is a challenge to all you delegates. How are you going to meet it?

"Amalgamation provides for the organization of the workers in conformity with the development of evolution in industry."

Well, Then; Go Ahead!

Basky cited the repeated declarations in the convention that there has been a revolution in industry, that the nation is entering upon a super-power age, quoting especially from the speech of Elizabeth Christman, of the Women's Trade Union League, that the times demanded new forms of organization.

"If you have the courage to carry these declarations into action, if you believe in solidarity, then you will support this resolution," declared Basky.

Delegate Fitzsimmons, supporting his resolution, told of the disasters in various strikes, due to the division of the workers in many craft unions, with their craft prejudices and jealousies. He referred especially to the

THE CONQUEST OF PANAMA BY MARINES

Now Section of "Our Empire"

By MANUEL GOMEZ, Sec'y.
All-America Anti-Imperialist League
ARTICLE II.

"The name of 'Panama,' which is associated with the most notorious financial scandal of the nineteenth century, is associated also with one of the most formidable scandals of American diplomacy."—Carlos Pereyra, in "El Mito de Monroe."

How American troops happen to be so much at home in Panaman territory was explained in the first article of this series, printed in yesterday's DAILY WORKER. I pointed out there that U. S. control is not limited to the Canal Zone, as popularly supposed and officially propagated, but includes a protectorate over the entire so-called republic of Panama, definitely established by the written constitution of the "republic." Panama is thus an integral part of the American empire.

New light is now thrown on what Professor Pereyra, member of the Hague permanent court of arbitration, calls "the most formidable scandal of American diplomacy"—that is, the steal of Panama from Colombia, in 1903. Scandal has long been connected with the action of the United States government in this episode, but few have realized how great the scandal was. Rough-riding Teddy Roosevelt did more than simply foment a revolution in order to be able to lease a strip of land six miles wide across the isthmus of Panama and construct a canal; he carried on a war of colonial aggression against the republic of Columbio, tore away 33,800 square miles of her territory, baptised it as the "republic of Panama" and then leased the Canal Zone from himself to cover up the nature of the proceeding.

Canal Central Factor

Of course the proposed canal was the central factor in the affair. Congress authorized the president to proceed to construct a canal at Panama, provided he could secure a clear title to the property of the French company which had previously obtained the franchise. The French company was able to give a satisfactory title; the company was virtually bankrupt and was eager to boost its stock by a deal with the United States. But Panama was a province of Colombia, and the Colombian senate unanimously rejected Roosevelt's terms for the lease of the Canal Zone. Whereupon Roosevelt, after consultation with the French company, decided upon a revolution.

Proclaim Independent—Marines Land

On November 3, 1903, Panama "proclaimed its independence from Colombia," and American marines were immediately landed on the isthmus with instructions from the president to

RAID BRITISH COMMUNISTS; ARREST SIX

Capitalists Begin Attack on Labor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 15.—After a campaign in the capitalist press to raise a "red scare", the British government last night, with Scotland Yard assisting Home Secretary Sir William Joynson-Hicks, England's chief "red baiter", raided the offices of the British Communist Party and the National Minority Movement of the left wing labor unionists, arrested six officials of these movements and seized all literature and files.

Those arrested include Ross Campbell, editor of the Workers' Weekly, Albert Inkpin, secretary of the Communist Party, W. R. Cant, William Gallagher, T. W. Wintring, and Hary Pollitt, the latter a prominent leader of the National Minority Movement and a member of the Boilermakers' Union.

First Step To Cut Wages

The raids indicate a further step of British capitalists to prepare to defeat the working class when the mine owners again try to reduce wages next May.

Harry Pollitt, in explaining the position of the Communist Party says in a recent issue of the Sunday Worker

Preparation For Next May

"The period between now and next May is looked upon as a preparatory one in which the capitalists are preparing the greatest attack upon the wages and conditions of the whole working class that this country has yet known.

"It was in this situation that the Communist Party issued the call to the whole labor movement that it should also prepare for next May, and that one of the first measures to be taken was to commence a campaign among the forces, not for armed insurrection, but to insure that our comrades in the forces should thoroughly understand the difficulties and struggles of their comrades in the factories and the unemployed, so that in the event of big strikes and lockouts, the workers in the forces will refuse to be used as scabs or refuse to shoot upon their industrial comrades if the situation provokes such a necessity.

"The question before us, then, is not should the workers arm, but shall we educate the workers who have already got arms, so that they will realize they are part of the working class, and are prepared to act accordingly.

"If the workers attempt to resist the coming attack of the capitalists, it is impossible for the capitalists to accept such a situation without resorting to every weapon they possess to defeat the workers. In the last analysis they depend upon the obedience of the mass of armed forces. The mass of the forces are workers, drawn from our class.

"We must remember our class is engaged in a life and death struggle. We must have not only the unity of the workers in industry, but unity of the workers in the forces as well. If our movement neglects this, we shall pay very dearly for it during the next two or three years."

These are the sort of arguments which have stirred the British capitalist government to attempt to suppress the Communist Party before the crisis comes between labor and capital next May.

May Expel Saklatvala

An English financial writer who keeps Wall Street informed of British affairs, recently wrote that an attempt will be made to expel Saklatvala, Communist member of parliament, from parliament for sedition, under the precedent established by the expulsion of Wilkes in 1869.

An indication of the close co-operation between the recently engaged fascist O. M. S. and the suppressive forces of government, is the boast of capitalist spokesmen that the O. M. S. is quartered at St. Stephen's House, close by the quarters of Scotland Yard. The O. M. S. is headed by a dozen big capitalists, many bearing titles from the crown.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

MUTINY ACT OF 1797 BASE OF BRITISH RAIDS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 15.—It is learned that the government has warrants for twenty more Communists including the six arrested last night, all based on the ancient mutiny act of the British crown in 1797.

Under this act the six arrested last night were charged in the Bow Street court this morning with "inciting his majesty the king's soldiers and sailors to sedition."

The mutiny act was that under which the leaders of the Thames mutiny of the British fleet were hung at the yardarm, after having for many weeks held control of the Thames with all ships flying the red flag and demanding better conditions for the sailors. That movement was led by Richard Parker.

STEEL WORKERS OF PITTSBURGH TO HEAR ENGDAHL

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 15.—The small group of left wingers who managed to break into the hand-picked congregation of the great "leaders" of American labor at the American Federation of Labor convention at Atlantic City carried on a splendid fight for the recognition of working class Russia, the amalgamation of the unions according to industry, the organizing of the unorganized, the admission of Negro workers into the unions on an equal basis with the white workers, the condemnation of the B. & O. class collaboration plan and their insistence upon other measures to make the unions better organized and more powerful units to combat the capitalist class. The "fat boys" hated the Communists, who were the leaders in the fight to make the unions in America real fighting units.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER will speak to the workers of Pittsburgh at a meeting arranged by the Trade Union Educational League at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., Saturday evening, Oct. 17, at 8 o'clock on the American Federation of Labor convention and the American Communist movement.

LIBERIA NEXT OBJECTIVE OF U. S. CAPITAL

Firestone to Invest a Hundred Million

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 15—The new $100,000,000 project of Harvey S. Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, for developing rubber plantations in Liberia was hailed in financial and manufacturing circles here today as an important initial step in breaking the monopoly of British and Dutch rubber growers over the world's crude rubber producing markets.

Firestone is in New York conferring with financial experts and laying plans for starting the undertaking.

"Civilize" the Jungles.

Civilization is to be brot to the jungles and, according to Mr. Firestone's report, employment is to be given to 300,000 inhabitants now idle. It seems that without investments of capital the natives manage to live even tho they are idle. Henceforth, if everything goes all right, they are to have the privilege of working for a living.

Everything is to be "model." There are to be model towns, model railroads, harbors and highways. Instead of the irresponsible life they have formerly led the inhabitants will henceforth live in houses that look just alike. The greater part of their lives will be spent as dehumanized individuals with numbers instead of names.

Challenges England.

Thru this venture Mr. Firestone hopes to break the English-Dutch crude rubber monopoly thru which, it has been said, "England hopes to make the American auto owner pay her war debt to America."

Instead of the 3 per cent of production which America now controls, Mr. Firestone hopes eventually to control an output of 250,000 tons of crude rubber a year—50 per cent of the world's present production.

Mr. Firestone described how he had sent out exploring parties of experts three years ago to look the world over for acreage suitable for rubber growing, after he had been led to the determination to grow his own rubber because of the British restrictions which kept down the output of raw rubber and kept the price up.

Tried Other Fields.

Politics, difficult laws and revolutions kept him out of the Philippines, Mexico and Central America, but his agents reported ideal conditions in Liberia.

Having made this decision, Mr. Firestone met in New York Edwin Barclay, secretary of state for Liberia, and a concession for the work was granted.

Revise Control.

The work of rebuilding the country already has started. The corporation has let a contract to the J. G. White Engineering company of New York to build a harbor at Monrovia, the capital and principal city of Liberia.

Thus American finance is taking up again the work of American citizens who in the middle of the last century were the creators of Liberia, as the government and civilized part of the country was originally founded by American Negroes—escaped slaves and freed men who were sent to Liberia by abolition societies. For many years America manifested a moral, if not actual, protectorate over Liberia.

U. S. TREASURY WILL APPROVE WALL STREET LOANS TO CAILLAUX

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15—If France agrees to the five-year debt agreement carried back to Paris by Minister of Finance Caillaux, the American government would "be inclined to regard with approval certain classes of private loans" to French industry and to the French government, it was announced at the treasury.

The loans under question are those Caillaux tried to negotiate on Wall Street.

FORMER LEGION HEAD AND BANKER GETS JOB OF ASST. SEC'Y OF WAR

MacNider is a native of Mason City, Ia., and formerly vice-president of the First National Bank of Mason City, Ia.

RAINS ASSIST RIFFS IN WAR AGAINST FRENCH

Imperialist Troops on Rations

FEZ, French Morocco, Oct. 15—France and Spain have much to fear from the native tribesmen of Morocco. Heavy rain, mud, and swollen streams have cut off the French and Spanish imperialist troops in many sections from their base of operation.

Troops Rationed.

The armies of these two nations are now on rations that are very scant. Food convoys are sent from the base of operation toward a detachment of French or Spanish cavalry troops. On the way the heavy food trucks sink into mud. Before the French and Spanish mercenaries are able to drag the heavy food supply wagons out of the mud, the Riffs have surrounded them and taken the supplies.

The imperialists in their desperation are now attempting to transport food and other needed articles by airplane. Large nets are erected at the posts and as the airplanes fly by, they swoop down and drop their load. This system has not been able to feed any number of soldiers.

Riffs Harass Imperialists.

With the coming of rain, the Riff Tribesmen have been harassing the lines of the French and Spanish commanders and have made many serious dents.

The center of the battle front is solidly held against the imperialist shock troops.

Attacks have been made at Sidi Bouroukba by the Riffians where heavy losses were inflicted on the French cavalry.

BIG DRIVE TO SAVE LIVES OF CONDEMNED

Bloody Reign of Terror Opened in Hungary

On receipt of a cablegram that the bloody government of the Hungarian hangman Horthy has inaugurated what promises to be second edition of the murderous regime of the fascist Zankov in Bulgaria, in preparing to try before an extraordinary court-martial several members of the independent socialist party and Mathias Rakosi, a former commissar in the short-lived Hungarian Soviet government, the International Labor Defense has organized a nation-wide campaign to mobilize every available force in an effort to save the lives of the workers who have fallen into the cruel clutches of the "hangman of Hungary" whose bloody government is bolstered up by the dollars of Wall Street.

The outstanding figure among those recently arrested by Horthy's gendarmes is Mathias Rakosi, a thirty-six-year-old revolutionist, who is marked for slaughter by Horthy because of his participation in the Bela Kun government.

Rakosi returned to Bulgaria knowing that there was a price on his head and he courageously proceeded to organize the Hungarian workers for their liberation from the rule of the bourgeois tyrant Horthy. His arrest followed.

Working Class Bravery.

The conduct of Rakosi before the Hungarian court challenged the admiration even of his foes. Calmly and firmly he said in answer to questions: "I knew precisely what I was doing. I knew that in case I would not succeed, or something may interfere, that it may cost me my life. I also know that no exchange with other prisoners with Soviet Russia would be possible and I had that clearly before me as well. I believe that the Budapest police would not be able to find me because it is not the first time since the fall of the Soviet government that I have been in Hungary." And when asked to name his other associates he said: "I can no more remember, but even if I could I would not be ready to betray my comrades or deliver them over to the police."

But the police and the magistrtates continued to grill Rakosi expecting to break down his resistance by the third degree methods used by the capitalists in all countries in which they have power. Rakosi finally stated: "Gentlemen, you may question me as long as you see fit. I can only state that I was perfectly aware of the consequences, when I declared myself ready to go thru this great task of mine. I know that the Hungarian authorities

N. Y. COMMUNISTS OFFER TO WITHDRAW CANDIDATES FOR UNIFIED LABOR ELECTION FIGHT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—The Workers (Communist) Party has proposed to the socialist party that both organizations withdraw their candidates in the municipal elections in favor of a united labor ticket.

The statement issued by Benjamin Gitlow, mayoralty candidate of the Workers (Communist) Party, calls the attention of the socialist party to the united front formed in the Berlin elections by the Communists and left wing socialists as an example of what can be accomplished by united action.

The statement continues:

"The Workers Party sought to unify the political forces of the workers in New York City behind a united labor ticket in opposition to both the republican and democratic parties. The Workers Party is prepared even at this late date to make such a united front. The Workers Party is prepared to withdraw its candidates to achieve such political unity among the workers. It is now up to the socialist party to show where it stands on the proposition. If the socialist party and Norman Thomas turn down this proposal then they are acting in the interests of the capitalist political parties by helping to further divide the forces of labor. In the face of the outrageous activities of the capitalist politicians against the workers, a solid proletarian political front to capture New York City for the workers is absolutely necessary."

CANTON GOVERNMENT IN DANGER OF ATTACK BY TOOLS OF IMPERIALISM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CANTON, China, Oct. 15.—The efforts of the counter-revolutionary tools of imperialism to crush the Canton nationalist government has led the Canton forces to mine the Canton river to ward off the attack expected from the presence of two Chinese warships sent into the vicinity by the Peking government. Other signs of a war against the national revolution is those given by the military movement of Chang Tso-lin, who has ordered 15,000 troops from Shanghai to an undisclosed destination.

COMING Tues.--Wed.--Oct. 21--22--Henry Ford--Pacifist Turned Imperialist

LOCARNO PACT UTTERLY FAILS OF OBJECTIVE

Patched Up Affair to Save Faces

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 15.—A compromise, leaving everything much as it was before, seems to be the final outcome of Locarno. Exceedingly pessimistic is the mein of the allied statesmen as they continue the bluff that the "security" conference has been a great success.

Chancellor Luther, the German foreign minister, was informed by telegraph here that President von Hindenburg and the cabinet had approved the draft of the Rhine treaty and the "gentlemen's agreement" under which Germany can enter the league of nations.

German Demands Win

Day before yesterday Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, threatened any power that dares break the conference with adverse world opinion and was openly defied by the Germans. Seeing the determined stand of the Germans, and realizing that he himself would face vitriolic attacks at home from the opposition to the tory government he backed down on insisting that France guarantee the eastern frontiers of Germany. Instead of this proposition the question will be taken up under the provisions of the treaty of Versailles.

Article 16 of the league, which provided that any one of the signatories had a right to march troops across the territory of another in case of aggression by a third, although left intact, was rendered inoperative in case of Germany. Germany rejected the terms of this article for fear France would march troops across her territory to aid Poland in case of a conflict. The tentative agreement provides that in the event of a quarrel, France shall not be permitted to march troops across Germany to Poland until after the league council has unanimously declared Germany at fault. Since Germany will have a permanent seat on the council, such unanimity could never come about.

Poland Peeved

Poland deeply resents this turn of affairs, but is powerless to act. The plenary session yesterday was adjourned because of the Poles stubbornly refusing to accede to the new turn of affairs. Finally, in private discussions France assured them that she would undertake to look after the interests of the small nations on the eastern border of Germany.

France Loses.

The alteration of the Rhine frontier in favor of France has been her goal since the war, but this agreement deprives her of that right. England and Italy act as guarantors to see that that frontier is not disturbed.

Germany gains evacuation of the Cologne zone and reconsideration of the Saar question; a plebiscite is to be arranged and the inhabitants vote on the question of affiliation to Germany or France. She also gains on the question of punishment in case of alleged defaltation on reparations to France. The league, instead of France, is to decide on questions of failure to fulfill the treaty.

France can console herself with the knowledge that she can reduce her military budget, since the military force wfill be withdrawn from German territory.

Main Objective Collapses.

The main objective of the "security" conference was a bloc against Soviet Russia, which was far from being realized. Neither will the pact so patch up conflicts in Europe that the imperialist powers can devote all their energy to throttling colonial peoples.

Not one of the foreign ministers involved dared face their opponents at home with complete failure, so they patched the thing up as best they could, hoping against hope that it would weather the storm and keep their parties in power.

building and metal trades. The committee report upheld the decision of the Scranton convention, many decades ago, to the effect that it was not the purpose of the A. F. of L. to superimpose any definite form of organization upon the American trade unions.

Socialists Quit Sacco-Vanzetti Fight.

Needle trades delegates, mostly "socialists" sat mum as the resolutions committee stepped on two of their resolutions. Some of them were seen to vote in favor of the committee's report, declaring patriotically for citizens' military training camps, while not one of them raised a voice for the Sacco-Vanzetti resolution that had been presented by the delegation of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Delegate Antonini sat especially silent as Delegate Woll declared for the committee that such resolution had been introduced before, and the committee resented having the same matter come up again. The committee never considered that Sacco and Vanzetti stand nearer to the electric chair now than ever before.

Woll Favors Capitalist Crimes; Opposes Red Army.

It was in reporting the resolution on citizens' military training camps introduced by the cap makers, that Delegate Woll again turned his guns on the Communists and the Union of Soviet Republics.

"Pacifism is obnoxious to the A. F. of L.," said Woll. "These camps aid in the upbuilding of mind and body. They do not inculcate a spirit of militarism. We are opposed to the pacifism that says we must not prepare. We are also opposed to the pacifism that preaches the overthrow of our government by force and violence. These pacifists do not condemn the red army of Soviet Russia numbering 1,750,000 men."

Furuseth—A Frightened Capitalist.

Communists were again taken to task in a speech by Delegate Andy Furuseth on a resolution from the seamen's delegation criticising the outlaw strike of the British Seamen's Union that brot results in many parts of the world. Furuseth carelessly admitted that the strike was a protest against collaboration between the bosses and the union officials to reduce wages.

But the thing that worried Furuseth was that the Communists, as he declared, not only planned to use the seamen to sabotage international commerce when desired, but as carriers of red propaganda that could not go thru the mails. He laid this before the delegates as if he were a frightened capitalist revealing some diabolical red plot.

In spite of the bitter attacks of the Printers' Union against public printer George H. Carter, including the charge that he had organized a spy system against the printers, the convention merely voted an investigation.

"Same As Before," Says Foster.

Resolutions were adopted favoring the release of the Virgin Island from the control of the navy, referring an investigation of conditions in Porto Rico to the executive council, advising against the establishment of a radio broadcasting station as too expensive, opposing a ship subsidy and then ending the day's session by defeating the progressive resolution against class collaboration.

William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, spent a few hours in the convention, on his way to New York, visiting with quite a number of the delegates. "I cannot see much difference between this and previous conventions of the American Federation of Labor," he said.

COOLIDGE TAX PROGRAM AGAIN IS THREATENED

Faces Revolt of Middle West Section

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15—A real fight crystallized today over the Coolidge-Mellon plan of reducing federal taxes in the forthcoming session of congress.

With the actual work of framing the new revenue measure only ten days away, there is developing an alignment of southern democrats and western republicans that threaten material modification of what President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon believe should go into it. This same combination accomplished the defeat of the original "Mellon plan" two years ago.

The four chief points of the administration's tax program are:

1. Reductions that, while affording relief, will not interfere with the treasury program of writing off the war debt in 25 years.

Abolish Income Tax.

2. Total abolition of the federal inheritance tax.

3. Reduction of surtaxes on big incomes from 40 per cent to 20 per cent.

4. A less pronounced reduction of the normal rate on small incomes.

Democrat Program.

Against these proposals, the democrats will set up their own program, generally as follows:

1. Extension of the time for writing off the war debt from 25 years to 62 years—the period over which all of the foreign debtors are discharging their obligations to the treasury.

2. Maintenance of the federal inheritance tax, altho at reduced rates.

3. Reduction of the surtax on big incomes from 40 per cent to 25 per cent.

4. Raise the exemption on the "little fellows" to $3,000 for single men, and $5,000 for married men.

This program, in the opinion of Rep. John N. Garner, democrat, of Texas, the ranking minority member of the ways and means committee, would afford the widespread relief intended, and at the same time "give the little fellows justice."

Should the democratic program be followed, it would result in a tax cut this year of about double the $250,000,000 which Secretary Mellon has set. This, however, would be taken care of by alteration of the treasury program to paying off the war debt in 62 years instead of 25.

SECRET REPORT PROVES BRITISH SEAMEN BETRAYED

Havelock Wilson Made Wage Cut Offer

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 15.—National Organizer Shinwell of the Amalgamated Marine Workers Union, has made public the verbatim report of the proceedings of the National Maritime Board on July 3, when the British seamen had their wages reduced $5 a month.

The verbatim report, which had come into Shinwell's hands by unrevealed means, justifies every word of the charges made against Havelock Wilson and the officers of the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union.

When Wage Was Cut.

Mr. Shinwell added that the charges made by his union were:

1. Of having accepted a reduction of wages without consulting the members of the union;

2. Of betraying the trade union movement at a time when there was a prospect of an industrial upheaval in this country.

The report showed, said Mr. Shinwell, that when the Maritime Board met on July 3 no specific demand had been made by the employers and that Mr. Wilson offered the reduction of £1 a month.

The chairman (Sir F. Shadforth Watts) had opened by saying that the business of the meting was to discuss the present position of the shipping trade.

He went on to preseit a gloomy picture, adding:

"You understand, of course, that we have our orders . . . to get a reduction—as substantial a reduction as we can get, but I do not think any useful purpose would be served by starting to make a demand. . . ."

Mr. Havelock Wilson replied with announcement, said Mr. Shinwell:

"With a view to helping this board along, we convened a special meeting of our delegates last Sunday at very short notice. . . .

"Now we come this morning and we are going to say to you: 'Last year you were good enough to give us an advance of £1 a month. . . . We will give up that £1 at once,' without any argument, without any alarming statements about what is going to happen, and so on."

Commenting on this Mr. Shinwell (who declared that the Sunday meeting referred to was a meeting of union officials) said it showed clearly that the reduction was proposed by Mr. Wilson and agreed upon without any consultation with the members of the union.

"Danger Men."

Turning to his second point—betraying the trade union movement—Mr. Shinwell drew attention to the fact that Mr. Wilson had gone on to complain that men who were not in his union were being employed on liners.

Mr. Shinwell descibed that as a grave statement for a trade union leader to make, particularly at a time of crisis such as existed in July.

He added that many of the so-called "danger men," although out of Mr. Wilson's union, were members of other unions.

Mr. Shinwell added that the proceedings of the Maritime Board also confirmed the statement of the Marine Workers' Union that, if the shipowners had a case, it had never been heard.

BIG DRIVE TO SAVE LIVES

are in a position to convict me and perhaps I cannot even escape execution. But despite this I will never betray or deliver my comrades to the police. You gentlemen are undoubtedly content to have in your hands a people's commissar of the former Soviet republic, but I repeat you are fooling yourself if you believe that I will give any information whatever which would even to the slightest degree facilitate your investigations. You may do with me whatever you see fit—yes, you may string me to the gallows, but I will tell you nothing."

Wall Street Government.

Rakosi served for a period as secretary of the Communist International and without doubt this is another reason why the Horthy government, the tool of Wall Street and British bankers, is anxious to send him to the gallows.

It is generally believed that the arrests of the independent socialists and of Rakosi in Hungary is the prelude to another orgy of murder that may surpass in hideousness the blood carnival of the infamous Zankov in Bulgaria.

In an effort to thwart the plans of Horthy, the labor movement all over the world and the sympathizers with the working class movement among the professionals, are protesting against the plot to slay the flower of the leadership of the Hungarian working class.

The International Labor Defense of the United States, under the signature of James P. Cannon, national secretary, sent the following cable to Bethlen, Hungarian foreign minister:

"In the name of 250,000 liberals and workers affiliated with International Labor Defense we demand immediate liberation of the recently arrested workers, especially of Mathias Rakosi, former peoples' commissar of Hungary. New persecutions and death sentences of workers by the Hungarian government will cause great indignation among the American people. The cries of the tortured prisoners will be heard at protest meetings and demonstrations which we are organizing thruout America."

A World-Wide Protest.

The Workers' International Relief with headquarters in Berlin telegraphed to the Hungarian government demanding in the name of four million adherents that the persecutions of the Hungarian workers stop. The telegram was sent in the name of such internationally known people as Henry Barbusse, France, George Ledebour, Germany, Clara Zetkin and several others.

The prisoners in the clutches of the Budapest police are subjected to the most cruel tortures that the most depraved bourgeois tools can conceive of. British labor papers recently carried a story of the drowning of a Hungarian social-democrat on the orders of Horthy because he dared to mildly criticise the Horthy regime. This social-democrat was taken from his office and after being subjected to physical punishment, was thrown into the river and drowned. Unless the Horthy government is convinced that the workers of the world mean business in protesting against his new reign of terror, there is no doubt but he will glut his vengeance on the workers by stringing their leaders on the gallows.

A Call For Action.

The International Labor Defense, according to a statement made by James P. Cannon, secretary, to the DAILY WORKER, has issued instructions to all its affiliated bodies to call meetings of executive committees at once and decide on definite plans to help save the lives of our Hungarian brothers. The suggestion is made that local unions be appealed to and mass meetings and street demonstrations be held.

Among those who are invited by the International Labor Defense to join in the protest against the murder of Rakosi and his comrades are: Upton Sinclair, Eugene V. Debs, Scott Nearing; David Rhys Williams, Alice Stone Blackwell, Bishop Montgomery Brown, Robert W. Dunn, Ellen Hayes, Robert Whittaker; E. C. Wentworth; A. T. McNamara; Roger Baldwin; Frank P. Walsh; Senator Borah, Senator Brookhart, Oswald Garrison Villard, Bessie Beatty and Alice Riggs Hunt.

The Chicago local of the International Labor Defense has arranged for a mass meeting on next Tuesday evening, October 20, to protest against the Horthy persecutions. The meeting will be held in Prudential Hall, corner of North Ave. and Halsted St. The speakers will be Rev. David Ryhs Williams, James P. Cannon and R. Sauser of Hungary.

BELLAIRE AND YORKVILLE, O., MINERS MEET

Discuss Bituminous Aid to Anthracite

BELLAIRE, O.—The attitude of the bituminous miners to the anthracite strike will be decisive if the present situation continues. The anthracite miners are fighting their fight alone, without the aid of any other organized workers. The bituminous miners are working in great part full time; new mines are opening. The soft coal miners are beginning to feed their families properly.

But how long will this last? If the anthracite strike is broken, the soft coal miners will be the next. Then the open shop campaign will begin all along the line.

What are the bituminous miners going to do? Are they going to support the anthracite miners now, or wait till they themselves are attacked?

This is the question that will be taken up at the mass meeting in Bellaire, on Sunday, Oct. 18, 7 p. m., at Bohemian Hall, 41st St. and Harrison St., and on Monday, Oct. 19, 7 p. m., at Yorkville at Miners' Hall.

Comrade I. Amter, district secretary of the Workers (Communist) Party, District 6, will speak at both meetings. All miners should be present and help to decide this burning issue.

COSTUME BALL IN NEW YORK SATURDAY NITE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—A colorful costume ball, with prizes and excellent music will be given by the New York section of the International Labor Defense on October 17, Saturday evening, at the Lyceum, 86th St. and Third Avenue.

THE CONQUEST OF PANAMA BY MARINES

prevent the landing of Colombian troops within 50 miles of Panama. Four days later the republic of Panama was recognized, in marked contrast to the time-honored precedent of U. S. governments of making haste slowly when it came to the recognition of revolutionary governments! Before the 15th of the month, Buneau Varilla, the resident manager of the French company in Panama, was received at Washington as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the republic of Panama.

Staging a Revolution

It is well known that on Nov. 3, Assistant Secretary of State Loomis had wired to the American consul in the city of Colon: "How is it that we hear nothing of the revolution?" (This was before any revolution had broken out).

"Have patience. The revolution has been delayed a little; but it will take place at 6 p. m."

And it did!

A treaty was promptly signed with the new "republic" by which the United States secured the right of way for the canal on the same terms that had been offered to Colombia. The treaty also gave the U. S. government—by the way, as it were—complete supervision over the police powers of Panama. And when the "newcomer in the family of nations" adopted its constitution, in 1904, its position was found to be that of a plain protectorate of the United States.

Panaman People Betrayed

The Panaman people had nothing to say in the process by which they suddenly found themselves part of a colonial possession. The whole matter was cooked up with the aid of a handful of bootlicking politicians and renegade officers. No native administration in the country has ever been the true representative of the people of Panama. The presidents have all been miserable hand-picked lackeys of Wall Street, working in the shadow of U. S. guns always at hand in the Canal Zone. Rodolfo Chiari, the traitor who co-operated with General Lassiter in bringing about the present strike-breaking invasion, is a typical example.

North Side Defense Meet

Meeting of North Side workers will be held tonight at the Radical Book Shop, 826 N. Clark St., at 8 p. m., under the auspices of the North Side Branch of the International Labor Defense.

All readers of the DAILY WORKER residing in the North Side are welcomed at this gathering which will be of great interest, dealing as it will with the subject of the defense of class-war prisoners in America.

Admission will be free. The speaker of the evening will be S. T. Hammersmark who will explain why the workers must organize for their defense on the political field.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

Reorganization Problems

By JAY LOVESTONE.

We herewith continue to answer the various reorganization questions raised at the recent party membership meetings.

Question 7.—What control will the party have over the shop nuclei located in the small shops?

Answer.—The various shop nuclei found in a particular industrial division of a city are combined into sub-sections and sections. When our party is developed into a mass Communist Party with many thousands of members, we will find that it may be necessary to divide the cities of the type of New York and Chicago into more sections and perhaps even sub-districts.

The party constitution provides for the election of sub-section, section and city executive committees by the membership in the respective sub-divisions. Each of these executive committees, in turn, elects a secretary-organizer "who is to be responsible for the maintenance of connections with the next higher unit and for the execution of the decisions of the committees."

The Central Executive Committee, thru its connection with the district organization, maintains contact with the various succeeding lower units. The national party center will also for some time maintain direct connection with every shop nucleus secretary-organizer and will transmit instructions directly when the situation demands such procedure. Thus, whether a shop nucleus is organized in a small shop or big factory, it will be within the frame of the apparatus in the sub-section, section, etc., and will be directly connected with the Central Executive Committee. The activity reports will be a part of the regular order of business to be attended to at every meeting of every shop nucleus. This will further help the party's having adequate control over the shop nuclei in the small shops as well as in the big factories.

Question 8.—Where will the shop nuclei meet?

Answer.—The choice of meeting place depends on a number of circumstances. In some cases it will be found that there is one or more party meeting centers, or headquarters, in a particular industrial section. These headquarters can and should be used as meeting places by the shop nuclei in the particular industrial section.

When a shop nucleus is small, it may even use the home of a comrade. If the home is close to the factory in which the shop nucleus is organized, it will tend to insure regularity of meetings.

Of course, meeting places may also be hired. everal shop nuclei, if not too big, may get together on such meeting arrangements to lighten the financial burdens thus involved.

While it may be necessary and proper for the comrades of a particular shop nucleus to meet very often with each other in the factory, this should not be taken to mean that organized shop nuclei meetings should be held in the factory where the comrades are employed. As a rule, the holding of such meetings in the factory would only make more difficult the functioning and very likely even endanger the existence of the shop nucleus. It is our task to make the shop nucleus a moving, a directing force in the plant and to popularize as much as possible the nucleus among the workers. We must spare no pains in making known to the workers the existence and influence of the shop nucleus. But in doing this, we must avoid those methods which will undermine the possibilities of work.

Question 9.—What are the relations between the district executive committees and the party reorganization commissions?

Answer.—The answer to this question can be best given in a definition of the tasks of the party district reorganization commissions. Concretely, these tasks may be enumerated as:

(a) To direct the agitation and propaganda campaign for the reorganization of the district in question.

(b) To direct the preliminary reorganization steps in the re-organization campaign under the direction of the C. E. C. organization department and in full co-operation with the District Executive Committee.

(c) To sub-divide the district into industrial sections, sub-sections, etc.

(d) To direct the organization of the district membership into shop and street nuclei on the basis of information gathered at the section membership meetings. The fullest cooperation with the district executive committees must be secured in order to achieve success in this.

(e) To arrange and direct the registration of those comrades absent and not registered at the section membership meetings.

(f) The district reorganization commissions shall be charged with keeping the DAILY WORKER and the rest of the party press fully informed about the progress and experiences of the reorganization campaigns in the various districts.

(g) The district reorganization commissions shall function only until at least the major portion of the district shall be reorganized.

Question 10.—What are the duties of the language section reorganization commissions?

Answer.—The principal tasks and functions of the language section reorganization commissions are:

(a) To lead and direct the ideological campaign for the reorganization of the party as far as their respective language sections are concerned. This is to be done thru the use of the language press, the mobilization of language district committees, etc.

(b) To see to it that the language organs and the members of their language sections execute the decisions and the instructions of the C. E. C. regarding the reorganization of the party. The language reorganization commissions must serve to co-ordinate and improve the activities of the comrades of the various language groups in our party's reorganization drive.

(c) To lead the reorganization of the present language branches when these branches are transformed into workingmen's clubs. These commissions are to co-operate fully with the national organization department and the different district organization commissions in organizing Communist language fractions in the various workingmen's clubs. These language commissions must make every effort to help the party unify and co-ordinate the activities of these Communist fractions until the latter function effectively in accordance with the provisions of the constitution of the party.

(d) To help organize the first Communist fractions in the non-party workers' reorganization.

(c) To work in the closest co-operation with the reorganization department of the C. E. C. to which they are subordinate and from which they receive their instructions for all their activities.

(f) These commissions should keep the entire press informed of their work by submitting full reports to the C. E. C. organization department of all steps taken by them towards reorganization.

(g) When the reorganization of the party is complete these language commissions cease to exist. The regular language fraction organ provided for in the party constitution are then in full charge.

Question 11.—Will the street nuclei be small or large?

Answer.—The street nuclei will consist of those comrades who either are not organizable into a shop nucleus or who, temporarily, cannot be organized into a shop nucleus because of an insufficient number of comrades working in one plant.

The street nucleus is limited to 25 members by the party constitution. This decision was arrived at because it is necessary to prevent the combination of large numbers of one language group into one particular street nucleus or international branch. We must avoid at all costs the reappearance in any form whatsoever of units of our party being directly or indirectly organized along the lines of language sections. Our party will never be unified if the old language basis of organization persists even in the most indirect form. Consequently the street nucleus will be on the average quite small, reaching a maximum of 25.

Question 12.—Will international branches or street nuclei have voice and vote in party deliberations?

ANSWER.—Yes. The street nucleus is a unit of the party and therefore will exercise full rights in all party deliberations and decisions.

Darcy to Report on Y. W. L National Convention in Cleveland and Pittsburgh

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 14.—The first of a series of membership meetings at which N. E. C. representatives will report on the work of the third national convention of the Young Workers League, will be held in Cleveland at the district headquarters, 5927 Euclid Ave., on Friday, October 16, 1925, at 8 p. m.

The second meeting will be held on Sunday evening at eight o'clock in Pittsburgh at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St.

Comrade Darcy will represent the N. E. C. at both meetings and will report on the present situation in the league.

All comrades are instructed to be present at both meetings because matters of great importance to the future work of the organization will be considered.

The Workers Party in Action

Reorganization Progress in District 8

By MARTIN ABERN.

SHOP nuclei reorganization has now reached the point of action in the city of Chicago. Beginning next Wednesday, October 21, 1925, the first of a series of section membership meetings will be held, at which all party members belonging to branches in each section will be completely reorganized either into shop nuclei or street nuclei. The meeting of Section 1, the Loop-South Section, which comprises the membership in the Englewood English, the South Side English, the South Side Scandinavian and the clothing shop nuclei, number two, three, and four, will be held on October 21, at the Community Center, 3201 South Wabash Ave. Each week thereafter, there will be another section membership meeting at which reorganization is to be completed. There are six sections in all into which local Chicago, Workers (Communist) Party is divided. In another column are given the boundary divisions, branches comprising the sections, the time and meeting place of these section membership meetings, which all comrades should study to familiarize themselves, both as to place of work and residence.

Shop Nuclei Campaign Thruout District No. 8.

SPECIAL branch meetings have been held at which the practical phases of reorganization are being discussed. Wednesday night, October 14, there was held the special meeting of all branch and city functionaries (reported on elsewhere). These functionaries have been vested with the duty of getting out the full membership to the section meetings.

The C. E. C. reorganization commission, which is taking charge of the reorganization in District No. 8, consists of Comrades Jay Lovestone, Robert Minor and Martin Abern.

The District Executive Committee of District No. 8, while concentrating on reorganization in the city of Chicago, is also simultaneously organizing the party units on the shop nuclei basis thruout the remainder of the district. Zeigler, mining town; Gary, steel town; Dowell, coal mining town, are already on the shop nuclei basis. In Springfield, Ill., meetings have been held and at the next meeting, the reorganization should be completed there. Meetings are being scheduled in Kenosha, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Madison, West Frankfort, Johnson City and other cities in the district.

Reorganization in Chicago is expected to be done about December 1, and the district committee hopes to have this done in the rest of the district shortly thereafter. Speakers from the C. E. C. commission and the district committee are addressing the reorganization meetings.

District No. 8 Pushing "Join The Unions!" Drive.

DISTRICT NO. 8, Workers (Communist) Party, is pushing the drive to get all party members into labor unions, to develop the T. U. E. L. on the broadest possible lines, and to build Communist fractions in the local unions, central councils, etc. The district committee has outlined a structural program for the formation of party fractions in the unions and has sent copies to all party units and existing Communist fractions in the district. In addition, a special letter stressing the need of union activity and declaring that disciplinary measures will be taken, if necessary, to carry out the policy of the R. I. L. U., has been sent to the party units in the district.

Special party fraction meetings are being called in all trades and industries in Chicago. Successful fraction meetings have already been held in the needle trades industry and the building trades industry. The party fraction meeting of the metal trades will be held Sunday, October 18.

Program for Party Fractions Outlined

THRUOUT the district, party membership meetings are being called to push the formation of Communist fractions in the labor unions and to get the members into the unions. Comrade Arne Swabeck will tour the southern Illinois sub-district for these meetings and Comrades Jack Johnstone, Martin Abern, Tom Bell, Andrew Overgaard and others will cover the cities in the rest of the district.

Importance of activity in the trades unions, especially in view of the big struggles now on in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the Machinists' Union, Furriers' Union, Painters and others, is being made clearer to the party membership. The general letter sent to the party units follows:

TO ALL THE BRANCHES IN DISTRICT NO. 8.

Dear Comrades:

"The Communists must learn to do their best, most energetic and concrete work in the trade unions; they must prove to the non-party and social democratic trade union members, by means of object lessons, that they are able, in their character as Bolshevists, to be active trade union members at the same time. This means a number of fresh tasks for our fractions in the trade unions," says in part the Comintern to the German Communist Party on this question.

The trade union bureaucracy in this country is determined to render the unions useless as organs of struggle against the bosses. This is seen in the enormous development of all forms of class-collaboration, compulsory arbitration, "B. & O. plan," labor banks, betrayal of strikes, etc.

TO achieve this end the labor fakers have declared war on all progressive forces in the unions. The brunt of this campaign falls upon the Communists in the unions because they lead all elements desiring to convert the unions into organs of class warfare against the bosses. Because of this mighty drive against the Communists and all progressive elements, it is the duty of all party members to redouble their efforts to penetrate the unions no matter how reactionary they may be.

In the past too much lip-service has been paid to the Leninist conception of work in the trade unions—and not enough actual work has been carried on. In District No. 8 hundreds of party members do not yet belong to unions.

IN August of this year the C. E. C. of our party received a letter from the Communist International on the trade union work of our party. The following appears in the letter:

"The party must use disciplinary measures to compel its members to join the labor unions and become active in them. It must be firmly fixed in the mind of every party member that no worker in an industrial country like America can be a real Communist unless he is an active labor unionists. The party must take a determined stand against any sign of slackness of labor union activity. The work in the labor unions must be regarded as the basis which will determine the success of the party in most other spheres of work."

In accordance with the above the D. E. C. decides that the period of temporizing with those comrades who are eligible for membership in a union but who refuse to join has come to an end. From now on disciplinary measures will be applied, so that those who are eligible for membership in a union shall join.

Disciplinary Measures to Be Used.

THE following instructions must be carried out on this matter:

1. The question of trade union membership of each member must be placed on the agenda for the next meeting of the unit.

2. The secretary shall demand of those members who are not in unions and are eligible for membership that within one month they shall apply for membership in the appropriate union.

3. At the end of this period all those who were instructed to join shall provide proof that they have carried out the instructions.

4. All disciplinary measures in this matter must be ratified by the leading committee in the territory in which the unit is situated.

5. All Sub-Section, Section and City Committees are instructed to see that these instructions are properly explained to their membership and complete reports of the carrying out of these instructions are sent to the District Committee.

The program and method of organization of Communist fractions in the labor unions, has been sent you under separate cover.

To belong to a union is not sufficient—it is necessary also to be active therein.

Comrades! Our party is in immediate danger of becoming completely isolated from the organized masses. This will condemn us to becoming a sterile sect divorced from the main stream of the labor movement. We must overcome this by resolutely setting ourselves the task of getting every member eligible into the unions.

The C. I. declares: No one can be a real Communist in America unless he is an active labor unionist. Those who desire to stay in the party must be real Communists.

Join the union! Join the Communist fraction in your union! Join your industrial and general group of the T. U. E. L.!

With Communist greetings,

District Executive Committee,
Workers (Communist) Party,
District No. 8.

Saklatvala Meeting Held in Pittsburgh, Pa., Is Big Success

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 15.— An enthusiastic meeting to protest against the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala was held at the Labor Lyceum in this city last Sunday. Comrades Ella Reeve Bloor, Israel Amter, George Papcun of the Young Workers League and Charles W. Fulp of the American Negro Labor Congress and of the United Mine Workers of America spoke. A resolution of protest was unanimously adopted.

Another Treat in Store for All Who Understand the Russian Language

Altho he was supposed to leave this week for Soviet Russia, the famous Russian poet Vladimir Mayakovsky yielded to the request of his Chicago admirers to give another lecture in Chicago. He will speak here on Tuesday, Oct. 20, at Schoenhofen Hall, corner Ashland and Milwaukee Aves. Fear is expressed that the hall may be too small, but this was the only hall that was available for this date. There is room for over a thousand people.

The enthusiastic crowd that wildly cheered Vladimir Mayakovsky at his last lecture is expected to pack this hall also. An attempt will be made to arrange also a banquet with the famous guest.

MEETING OF AGITPROP AND EDUCATIONAL DIRECTORS MONDAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—A very important conference of all agitprop directors and educational committees of branches will be held on Monday Oct. 19th at 8 p. m. sharp at the Workers Party headquarters, Room 42, 108 E. 14th St. This meeting is called to plan the educational work of the district, to connect the central school with the political units of the party and to plan the educational work in the political units.

REORGANIZATON OF NEW YORK DISTRICT STARTS IMMEDIATELY

By WILLIAM W. WEINSTONE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Meetings of functionaries consisting of branch and shop nuclei organizers, industrial organizers and financial secretaries are to be the first set of meetings in the reorganization of the New York district.

Meetings Begin on Sunday.

These meetings will begin October 18 with the meeting of the functionaries of the down town section which will be held at 10 a. m. at 108 East 14th street. The functionaries of the Astoria section will also meet with the down-town section.

On October 18 the Harlem section will also meet at 10 a. m. at 64 East 104th street.

In the afternoon, October 18, the Williamsburg section will meet at 3 o'clock at 56 Manhattan avenue.

The Brownsville functionaries will also meet on October 18 at 3 p. m. at 1844 Pitkin avenue.

On Monday, October 19 at 8 p. m., the Bronx functionaries will meet at 1347 Boston Road.

On October 19 the functionaries of Borough Park and Bath Beach and Coney Island will meet at the Finnish headquarters 764 40th street, at 8 p. m.

The next set of meetings will consist of branches beginning October 23 to November 7. At this meeting the functionaries will report on the reorganization work to be done and all preparations be made for getting out the entire membership to the section membership meetings.

Systematic Program.

Members of the reorganization commission of the district are to attend the meetings of the branches and explain in detail the work of the reorganization.

These meetings will be followed by section membership meetings beginning with November 9. The facts and the time of meeting will be announced later.

During the period of reorganization all executive committees of branches, sections and all officers are to remain as before and are to continue functioning in all the work that is assigned to them. New elections of officers will be held after the reorganizaton is carried thru in accordance with the specific instructions of the District Executive Committee.

Tho the reorganization is beginning in the month in which the election campaign is to be held all branches, sections and members must arrange that the campaign committees function and that all members perform their work in the election campaign. No one must fail in the election campaign work while the reorganization is going on.

The task of reorganization will consist in getting out the entire membership so that every member becomes a member of a shop nucleus or an international branch. In order to accomplish this the branches must succeed in getting every member to attend the meetings. Not a single member must be lost to the party in the reorganization and this can be done if the branches co-operate with the district committee to the fullest extent in drawing the entire membership into this task.

All branches are to meet every week hereafter in order to keep up with every stage of the reorganization.

DETROIT FIRST TO HEED APPEAL OF DAILY WORKER

Membership Meeting is Called for Quick Action

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 15—The Detroit membership is responding to the call of the organization department for complete mobilization to save the DAILY WORKER.

The organization department has received the following notice about the campaign for the DAILY WORKER in Detroit:

General membership meeting in Detroit, Sunday, Oct. 25.

The District Executive Committee is calling a meeting of the entire membership of the Workers Party in Detroit to take up the situation regarding the DAILY WORKER. The Central Executive Committee has sent out a call to mobilize the entire party for the major task of saving the DAILY WORKER for the Communist movement of this country. Detroit has always responded to calls such as this. It will do so on this occasion. For this purpose the District Executive Committee sends out the instruction for all party members to be at the meeting on Oct. 25, which will be held in the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin, at 2:30 p. m. A comrade from the national office will be present to state the needs of the DAILY WORKER and to outline the program which will save the DAILY WORKER for the movement.

MORE LANGUAGE BUREAUS RESPOND TO REORGANIZATION CALL

The various language sections are on the job preparing their members for reorganization.

The following reorganization commissions have been approved by the Central Executive Committee, after consultation with the respective language bureaus.

LETTISH: R. Zelms, Jacob Kreitz, Ernest Pulpol.

RUSSIAN: Striss, Charmoff, Omelian.

A CALL TO ACTION!

Every member of the Workers Party, every lover and supporter of the first workers' republic, Soviet Rusia, has been appealed to to join in the the big drive for the defense of the Soviet Union and to arouse the American workers to the new dangers confronting the Soviet Union and make them understand that the fight for the Soviet Union is a fight for themselves.

A leaflet, "DEFEND THE WORKERS' AND PEASANTS' GOVERNMENT OF RUSSIA" will do that. This leaflet must be distributed, a million at least. So far we have received orders for 255,500. That is not enough. Less than 1,000,000 will not do.

Has your branch ordered their quota? Have you, reader of the DAILY WORKER, ordered your supply? Let us cover every shop and factory and others places where the working class is employed with the distribution of this leaflet. Send your order to the National Office, Workers Party, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill. Price in lots of 10,000 or more, $1.50. In lots less than that, $2.00 per thousand. Order at once. Cash with orders.

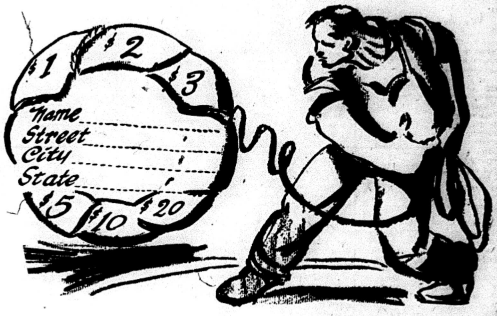
HELP!

Save The Daily Worker



BUY A ROLL OF PRINT PAPER

Never before has THE DAILY WORKER been in such immediate danger of suspension. A few weeks ago the danger signal was sounded. The militant working class was informed that unless immediate aid was forthcoming the life of THE DAILY WORKER was threatened. The response which was given has postponed but has not overcome the crisis. Now it is more serious than ever. For the supply of news print paper is running low and there are no funds available to purchase more. Within a week the paper on hand will be exhausted. Unless large amounts of money are sent in immediately THE DAILY WORKER will have to be discontinued. Send funds to buy paper for THE DAILY WORKER. Every Workers Party branch (every militant labor organization which knows and appreciates the service given to the working class by its daily paper) should collect funds to supply THE DAILY WORKER with paper. $50.00 buys a Roll. Who will buy paper for tomorrow's issue? Who will buy for the succeeding days?

WORKERS!

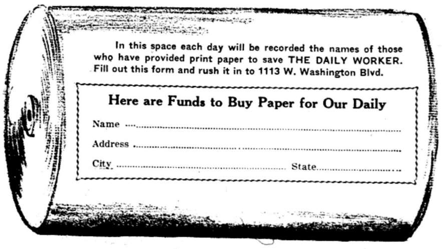
In no way can such immediate and necessary service be given to the cause of proletarian revolution than in support to Save THE DAILY WORKER. Dollars are needed—thousands of them. They will not come from those who can afford to give. The dollars which will save THE DAILY WORKER can come from pockets which can spare them only with great sacrifice.

ORGANIZATIONS!

Those who are organized to fight capitalism are organized to save THE DAILY WORKER. Take from your treasury or collect from your members sufficient to buy at least one roll of print paper. Send in $50.00 and have an issue of THE DAILY WORKER dedicated to you. Use your organized strength to help THE DAILY WORKER over this crisis.

Save The Daily Worker By Supplying It With Newsprint! Swift, United and Generous Action by Militant Proletarians Is Necessary

To Save THE DAILY WORKER



In this space each day will be recorded the names of those who have provided print paper to save THE DAILY WORKER. Fill out this form and rush it in to 1113 W. Washington Blvd.

DID YOU GET A VACATION WITH PAY THIS YEAR?

No Rest for Wicked Workers Is Rule

By LELAND OLDS,
Federated Press Industrial Editor

Now that the vacation season is about over, how about yours? Have you had your two weeks fishing trip—with pay? This question is raised for every wage worker by a bulletin on vacation policies in manufacturing industries issued by the New York state department of labor.

According to this report the chances are nine to one that you had your vacation with pay if you are an office worker but six to one that you didn't if you engaged in actually producing the goods.

No Rest For Wicked Workers.

Out of 1500 plants investigated, the department found 1360 or 91 per cent with vacation policies for office workers, 1021 or 68 per cent with vacation policies for foremen but only 270 or 18 per cent with such policies for their productive workers. Vacations for productive workers are, however, more common in large plants than in small ones, the proportion of plants with more than 500 employes runing as high as 30 per cent

Productive workers also receive less favorable treatment in length of vacation allowed and in length of service required to qualify for vacation privileges. Where a majority of the office workers receive two weeks vacation the productive workers receive only one week.

And where a large proportion of the office workers qualify for vacations after six months and practically all after a years' service, productive workers must put in from one to two years to qualify. As a result a considerable proportion of the workers do not have vacations even in factories with vacation policies.

Different from Russia.

On this question Russia, where unions are a recognized part of the industrial order, presents a strong contrast. There the finest country estates are being developed as worker rest homes and vacations with pay are a regular feature of union agreements. In the Baku oil field, to cite a single instance mentioned in the British trade union delegation report, "each worker who has completed five and one-half months' service becomes eligible for a fortnight's yearly holiday on full pay."

Moscow-Peking Air Route Establishment Assured by Soviet

MOSCOW, Sept. 10—(By Mail)—Together with Ambassador Karakhan there have arrived here the participants in the Moscow-Peking aerial expedition headed by Mr. Schmidt, who declared that Soviet airmen had carefully investigated the Moscow-Peking air route, thus enabling the establishment of air communication between the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics and China via Mongolia in future.

political field, of the working class.

The trade union delegation consisted of delegates from 15 local unions, one joint board and one district council representing 20,000 workers. Locals No. 2, 9 and 22, representing 30,000 members of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union could not elect delegates because the new elections in their union took all their attention, but Brother Sasha Zimmerman one of the officers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union stated that the union membership could be counted upon to join the movement for a united labor ticket.

63 Delegates Present.

There were also present delegates from 10 fraternal organizations representing 2,000 workers; the Workers' Party and the Young Workers' League had delegates representing 4,000 workers. The total number of delegates present was 63.

The conference was opened by Comrade William Weinstone, general secretary, District No. 2, who outlined that the efforts of the Workers (Communist) Party to create a united labor ticket, and that this conference was a step in that direction. Sister Warshofsky of the Joint Board of the Furriers' Union was elected chairman; Brother Rosenfeld, a member of the Architectural Iron Workers' Union was elected secretary.

I. L. G. W. U. Official Speaks.

Brother Sasha Zimmerman, left wing official of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union said that the need for unity of labor on the political field was greater than ever, and that his union in following the leadership of the left wing were supporting the Workers Party in the building up of a united labor ticket.

Furrier Lauds Communists.

Brother Sureff, member of the Furriers' Union, compared the socialist party labor fusion conference at which all militant delegates of trade unions were kicked out, and the conference called by the Workers Party, at which the real fighters against the bosses were organizing an honest united front. He also said that the furriers had long felt thta the united political force of the bosses, with their injunctions and court decrees, could only be fought effectively by a political organization of the workers. Therefore the entire membership of the Furriers' Union was committed to support the Workers' Party in this admirable attempt to unite all the workers on a united labor ticket.

Brother Rosenbaum, member of the Protective Shoe Workers' Union, pointed out how successful a handful of militants, organized in the Trade Union Educational League, had been in creating a mass sentiment among the shoe workers in Brooklyn for a united labor ticket.

Labor Party Nucleus.

Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for mayor on the Workers' Party ticket, speaking in the name of the Workers (Communist) Party said that the gathering was very significant, as it speaks for 50,000 organized workers in New York City. He pointed out that the Communists were the only ones who were leading the workers correctly in the fight against the bosses and the reactionary leadership. The victories in the Furriers' Union and in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union indicate the turn to the left, which will result in a powerful united front on the political field, the building up of a mass labor party. This conference is the nucleus of the labor party.

The resolutions committee with Brother Spivak of the Furriers' Union, as chairman, presented a resolution calling for the support of the united labor ticket and endorsing the candidates of the Workers Party as the only ones in this campaign fighting for unity of labor on the political field. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

Executive Committee Elected.

The resolution also recommended the election of a committee to actively support the united labor ticket campaign and cooperate with the Workers Party campaign committee. The following executive committee was elected:

John D. Masso of the Glass Bevellers' Union; Peter Darek, Window Cleaners No. 8; H. Gordon, Paper Plate and Bag Makers; Alfred Miller, Hotel Workers, Amalgamated Food Workers; A. Shek, Local 45, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; A. Kaufman, Amalgamated Metal, District No. 1; D. Zekster, Furriers' No. 1; Ph. Glantsman, Furriers' No. 5; M. Spivak, Furriers' No. 10; Max Sureff, Furriers' No. 15; Fanny Warshawsky, Furriers' Joint Board; Jacob Rosenbaum, Shoe Workers' No. 53; Savity, Shoe Workers' No. 54; Crane, Shoe Workers' No. 60; Shader, Shoe Workers' District Council, No. 2; Kivinton, Workmen's Circle, No. 314; M. Liebman, Workmen's Circle, No. 356; M. Wasserman, Workmen's Circle, No. 272; Roeder, Workmen's Circle, No. 245; Louis Zinn, Workmen's Circle, No. 671; Millman, Workmen's Circle, No. 546; Rose Nevins, United Council of Working Women; H. Grossman, Workmen's Circle, No. 620; Jack Stachel, Wm. Weinstone, and Chas. Krumbein of the District Executive Committee of the Workers' Party; S. Dan, of the District Executive Committee of the Young Workers' League, and Bert Miller, of the Trade Union Educational League, District No. 2.

Supports Russian Recognition.

Comrade Alexander Trachtenberg of the Workers Party made an appeal for an energetic campaign for recognition of the Soviet Union and spoke of the dangers of a new attack. The conference adopted a resolution to support the campaign and instructed the executive committee to cooperate in making the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution a united front demonstration of labor.

Demonstrations will be held at the Central Opera House in New York City on Nov. 6 and in the Grand Assembly Hall, Brooklyn, the same evening.

Other resolutions unanimously adopted were on world trade union unity, on political labor unity, on the DAILY WORKER and on the United Council of Working Women.

Pledge Financial Support.

The conference delegates pledged financial support to the campaign committee in its work.

Great Soviet Trading Exhibition a Success

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NIJNY-NOVGOROD, Sept. 10—(By Mail)—Up to August 20, the turnover of the Nijny-Novgorod Fair surpassed 66 million roubles. There have been registered altogether 1,641 firms including 322 state enterprises, co-operative, 454; mixed companies limited, 12; private, 699; foreign, 154. There also were registered 43,307 towns of various goods.

Chinese merchants from Sinkiang, who brought raw hides, wool and sheepskins participated. They declared that Russian goods, sugar, manufactured goods, etc. can compete favourably by their quality and prices with English and Japanese.

LABOR PARTY BAR ON COMMUNISTS PROVEN FAILURE

British L. P. Official Relates Experience

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 15.—How the insistence of the yellow socialist leaders of the British labor party on exclusion of the Communists either destroys the necessary unity of labor or is ignored by local labor party sections, is shown by an article by Will Crick, president of the Rusholm divisional labor party, member of the executive of the Manchester borough labor party and president of Branch 5, of the Transport and General Workers' Union.

"The passing of a resolution to keep the Communists out, is easy," says Crick, "but its putting into effect is up an entirely different street; and many local labor parties have found."

Disaster to Bar Communists.

"In Manchester many attempts have been made to apply the decision, but on each occasion the attempt has been abandoned only when the movement has been almost overwhelmed in disaster.

"The Manchester borbough labor party refused to accept Communists as delegates, and yet, in full knowledge of this decision, the Manchester and Salford Trades Council elected two Communists amongst its delegates to the borough labor party.

"The Manchester and Salford Trades Council even elected a Communist as its president.

"The borough labor party acting on the L. P. decisions, refused to accept these delegates, and requested the Traades Council to appoint others who were not Communists, but the latter body reaffirmed its previous decisions, and said the borough labor party must accept its already properly appointed delegates or none at all.

Had to Ignore L. P. Rule.

"The labor party refused to accept them, and then came the inevitable split forced by the right wing. What a spectacle.

"Finally, better counsel prevailed and unity between the two bodies was attained by the labor party climbing down, reversing its decision, ignoring the national conference decision and accepting the Communist delegates.

Local Unions Supported Communists.

"Even trade union branches affiliated to the borough labor party were up in arms. One branch of the National Railwaymen's Union instructed its Communist delegates to sit tight and refuse to leave when asked. An Amalgamated Engineers' Union branch withdrew its non-Communist delegate and appointed a Communist instead.

"The Rusholme divisional labor party has now had the experience of two parliamentary elections with the Communist William Paul as candidate, and it can be definitely stated that it never fought two finer elections. Communists and all the rest rubbed shoulders and gave a real insight of what can be accomplished when unity prevails. A representative election committee was set up and its decisions were unswerviingly carried out by all.

Communists Worked Loyally.

"As election agent for the Communist Paul in the last fight, I can testify to the fact that my instructions as agent were implicitly carried out by the Manchester members of the Communist Party and the Young Communist League, who were ever eager to perform even the humblest task."

RUSSIA THE ONLY COUNTRY WHERE ECONOMIC CONDITIONS DO IMPROVE, PROFESSOR WARD TELLS AUDIENCE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, October 14.—"Lenin was the greatest mind functioning on the political field in our generation.

"Economic conditions in Russia are improving, and Russia is the only country in Europe where they are improving."

Witnessed Class Struggle Everywhere

These were among the striking statements made by Harry F. Ward, president of the American Civil Liberties' Union and professor at Union Theological Seminary, New York, to nearly 250 people at a luncheon given at the town hall to welcome him back after a year's journey to Europe and the Orient.

During the year Dr. Ward visited Russia, Germany, England, France, China, Japan and India. In all of them he found the struggle between oppression and freedom still active.

"Enormous creative forces are at work in Russia," he said. "Working very intensely and rapidly. Liberalizing tendencies there are on the increase. Considerable liberty exists with regard to criticizing acts of the administration. Repression is felt only when criticizing the fundamental principles of the existing institutions. But then, we in America do not treat with great consideration those who question the fundamentals of the American government. The only reason we have as much freedom now as we have is because those who are interested in keeping things as they are feel that the country is 'safe.'"

If great Britain succeeds in her present policy of isolating Russia, both east and west, Dr. Ward said, the Soviet government would probably be forced to take stronger repressive measures.

"It is either the present order in Russia, or Czarism," declared Dr. Ward. "There is nothing in between. If the old crowd gets back into power, the deaths which have taken place since the revolution will be as nothing to the killing that will take place, and the cross will be carried in the forefront of the killing. The old regime will not leave alive man, woman, or child suspected of Communist tendencies."

Dr. Ward declared that there were only two kinds of stabilization possible for the world—bankers' stabilization or Communist stabilization, and that the latter was preferable. The bankers could accomplish their kind of stabilization only by raising the standard of living of the workers and peasants everywhere, and by carrying on such subtle propaganda that the workers and peasants would not realize their enslavement. Both of these tasks were very difficult, he admitted.

Japan was described by Dr. Ward as reaching out for the economic advantages of an agreement with Russia, while trying to shut out Bolshevist ideas—"a difficult task." In China, he said, he was questioned by the chancellor of a university where he was to speak on Communism, to see whether his views were sufficiently radical to be put before the students, among whom there was a strong Communist spirit. In India he was not allowed by the British government to speak on Russia to the Hindu students.

"Until the ownership of natural resources, of manufacturing and finance capital, and of labor power, is settled," concluded Dr. Ward, "the world is on a war footing, and civil liberties cannot flourish."

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it. Send for a catalogue of all Communist literature.

PAXTON HIBBEN, IN MOSCOW, SEES GREAT CHANGES

Hopes U. S. Recognition Comes This Winter

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Sept. 10.—(By Mail.)—Captain Paxton Hibben of the American army arrived here lately. Mr. Hibben was in Russia in 1905-06 as secretary of the American Embassy. In 1921 he came to Russia with the American commission to visit famine districts and made a report which served as a basis for the American Relief Association and in 1922 he visited Moscow at the head of the Children Relief Committee.

In 1923 he was brought to trial being accused in America of publishing articles and delivering speeches in favor of recognition of the U. S. S. R. and for participation in the Society of Friends of Soviet Russia. The Hibben case was dragging for a long time and caused sensation in the United States.

An ex-Russian officer who confessed to being an agent of Grand Duke Cyril was called as the chief witness against him. The court gave no verdict and Hibben retained his rank of captain of the American army.

In an interview with a press correspondent, Captain Hibben said:

"I notice enormous changes in the U. S. S. R. since 1922. The workers' and peasants' Republic is showing great energy in reconstruction of the country, especially in technical science. I hope that the United States will soon recognize Russia.

"I know many influential people who before were against recognition but afterwards became ardent adherents to this idea. Senator Borah as it is known is a most influential member of the senate who stands for recognition, and I hope that he will be successful when there will be a winter session of congress in December."

Trade Union Congress General Council Makes Arthur Pugh Chairman

LONDON, Oct. 15. — The Trade Union General Council having met at its first session since Scarborough, a chairman was elected for the coming year. He is Arthur Pugh, and as chairman, will preside over meetings of the council and be next year's president of the Trade Union Congress.

Arthur Pugh was born in 1870, apprenticed when 13 years old to a butcher, a few years later becoming a steel worker in South Wales. He became secretary of the Frodingham, Lincolnshire, branch of the British Steel Smelters' Association in 1899, organized a branch of the independent labor party there.

In 1906, he was appointed assistant general secretary of his union, leaving his workshop to take office. He became a member of the parliamentary committee of the Trade Union Congress in 1920, and has served on the general council each year since.

The Tax Fight Against Mellon

On the eve of the convening of congress there again arises the struggle over the question of taxes. Against the proposition of the Coolidge administration, known as the Mellon plan, there is crystallizing an alignment of petty-bourgeois democrats from the southern states and petty-bourgeois republicans from the middle and far west. It was this identical combination that two years ago defeated the original Mellon tax plan. This recuring over the administration's tax program reveals the fact that the republican and democratic parties both contain within their ranks elements incapable of being reconciled to their main policy.

Tho there is no petty-bourgeois party the southern democrats, who rallied around the Bryan standard for three decades, and the middle west republicans, who are much closer to the political line of the late LaFollette than to Coolidge, form a bloc in both houses of congress that openly challenges the designs of big capital whenever their economic interests are threatened.

Obviously a measure in the interest of big capital is the Coolidge-Mellon proposal to abolish the federal inheritance tax and at the same time insist upon a "less pronounced reduction" of the normal rate on small incomes. A program that aims to leave intact the great fortunes when their owners die and at the same time place a heavier income tax burden upon the smaller fry. Against this is the demand of the petty-bourgeois combination for perpetuation of the federal inheritance tax and the raising of the exemption on the "little fellows" to $3,000 for single men and $5,000 for married men.

So desperate has Secretary of the Treasury Mellon become at this threat to again wreck his tax program that he has already yielded to the limit. In an effort to patch up the struggle within his own party he called into conference Representative Green, of Iowa. Mellon's program demanded a reduction of surtaxes on big incomes from 40 per cent to 15 per cent. Green informed him that such a reduction would defeat the whole program and proposed a reduction to 30 per cent. As a tentative proposition a tax of 20 per cent was accepted.

But a compromise on the tax question will not settle the struggle that is taking place in both old parties, for both of them are in a period of transition. The democratic party since 1910 has been subservient to finance capital. In the east it is the tool of the House of Morgan; in the south and middle west it is petty bourgeois. The republican party, formerly the party of industrial capital, is rapidly being converted into the political expression of finance-capital. Since its spectacular triumph over Morgan's League of Nations program in 1920, it has passed into the control of Morgan at almost the precise tempo that finance-capital has extended its control over industry. The great industrial mergers under the aegis of bank capital shattered the economic foundation upon which the republican party formerly stood. But no political party, in a period of transition, is ever able to reconcile all elements to its new policy. The "backward" elements persist for a period of time, determined by objective economic conditions.

The democratic party, tho the chasm between its eastern and its middle west and southern sections are deep-going, as an opposition party with little responsibility, will probably present a united opposition. In such an event the combination against the Coolidge-Mellon program will again doom it to defeat.

"A Self-Acting Body of Armed Men"

Hanford MacNider, the appointee of President Coolidge to the post of assistant secretary of war, is the living personification of the American legion in politics.

He is a past commander of this nucleus of the American fascisti, having been elected in 1921. He is a banker and his father is a banker. Having been an officer in the Mexican expeditionary force and in the world war, he is that apothesis of American capitalist efficiency-businessman and militarist.

The American government is assuming, as Wall Street takes mortgages on one country after another and monopolistic capitalism at home creates a class of millions dependent upon the whims of a handful of masters, more and more the characteristics described by Engels:

> The second distinguishing feature is the establishment of a public power which is no longer identical with the population and which is organized as an armed force.

Engels was writing of capitalist society in the pre-imperialist period but the developments which he foretold have occurred in indisputeable form.

The war department is a super-government and one has only to read the capitalist press to understand that preparation for wars of aggression and suppression of the working class at home and abroad are the chief problems with which the best minds of American capitalism are occupied.

MacNider fits into this scheme of things beautifully. He is backed by an organization of ex-officers whose privileged position in the American armed forces during the world war merely whetted their appetites for further opportunity to exercise unquestioned authority. The legion is first of all concerned with "Americanism" and those who do not know by this that "Americanism" is synonymous with labor baiting of all kinds has not learned the ABC of the class struggle in the United States.

Said Engels:

> The above mentioned public force increases with the intensification of class antagonism within the state, and with the growth in size and population of the adjacent states.

The day of flabby civilians in important war department posts is over. The appointment of MacNider is an omen which class conscious workers will read correctly if they view it as preliminary to the enactment of such bloody scenes in the United States as we are reading of in Panama.

With Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman of Cook county in jail, the republican party in Chicago faces a serious situation. For years this ward heeler was the principal vote getter of that organization in Chicago and served many terms as coroner, previous to his election as sheriff.

Free Speech in the Anthracite

August Valentine

AT the end of the first month of the strike the situation in the Anthracite has not changed one iota.

The mines are closed. The men are idle. The newspapers carry their usual line of propaganda. The paid advertisements appear regularly. The mayors have their squabbles with the head of the Anthracite Operators association over the check-off. The other demands of the miners are completely forgotten. Lewis appears now and then with a weak statement and although he does not "believe" in arbitration he appeared in conference with the Scranton chamber of commerce to try and make a "settlement." The same committee met Inglis, the head of the operators' association the next day.

THE Lewis-Cappellini machine is satisfied. The miners do not know what is transpiring. Ask an average miner what is going on and he cannot tell you.

The Communists are in the fight to make it a real strike. Mass meetings were called to defend the interests of the strikers and to put forth the program of the Progressive Miners' Committee and explain the aims of the Communists. Meeting after meeting has been stopped, or held without permit, permits being refused for many meetings, halls closed and crowd dispersed at several meetings.

Treachery of Cappellini.

After our Scranton meeting which was broken up and which resulted in Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners Committee, and myself going to jail and Zarek and Toohey also being jailed later as a result of this meeting, followed by the conviction of Reid and Toohey on a trump-up charge of vagrancy, the Cappellini gang wrote the following letter to the authorities of Scranton.

> Sept. 28, 1925.
> Michial J. McHugh, Superintendant of Police,
> Scranton, Pa.
> Dear Sir: Your action in breaking up the meeting at Washington Hall, Scranton, Penna., Saturday, Sept. 26, of representatives of the Soviet movement of Russia whose purpose is to destroy the orderly method of conducting the affairs of the United Mine Workers of America, incite violence and the destruction of our great labor movement was taken up at a meeting of the District Executive Board, held Sept. 28, 1925, and it was unanimously decided the Executive Board of District 1, United Mine Workers of America, go on record commending your action taken in preserving peace and tranquility in our great city.
> We realize that you are impartial in this controversy and your only desire is to promote the peace of the community and we are in hearty accord with you in this policy.
> We again thank you and commend your action, and hope all public officials who have for their duty the enforcement of laws for peace and harmony follow your example.
> Wishing your continued success, we are,
> yours truly,
> RINALDO CAPPELLINI,
> Pres., District No. 1, U. M. W. of A.
> ENOCH WILLIAMS,
> Sec., District No. 1, U. M. W. of A.

AND why not? These damn Progressives and the Communists are raising hell! They are calling meetings. They are showing the workers the ONLY road to victory.

No Union Meetings.

On the other hand what has the Lewis-Cappellini gang done? NOTHING! NOTHING! In many instances even the local unions do not meet, because there is no business during the suspension as stated by a chairman of a local union. Why? The corrupt gang of officials know that if meetings are called the rank and file would want to know "what's up."

What would the officials of the union be able to tell the miners at a mass meeting? They would have to come out and explain a situation that is not explanable, without exposing their treachery.

Speakers Defy Police.

In Plymouth our meeting was broken up before the speakers arrived. In Luzerne the hall was closed by the burgess. The comrades spoke from the steps of the building. In Exeter the same thing happened. We took a nearby street corner. Cops interfered, but the crowd demanded that the speaker go on—and he went on.

AT Scranton meeting of Saturday, Sept. 26th, "the representatives of the Soviet movement of Russia" (long live Cappellini, the Mussolini of the Anthracite) were going to "destroy the orderly methods of conducting the affairs of the United Mine Workers of America." The Scranton authorities were highly "commended" for the action taken in PRESERVING "peace" and "tranquility" in the great city of Scranton.

The Scranton Arrests.

Just what was our "crime"? Bringing forth the demands of the miners—of no arbitration, no compromise, the ten per cent increase in wages, the five-day week, six-hour day and a labor party.. was enough to brand us a "disrupters" of the union and who might overthrow the government any minute, if we are not behind the bars.

So at this meeting appeared a dozen or so plainclothes police. After the meeting was broken up we were taken to the West End police station. After searching us and satisfying themselves that we had no cannons or red regiments in our hip pockets they were assured that "our" country was saved from "another revolution."

IN jail our belts were taken away from us. No newspapers were allowed us. In came the people of Scranton to see "the horrible Bolsheviks." Thank god they were behind the bars, or we would be living in a Soviet America!

We were not lonesome in the vermin-infested cells.

Sunday dwindled into Monday and about ten in the morning Reid, Zarek and I were transfered to the city jail of Scranton.

Officials Visit Jail.

Here the officials of the United Mine Workers appeared. These great Americans, whose motto is "never to kick a man when he is down" surely did not live up to their motto. "Willing lackeys" is the least that could be said about them.

After telling us that we will be deported or get twenty years on a hard rock pile, they reminded me of a little incident I went thru long, long ago. I was a little kid at the time I happened to run across a funny paper. Not being able to read myself, dad read the cartoon-story to me. It was a cartoon of a machine invented by a man in which two boys were put thru a machine and came out old men. "Daddy, Daddy, that is bad about that man putting little boys in the machine, isn't it?" "Yes," said dad, "some people are bad."

WHEN I was told "20 years of the hard rock pile," I come to the conclusion that I have reached the stage that I was to go thru the machine.

They did not tell us why we were arrested. The charges? What were they? We didn't know what we were held for. There is a sedition act here in this state. To send a person away for overthrowing a government he hasn't yet overthrown must have a 100% agreement from all the political bosses of the state. The little friction that exists between the city officials and Pinchot was possibly the "bogey" that prevented this charge and so the federal authorities were "sicked" on us.

After being grilled by the immigration men and the department of justice we were led back to the cell. This place was not only "buggy" but also "lousy."

Federal Dicks on Job.

Asked if I believed in force and violence I told them it's always the other side that uses that "animal" when we set out to achieve our purpose.

WEDNESDAY morning Mr. Isaac Shorr of the Civil Liberites Union arrived. He was told that the case was in the hands of the federal authorities and therefore the only man to see was the United States district attorney. After Mr. Shorr left to see the United States district attorney we were hauled out before the magistrate. The magistrate must have been informed that the "revolution" existed only in his imagination, stuck true to his word when he said, "If the federal authorities will not take care of them I will decide later what is to be done with them."

Are You a Vag?

What could we be railroaded on? Ah! Ha!

"Vagrancy."

"Have you got a home?" I was asked.

"Yes," I answered.

"What have you to prove it?"

"You can call up the landlady," I answered.

"Where do you work?"

"I'm on strike now."

"Where did you work before the strike?"

"Bliss Mine, Nanticoke."

"What are you living on?"

"I saved a few dollars before the strike."

"What have you to prove it?" thundered the magistrate.

HERE I produced a little red bank book (oh, how he likes that color) in which I had $150.00 at one time but dwindled down to $50.00 since the strike. For this money I worked like a mule. In the last seven months of work I produced some 4,000 tons of coal. Many a family was kept, or will be kept warm by this coal. This is a nice contribution for the upkeep of society. I wonder how many families and kiddies were kept warm by the hot speeches made by the patriots who are trying to save the country from these horrible "reds"?

Not being able to railroad me on that charge, they gave me twenty minutes to get out of town. Alex Zarek was released unconditionally the following day.

Toohey was less fortunate than I. Having a mother to support in Pittsburgh, he was stuck away in the "jug" for six months. The $30.00 in Reid's pocket did not save him from a like sentence.

I heard so much about the deportation, that I got the deportation-phoebia. The first thing I did when I got into Wilkes-Barre was to beat it to a barbershop and start proceedings at once to deport all the lice that landed on unwelcome territory. Had they been born there it would be a different matter. For this deportation" I had to pay $1.75 to the barber.

Must Aid Prisoners.

IN conclusion I want to appeal to all the miners and workers in general to help the two fighting comrades. The boys were stuck into the "jug" for challenging the profits of the coal barons, and the soft seats of the labor bureaucracy.

Both could today enjoy the liberties that Cappellini and other traitors enjoy, but Toohey and Reid will never go back on the miners, as Cappellini did.

Cappellini used radical miners to get into power and then turned right against them as demonstrated in the Indianapolis convention in January, 1924, when he said, "I have dined and I've wined with them, but I wish to christ I'd have poisoned them." How well I remember those words.

Toohey and Reid are of a caliber that will stick to the men thru thick and thin, and therefore deserve your support. They feel more confortable in jail with a clear conscience than Cappellini on the outside.

Workers of America! Fight to free the inprisoned figthers. Show this system that the real jury, the working class, is waking up.

Course of Economic Development in September

By EARL R. BROWDER

SEPTEMBER production continued the upward movement noted in August, after a slow but steady decline from February to July. Altho August 1925 was more than 12% above 1924, and registered a positive increase over July, yet the index figure of the U. S. bureau of census, weighted to equalize seasonal changes, continued to register a slight downward movement. The continued upgrade of production for September will probably show that this has been overcome. Certainly there is a large gain over the same month of one year ago.

Steel Production

Production of steel ingots for September was 3,492,904 tons, an increase over August of 68,870 tons, and over September of last year of 665,279 tons. The average daily production in September was 134,342 tons, as compared with 131,694 tons in August, and with 108,755 in September 1924.

UNFILLED steel orders of the U. S. Steel corporation on Sept. 30th totalled 3,717,297 tons, an increase over August of 204,494 tons. This was the first gain in unfilled orders since February. Operations were 75% of capacity. First week in October, this had increased to 80%, according to Iron Age of Oct. 8th. October bookings are expected to show another increase.*

In index figures, the comparison for August and September of iron and steel production is as follows:

	August	September
Pig Iron
1924	74	81
1925	106	107
Steel
1924	91	100
1925	122	124

Railroad Traffic.

"Loadings of revenue freight for this season of the year continues to be well in excess of any corresponding period on record," says the American Railway Association. The following figures give comparison for the year to Sept. 26, with the previous year, and weekly totals:

Total car loading—

39 weeks up to	1925	1924
Sept. 26	37,846,925	35,701,943
Week of Sept. 5	1,102,946	921,303
Week of Sept. 12	975,434	1,061,781
Week of Sept. 19	1,098,428	1,076,847
Week of Sept. 26	1,120,645	1,087,954

Gross and net earnings of the railroads for August continued to increase over the same month of last year, and also increased over July. "They were the largest since war times," says the Commercial and Financial Chronicle.

GROSS earnings were $554,559,318, an increase of over 47 million dollars. Net earnings were $166,558,666, an increase of almost 32 million dollars over August last year.

It will be noted that again the "net" earnings show the greatest gain, even as in previous months. While gross earnings increased by 9.2 per cent, net earnings gained by 23.7 per cent. Only partly is this explained by increased traffic; to a great extent it is the result of smaller wages and longer hours of labor.

For the nine months ending September 30, building in the United States totalled five billion dollars, according to a review of the Indiana Limestone Quarrymen's Association. "This exceeds any 12-month period in history," says the report. "Moreover, the barometer points to continued broadscale activity during the final quarter of this year. A building total of more than $650,000,000 for the whole nation was attained in September. There is every reason to believe that building will continue at practically the same high level for at least another year."

September building was 31½ per cent greater than last year, altho slightly less than the previous month for seasonal causes. Lumber production continued to increase in September.

Petroleum.

Production of crude oil declined somewhat, altho continuing above last year. The daily average production for the week of Sept. 19, was 2,131,600 barrels; for Sept. 26, 2,107,400 barrels, and for Oct. 3, 2,096,250 barrels. This compares with the week of Oct. 4, 1924, with a daily average of 2,010,450 barrels.

Retail Trade.

"Retail trade is steadily expanding." The sales of mail order houses and chain stores continue the same rate of increase reported last month. Total sales for nine months to Sept. 30, show an increase of 13 per cent over last year for the mail order houses. Chain stores show an increase of 14 per cent for the same period.

Foreign Trade.

Information of foreign trade is always one month late, so that only now we have the figures for August. As expected, they show continued increase over July. Following is a summary of latest figures:

	1925	1924
August
Imports	$375,000,000	$254,000,000
Exports	383,000,000	330,000,000
Eight Months Ending Aug.
Imports	$2,764,768,000	$2,382,727,000
Exports	3,084,478,000	2,697,034,000

These figures do not include gold, which in the first eight months of 1924, showed an excess of imports of $256,647,000 while in 1925, gold net exports were $141,756,000, making a net addition to the export of values in 1925 by the United States of almost 400 million dollars over 1924, for the first eight months.

Summary.

Only one pessimistic note is sounded in the financial and commercial papers of the American capitalist class. That is a statement made by C. W. Barron, publisher of Barron's Financial Weekly, who said:

> "Business is too good. It is prosperity and business expansion that breed the trouble for the future. Business is too good when it tempts large owners of stocks to part with their shares at rising prices and tempts the public to go into debt to buy them."

This statement would seem to be but a general recognition of the inevitable cycle of capitalist production which must sooner or later call a halt to the phenomenal boom now being experienced in America. But as yet there are no definite economic indications that this boom has reached its climax. "Both statistical records and reports from widely separated cities," says Dun's Review, "give increasing evidence of the upward course of business."

Intrigues Against Labor Unity

By JOSEPH BRAHDY.

WHEN the cheering and clamor for Albert A. Purcell reached gigantic proportions at the Carnegie Hall meeting arranged last Sunday by the socialist party, Shiplacoff, as a sort of vice-chairman, shouted angrily to the gallery, where the workers were sitting, "We are not interested in what you are saying. We want to hear what Purcell has to say." Thus to pour cold water on the enthusiastic reception tendered to Purcell was only one of the many acts of kindness.

But, of course, the socialist party was not interested in having the meeting hear what Purcell had to say, so they pushed him thoughtfully to the end of the list of speakers at a wearisome afterno n meeting, and he got the floor at 5:30 p. m., after a number of people had left.

AND besides, instead of drawing large masses of workers to the meeting, they charged fancy prices, and for non-members of the socialist party the prices were especially advanced thru the manipulation of "bonus" tickets; as a consequence, large sections of the house were unoccupied.

ALBERT A. PURCELL

None of the four American "socialists" on the platform spoke about Trade Unionism, Pick Line, Injunctions, Amalgamattion, Labor Unity, Labor Party, the Workers Party, the Socialist, the Communist, the Amsterdam International, the R. I. L. U., China India, Egypt, the terror in Esthonia, Roumania, Hungary, Poland, about the struggles of Russia; except two or three of these terms, none were even uttered in their "socialist" speeches. They advised, however, the workers to vote for Thomas for mayor.

Thomas made a bad break, however, when he burst into white heat of indignation against Ambassador Herrick for congratulating the American aviators in Morocco. He forgot in his excitement to mention that the French socialists voted deliberately the money with which to buy these aeroplanes.

The German socialist Braun was positively amusing. He boasted for half an hour about the "republic" of Germany, and how the monarchy was dead. The proof was the fact that even Hindenburg took the oath of allegiance to the republic. Hindenburg's oath to the republic is no more a guarantee for it than was Liebknecht's oath to the monarchy; neither of them meant it, nobody believed either of these "oaths," and it was a guarantee for no one except an out and out imbecile.

WHEN Purcell took the floor the workers in the audience received him with the singing of the International (the socialists seem to have forgotten that song.) Purcell's speech rang with one key-note: World trade union unity, labor unity. He didn't mention any names, or any organizations, but he said that he was fully aware of the many intrigues that were going on against unity, the world over, and also in America. Coming right fresh from the A. F. of L. convention, at a meeting held under the very shadow of the black Forward, with the slippery Hillquit in the chair, he knew whereof he was speaking when he referred to the many intrigues going on against unity. When he finished his plea for unity, a cloud of leaflets fluttered from the top gallery thru the house, in which the Workers Party reiterates its appeal to the S. P. for unity in the coming election. But, of course, a plea for unity leaves the socialist party cold; they are determined to lead the few workers who are still following them, to another bwindling of the socialist vote, to another exhibition of division, to another defeat.

Coal Company Sues Union Miners for Loss of Business

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio, Oct. 15.—The Western Coal company of Cleveland is suing the union miners of Steubenville, Ohio, for damages suffered by the company during a strike which the bosses call an "unauthorized" strike, at the Franklin mine last August. 200 union miners are named in the suit for $6,417 damages.

BORAH TO ACT ON HORTHY TERROR

STRIKING SEAMEN SENT TO JAIL IN HUNDREDS BY AUSTRALIAN COURTS

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 15.—Under authority of what is called the "Peace Act," the authorities are instituting persecution of leaders and active workers among the seamen.

Up to date, there have been 382 seamen given kangaroo trials and sentenced to prison terms for striking.

INSULT TO BRIT LABOR BY A. F. OF L.

Farrington, Hutcheson, "Fraternal" Delegates

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

STEEPLECHASE PIER, Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 16.—The A. F. of L. convention here handed a direct and intended insult to the British Trade Unions when they selected Frank Farrington, arch-reactionary president of the Illinois Mine Workers, and William L. Hutcheson, president of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, an instigator of the expulsionist policy against militants in that organization, as the two fraternal delegates to the next British Trade Union Congress.

There were no opposing candidates. The British fraternal delegates, Arthur Purcell and Ben Smithh, were not in the hall when the vote was taken.

"Said Fitzpatrick to Connors".

James B. Connors, vice-president of the [illegible] Union, was selected as the fraternal delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor Congress, after a nomination speech bordering on burlesque by Delegate Fitzpatrick, of the Actors' Union. Fitzpatrick said Connors ought to have the job as reward for his long service.

Detroit Convention City.

The next convention will be in Detroit, Michigan, in October, 1926. Detroit won out over Birmingham, Alabama, by a vote of 15,879 to 11,609 after Los Angeles and Sacramento, California, had been forced out of the race.

All the old officers were re-elected without opposition. George L. "Majah" Berry, of the Printing Pressmen, nominated Frank L. Morrison, for re-election as secretary. Morrison is a member of the Printers' Union and one of the leaders of the so-called "progressive" machine in that organization, which is opposed to the Lynch machine. This seems to indicate enmity between Lynch and Berry that may be carried into the allied printing trades. It further shows that the "progressives" in the Typographical Union receive support from such a notorious reactionary as Berry.

The organization committee could find no objection to the resolution demanding the organization of Negro workers. The convention voted to "consistently continue" its work of organizing colored workers. It was claimed that 100 labor bodies already admit Negroes to membership.

Inevitable Jurisdictional Fights.

It is proposed to call a conference at Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 29, at which President E. H. Fitzgerald, of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks will meet representatives of the colored freight handlers in an attempt to adjust the differences raised by the drawing of the color line in this organization.

The jurisdiction fight of the Teamsters and Street Carmen over bus drivers was settled by giving all drivers on busses owned by the electrical railways to the Street Carmen, the rest going to the Teamsters.

PURCELL TO SPEAK FOR LABOR UNITY

Meetings in Ten Big Cities Arranged

Announcement of an extensive tour in America by A. A. Purcell, senior British fraternal delegate to the recent American Federation of Labor convention in Atlantic City is made upon completion of arrangements with local trade union committees in the cities to be visited.

Purcell, who is president of the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions, head of the Furniture Workers' Union in England and former chairman of the British Trades Union Congress preaches the immediate necessity of world trade union unity, including the Russian unions. He made the unity plea at the A. F. of L. convention but met no encouragement from Pres. Wm. Green. On his tour he will renew his efforts to interest American workers in international problems of labor, arguing that since capital has become international, labor must follow suit to preserve and improve the wages and conditions of its organized section.

Visits Mexico First.

After a visit to Mexico, Purcell opens his American tour at Kansas City Nov. 4 where, as elsewhere a committee of local trade unions is in charge of the meeting. His schedule includes St. Louis Nov. 5, Chicago Nov. 6, Detroit Nov. 8, Pittsburgh Nov. 9, Cleveland Nov. 10, Toronto Nov. 11, Montreal Nov. 13, Boston Nov. 15, Philadelphia Nov. 16, New York Nov. 17.

According to his lecture manager Morton L. Johnson, a member of Chicago Electrical Workers' Local 134, an admission charge of 25 cents will be made at each meeting and the same subject, World Trade Union Unity, will be used by Purcell thruout. He has already spoken before the Baltimore Trades and Labor Assembly and at a socialist meeting in Carnegie Hall, New York. He first became a figure in the minds of Americans interested in world happenings by the report on Russia of the 1924 British trade union delegation to that country. Purcell was chairman of the delegation.

When presented with a gold watch by the A. F. of L. convention delegates Purcell in thanking them renewed his plea for international labor unity.

IMPUDENT DEMAND UPON WORKERS MADE BY THE PRESIDENT OF PANAMA

BALBOA, Panama, Oct. 1.—President Chiari of Panama, backed financially by the American plunderbund, and militaristically by the gunmen of Wall Street, has issued an impudent demand to the strikers and tenants that they cease their agitation for the release of prisoners arrested following the murder of workers by the soldiery and police. As to this demand and the demand for the discharge of officials responsible for the outrage the president said "these are matters the courts must handle."

A gesture by the cabinet to relieve unemployment today embodies recommendation that public works be increased. The proposed projects include a medical school as the first unit of a university to bear the name of Bolivar and an insane asylum. The workers recommend the cabinet members as the first inmates of the latter.

Unemployment Grows.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 16.—The last two months show a continuing steady increase in unemployment in Denmark, the minimum figure of 24,824 at the beginning of last month being approximately 10,000 greater than it was at the same date in the year 1924.

N. Y. WORKERS DENOUNCE GITLOW BAN

Huge Mass Meetings; Unions Protest

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The answer of the Workers Party and the workers of the city of New York to the barring of Benjamin Gitlow, its candidate for mayor, from the city ballot is an intensification of its campaign for Gitlow and the entire Communist ticket. The same night that the news came out that he was barred from the ballot, a storm of protest came in from workers organizations headed by Locals No. 2, 9 and 22 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers and the joint board of the Furriers' Union which happened to be meeting.

On Wednesday, Oct. 21, the needle trades workers of the city of New York, will hold a protest meeting in Hunts Point Palace, 163rd St., and Southern Blvd.

Protest Meeting Arranged

Protests red nights have been arranged in which 75 party speakers and representatives of organized labor will be thrown simultaneously into a single working class quarter of the city.

Every important corner of that quarter will be covered by one or more speakers and the speakers will terminate their meetings at 10:30 p. m. by leading their audience to the most important street crossing in the entire district so that many thousands of workers will converge from all corners of that section to the wind-up point. Harlem's night will be Saturday, Oct. 17 with culmination at 110th St. & 5th Ave. Brownsville will be invaded on Friday, Oct. 23 and all meetings will lead their crowds to Stone Ave. and Pitkin. The Upper Bronx will have its red night on Oct. 24 with culmination at Longwood Ave. and Prospect; Williamsburg on Friday, Oct. 30, culminating at the Grand Street extension; and the Downtown district on Saturday, Oct. 31 with the central meeting at 10th St. and Second Ave.

Circulate Huge Petition

A monster petition will be circulated in which it is expected to get the signatures of 100,000 workers, demanding that Gitlow be put back on the ballot. If the storm of protest does not succeed in compelling the Save the Victims of the Hungarian Horthy Murder Government!

APPEAL TO THE WORKERS OF AMERICA BY THE INTERNATIONAL LABOR DEFENSE

The Horthy government of Hungary is adding new deeds of infamy to its bloody record. The tens of thousands of workers and peasants it has imprisoned, tortured and murdered, have not yet satisfied its blood lust. The white terror is taking on a greater intensity.

The attempt to destroy the labor movement of Hungary has failed. Wholesale torture and murder has not been able to stifle the memory of the glorious workers' revolution of 1919. The spark is still alive and the labor movement of Hungary is rising again.

The answer of the Horthy regime is: New arrests, new tortures and murders. In recent days, more than 100 left socialist workers belonging to the Independent Socialist Party have been arrested and are facing immediate trial by court martial. Among those arrested is Mathias Rakosi, formerly people's commissar in the revolutionary government. Cablegrams from Berlin warn that these workers are slated for conviction within three days and execution within two hours after sentence.

The heroic deeds of Comrade Rakosi are an inspiration to the revolutionary workers of the entire world. Braving all dangers, taking his life in his hands, he went back into Hungary for the fifth time since the fall of the Soviet government. Working quietly, under the very eyes of the police, he gathered the scattered forces together and inspired them to renewed efforts. His work began to bear fruit. New signs of life appeared in the workers' movement.

Horthy's bloodhounds finally captured him.

The police machine outdid itself in the attempt to extort information from Comrade Rakosi. He was beaten and tortured for days. His spine was broken by the blood-thirsty mercenaries. But all to no avail. At the hearing to which he was carried more dead than alive, he proudly defended Communism and refused to betray his comrades. In a day or two, he will be court-martialed. It is the announced intention of the government of white terror to execute him and the other workers recently arrested.

The International Labor Defense pledged itself at the National Conference on June 28, to defend the persecuted victims of the white terror in all lands. It is exerting all its energies and resources to arouse the most wide-spread protest of the American workers against the execution of Mathias Rakosi, and the other workers who face court-martial with him.

Workers of America! Do not be indifferent to the fate of your class brothers in bloody Hungary. You have special reason to be concerned. Hungarian capitalism is not something separate and apart from American capitalism. The Horthy murder regime is only the puppet of Wall Street. The dollars of Wall Street prop it up. The financial czar of the Horthy government is Jeremiah Smith, the agent of Morgan & Co. Part of the profits coined out of the sweat and blood and tears of the outraged working class of Hungary go to the Wall Street backers of the Horthy government.

Wall Street has an interest in supporting the bloody deeds of Horthy and in suppressing all news about them. You workers have an interest to expose and protest against them. The fight of the Hungarian workers is your fight.

Workers of America! Join the mighty protest movement to rescue the Hungarian workers from the Horthy hangmen. Organize protest meetings everywhere. Pass resolutions in all labor organizations and send them to the Hungarian ambassador at Washington.

Help us to turn the searchlight of publicity on the beastly action of the Hungarian white terror.

Smash the conspiracy of silence!

Let the cries of the tortured prisoners of Hungary be heard in America!

Department of Labor Reports 51 Strikes and 18 Controversies

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 16—On Oct. 10, 1925, there were 51 strikes before the department of labor for settlement, and, in addition, 18 controversies which had not reached the strike stage. Total number of cases pending, 69, twelve of which are new. The 12 new cases may be compared with 8 and 9 of the first and second weeks preceding. The new cases involve barbers, textile workers, ironworkers, leather workers, miners, bridge carpenters, sawmill men, stove mounters, laundry workers, and clothing workers.

JUDGE DENIES BISHOP BROWN INJUNCTION TO STAY HIS REMOVAL

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 16—Federal Judge Burns of the United States district court dismissed the petition of Bishop William Montgomery Brown to stay his removal as a bishop.

Bishop Brown was recently removed as a bishop by the house of bishops of the protestant episcopal church. He is trying to retain his right to the title of bishop and is now preparing a case in court in a contest to hold the title.

Red Baiting Dick Meets His Fate in Battle with Bootlegger

The capitalist press of Chicago has been loaded with eulogies of the department of justice spy, Edward C. Shanahan, since some bootlegger sent him to the happy hunting grounds.

Shanahan was well known among labor circles as a frame-up expert. He was one of the spies that participated in the raid on the Communists at Bridgman, Michigan. He also was in the raiding squad that broke into the Trade Union Educational League headquarters at 118 N. La Salle St.

LIBERALS CABLE FIRM PROTEST TO BUDAPEST

Big Demonstrations of Workers Arranged

Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, has declared his intention to act in the effort being made to save the lives of the workers who have been recently arrested by Horthy, the "hangman of Hungary," and are doomed to execution unless the hand of the murderer is halted by protests thruout the world.

In a telegram to the International Labor Defense, to its headquarters at 23 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Borah said he was deeply interested in the case and further stated that he "will act in the matter when I can determine how I may be effective."

The outstanding figure among the last batch of Horthy victims is Mathias Rakosi, peoples' commissar in the former Soviet government of Hungary.

The influence of Senator Borah, head of the senate's most powerful committee, is expected to lift the veil of silence that has until now shrouded the latest orgy of terror inaugurated by the notorious butcher Horthy. The government of Horthy is supported by funds supplied by the House of Morgan and at this momement Horthy's financial expert is an American by the name of Jeremiah Smith, who is acting unofficially for the Coolidge administration, but officially for the Wall Street bankers.

Fight Gains Strength.

That the campaign to save the Hungarian workers from the gallows is gaining impetus is shown by the following joint cable sent to the Hungarian government by a committee of prominent liberals, headed by Upton Sinclair and Roger Baldwin. The telegram made public by the International Labor Defense reads:

"Bethlen,
"Prime Minister,
"Budapest, Hungary.

"Deeply concerned about reports from Berlin of torture of political prisoners and court martial and threatened execution of more than one hundred including Mathies Rakosi, people's commissar in the former revolutionary government. Carrying out such executions will arouse greatest indignation of American people. We demand that court martial be abolished, that regular civil trials be conducted and that no execution take place.

"Upton Sinclair, Roger Baldwin, Clarence Darrow, Robert W. Dunn, Andrew T. McNamara, David Rhys Williams and Robert Witaker."

Big Mass Meetings.

Reports of demonstrations and mass metings are pouring into the national office of the International Labor Defense, the headquarters of the anti-Horthy campaign. The two largest protest meetings are expected to be held in New York and Chicago, where arrangements are already made.

The New York demonstration will be held at 1 p. m. today in Union Square and speakers from many organizations, labor and liberal, will participate.

The principal speakers at the Chicago protest meeting will be Rev. David Rhys Williams, Ralph Chaplin, James P. Cannon and R. Sauser. The meeting will be held in Prudential Hall, corner of North Ave. and Halsted St. and will begin promptly at 8 p. m., Tuesday, Oct. 20.

In addition the following cities are arranging demonstrations of protest against the proposed execution of Rakosi and his comrades by the Horthy government: Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle.

Chicago organizations representing 20,000 workers and liberals dispatched a telegram to the Hungarian embassy in Washington protesting against the threatened execution of Rakosi and his fellow workers. Among those signing the telegram are Clarence Darrow, William H. Wolly, David Rhys Williams, Dr. Norman D. Barr and E. C. Wentworth.

James P. Cannon, executive secretary of the Intrenational Labor Defense, declared that the movement to save the lives of Rakosi and other victims of Horthy's blood lust was gaining phenomenal strength and would rouse the country from end to end

CHINA PACT ON TARIFFS IS FADING

Armies Take Positions Around Shanghai

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 16.—Prospects that the question of Chinese tariffs will be settled by force of arms and not in the conference of imperialist powers with the Peking government at the capital, increase with the war like movements of Chinese military commanders threatening to seize the Shanghai area and drive the Fengtien troops northward.

Strawn Train Held Up

When Silas H. Strawn, Standard Oil attorney and American delegate to the Peking conference tried to leave Shanghai for Peking late Thursday, his train was first delayed by troop trains of the Fengtien forces moving out of the Shanghai area to take positions along the Shanghai-Nanking railroad, and the Strawn train was later nearly wrecked when the line was cut at Wasih and the train seized by soldiers.

Upon orders from Peking the train was released, however, and allowed to proceed.

Fengtien troops to the number of 8,000 are withdrawing from Shanghai area to shorten the line of expected attack from the Chekiang and Chihli forces from the south and west. These forces evidently aim to drive the Fengtien troops out of the Shanghai area and northward out of Kiangsu province, seeking to control the Yangtze valley with its rich income of customes and to hold it as an accomplished fact before the much talked of tariff conference has anything to say about it.

May Create General Warfare

The fighting, if persisted in, may extend into Honan province to the west and up the Yangtze valley to central China. It has possibilities of completely disrupting the tariff conference and creating conditions that will force direct dealing with the nationalist movement by the imperialist powers.

Both railway lines out of Shanghai are in the possession of Fengtien troops, who are said to be preparing to make a stand to the west near Soochow.

N. Y. WORKERS DENOUNCE GITLOW BAN

elections board to reverse its decision, the workers of the city of New York will be asked to write in the name of Gitlow on the ballot in defiance of the action of the elections board.

Communist Issue a Statement

The Workers (Communist) Party, in a statement, points out that in reality "Gitlow is barred because of his activities on behalf of the workers, just as he was jailed because of his activities on behalf of the workers. His activities in coal strike, his fight against injunctions and the use of the courts aganst the workers, his service to the needle trades workers, his defense of the foreign-born, and his long record of militant working class activities—these are the true reasons for his exclusion. The workers will take up the fight to compel the election board to reverse its decision."

Gitlow's Views on Ban

Gitlow has issued the following statement on the action of the elections board:

"A government whose courts enjoin picketing, whose police are used as strike-breakers, a government which has jailed me as it has jailed hundreds of other workers for their political activities on behalf of their fellow-workers, is to be expected, to take such action as it has taken today in barring me from the ballot after I had been placed on it by the requisite number of petitions.

Real Reason for Discrimination

"Excuses for attacking the workers are always to be found. Injunctions and the use of police against picket lines are defended under the pretext of 'protecting freedom of contract.' Saklatvala was barred from exposing British and world imperialism under the pretense that the immigration laws were being enforced. I am barred as a 'felon' after being convicted for the 'crime' of defending the workers.

"I shall not abandon my campaign. On the contrary, I shall intensify it, for our work in this campaign is directed precisely against this use of the government machinery against the workers activities. This is not an attack against me. It is an attack against the workers of the city of New York. They will know how to answer it."

LABOR PARTY, WORLD TRADE UNITY, AMALGAMATION, ALL PUT OFFICIALS ON DEFENSIVE

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 16.—Altho it had the great majority of delegates with it, the Green regime in the A. F. of L. convention here visibly felt itself fighting on the defensive in its struggle against the labor party resolution, introduced as a challenge to the "non-partisan" policy of supporting the two Wall Street parties.

Not only old reactionary wheel horses like President Lynch of the Printers' Union and John P. Frey, editor of the Moulders' Journal, and president of the Ohio Federation of Labor, had to rally to the support of the resolutions committee, but President Green himself took the floor to apologize for the political policy urged by the executive council, and admitted that the labor party policy would some day be adopted.

Rejected After Big Fight.

The labor party resolutions drew most blood from the administration and secured most support among the delegates of all the progressive propositions that came before the gathering. It was rejected, of course, along with resolutions demanding world trade union unity and recognition of the Union of Soviet Republics.

Terrible Mistake of Printer.

Progressivism rose to taunt the Green administration immediately after the day's session got under way, when it was discovered that the printed report of yesterday's proceedings showed the resolution attacking class collaboration concurred in by the committee and adopted by the convention.

"The chair knows that the resolution was defeated. I was watching that resolution very closely," declared President Green and ordered that the printed minutes be changed.

The labor party resolution was attacked by the committee as containing "revolutionary philosophy" because it sought political co-operation with the socialist and Communist parties and because it inferred that the government was a thing apart from the American people.

Fitzsimmons Fights for Labor Party.

Delegate Fitzsimmons of the Canton, Ohio, Central Labor Union, opened the discussion by declaring that the labor party was something that labor needs. He pointed out that delegates had already confessed the non-partisan policy was a method by which promises were secured from politicians who considered such promises merely fish hooks to catch suckers. He declared the labor party idea was making progress and that steps must be taken to "get our own men in congress."

Hayes Supports Revolution.

Delegate Max Hayes of the Printers' Union, next got the floor and tried to quiet the fears of the administration as to the revolutionary character of the resolution. Hayes declared it was necessary to have an opposition as well as an administration group in the convention in order to secure clash of conflicting views on vital issues. He declared the labor party resolution fundamentally correct, "and I'll support it if I have to stand alone.

"It may be that the workers right now are too interested in movies, prize fights, dog fights, tin lizzies and the manufacture of hootch; but that is no argument against the resolution. This labor question is not going to be solved on the industrial field alone. We must back up our industrial with our political power."

Sooner Or Later.

He reviewed the strike of the anthracite coal miners and showed the power of the non-producing parasitical class thru its ownership of natural resources, concluding that "Sooner or later you will find it necessary to establish an independent political movement instead of following your non-partisan policy that contains a lot of beautiful rheotoric that gets nowhere.'

Hayes denied the results claimed by the executive council in its report for this policy.

Any Time, But Not Now.

Delegate Lynch said conditions were better in this country than any where else and therefore, the labor party was not needed. He raised the fake argument that this was an attempt to substitute the labor party for the trade unions. He said, "The time for the labor party is not now. The report of the committee is sound for its time," confessing that the time will come when the labor party will come into being.

Delegate Frey confessed he had had Karl Marx's "'Capital' in his library for the last 25 years." It did not seem to have done him any good. He told the delegates with great ado that the Marxian philosophy seeks to destroy the wages system, leaving the impression that he was for the wages system.

Green Boosts Young Bob.

President Green declared the majority did not believe that progress could be made now thru independent political action. He claimed the election of young LaFollette was a victory for the A. F. of L. policy and claimed the A. F. of L. had won better conditions for the workers of this country than had been achieved in other countries where labor parties were in existence.

"There may be a time when we can organize a labor party" declared Green, claiming that that time would come when, "we become an industrial nation like Great Britain, when this country will have changed from an agricultural to an industrial nation."

No Need for Class Struggle.

"In America we have no need of force or revolution. No need of class war or the class struggle." He said: "We will employ the instrumentalities at hand," evidently meaning non-partisan action thru the old parties.

Delegate Kutz of Pennsylvania, wanted to know what stand the non-partisan policy would take in Minnesota where there is a farmer-labor party. Green thereupon claimed credit for having helped elect Shipsted and Magnus Johnson, stating the A. F. of L. would continue support of independent political action in such instances.

Woll Astonishes All with Confusion.

Delegate Woll, secretary of the resolutions committee, then opened up a long harangue, declaring that the A. F. of L. had never declined to do what it could to mobilize the political power of the worker. He tried to make capital out of the alleged differences in the decisions between the Scarborough congress of the British trade unions and the Liverpool congress of the British labor party.

He jointly condemned Great Britain, the present so-called "socialist" regime in France and Soviet rule in Russia. They all looked alike to him.

The delegates failed to follow his deft reasoning and remained quite dumfounded altho they recovered in time to vote against the resolution.

Unity Called Impudence.

The resolution on world trade union unity was declared an "impudent proposal" by the resolutions committee. It was denounced as a new united front proposal by Moscow, declaring that the A. F. of L. would not yield itself to this treacheorus proposition.

It declared that as the United States resisted aggression from abroad, thru the Monroe doctrine, so the A. F. of L. would resist this aggression by Moscow thru propaganda.

Attack Soviet Russia.

When this declaration repudiating the efforts of the British and Russian workers to bring about world trade union unity had been defeated the attack was started on the resolution demanding recognition of the union of Soviet Republics. After denouncing the Soviet Union and Communists generally, the committee's report declared:

"The American Federation of Labor urges the government of the United States to maintain the position it has taken in favor of non-recognition of the Soviet regime and we commend our government for its courage. Its adherence to fundamental principles of democracy" and concludes with "we stand for America, for democratic America, and we want the world to understand that fact."

Green Weeps for Counter Revolution.

President Green took the floor once more and lamented that this proposition was always being brot up in A. F. of L. conventions. He shed a few tears for the counter-revolutionists in prison in Russia, and the "socialists" in the needle trades' delegation applauded. When he thot he had talked the convention to death and flattened out all opposition he put the question, but a scattering of hands was raised against the committee's report.

The delegation of the Journeymen Tailor's Union, Sweeney being absent, joined in the demand for Soviet recognition. Green was therefore unable, as he had evidently hoped, to announced the vote unanimous.

CAPITAL LEVY ENDORSED BY FRENCH PARTY

Caillaux to Talk to the Radical Socialists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NICE, France, Oct. 16—When Joseph Caillaux, French foreign minister, appears today before the congress of radical socialists in session here he will not only have to defend his failure to get a satisfactory debt settlement out of his recent trip to the United States, bu he will be confronted with a demand for a capital levy, eloquently advocated yesterday by Mr. Edward Herriot, former premier.

The congress, early today, passed a resolution insisting that France shall not pay debts to the allies in greater amounts than she receives from Germany. This action followed the conclusion of Herriot's speech, started yesterday afternoon and finished this morning, urging that France make a heroic effort to pay her war debt.

"We are besieged on all sides by debtors," said Herriot. "Why not face the music with an honest desire to pay up, resulting in healing this gaping wound?"

Party Controls Chamber.

The resolution on war debts is especially significant in view of the fact that it was introduced by Henry Franklin-Bouillon, president of the foreign affairs committee of the chamber of deputies. His resolution reads:

"The congress invites the present government and all future governments to enter into an undertaking never to pay the allies any more than France receives from Germany."

May Challenge Government.

The raising of the issue of a capital levy at the congress is interpreted to be the opening gun of a campaign to oust the present government and bring Herriot and the radical socialists again into complete power.

The Locarno deliberations are to come before the congress and resolutions that will form the basis for an attack upon Briand, the foreign minister, may be accepted.

FRENCH NO POKER PLAYERS; THEY TALK TOO MUCH

Lausanne Gives Version of Debt Parley

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

PARIS, France, Oct. 16.—Stephane Lausanne, one of the members of the Caillaux debt mission to the United States, and famous editor of the Paris newspaper Le Matin, criticising the deliberations conducted at Washington before the American club of Paris at a luncheon here yesterday.

The Paris editor evidently respects American ability in one respect— at the poker table. He admitted that he was willing to play almost any game with them except poker, but he draws the line there. As poker players, Americans have no peers.

French Too Speedy.

"Second, the French delegation was in too great a hurry to finish the game. One cannot definitely fix the closing hour at the start or stipulate the exact hour of departure. Delegates to such a conference cannot work with their eyes on the clock.

"Third, the French mission's hands were tied at the start by a pledge to hold out for an agreement making France's part of the contract entirely contingent on German payments to France.

Too Much Jabbering.

"Fourth, we were inclined to talk too much. Good poker does not mean jabbering. M. Theunis (former Belgian premier), when he returned with the Belgian debt mission, gave M. Caillaux excellent advice when he told him to speak for publication twice on his visit to America—once upon his arrival and once upon his departure—hello the first time and good-bye the second."

M. Lausanne severely criticised the Americans for disguising the truth concerning the treatment the French commission would receive in Washington, and intimated that had they known the real attitude of the government of the United States, it is doubtful whether they would have journeyed there to try to achieve an understanding on the question of French debts to the American government.

Dawes Plan Slaves See Jobs Fade as Factories Close

BERLIN, Germany, Oct. 16.—The decline in the number of factory shut-downs during the past few months was succeeded by a considerable reversal during the two weeks preceding September 1, 1925, during which 54 shut-downs were reported as against 32 during the preceding half month.

PAUL CROUCH DEFIANTLY REFUSES TO TAKE PARDON FROM PRES. COOLIDGE

ALCATRAZ, Cal., Oct. 16—Despite the iron bars that surround him, Paul Crouch, one of the two American soldiers sentenced to long terms at Alcatraz for belonging to the Communist League of Hawaii, refuses to accept any pardon offered by President Coolidge.

"Regarding the proposed release thru the president, I must say emphatically and bluntly that, if it is offered, I will indignantly refuse it," declared Paul Crouch. "'I would spend every day of my sentence here in Alcatraz before accepting a favor from President Calvin Coolidge or a release upon personal grounds. If I were to do as proposed, my very name would be a stench in history (if recorded there in the list of rascals) and in company with men like Berger, Hillquit, Ebert and Abromovich. I would be known by all class conscious workers as a yellow, cur-hearted and selfish traitor. Men have given their lives for less noble causes than the ideals for which I am a prisoner. I do not, in any way consider myself a hero, for if I had done less I would have failed to do my duty. My body can be imprisoned, but my mind is always free."

Crouch received a check from the International Labor Defense which he intended to use for a correspondence course in the Russian language. The jail authorities refused to give him permission to transfer the money to be used for that purpose.

COOLIDGE URGED COME TO AID OF BEVERIDGE BOOM

G. O. P. Worried Over 1926 Election

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—If Gov. Ed. Jackson of Indiana, pays any heed to the flocks of telegrams and long distance telephone calls that are going his way from republican leaders in the capital he will appoint Albert J. Beveridge to the senate vacancy caused by the death of Senator Samuel M. Ralston.

President Coolidge was being urged today by these same republican leaders to exert his influence in Beveridge's behalf, but with what success is not known. The president, while very friendly to and with Beveridge, has some embarrassment in the matter because his secretary, Everett Sanders, also is regarded as an aspirant for the honor.

Fear Factional Fight.

The republican regulars want to see Beveridge named not because they have any deep or abiding affection for the "boy orator" of fifteen years ago, but because they believe his selection would forestall what promises to be a factional republican fight in Indiana next year that may cost them seats in the senate they can ill afford to lose.

Fear Defeat Next Year.

Republican leaders are viewing the senatorial elections next year with considerable foreboding anyway, and they desire harmony wherever and whenever it is obtainable.

Thirty-three senators are up for reelection next year, and control of the senate hinges upon the results. Ordinarily the republicans would not be unduly concerned, but it happens, that an odd twist in the electoral wheel has so arranged it that of the 33 seats at stake only eight of them are democratic, and of these eight all but one are from the solid south where republicans cannot possibly hope to gain a seat. The eighth is in Indiana.

Thus, the democrats stand to lose virtually nothing, and the republicans stand to lose control of the senate should there be such a wave as that in 1922, which carried many republican senators into the political discard.

Soldiers on Special Job at Panama Zone, Says State Secretary

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Secretary of State Kellogg explains that the sending of American soldiers into Panama City, from the Canal Zone, to shoot down rent-strikers who refused to disperse, was police duty authorized in the Panama treaty of 1903. That treaty provides that whenever, in the opinion of the Washington government, the Panama government cannot maintain order in Panama City, Colon and waters adjacent, American troops may be used for the purpose. On this occasion the president of Panama asked that they be sent in.

The strikers had demanded that landlords be satisfied with 12 to 18 per cent of the value of the rented properties, as rental. The owners refused. Crowds gathered and speeches were made. Then the soldiers appeared and fired at the leaders in the crowd of strikers. Several deaths resulted.

Teachers' Meeting Saturday.

On Saturday morning, Oct. 17, at 10:30, the regular meeting of the Chicago Teachers' Federation will be held in Corinthian Hall, 17th floor, Capitol building. Matters to be discussed are salary schedule, board rules affecting teachers, adopted and pending, the new pension commission and the platoon schools.

A good book on Communism will make you a better Communist.

LOCARNO PACT INITIALED BY SEVEN NATIONS

German Nationalists are Pessimistic

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 16—The farce is ended! The imperialist flunkeys are departing. The so-called European "security" pact and the accompanying arbitration treaties were initialed here late this evening. The word "initialed" is used to designate this act in the sense that the ministers representing the various government place their signatures on the documents. The delegates explained that by initaling the pacts they will not become immediately effective but must be ratified by their various governments.

The pact accepted is vastly different from the one contemplated when the conference was called. A two-fold motive was involved in calling the ministers together for the purpose of devising a security pact. The principal one was the desire of the tory government of Britain to consolidate a European bloc against Soviet Russia. The other motive was the desire to do away with strife among the European nations so that the colonial wars now raging and the new ones that are threatening can be prosecuted more effectively. Neither of these aims can be realized thru the present pact, as explained exclusively in yesterday's dispatches to the DAILY WORKER.

Mussolini Arrives.

At the last moment and just in time to sign the documents, which one of his agents helped formulate, Benito Mussolini, the bloody monster of fascism, arrived from Italy. He remained last night in a border town under heavy guard on Italian soil and only ventured into Locarno when the day dawned. Despite unusual precautions for his safety the craven butcher feared the Italian population of this place, who are one hundred per cent anti-fascist.

When he reached the Palais de Justice, where the conferences were held Mussolini spied the correspondent of the London Daily Herald, a labor newspaper and walked up to him saying, "Well how about your Communism, is it still on the march?"

"I don't know," replied the correspondent.

"Why not?" queried Mussolini.

"I am not a Communist" replied the correspondent.

"I have made a mistake," said Mussolini.

"That happens to you quite often," shouted a Dutch correspondent. Mussolini then walked from the lobby apparently surprised.

Whole Crew Signs.

The documents initialed here tonight center around the Rhineland security pact, which provides that neither Germany or France will go to war against each other or violate the present boundaries, without submitting their differences to arbitration.

Co-ordinating arbitration treaties are also provided.

Czecho-Slovakia and Poland are brot into the agreement by way of separate arbitration treaties with Germany.

The documents were initialed by Austen Chamberlain for Great Britain, Aristide Briand for France, Premier Mussolini for Italy, Herr Stresseman for Germany, M. Vandervelde for Belgium, Dr. Benes for Czecho-Slovakia, and M. Skrynski for Poland.

German Nationalists Skeptical.

BERLIN, Oct. 16—Altho the allies may hail the creation of a zone of perpetual neutrality along the Rhine as the greatest step toward European peace in years and possibly even more momentous than the Versailles treaty, the German nationalists were inclined to view the proceedings with pessimism today.

The nationalist press denounced the allies' optimism regarding the outcome of the Locarno deliberation as a "false alarm" designed to silence German opposition to the agreements. The newspapers warned their readers against premature illusions.

Arbitration Hokum Practiced on Steel Workers of Spain

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Spain, Oct. 16—The recent strike of seventy per cent of the iron and steel workers of the Bilbao region has been made the subject of arbitration by a committee appointed by the department of labor, which will study wages and living costs.

INSULT TO BRIT LABOR BY A. F. OF L.

gence test and the junior high schools in the public education system, and to aid the Bakers' Union in its war on the "open shop" Ward Baking company, known as the bread trust, were among the decisions of the closing sessions of the convention here.

It is planned to secure the co-operation of all unions involved in the drive against the Cribben-Sexton plant against the metal polishers, who came out on strike several weeks ago. The resolution endorsed by the convention reads as follows:

Whereas, This is the only large stove shop that has taken this antagonistic attitude towards organized labor; and

Whereas, If an adjustment is not brot about, it may develop into another strike of the magnitude of the Buck Stove and Range company of several years ago; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor, in convention assembled, direct the secretary to give this matter full publicity to all organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor by circular; and, be it further

Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor refer the matter to the executive council for the purpose of making every effort to adjust this strike.

Olander Worried Over Education.

Delegate Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor, spoke at length against the platoon or Gary plan. "We are playing with fire in delaying the securing for ourselves of information as to what is transpiring in the educational system of the United States," he said. He declared that the so-called "mental measuring or intelligence test tended to produce a caste system as rigid as that of Indiana."

In the committee report against the Ward Baking company, it was shown how this great corporation kept up the prices of bread on the one hand and reduced wages on the other. Among other measures congressional investigation was urged. At the same time, however, newspaper reports declare that the department of justice has dropped its probe "for lack of evidence."

Many Promises.

The convention also voted to help the Moulders' Union keep up the fight against the Holland Furnace company, of Holland, Mich., a struggle which has been featured by sluggings, mobbings and kidnapings in attacks on the workers; to continue the fight against the non-union Crowell Publishing company, of Springfield, Ohio, publishers of the American Magazine and Colliers' Weekly; to aid the Journeymen Tailors' Union in its struggle with the National Woolen Mills of Parkersberg, West Va.; to condemn the efforts of the police commissioner of New York to introduce the photographing and finger-printing of everybody as methods of fighting crime, to investigate the Bell Telephone system, to station a permanent organizer in Porto Rico, and to aid the railroad shopmen in their strike against the Pennsylvania railroad.

All Satisfied But the Seamen.

An attack on the railroad labor board was endorsed and a cable message put into the proceedings from Havelock Wilson of the British Seamen's Union expressing "satisfaction" with the A. F. of L.'s attitude against the outlaw strike of the seamen.

Measures Rushed.

The convention authorized Green continue to relation with I. F. T. U. on El Paso convention basis, declared for further co-operation Pan-American federation, asked A. F. of L. representation on Pan-American Union, authorized Green to make personal presentation Gompers' memorial to international labor office. The world court question was referred to the executive council. The convention asked of the investigation of U. S. troops entering Panama and slaughter of workers in Nicaragua. It was also asked for the release of Rangel and Cilen. It commended Calles for organizing Mexican workers in the U. S.

Jailers Get Jailed.

Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman, of Cook county, was fined $2,500 and sentenced to 30 days in the Du Page county jail, and former Warden Wesley Westbrook, of the county jail in Chicago, was sentenced to four months in the jail of Dekalb county today, following conviction of contempt of court in permitting two bootleggers, Terry Druggan and Frank Lake, federal prisoners to come and go virtually at will, while in their custody and permitting Lake to be discharged 82 days before his sentence would have expired.

Marine Engineers' Head Dead.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—George A. Grubb, secretary-treasurer of the Marine Engineers' Beneficiary Association for the past 27 years, died Oct. 10 in Washington, national headquarters of the union. He was 62 years old and formerly lived in Chicago

CHINESE CUSTOMS HARD NUT FOR THE BIG FIVE

Russo - China Pact Is Precedent

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 16.—The question of granting tariff rates on Chinese imports across inland borders lower than the rates on imports through seaports, which is destined to arise in the coming Peking tariff conference, stirs up great interest in Germany and Russia.

Until the Washington conference, Japan through Korea and France through Indo-China enjoyed differential rates on exports entering China's international and other ports. While these ports probably are willing to restore the differential to Russia on account of the long Russo-Chinese border, even greater interest is felt in Germany because of the newly signed economictreaty with Russia. Under this treaty German goods are given the right of transit across Russia and are exempt from customs duties. Thus German goods going to China by way of Russia would pay a lower import duty than would the same goods entering Chinese seaports.

Germany and Russia Absent.

While neither Germany nor Russia, despite their large interests in China, has been asked to be represented at the tariff conference, they may benefit by the desire of France and Japan to profit from their trade.

Information from Japanese sources indicates an intention to demand, first, the allocation of any increase in the customs revenue to the payment of China's unsecured loans, amounting to $217,000,000. Of this total two-thirds is due to Japan, 13 per cent to France, 11 per cent to Great Britain and 10 per cent to the United States. Hitherto the treaty powers have been divided regarding the equity of these debts. Several of the loans obviously were made for purely military purposes and for the benefit of dishonest Chinese officials. Representatives of China which as a nation received no benefit from these loans will surely protest against their legalization.

Russia's Action Aids China

China will be able to cite the example of Russia in abolishing extraterritoriality. Observers know that foreign powers have scandalously abused their privileges under this treaty provision. One large foreign power, through its consuls, sold European flags to Chinese merchants, thus giving them extraterritorial rights. Several smaller countries having extraterritorial rights peddled citizenship to opium smugglers, gun runners and criminals, giving them immunity to Chinese laws. One South American country even sold citizenship papers to Chinese desiring to escape the payment of taxes. Another country extended the privilege of flying its flag over the store of any Chinese merchant who bought an insurance policy in one of its companies.

China is expected to enumerate these cases, and Germany and Russia will support the Chinese by saying that they themselves are satisfied without extraterritoriality.

FURRIERS' JOINT BOARD SPURNS INVITATION TO BANQUET WITH NEW YORK'S DEFUNCT SOCIALISTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—The joint board of the Furriers' Union of New York City in answering the invitation of the defunct socialist party of New York to attend a banquet in the interest of boosting the capitalist lackey, Norman Thomas, candidate of the socialist party for mayor of New York City, tells Debs in no uncertain terms that the socialist party has abandoned the class struggle and no longer has the support of the militant workers of this country and that the union spurn the invitation to dine with them.

A copy of the letter sent to Eugene V. Debs is printed here: -

"Joint Board Furriers' Union of Greater New York, Locals 1, 4 10 and 15.
"Main Office: 22 East 22nd Street, New York City.
"October 9th, 1925.

"Comrade Eugene V. Debs:

"On this occasion the fur workers recall with pride your revolutnonary past. We remember when you were the soul of the militant movement in the United States. We therefore profoundly regret that we cannot join you at the banquet called by the socialist party. The socialist party has abandoned the class struggle and is therefore undeserving of the faith of the militant workers. Comrade Debs, the fur workers await the day that you will rejoin the revolutionary ranks, and again fire us with that unflagging enthusiasm that has ever been yours."

Beveridge Likely to Enter Senate as the Successor of Ralston

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16—The death of Senator Samuel N. Ralston, democrat, of Indiana, paves the way for a possible political comeback by Albert J. Beveridge, former senator, according to political leaders today.

Under Indiana law, Gov. Ed. Jackson will appoint a senator to fill Ralston's place until the next general election a year hence. Gov. Jackson is a republican and is expected to name a republican, thus increasing the republican majority in the next senate.

Beveridge was Ralston's opponent in 1922, and is considered by republican leaders here as having an excellent chance for the appointment, although Gov. Jackson is said to also be favorable toward Arthur Robinson, an Indianapolis lawyer.

FORD WHO DECLARED "HISTORY IS BUNK" STARTS DANCE CLASS

DETROIT, Oct. 16.—Henry Ford, industrial magnate and head of the flivver concern that bears his name, who distinguished himself during the course of a libel suit with the observation that "History Is Bunk!" has become a crusader for the revival of old fashioned dancing.

Last night Ford and his wife danced with a class of 200 at the opening of his great campaign to revive the waltz, the quadrille (old fashioned hoe-down), the badger gavotte and the varsovienne, Henry and his wife danced the first waltz together, but thereafter the eminent scholar enjoyed himself teaching the flappers, ranging in age from 12 to 80, the old steps.

PLOT IN CHICAGO; WORKERS COME TO RESCUE AT ONCE!

When the reactionaries and fascists want to frame-up on the workers, they often expose a plot, or a conspiracy.

This is the case in Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary, Poland, Esthonia, Italy, etc., and in Zeigler, Illinois, U. S. A. and in many other cases in these American capitalist states.

Now comes the Chicago local of the International Labor Defense in a "plot" to stage a dance on Saturday, evening, October 24, at Temple Hall, Marshfield & Van Buren, for the purpose of raising funds to aid working class prisoners and their defendants persecuted on account of their class activity or belief.

Workers of Chicago are all invited to come, and so help in this cause, while enjoying the dance and the special attractions which the committee is arranging. A fine tableau, staged by the Lettish Dramatic Club, "a working gurrul's beauty contest," a fine orchestra and dance floor, all for 50c.

Maybe you're not much of a dancer, but this is more than a dance, besides, who will forget the class war prisoners and defendants? Buy your tickets in advance. (Admission at door is 60c.) Even if it will be impossible for you to come you can give the ticket to a friend, and help the labor defense.

Students to Receive Technical Education in Special Schools

MOSCOW, Oct. 16—The chief board of technical education has submitted to the council of people's commissaries a project for the establishment of specialized technical schools.

These specialized technical schools are to train organizers in the production of fireproof building materials for the villages, in the repairing, assembling and running agricultural machines and implements, in the installation of electric light, signalisation, etc., in the use of power stations, motors, and so on. There are also to be schools for locksmiths, turners, fitters and other metallurgical workers required by the small, medium and big industries; for mine surveyers, skilled transport workers, technical administrators, and so on.

The term of instruction in the specialized technical schools is to be from 3 to 4 years. Students will be enrolled in the age from 14 to 16, of both sexes.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 14.—Dr. James T. Gawthmey of New York City before the interstate post graduate assembly of America being held here, told of a child-birth anesthesia used at the New York Lying-In hospital which reduces the pain of child birth and also reduces the poisonous tendency of anesthetics in operations.

CRIBBEN-SEXTON CONCERN FRAMES STRIKE HEADS

Hired Dicks Produce Black-Hand Letter

The officials of the Metal Polishers' Union Local No. 6 have been called to the state's attorney's office where a crude attempt at framing up the officials was tried by the Cribben and Sexton company heads.

At the state's attorney's office, the head of the detective agency that has its gunmen around the plant, carefully drew out of his pocket a soiled piece of paper with the following words scribbled in pencil:

The Fake Letter,

"10-9-25

"This is the last warning if you don't quit SACB job will blow your louse to pices some night, we told your wife what to tell you.

"This is no joke.

"Committee."

Dick Does Bum Job.

This private dick claimed that the union was responsible for the sending of this letter to the scab foreman of the polishing room. The union heads ridiculed the letter and pointed out to the state's attorney what a bum job of faking a foreign-born worker's English the fink head had done in his desperate attempt to cause the arrest of some of the Polish strikers. The words scab, house and pieces are misspelled with the intention of creating the idea that a person not familiar with the English language wrote it. These words would be the least misspelled among the foreign-born workers while words that consist of many syllables that are usually misspelled are spelled correctly, the officials pointed out.

Union Files Complaint.

The union has filed a complaint at the North Avenue police station against the ten strikebreakers the company has hired, who are walking around inside the plant with revolvers bulging on their hips. The union is also filing a complaint with the state's attorney against the gunmen who walk around the outside gates of the plant bullying the strikers and trying to pick fights at every step.

Company Loses Orders.

The Cribben and Sexton company plant has lost many orders because of their inability to fulfill them. Hardly any work is being turned out of the struck polishing room and undoubtedly the manufacturers of the Universal stoves ranges, heaters and furnaces will have a lean year due to the effective picketing of the striking metal polishers.

PITTSBURGH PARTY MEMBERSHIP MEET SUNDAY AFTERNOON

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 16.—A membership meeting for the purpose of reorganizing the party in Pittsburgh on the new basis will be held on Sunday, Oct. 18, at 2 p. m., at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St. No member will be notified by mail. Reading this in the DAILY WORKER is all the notice members will get. You are expected to attend without fail.

Reorganization Tour District 8

The following tour has been arranged in District 8, Workers (Communist) Party, pushing the formation of Communist fractions in the labor unions, getting the party members to join the unions, and building the T. CHICAGO PARTY FUNCTIONARIES MOBILIZE FOR REORGANIZATION

More than 130 party functionaries representing more than sixty branches in the city of Chicago have held a very succeesful conference to prepare the membership for the section meetings, at which the city is to be reorganized on the basis of shop nuclei.

More than 80% of the branches were represented at this conference. Comrade Abern, a member of the C. E. C. Chicago district reorganization commission, delivered the report. He explained in detail the subdivisions of the city into six industrial sections. Comrade Abern outined the boundaries of the sections and told which branches were within each section. He also explained the industrial basis of each section, and the political divisions therein.

Comrade Minor, another member of the C. E. C. Chicago district reorganization commission, made a strong appeal to the functionaries to spare no energies in mobilizing all their branch members to attend their section meetings, at which the comrades will register for reorganization.

Many questions dealing with the problem of reorganization were asked; Comrade Abern answered questions. In an early issue of the DAILY WORKER the main questions will be printed and answers given to them by the organization department.

Free Verse Not So Free; Amy Lowell Fortune $700,000

DEDHAM, Mass., October 16.—Amy Lowell, for many years the leading writer of "free verse," in the United States, left an estate valued at $700,000, according to an inventory filed in Norfolk probate court. Her chief beneficiary is Mrs. Ida Dwyer Russell of Brookline, her literary executor.

The will also provided a poetry traveling scholarship.

Miss Lowell was the sister of A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard University, the Boston institution that dispenses its learned ignorance to the spawn of the rich and incidentally urges them occasionally to indulge in strike-breaking activities as they did some years ago at Lawrence, Mass.

The size of the fortune of Miss Lowell indicates that free verse is not so free after all.

Speedup System on Traction Line Causes Car to Jump Tracks

BELLAIRE, Ohio, Oct. 16.—One of the Wheeling Traction System street cars overturned between stop 26 and 27 in the South Bellaire section injuring the 25 passengers occupying the car.

The company and the whitewash commission, appointed to investigate the accident, blame the motorman for the mishap. This company has always forced its motormen to make their runs in the time allotted or they lose their jobs. This forces the motormen to speed over tracks that are badly worn with the constant danger of an accident.

MEETING OF AGITPROP AND EDUCATIONAL DIRECTORS MONDAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—A very important conference of all agitprop directors and educational committees of branches will be held on Monday Oct. 19th at 8 p. m. sharp at the Workers Party headquarters, Room 42, 108 E. 14th St. This meeting is called to plan the educational work of the district, to connect the central school with the political units of the party and to plan the educational work in the political units.

New York Shop Nucleus 11 Greets Comintern and C. E. C.

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—At the last meeting of Shop Nucleus 11, the following resolution greeting the Communist International, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party and the workers of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics was adopted:

"As the eighth anniversary of working class rule in Soviet Russia approaches, we, the members of Shop Nucleus 11 of New York City, greet the leaders of the Comintern—greet our Workers (Communist) Party Central Executive Committee and those comrades who are today in the Workers Party fighting for the overthrow of the present society. In the meantime we will fight to the best of our ability in the unions against Gomperism, and will carry on propaganda for the recognition of the workers' republic, Soviet Russia.

Fight for Soviets

"Our call to the workers of America is 'Join the Workers Party.' Our call to the comrades across the sea is 'Fight for the installation of Soviets in Europe.'

"Long Live the Workers Soviet Republics of Russia!

"Long Live the Comintern!

"Long Live the solidarity of the workers in their fight for the overthrow of capitalist society!"

The Hugarian Persecutions

Unless the American workers, in co-operation with the workers in all countries, make it quite clear to the Hungarian hangman Horthy that he cannot slaughter with impunity the flower of the Hungarian working class, the world will soon see carried out in Hungary an exhibition of bestial cruelty against the working class equal if not surpassing the recent bloody orgy of the Zankov government in Bulgaria.

According to information supplied by the International Labor Defense to THE DAILY WORKER, Horthy's police have arrested several members of the independent socialist party, who are scheduled for trial before an extraordinary court martial. None of our readers have to be told the dreaded significance of such a trial. It means murder and nothing else.

Those workers are guilty of a most heinous crime in the eyes of the capitalists. They have tried to organize their class. They have endeavored to forge a weapon that would free the workers and peasants from the grip of the executioner Horthy. For this crime they must die, unless the workers of the world make it clear to Horthy that he will pay thru the nose for every injury he inflicts on the leaders of the Hungarian workers.

Among those in the toils of Horthy's gunmen is Mathias Rakosi, former peoples' commissar in the Hungarian Soviet government and later on secretary of the Communist International. No doubt Horthy will be more than pleased to swing Rakosi on the scaffold. And it should not be forgotten, that Horthy's bloody regime is supported by the dollars of Wall Street. In fact, an agent of the House of Morgan, has direct charge of the financial affairs of the Hungarian government. The hand of Wall Street can be seen in a new orgy of persecutions started against the workers of Hungary.

The American workers should rally to the call of the International Labor Defense to come to the defense of their comrades in Hungary who face the gallows for their loyalty to their class. They should rally to them as they did in defense of Tom Mooney and Billings, Sacco and Vanzetti and other victims of the capitalist class in America. The hand of Wall Street is stretched out across thousands of miles to snuff out the lives of our Hungarian brothers. We hope that the Amerian workers will not stand idly by and allow the capitalists to murder the flower of their class.

THE DAILY WORKER urges its readers to actively co-operate with the International Labor Defense in making the mass meetings and demonstrations against the new Horthy persecutions a success.

Save Rakosi and his comrades from the gallows!

Poland Gets It in the Neck at Locarno

France has done rather well at Locarno but it has been by sacrificing her Polish ally. France gets a promise of security for her eastern frontier guaranteed by Great Britain and Italy. Poland gets nothing except a knowledge gained by experience that France has been using her to bring pressure on Great Britain and Germany.

Says the correspondent of one of the big capitaist sheets which has been, like the rest, spreading optimism about the Locarno outcome:

> The Poles held out to the last for a definite declaration from Germany that the frontiers would not be admissible of arbitration. However, Foreign Minister Skrzynski finally accepted a declaration with respect to the Versailles treaties as the equivalent to the special commitments which Germany refused to make.

According to the declarations made the league of nations must first agree that Germany is in the wrong in any dispute arising with Poland before France can come to Poland's assistance. With Germany in the league backed by Great Britain, with the rebuilding of German industry a major necessity for Great Britain to enable her to play Germany against France, Poland has what is called in the vernacular, "a fat chance" of getting anything but sympathy from her ally in, for instance, a dispute arising over the Silesian coal fields.

Poland is caught again between the German and Russian pincers. As a tool to be used against Soviet Russia much of her usefulness has been destroyed. Enthusiasm for acting as the shock troops of western imperialism against Soviet Russia is bound to wane as a result of the double-crossing which was her portion at the hands of the allies.

It is probable that the Polish delegates would have raised more hell at Locarno than they did had not the posterior portions of Foreign Minister Skrzynski been still smarting from the spanking handed out by Morgan's diplomats at the first sign of Poland's intention to throw a monkey-wrench into the "peace-making" machinery in Locarno.

American Imperialism in Africa

In the relentless campaign to dominate the world Wall Street is to make a hundred million dollar plunge into Liberia, on the west coast of Africa. This vast sum is to be expanded under the direction of Harry S. Firestone, head of the tire and rubber concern that bears his name and is one more step in the development of a crude rubber monopoly that will challenge the supremacy of the British who now control about three-fifths of the present available supply in the world, while the United States, tho producing very little crude rubber, consumes four-fifths of the world's supply.

Tho the United States leads the world in the production of automobiles, American capitalism was not sufficiently vigilant in securing control of the raw material for this important auxiliary, wth the result that Great Britain has sufficient monopolistic control of rubber to establish a mechanical system of restriction of output in order to keep up the price and help pay her enormous war debts. The rapid rise of the price of rubber products during the past year as a result of British restriction has caused a near-crisis.

Hence the mad scramble on the part of American capital to develop the production of crude rubber. A survey recently conducted in the Philippine Islands shows vast potentialities there. American finance capital is to take care of that development. This is closely followed by the sudden philanthropic desire on the part of this country's financiers to bring the blessings of civilization to the inhabitants of the dark continent (providing they live in the potential rubber growing belt not already controlled by British or Dutch). They are to be regenerated to the tune of one hundred million as a starter, which amount is to be used to conquer the jungle.

Plantations are to be established, American homes, hospitals and stores are to spring up and the inhabitants are to be taught to appreciate the blessings of capitalism. Then, instead of dwelling in darkness and worshiping their dead ancestors they will be taught the religion of humility, subserviency, and be permitted to slave on the "model plantations" and live in company houses while producing rubber for the glory of the American benefactors. When they die they will receive their reward as Paul LaFargue said "with pay checks on the bank of heaven."

This first hundred million signifies a momentous step in American policy. It means that Wall Street is firmly established in Africa, there to contest the imperialist aims of other nations, particularly Great Britain. Thus another point of conflict is created that will involve Africa in the coming world conflict when the diplomats can no longer gain advantages over their economic rivals by gentlemanly conferences.

ROOSEVELT'S "BIG STICK" HITS PANAMA

Wall Street Grabs the Canal Zone

By MANUEL GOMEZ, Sec'y.
All-America Anti-Imperialist League.

ARTICLE III.

Theodore Roosevelt, who engineered the statesmanlike rape of Panama, in 1903, was a very remarkable man. He committed statesmanlike crimes against a number of other Latin-American countries, got a lot of publicity as the only man in the United States who could tell "good trusts" from "bad trusts," sent federal troops to break a strike of anthracite coal miners, and won the Nobel peace prize. Accompanying his little Panaman adventure, Roosevelt issued a significant statement, which has been called "a new stage in the Monroe Doctrine." It declared that if the United States was to continue "to protect Latin-American states," it had the right to exercise an international police power over them.

Expressed Imperialist Era

This doctrine was a timely expression of the policy of imperialist expansion on which American capitalism had already entered. Panama was an outstanding instance. The fact that today, 22 years later, American soldiers are patrolling the familiar streets of the City of Panama, with fixed bayonets, proves that the doctrine was no mere chance phrase, but characterized a whole epoch of conscious aggression.

It was the war with Spain, and the acquisition of the Philippines and Hawaii, bringing American capitalism face to face wth new problems in the Pacific, that made the Atlantic-Pacific canal an "immediate necessity of American foreign policy." And necessity knows no law—certainly no law of any dinky little Latin-American state!

U. S. Gets Canal Zone

Vigorous pushing of the negotiations for lease of the territory of the Canal Zone followed as a matter of course. Possession of the Canal Zone was necessary "to assure the safety of the canal,"—and no doubt the rest of Panama was made a United States protectorate to assure the Canal Zone. And subsequently, of course, the entire Caribbean area had to be brought under the American sphere of influence for the same reason. In much the same way, Great Britain has been gobbling up everything in sight in the eastern hemisphere for generations, "to assure the route to India."

There is much truth in such claims. The economic and military problems of imperialism are interconnected. Once we grant the initial justification of imperialism we must expect to be led far afield, into brutal and bloody enterprises, for the sake of Wall Street.

Advance in Caribbean

The building of the Panama canal and the advance of the United States in the Caribbean went naturally hand in hand with the development of new political policies in what has been called the larger Canal Zone, that is, the West Indies, Mexico, Central America, Colombia and Venezuela. Some of these policies, which have been pretty definitely formulated, are the establishment of protectorates, the supervision of finances, the control of all possible canal routes, the acquisition of naval bases and coaling stations, and the policing of "disorderly countries." Porto Rico had been acquired at the close of the war with Spain and Cuba had become a protectorate, the terms of which were defined by the Platt amendment. Panama was brought into the imperial system, and the Dominican republic later came under the financial supervision of the United States; President Taft landed and maintained a body of marines in Nicaragua, and proposed to place both that country and Honduras under financial supervision; President Wilson went further and assumed the administration of Haitian affairs, leased from Nicaragua for a term of 99 years a naval base on Fonseca Bay, and purchased the Danish West Indies (now the Virgin Islands).

Monroe Doctrine is "Gospel of Grab"

Today, American aggression is respected and feared thruout Latin-America. The Monroe doctrine has become the symbol of American imperialism in the western world. It is one of the three central watchwords of American foreign policy.

The fight to get the United States government permanently out of Panama is thus a fight against the whole policy of American imperialism. American workers, whose interests are diametrically opposed to those of the Wall Street clique that rules our government, must recognize imperialism for what it is. They cannot afford to believe the pretty fairy tales taught in school for the purpose, of convincing future cannon fodder that the U. S. government is an angel of peace and has never been imperialistic. These stories are about as true as the statement that Panama is a free country. Class-conscious workers will make common cause, not with the profit-hungry Wall Street gang, but with the oppressed peoples of the countries under the heel of American imperialism. In the concrete case of Panama, they must demand the instant withdrawal of all American troops, the abrogation of the vicious treaty of 1904, and the abandonment of all claim to a protectorate over the republic.

Soviet Russia Second Motherland to Asian Thinkers, Says Indian

MOSCOW, Sept. 15.—(By Mail.)—Mr. Brahanzakuna, very well-known Indian writer who arrived lately to Leningrad, said to a representative of the press:

"I came here, first of all, as a Hindu, feeling that it is my duty to express to the Russian Academy of Sciences our deep gratitude, because India is indebted so much to your academy, which has not only enriched Indiology with great works but tried to spread the knowledge of India amongst broad masses. For this purpose, the academy, in spite of many expenses has published the famous Sanskrit Dictionary which is the only dictionary of its kind in the world, and also other books on Sanskrit language.

"It requires, indeed, a great love for and interest in India to start such enormous work notwithstanding many material difficulties. It was a great achievement and equally great sacrifice.

"The hot sands of Central Asia buried the past glory of India, but the Russian Academy of Sciences opened it for the whole world. Let us hope that the academy will act in the same spirit in the future and contribute to a closer approachement between India and all Eastern nations and Soviet Russia, which appears now as a second motherland for every thinking man in the East."

Revise Circus Program.

MOSCOW, Oct. 15.—The art section of the chief board of political education has worked out a plan to divide the repertory of circus performances into three parts:

1. Demonstration of physical beauty.
2. Training of animals.
3. Clownish tricks and satire.

It is also suggested to organize a new kind of Soviet pantomime. It was also decided to do away with all "thrilling numbers."

Window Glass Shop Shutdown Throws 200 Men Out on Streets

By Worker Correspondent

MONESSEN, Pa., October 16.—Two hundred men were thrown out of work at the American Window Glass company at New Eagle, Pa., for an indefinite period.

COMRADE BOTVIN

Their bullets found his brain,
The brain whose only thought
Was of the class for which he dreamed,
For which he fought.

He sang—O heart of red!—
He sang his way to death;
"Down with the bourgeoisie," cried
With his last breath.

Fell riddled with their lead . . . . .
O comrades, workers, see
How with his bleeding brow he points
To liberty!

COUNTER-REVOLUTION IN CHINA ATTACKING CANTON; KUOMINTANG LEADER EXPLAINS UNITED FRONT

CANTON, China, September 9—(By Mail.)—Previous to the murder of Mr. Liao Chung-kai the Kuomintang government was engaged in the military and financial consolidation of the province. In this work the government has met with a stern opposition from part of the Cantonese army under General Liang Hung-kai and other smaller militarists, likewise from politians and officials who thrive on corruption and chaos.

Some Kuomintang members being themselves connected with the disobedient soldiery and corrupt politicians, had supplied the opposition with a slogan of anti-Communism, the same as Ma Soo did during the struggle with Generals Yang Shi-min and Liu Chen-wan. This slogan failed then and it failed now.

Even merchants fail to understand why honest endeavors of the government to put an end to banditry in uniform, to corruption of officials and exhortions by all sorts of irresponsible politicians, should be branded as Communism.

Hong Kong Merchants Counter-Revolutionary.

Opposition found favor with certain sections of merchants in Hongkong who, facing ruin thru the strike, resorted to desperate measures of crushing the Canton government, believing that the latter was supporting the strike.

One of the assassins of Liao Shung-kai gave evidence that Hongkong merchants paid to assassins $10,000 in advance for the murder of each of the group of prominent members of the Kuomingtang and the government and if assassination would be successful they promised to pay $40,000 more.

The murder of Mr. Liao Chung-kai, most honored and beloved by the people, has exhausted the patience of the government. Since the 25th of August the government carried out measures calculated to free the city and province from the banditry in uniform and without, from assassins and corrupt politicians and put an end to all malicious rumor-mongers.

Those implicated in the murder of Liao Chung-kai are either arrested or are being hunted down by government agents. The chief organizer of the murder has been caught in his native village by troops of General Li Fuk-lin and he is to be delivered to the authorities. The bandit soldiery is being systematically disarmed. Up to date the whole of Liang Hung Kai's army has been disarmed by government troops and Liang Hung-kai himself is charged with complicity in the murder.

The government officials declare that they intend to put an end to what they term "counter-revolutionists" and pursue relentlessly the policy of consolidation of the province.

Counter Revolution Prevents Trade.

The correspondent of this service at Canton has been assured by the Canton government officials that no regulations of any sort restricting shipping or foreign trade have been either adopted or approved by the government. They point, however, to the difficulty with which they are confronted in view of a tremendous opposition on the part of the people to a resumption of normal relations until some sort of restitution has been made for the incident of 23rd of June. They further claim that they are doing their best to hasten resumption of normal relations, but that stubbornness of Hongkong in its demand for intervention is adding fuel to the flame of popular opposition to the resumption of normal relations.

Counter Revolution in China.

The army, in the short hours of the night of Sept. 25th, cleaned out all counter-revolutionary troops, arrested those implicated in the murder of Mr. Liao Chung-kai, and when people awoke on the morning of the 26th there was not a soldier to be seen anywhere on the streets. Perfect order reigned in the city. This was most unusual in Canton.

Relations between the merchants and workers in Canton seem to be very cordial and even friendly, judging by many conferences they had in recent days, where they always come to a full understanding in matters affecting their common interests.

As regards rural districts, since the disarming of unruly soldiery, the struggle in the districts has considerably subsided and hope is being expressed in authoritative circles that with the suppression of counter-revolution there is no reason why conditions will not become absolutely normal.

Strike Intensified.

A delegation of various classes of people is to proceed to Peking within a few days for the purpose of co-operating with Peking in a foreign policy of China. It is understood that this delegation will transfer local grievances arising from the Shameen incident in Peking and will there deal with them. This is considered as a serious step forward in the direction of the general settlement.

The strike, strange to say, is becoming more serious, owing to strengthening of strike organizations and large sums of money daily coming in from all sources, especially from the Chinese overseas. It is hoped that with the departure of the delegation new developments in the strike situation may be expected. Very much depends no a sane attitude of Hongkong. Unfortunately, it still demands intervention in Canton, instead of pursuing a policy of reconciliation and mutual understanding.

The blockade seems to have affected Canton very little as concerns rice and firewood, both being cheaper than before the strike. The import and export business is deeply affected. While silk of the season has found a way out directly to Shanghai, it cannot be said that the problem of the export of silk from Kwangtung has been completely solved.

Nationalist Leader States Kuomintang Position.

When Mr. Hu Han-min, Kuomintang leader, asked why imperialist tools used the slogan "anti-Communism," he answered that it is due to the crimes of imperialists and foolishness of reactionaries. "They know that Communism cannot be practiced in China and our government has never put Communism into practice, but imperialists like to accuse us of Communism and instigate Chinese reactionaries. They have two objects: first, to detract sympathy of the world away from us. Since the Russian revolution, imperialists never tired carrying on propaganda against Communism.

"Whatever the imperialists hate and want to undermine they first of all accuse as being Communistic or as instigated by Communists. Sympathetic strikes after the massacre in Shanghai and other places were accused of being the result of Communist intrigues and telegrams to this effect were sent to the peoples of the world in order to discredit the national movement in China. Comrade Trotsky rightly laughed at the imperialists, calling them the best propagandists of Bolshevism in China. Nevertheless they consider this the only weapon to undermine us.

"Secondly, the imperialists by bringing the anti-Communist slogan to China try to smash our united front against imperialism. It is a great danger to imperialists that Chinese people are concentrating revolutionary forces to attack imperialism. Altho imperialists have bitter hatred towards the national revolutionary government, they dare not resort to armed intervention. Not because they do not want it, but because they are not in a position to do it. Therefore, the next best thing for them is to use Chinese militarists and reactionaries to undermine us.

Communists in United Front.

"The stupid Chinese counter-revolutionaries do not understand why Chinese Communists join the ranks of the Kuomintang Party. The anti-Communist slogan was used by Chan Lin-pak, by Liu Chen-wan and Yang Shi-min and again by murderers of Mr. Liao Ching-kai. They were all instructed by imperialists to undermine the revolutionary government and divert it from the struggle against imperialism.

"Imperialists were happy when they saw that some ignorant members of our party were endangering the united front against imperialism. Time and facts determine who are revolutionary and who not revolutionary. At present, the dividing line between revolutionary and counter-revolutionary is whether one fights against or supports imperialism. If one does not stand on this side of the line, he must stand on the other side. If anybody wavers and doubts, he thereby helps the enemy. There are people who are conscious agents of imperialists and there are also those who are their unconscious tools.

"Those people who at this moment discuss Communism and anti-Communism, while we have not as yet achieved one-tenth of our national revolutionary work, are consciously supporting imperialism." Mu Han-min concluded by saying: "We should hereafter deal with opponents of nationalism seriously and energetically."

Our Readers' Views

Help Negro Workers Organize.

To the Editor of The DAILY WORKER: Every class conscious worker is enthusiastic from the success of the Workers (Communist) Party in gaining sympathy of the toiling masses. The capitalists live in constant fear that their days are counted. Millions of workers, who believed childishly the false promises during the last war, are angry at the master class and their labor misleaders that instead of enjoying the promised freedom they suffer from greater exploitation than ever before.

The Negro workers must work in order to make a living, they must take care of their families, just as their white brothers. The prostitute capitalist press spreads hatred among the white workers against the Negroes coming from the southern states, that they are responsible for cuts in wages, higher cost of living, and worse working conditions. This is a hundred fold lie.

The Negro workers are brot over here by the same capitalists who throw mud at them. They receive the same wages as the white workers do, and the workers get their wage cuts because they are unorganized, which would happen also if the Negoes were not here.

The racial hate is brot into the hearts of both races from their early childhood.

The history teaches us that the most hated, most persecuted and exploited slaves are the first ones to rise. No wonder that the Negoes are awaking. The ku klux klan is also different today than it was during and after the Civil War. At that time those barbarians lynched only Negoes and those white workers who sympathized with them. Today to their lynching progam are added the foreign-born, catholics, Jews and organized workers. They try to destroy the labor movement.

Many foreigners were organized already in Europe. The hate of the American-born against them strengthened their revolutionary spirit. The Negroes were held in ignorance, they had no school, couldn't read and write, they were taught that the white race is the supreme one, that it must keep the Negroes down.

No matter how the slaves were made to believe that slavery is given to them by god, they always rose when their oppressors raved the most. During the war all colored colonials and slaves were needed to beat the Germans.

Their tyrants became their friends, they were even promised that after the war is over and the Germans defeated that Africa will be turned back to the black race. Also in the United States the hate against the foreigners and Negroes disappeared. Here also were the Negroes promised that Africa will belong to them after the war is over. They were bitterly disappointed. The big powers not only kept the African colonies but England grabbed all the German colonies, and the exploitation and torturing of the colonial slaves was started anew and worse than before the war.

All colonial slaves rise. China says: China to the Chinese! The Kuomintang party is organized and has its official organ even in this country. China refuses to remain a colony of foreign capital. Morocco, Syria, Tripoli, Egypt, India, are rising against their British, French, Spanish and Italian oppressors.

This all has a great influence upon American Negroes. We are enthusiastic that those most hated and persecuted slaves come along to fight side by side with the white workers against the common enemy capitalism. Without the 12,000,000 Negroes there will be no victory for labor.

The first Negro Labor Congress will meet Oct. 25, 1925, in Chicago, Ill. Said congress has its official organ, The Negro Champion. Every Communist who is working with Negro workers must do his duty and help them to organize. Their defeat is our defeat, their victory is our victory, their freedom our freedom.

Rise you slaves, you have nothing to lose but your chains and a world to gain.—Anthony Halamek, Cleveland, Ohio.

Statistical Background of the Agrarian Question in the United States

By EARL R. BROWDER.

ARTICLE II.

(Editor's Note: The first part of this article was printed in last Saturday's Magazine section. This installment begins with the population distribution by groups of the agrarian population of the East North Central Division).

Approximate number of farmers in each category of our classification would be (in round numbers):

Workers	550,000
Poor farmers	176,000
Middle farmers	383,000
Well-to-do farmers	526,000
Total	1,634,000

West North Central Division.

This division is predominately a wheat-producing area. It comprises those states which were the hardest hit by the agrarian crisis because they are so directly dependent upon the world-market price of wheat. It is a predominantly agricultural area, with a population of 12½ millions in 1920, of which 62.3 per cent was rural, as compared with 11½ millions in 1910, of which 66.7 was rural. With 17.18 per cent of the total acreage, it contains but 11.87 per cent of the population (a reversal of the relation in the three first divisions examined), and 15.21 per cent of the rural population of the country. About 13½ per cent of the total population are actively engaged in agriculture, numbering 1,689,253, of whom 1,096,951 are farm operators.

Corn is the largest crop produced, a large part of it going to feed swine and cattle, and the large dairy business which takes second place. But wheat is the central crop in the economic life of the seven states constituting this division. Corn, wheat, hay, dairy and livestock products, and livestock for slaughtering (this division is the largest producer of this last item) constitute the overwhelming bulk of production in west north central division.

Other items: Number of farms, decreasing (12,997 less in 1920 than in 1910); acres per farm, increasing (number of large farms increasing—7,265 more farms of a thousand acres and over, 5,382 more farms 500 to 1,000 acres, 11,842 more farms of 260 to 500 acres; while the smaller farms decreased in number to a much greater extent); tenantry, increasing (30.9 per cent in 1910, 34.2 per cent in 1920); foreign-born, 18.8 per cent in 1920, decreased from 24.3 per cent in 1910; Negroes, less than 1 per cent, and decreasing sharply (9,864 in 1910, 6,919 in 1920). Average equipment—buildings, $2,853; camhinery, $1,060; livestock, 2,151. Number of farmers' automobiles, 631,600.

Approximate number of farmers in each category of our classification would be (in round numbers):

Workers	590,000
Poor farmers	130,000
Middle farmers	369,000
Well-to-do farmers	611,000
Total	1,700,000

South Atlantic Division.

HERE we are "Away down south in the land of cotton," altho cotton is the leading crop in only three of the states comprising the division, yet here is produced 36 per cent of the entire U. S. cotton crop. Its social and politico-economic background is profoundly different from the previous divisions. Predominately agricultural, of its nearly 14 million population in 1920, over 9½ million, or 69 per cent was rural, a decrease from 74.6 per cent in 1910, but an increase in the positive number of rural population of over half a million, and of total population of 1.8 million. Containing 9.05 per cent of the total acreage of the country, it has 13.23 per cent of the total, and 18.78 per cent of the rural, population of the United States. Approximately 15.6 per cent of the total population of the division are actively engaged in agriculture, numbering 21,177,438, of whom 1,158,976 are farm operators.

Cotton is, by far, the largest item of production, constituting over 40 per cent of the value of all crops. Corn is second and tobacco third, this division producting more than half of the total tobacco crop of the U. S. Dairy and other livestock products, and domestic animals for meat slaughtering, occupy an important but subordinate place.

Other items: Number of farms, increasing (47,095 more farms in 1920 than in 1910); acres per farm, decreasing (a large decrease in the number of farms of each size-group over 100 acres, a simultaneous decrease in the number of farms less than 10 acres, with 47,052 more farms of 20 to 49 acres—the other size-group increases almost exactly balancing in number of farms of the decrease of large size farms); tenantry, constantly increasing (36.1 per cent in 1880—45.9 per cent in 1910—and 46.8 per cent in 1920); foreign-born, even fewer in number than Negro farmers in the North—less than 1 per cent; Negroes, 33.1 per cent of all farm operators (this does not count Negro wage workers on the farm) an increase from 32 per cent in 1910; average equipment (farms of Negroes, average less than one-third the size of the total average)—buildings, $1,036; machinery, $245; livestock, $558. Number of farmers' automobiles, 187,200.

Approximate number of farmers in each category of our classification would be (in round numbers):

Workers	1,020,000
Poor farmers	627,000
Middle farmers	280,000
Well-to-do farmers	275,000
Total	2,200,000

East South Central Division.

SOME more of the "Solid South." Cotton is still the central crop, altho not so predominating as in the South Atlantic division. This is the most predominantly agricultural division in the U. S., with 77.6 per cent (almost 7½ millions) of its total of almost 9 million population, being rural (a decline from 81.3 per cent in 1910). With 6.04 per cent of the total acreage, it contains 8.41 per cent of the total, and 13.42 per cent of the rural, population of the U. S. Approximately 20.3 per cent of the entire population of this division is actively engaged in agriculture, numbering 1,805,142, of whom 1,051,600 are farm operators.

Cotton, corn, tobacco, domestic animals for slaughtering, and dairy products, are the principal items of production for this division. It produces about 20 per cent of the cotton crop of the country, and more than one- third of the total tobacco crop. Contrary to the two other southern divisions, this one shows a decrease of the per cent of Negro farm operators between 1910-1920, altho the total number of all races increased.

Other items: Number of farms, increasing (in 1920 there were 9,120 more than in 1910; acres per farm, constantly decreasing (the same process noted in south Atlantic division—decrease in number of very small and very large farms, with the farms 20 to 50 acres in size increasing in number); tenantry, slight decrease since 1910 (from 50.7 per cent to slightly less than 50 per cent in 1920); foreign-born, very few (less than ½ of 1 per cent); Negroes, 29,2 per cent of all farm operators, a decrease from 31.2 per cent in 1910 (this does not include Negro farm laborers). Average equipment—(discount size of undertakings more than 50 per cent for Negro farmers) buildings, $711; machinery, $167; livestock, $551. Number of farmers' automobiles, 81,800.

Approximate number of farmers in each category of our classification would be (in round numbers):

Workers	755,000
Poor farmers	507,000
Middle farmers	260,000
Well-to-do farmers	290,000
Total	1,812,000

West South Central Division.

A CONTINUATION of the general conditions of the South are found in this division, with some changes, and combining some of the aspects of other divisions. Cotton is the big crop, amounting to almost half of all crop values. But little tobacco, however, is raised in this division; wheat becomes a major crop, and domestic animals for meat slaughtering occupies an important place. As in all the cotton producing territories, the Negroes are a large part of the agricultural population.

With 10¼ million population, over 7¼ millions (or 71 per cent) are rural (a decline from 77.70 in 1910.) The area comprises 14.45 per cent of the total for the country, within which is 9.69 per cent of the total and 14.15 per cent of the rural population. Of the total population, 17.6 per cent is actively engaged in agriculture, numbering 1,808,084, of whom 996,088 are farm operators.

OTHER items: Number of farms, constantly increasing (in 1920 there were 52,902 more farms than in 1910); acres per farm, decreasing (caused by large increase in number of farms of 20 to 99 acres, a decline in number of farms less than 10 acres, and from 100 to 250 acres, altho farms of more than 250 acres show a decided increase in number); tenantry, constantly increasing (29,162 more tenants in 1920 than in 1910, with the percentage of tenants to all farms at 52.9 per cent); foreign-born, decreasing, (from 4.4 per cent in 1910 to 4 per cent in 1920); Negroes, increasing (to 23.3 per cent of all farm operators in 1920, from 22.2 per cent in 1910); average equipment, buildings, $887; machinery, $312; live stock $1,024. Number of farmers' automobiles, 173,600.

Approximate number of farmers in each category of our classification would be (in round numbers):

Workers	810,000
Poor farmers	508,000
Middle farmers	225,000
Well-to-do farmers	265,000
Total	1,808,00

Mountain Division.

THIS is the great sparsely-settled division, containing 28.89 per cent of the total area of the U. S. agricultural land, with but 3.16 per cent of the total, and 4.13 per cent of the rural population. The population is 3 1-3 millions, of whom 63.6 per cent or over 2 millions, are rural. The rural population has increased almost one-half million since 1910. Approximately 12.8 per cent of the total population, or 427,158, are actively engaged in agriculture, of whom 244,109 are farm operators.

Predominantly a meat raising division, the mountain territory is turning more to wheat, which is the crop second in value, the first being hay, live stock and dairy products, and animals for slaughtering, together with hay, make up the bulk of agrarian products. Always the area of great "ranches," this division has witnessed a vast increase in the number of large farms between 1910 and 1920.

OTHER items: Number of farms, constantly increasing (in 1910 there were 183,446, in 1920, 244,109; or an increase of 60,663); acres per farm, increasing (decrease in the number of very small farms, increase in all sizes above 20 acres, with heaviest increase in the largest farms); tenantry, constantly increasing (90.3 per cent increase from 1910 to 1920, the proportion to all farms rising from 10.7 per cent to 15.4 per cent); foreign-born, increasing, but not so fast as total farms (16.8 per cent of all farms in 1920); Negroes, few in number (2.2 per cent in 1920). Average equipment, buildings, $1,481; machinery, $781; live stock, $2,987. Number of farmers' automobiles, 91,600.

Approximate number of farmers in each category of our classification would be (in round numbers):

Workers	180,000
Poor farmers	29,000
Middle farmers	108,000
Well-to-do farmers	111,000
Total	428,000

The Pacific Division.

THE Pacific coast states present about the same ratio between city and country as the East North Central division. With 5¼ million population, of which a little over 2 million (37.6 per cent) is rural, it is one of the rapidly-growing sections, increasing since 1910 by more than 1 1-3 millions, while the percentage of rural population declined from 43.2 per cent to 37.6 per cent. The area comprises 10.7 per cent of the U. S. total, with 5.27 per cent of the total population, and 4.08 per cent of the rural. Approximately 9 per cent of the total population is engaged actively in agriculture, or 496,473, of whom 234,164 are farm operators.

This is predominantly a fruit producing territory, with wheat and dairy products the principal secondary lines, domestic animals for slaughtering coming next in importance. The fruit farming is becoming more and more highly organized and, to a greater extent than in any other branch, agricultural organization among the producers has become an economic force of prime importance in the market. Wage labor on the farms here approaches, also, closest to the relationship between industrial workers and employers.

OTHER items: Number of farms, constantly increasing (in 1920 there were 44,273 more farms, 23.4 per cent, more than in 1910); number of acres per farm, constantly decreasing (all size-groups increasing in positive numbers but the farms under 50 acres increasing much more rapidly than the larger sizes); tenantry, increasing (43.5 per cent increase from 1910-1920, with the percentage of all farms standing at 21.1 per cent); foreign-born, increasing but in lower proportion than total farms; Negroes, few in number but increasing absolutely and in proportion to all farms. Average equipment, buildings, $2,146; machinery, $992; live stock, $1,731.

The Pan-American Federation of Labor

By MANUEL GOMEZ

THE Pan-American Federation of Labor has great pretensions. It poses as a labor international representing the labor movement of the western hemisphere. At its congress held in Mexico City, December 1924, Matthew Woll, proclaimed the "Monroe Doctrine of American Labor" modeled on the imperialist doctrine of the U. S. government. By this phrase plagiarized from capitalist diplomacy the Pan-American Federation of Labor declared a monopoly on all workers from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego, and denied "foreign" internationals any jurisdiction. The organizations forbidden to "interfere" with the labor movement of the western hemisphere were the Moscow Red Trade Union International, the Berlin anarcho-syndicalist International, and the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions—still too revolutionary for the A. F. of L.

The grandiose gesture of the Pan-American Federation of Labor is based on the claim that a majority of the countries of the western hemisphere are affiliated with it. Geography lists twenty independent countries in this hemisphere; the Pan-American Federation lists twelve national labor federations as affiliated members.

If this figure were correct there might at least be a numerical basis for the labor imperialism of the P. A. F. L.

An analysis of its boasted membership however tells another story.

THE twelve countries listed by the P. A. F. L. as its members are the U. S., Mexico, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Peru, the Dominican republic, Ecuador, Guatemala, Colombia, Venezuela and Porto Rico.

Porto Rico, represented in the P. A. F. L. by the "Federacion Libre de Trabajadores" has been an American colony since 1898. As such it should logically be affiliated with the A. F. of L. But merely by being listed as a member of the P. A. F. L. it has been raised to the dignity of an independent country. Thus without firing a shot, the P. A. F. L. has liberated an oppressed people. Nothing remains now but for the state department to recognize their independence. Though "liberating" Porto Rico, the A. F. of L. (the head of the P. A. F. L.), has long ago "annexed" Canada, which helps to swell the A. F. of L. membership list.

Nicaragua with a population of 630-000 has five general federations of labor. Only one of these, the "Federacion de Obreros Nicaraguense" belongs to the P. A. F. L.

El Salvador, with a population of 1,500,000 also has several general labor federations. These are loosely organized and are rather mutual benefit societies than real labor unions. Two of them — "La Confederacion de Obreros del Salvador" and the "Union Obrera Salvadorena" — are affiliated with the P. A. F. L. These two organizations claimed in 1921 a combined membership of 2,000. Neither of them sent a delegate to the last P. A. F. L. congress. In fact the labor movement in El Salvador is so backward that there is not a single labor paper in the country. Equally significant is the fact that in the case of Salvador, William Green is willing to admit dual unions to the P. A. F. L., while allowing the A. F. of L. to scab on "dual" unions in the United States.

THE Dominican Republic has a population of about 900,000 of which 5000 are organized workers. Its principal labor organization "La Hermandad Comunal Nacionalista" (the National Communal Brotherhood) is affiliated with Pan-American Federation. Unlike other Central American members of the P. A. F. L. the Dominican organization was represented by a delegate at the last P. A. F. L. congress. He was a physician practising in El Paso, Texas, who got a free ride in the Mexican government train to Mexico with the other A. F. of L. delegates.

Guatemala has a population of 1,500-000. Of its 30 labor associations five are trade unions and one a federation. The latter "La Federatcion Obrera de Guatemala" with a membership of 16,000, is affiliated with the P. A. F. L. Guatemala has no labor paper, but it sent two delegates to the last P.A.F.L. convention. These were seated not as full fledged delegates but merely as fraternal delegates on the ground that the labor movement in Guatemala is still too weak to deserve complete representation. The real reason, however, was that the two young delegates were known to be dissatisfied with the reactionary Gompers machine.

The P. A. F. L. claims bigger game when it lists among its members Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela. The last three have never sent a delegate to any P. A. F. L. convention, nor have any of them ever contributed a cent to the support of the P. A. F. L.

ECUADOR has a population of 1,500,000 of which three quarters are pure Indians and the rest chiefly mestizos with a small fraction of whites. It has several labor federations. One of them is the "Federacion del Trabajo" with headquarters in Guayaquil. It claims a membership of 300. Another is the "Federacion de Sindicatos", also with headquarters in Guayaquil. A third is the "Confederacion Obrera Ecuatoriana", with headquarters in the capital Quito and a membership claimed to be 20,000. Only the last of these declared its affiliation with the P. A. F. L. However it has never sent a delegate to any of the conventions or contributed a cent to the treasury of the P. A. F. L. None of the three federations of Ecuador is of national importance. Efforts have recently been made to unite them into one general federation to be known as "Federacion de Trabajadores Regional Ecuatoriana", but with no definite results so far.

Colombia, with a population of 6,-000,000, has no general labor federation. However there are a number of unions and socialist groups in the country. These socialist groups publish eight or nine papers, and are united in a loose federation known as the "Directorio Ejecutivo Nacional Socialist."

The "Directoria" is a purely political organization and in no sense a labor union; nevertheless it is listed as one of the affiliated members of the P. A. F. L. In addition Colombia is represented in the P. A. F. L. by the "Sindicato Centrale Obrero de Bogota" (Central Labor Union of Bogota). However, the P. A. F. L. letterhead omits the word Bogota, so that due to that little omission, the title reads as if it were the central labor body for the whole of Colombia.

At the last P. A. F. L. congress, Colombia was represented by one delegate who supplied the only amusing incident throughout the entire dull proceedings. He proposed that a Pan-American merchant marine be created and operated by the P. A. F. L. with money raised by a weekly contribution of one cent from every member of every union affiliated with the P. A. F. L. Though the delegates had come all the way from Colombia for the express purpose of submitting this proposal, it was turned down amidst laughter of the convention.

THO Peru also appears on the membership list of the P. A. F. L. it has never sent a delegate to any convention or contributed to the federations support. Peru has several labor federations. One of them, the "Centro Internacional Obrero de Peru" has joined both the P. A. F. L. and the Amsterdam International. In 1921 it claimed 25,000 members. It is not, however, strictly a labor federation but largely a body of representatives from various local mutual benefit societies. The only labor papers published there are those of the anarcho-syndicalists.

These facts show sufficiently the the tremendous amount of bluff used in the make up of the P. A. F. L. But this is all surpassed by the "affiliation" of Venezuela, represented on the Pan-American Fed. of L. list by the "Union Obrera Venezolana". It is generally known that Venezuela has no labor unions at all. Savage government repression has made labor organizations and strikes impossible in that country. Nevertheless the Venezuelan Labor Federation appears on the P. A. F. L. letterhead as a full fledged member of the labor international of the western hemisphere. Still, it is a fact that a Venezuelan Labor Federation actually exists. It has its headquarters in Brooklyn, New York and consists of sixteen exiles from Venezuela. Some time ago these sixteen workers formed a group which they called the "Venezuelan Labor Federation of New York". They applied for admission into the P. A. F. L. as a body representing the national labor movement of Venezuela and in 1925 they were admitted as such at a meeting of the P. A. F. L. executive committee in Washington. By omitting the words "of New York" from the title of the organization and making no mention of the fact that it is located in Brooklyn and not in Venezuela, the P. A. F. L. is able to present on its list one more Latin-American country over whom it exercises its labor Monroe doctrine.

IN the end Mexico alone of all the Latin-American countries remains a genuine member of the P. A. F. L. along with the American Federation of Labor. Mexico, however, is represented in the P. A. F. L. by the "Confederation Regional Obrera Mexicana" (the "CROM"). At the opening of the A. F. of L. convention in El Paso last December, Roberto Haberman claimed a membership of 800,000 for the CROM. A week later the close of the convention he claimed 1,200,000. When the American delegates began to laugh at the sudden rise in membership Haberman good naturally explained that Mexico being a tropical country everything there grows very rapidly. Of this number claimed by the CROM the vast majority is admittedly recruited from the peons, the agricultural laborers, who never paid any contributions. The peons have never supported the CROM except during that brief period when they were made to belive that CROM and the fight for land were inseparable. Now the Calles government has repudiated the agraristas and a bitter fight is going on between the leaders of the CROM and the leaders of the agraristas who stick to the original program of land distribution. Thus the CROM can no longer in any sense be said to represent the peasants. It is now mainly a kind of fascist government union used to fight the more progressive labor unions which wish to remain independent on the tutelage of the government, such as the powerful Railroad Federation ("Confederacion de Sociedades Ferrocarrileras") with about 40,000 really dues paying members, led by syndicalists and Communists, and the anarcho-syndicalist "Confederacion General de Trabajo," with about 18,000 members among the bakers, electricians and oil workers.

THE principal class action of the CROM is to organize dual unions where the independent unions are predominant and then to call strikes, in which the police picket the shops, in order to force the employers to recognize only the new CROM union and to dismiss all workers who belong to the revolutionary unions.

After all the grandiose flourishes the Pan-American Federation of Labor reduces itself to the conservative Tammanyite A. F. of L., the anti-retionary government unions of the CROM and a few dummy organizations of Central America.

The official report of the Pan-American Federation of Labor congress (p. 143) shows that the income of this as follows: The A. F. of L. $19,996; the CROM $4,379; the Dominican Labor Federation $250. No contributions were made by any of the other affiliated groups or alleged groups. And none of the larger Latin-American countries with real labor movements, like Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Cuba, will have anything to do with this extraordinary labor "international" guarding the entire western hemisphere against Moscow, Berlin and Amsterdam.

Fakerism in the Needle Trades

(By A Worker Correspondent.)

The history of the left wing in the Chicago International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has been a varied one.

No Weapon Unholy.

Four years ago, the reactionaries in their fight against the left wingers in the union used every sort of weapon that their minds could invent. First, intimidation, then expulsion, then the shooting at the Ashland Auditorium, where thousands of needle trades workers were listening to the message of the Trade Union Educational League, with William Z. Foster as its spokesman. No method of terrorization of those who supported the militants, was considered unholy. Money was spent left and right in their desperate attempt to crush any semblance of an opposition to the backward policies of the reactionary bureaucracy, headed by Sigman. The international now has a debt of $282,000 according to Sigman's own report, due to the hiring of sluggers, etc.

After a battle of fifteen weeks, the New York needle trades workers defeated the reactionaries that tried to get a strangle hold on the union. Today the reactionaries realize that the backbone of their vicious attacks have been broken.

Honeyed Phrases Flow Freely.

In Chicago, the reactionary leaders that a few weeks ago were doing all in their power to crush the radicals and terrorize their supporters, today have come forth with honeyed words and flowery phrases of endearment trying to bluff the needle trades workers into believing that they are progressives and that they have always stood for progressive policies.

In the coming week, elections will be held within the union. It behooves every worker to throw his support against these wolves who are trying to act the part of lambs.

Defeat the Reactionaries!

Tho their threats and terrorization have for a short time been abandoned, we must not forget ourselves and allow them to once more do in the future as they did in the past.

The needle trades workers should judge not by the flowery phrases and terms of endearment they may throw about, but by the acts they have committed and will commit in the future when they feel they are strong enuf.

Open Naval Court Inquiry Hearings on S-51 Disaster

BOSTON, Oct. 16.—Scores of witnesses were in attendance when a naval court of inquiry into the submarine S-51 disaster opened hearings at the Charleston navy yard.

Officers of the submarine base at New London, Conn., officers of the Steamship City of Rome, which rammed the submersible off Block Island with a loss of 38 lives, divers who attempted to reach the striken naval men, passengers on the City of Rome and survivors of the ill-fated undersea boat were among those called to testify.

The hearings are expected to last from five to ten days.

What Saklatvala Symbolizes

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

ARTICLE VI.

THE quotation from The Sunday Worker, with which our fifth article ended, gives concisely the opinion of the militant section of British labor on the preparations of the British ruling class for war on the workers.

Such desperate measures as the organization of the O. M. S. and its open attachment to the police and military forces indicates that the British rulers take a serious view of the situation and that, while the reports of the growth of the revolutionary spirit among the British workers may have been exaggerated, there is no exaggeration in the statement that the British empire is definitely on the decline; in other words, the objective situation in the empire is that which Zinoviev has described as "generally revolutionary."

NOR are the British rulers the only section of the capitalist class which senses impending upheavals in Great Britain. The Chicago Tribune says editorially:

> The British Twilight or Only a Cloud?
> British board of trade reports again disquiet the island. Imports for September increased $30,000,000 over August. Exports showed a decrease of $1,515,000. Coal exports were $10,391,000 under the exports of September, 1924, and the coal industry is now subsided. British industry is not sustaining the life of the country, which is buying more abroad to meet its needs and producing less at home. The balance is growing against it.
> Unemployment remains. The dole keeps the helpless elements of citizenship alive and punishes the citizenship which is still self-sustaining. The outlook is bad. The breed is stout hearted but it has not made the turn. Is there to be no turn? No great nation as yet has been lasting. Nations have had flashes of greatness or centuries of greatness, but none yet has had foundations for even the time of history.
> The island is in bad times. Some day the British will be in their recessional. We do not know what the world will be like then or when it will be, but whenever it is, they were good while they lasted and they lasted a long time.

SURELY the world has changed when a great American capitalist paper can write in this vein about the nation which ten years ago was the most powerful in the world. And now comes the news that the office of the home secretary, the same Sir William Joynson-Hicks whose adventures in fascism have already been noted, has raided the office of the British Communist Party and the Minority Movement, arrested Harry Pollitt and others and have warrants out for twenty more fighting workers.

Saklatvala could have predicted this development to American working class audiences had he been allowed to come here and a still clearer idea of the hatred the British rulers have for him is gained now from the news dispatches which tell of a movement instigated by the tories to remove him from the house of commons.

ONE could, from this side of the ocean, have forecast the recent attack on the revolutionary section of the British working class the Communists, which in this period especially, means an attack on the whole British labor movement.

The American capitalist press has been paying the closest attention to the class struggle in Great Britain and The New York Times of October 9, contained a broad hint that the Baldwin government was getting ready for drastic action. In its editorial comment on the speech of Premier Baldwin to the convention of the conservative party at Brighton, The Times said:

> It is for its domestic policy that the Baldwin government has been most severely criticised by dissident conservatives, and Mr. Baldwin took due note of the chief complaints. He virtually admitted that he had changed his mind about the coal subsidy and had placed himself in the position of surrendering to the threat of a general strike, but declared again, as he did at the time in the house of commons, that the government finally assented to the coal subsidy, temporarily, because it felt that the country was in no case to face the cost and suffering of "a great industrial struggle." But, looking to the future, he uttered a word of official warning. Without specifying ways and means, he affirmed that it was the first duty of the government to maintain law and order and also see to it that the community is "protected" from any "aggression" which would seek to deprive it of the indispensable services of modern life. This is discreetly veiled, but if it means anything it means that the Baldwin government will not submit again to the coercion of a threatened general strike. The coal miners, with "Emperor" Cook at their head, and the railway unions, will do well to remember this when the mining truce expires next May.

A FRONTAL attack such as that made on the miners recently creates a great danger for the British capitalists. It brings into motion huge masses of workers and British capitalism has changed its tactics—it attacks now only the most advanced section of the working class, hoping to cut it off before the resorves arrive.

And, as every battle is decided by the reserves, if we subscribe to the military formula, we must admit that the outcome of the present struggle in Great Britain depends largely upon how fast the huge reserves of the working class can be brot into action.

THE role of the Communists is to bring the reserves into action behind him and so well was the Communist Party fulfilling this task that the ruling class was forced to act.

It is deeply significant in this connection that the offense with which these workers are charged is inciting mutiny in his majesty's forces. To put it baldly, the armed force sof the empire constitute now almost the sole support of the empire itself.

The idea of empire has lost much of its paralyzing grip on the minds of the masses.

WITH the sanctity of the whole scheme of empire questioned by millions of workers, British imperialism must move to crush working class resistance or surrender. No ruling class in history has ever surrendered and British imperialism will die fighting. Its most dangerous enemy—we speak now in terms of the class struggle and not of conflicts between imperialist rivals—is Soviet Russia.

With the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics extending its frontiers into the Far East, Great Britain here too must choose between war and surrender. Let us quote, not a Communist, but a member of the ruling class and an achknowledged authority in his field of international politics. The following is from a Federated Press dispatch:

> Inevitably England and Russia will fight within the next generation, Felix Valyi, editor Revue Internationale Politique, who is attending the Williamstown Institute of Politics, predicts. Valyi qualifies by saying that unless England ends her whiskey and opium trade in the Orient and turns toward cultivation of spiritual relations with Asia the war with Russia will come, bringing possibly the collapse of the British empire, he adds.
> "The tremendous upheaval in the east from Morocco to Mongolia, which constitutes one immense movement "directed by the same spirit of nationalism, cannot be treated by the usual methods of European colonial powers," Valyi states. There is no chance for European nations to solve the situation of the east by "brute force," he says.
> Valyi credits Russia with showing much better understanding of the east by its offer of social equality to Oriental nations.

YES, Russia has shown "much better understanding of the East by its offer of social equality to Oriental nations." This and the Communist slogan of "The land to the peasants" is something that British bayonets cannot beat.

Let us say it again:

Saklatvala represents both these "Oriental nations" and the spirit of the Soviet Union.

It is enmity to Soviet Russia that forms the bond binding British and American imperialism together in the exclusion of Saklatvala.

Saklatvala symbolizes something else however, the unity of labor against the imperialist rulers.

From its highest to its lowest strata, from the House of Morgan to the bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor, Saklatvala, the synthesis of everything in the working class movement they fear, he is anathema.

THESE articles end with a quotation from the editorial page of The New York Times that not only shows the close unity between the officialdom of American labor and this brazen mouthpiece of the American ruling class but which puts the case for the rulers and against the Communists, Soviet Russia and unity of the world workers in the simplest terms:

> Cheers from the floor of the American Federation of Labor convention at Atlantic City plainly testified that when President Green pronounced his scathing verdict on the Communist experiment in Russia he was expressing the opinion of organized labor in the United States. In this respect American labor is aligned with the trade union movement everywhere in Europe except in Great Britain, where the issue is now being fought out.
> President Green went beyond saying that between American organized labor and the Communist trade union movement there can be no cooperation. He intimated plainly that between the two it is war.

The upward sweep of the working class in imperialist nations like Great Britain, the ever more powerful revolts of sweated colonial peoples, the living inspiration of these movements in the stalwart Soviet union, the Communist International, the general staff and the shock troops of the world revolution—this is what Saklatvala symbolizes and this is why he is barred from American and hounded in Great Britain.

Negro Labor Congress Asks for Artistic Talent

The American Negro Labor Congress, which will open at Pythian Hall, 207 East 35th St., Chicago, on Sunday, Oct. 25, has issued an appeal to all colored and white workers to participate in the evening programs which will occupy every evening during the week of October 25 to 31.

Every white and colored worker is called upon to aid in the arranging of the programs to be given at the large mass meetings to be held during the evening sessions of the congress. Recitations, monologues, classical dancing, singing, instrument playing—all these forms of talent will be welcomed by the arrangements committee.

Any worker desiring to assist in this work will please get in touch with A. Andrew Torrence, chairman of the arrangements committee, at the American Negro Labor Congress headquarters, 3456 South Indiana avenue.

Mikhail Frunze, Chief of the Red Army

MIKHAIL VASSILIEVITCH FRUNZE was born in 1885, at Pischpek, the chief town of the district of Semirechinsk (Republic of Turkestan.) His father, a Russian Moldov, was a peasant from the district of Zakharievsk, in the government of Odessa; his mother was a peasant from Voronesh. After his father finished his term of military service in Turkestan, he became a hospital attendant in the municipal service.

Frunze began his studies in a primary school, subsequently entering the college of Vierny (now Almata), where he proved an excellent student. His father having died, leaving the family in poor circumstances, the young Mikhail at the age of twelve took to giving private lessons as a means of livelihood.

Entering the Polytechnic Institute of St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) in 1904, Frunze began to take part in the revolutionary movement, working first in the student circles, then in the workers' circles, as a social-democrat. He took part in the November demonstrations in St. Petersburg, which led to his arrest and subsequent expulsion from the capital.

AT the beginning of 1905, Frunze worked in Moscow, then in the Ivanovo-Voznessensk factory in Vladimir. During the party split into mensheviks and Bolsheviks, Mikhail deliberately took the side of the Leninists. In December, 1905, he took part in the insurrection at Moscow. In 1906, as a delegate from the party committee of Voznessensk, he participated in the Third and Fourth Congresses of the party at Stockholm.

In 1907, he was arrested at Chovia, where he had been working under the name of Arsene, and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment. Brot before the magistrates for belonging to the social-democratic party, he was accused of having offered armed resistance to the police, and sentenced to four years hard labor.

MIKHAIL FRUNZE
Commander-in-Chief of the Red Army

Condemned to Death; Prison; Escape.

After being tried five times in connection with this affair, during which two verdicts declared for the death penalty, Frunze was finally condemned to an additional six years' hard labor. He served five and a half years in the central prison of Vladimir, then for two years in the prison of Nikolaev, and finally in the Alexandrovsk prison.

Liberated in 1915, but sent to the district of Verkholensk in Irkutsk, Frunze was soon arrested again for creating an organization of the deportees. He succeeded, however, in escaping, and towards the end of 1915, turned up at Chita under the illegal name of Vassilenko. Here he collaborated on the editorial staff of the Bolshevik weekly, The Oriental Review. Discovered by the police, he escaped into European Russia, where, under the name of Mikhailov, he entered the Pan-Russian Union of Zemstvos, and worked on the western front until the revolution of 1917. During his sojourn at the front he spent his time principally working to create revolutionary organizations in the czarist army.

AFTER the revolution of February, 1917, "our Mik" became a member of the Workers' and Soldiers' Deputies of Minsk, a member of the army committee of the western front, chief organizer and president of the Soviet of Peasant Deputies of White Russia. During the Kornilov mutiny, he was elected commander of the revolutionary troops in the sector of Minsk. Soon afterwards he returned to Ivanovo-Voznessensk, where he was elected president of the Zemstvo in the district of Chovia, president of the municipal council, and of the Soviet of the district.

Defending the Revolution.

After the October revolution, Frunze became president of the executive committee of the Russian Communist Party in the governmet of Ivanovo-Voznessensk. It was at this time that he began his military career as military commissioner for the government of Ivanovo-Voznessensk. Following the insurrection of Jaroslav, he was named commissar for the military district of Jaroslav, a post which he occupied until the end of 1918. In December, 1918, he was sent to the front as commander of the fourth army, which operated in the Urals.

At the height of the Koltchak offensive, Frunze assumed command of the four armies of the southern group of the eastern front, and inflicted on Koltchak's troops the first defeat, which led to a decisive revival in our position upon the oriental front. During the advance he was wounded by an anti-craft bomb. At the end of June, 1919, Comrade Mikhail was appointed to be commander of the whole eastern front. With the advance of our troops of the oriental divisions towards the Siberian and Turkestan fronts, he was then appointed commander of the Turkestan fronts and rapidly cleared the country of white troops, annihilating Koltchak's southern army.

IN August, 1920, during the Wrangel offensive in the south of Russia, and the Ukraine, Frunze was appointed commander on the southern front, and directed with energy the operations in the latter part of November which resulted in dislodging the whites from their last refuge in the Ukraine and in the Crimea. For his military services, our comrade received several decorations, two of these being the order of the Red Flag, and a Sword of Honor.

After the liquidation of Wrangel, Frunze became commander of the troops in the Ukraine and Crimea, and plenipotentiary delegate of the revolutionary military council of the U. S. S. R. to which is attached the Soviet Republic of the Ukraine. In April, 1921, he was nominated vice-president of the revolutionary military council of the U. S. S. R.

Frunze is a member of the central committee of the Communist Party of Russia, of the central committee of the Communist Party of Ukraine, and of the presidium of the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R. When Comrade Trotsky fell ill, he became commander of the Red Army, and, on January 26, 1925, he was formally nominated chairman of the Revolutionary Military Council.

The Three Sources and the Three Constituents of Marxism

By N. LENIN.

In every part of the civilized world the intensest enmity and hate among the intenset enmity and hate among bourgeois scientists (official and liberal alike), who regard Marxism as a kind of "harmful sect." It is impossible to expect them to take up any other attitude, for there can be no "impartial" social science in a state of society based on class warfare. Both official and liberal science seek by one means or another to defend wage slavery, while Marxism declares ruthless war against this slavery. To expect impartial science in a state of society based on wage slavery, is as naively foolish as to expect impartiality from factory owners in the question of whether it would not be advisable to raise the wages of the workers by means of reducing the profits of the capitalists.

But this is not all. The history of philosophy, and the history of social science, show with perfect clearness that there is nothing in Marxism resembling a hard-and-fast stereotyped teaching, taking its rise in some backwater apart from the main stream of the evolution of international civilization. The direct contrary is the case, for the genius of Marx consists in the fact that he replied to questions which had already been put by the advanced thought of mankind. His teaching followed as an immediate continuation of the teaching of the greatest representatives of philosophy, of political economy, and of socialism.

I.

The philosophy of Marxism is materialism. During the whole course of the more recent history of Europe, and especially in France at the end of the 18th century, at the time of the decisive struggle against all the relics of mediaevalism, and against feudalism in institutions and ideas, materialism proved to be the sole consistent philosophy, true to all the teachings of the natural sciences, hostile to superstitions, to hypocrisy etc. The enemies of democracy have therefore exerted their utmost efforts to "confute" materialism, to undermine and slander it, and have defended every imaginable variety of philosophical idealism, invariably ending in the defense or support of religion.

Marx and Engels defended philosophical materialism with the utmost energy, and were never weary of emphasising the fundamental incorrectness of any deviation from this principle. Their views are stated with clarity and detail in Engels' works: "Ludwig Feuerbach" and "Antiduhrung," books which—like the "Communist Manifesto"—are among the text books of every class conscious worker.

But Marx did not stop at the materialism of the 18th century; he carried philosophy further. He enriched it with the result of classic German philosophy, especially that of Hegel's system, which again led to the materialism of Feuerbach. The most important of these results is to be found in dialectics, that is, in the doctrine of evolution in its completest and deepest aspect, free from one-sideness; in the theory of the relativity of human knowledge, mirroring for us the unending development of matter. The latest discoveries of natural science — radium, electrones, transmutation of chemical elements—have afforded a brilliant confirmation of Marx' dialectical materialism as opposed to the teaching of bourgeois philosophers, with their "new" retreats into old and decaying idealism.

In deepening and developing philosophical materialism, Marx carried it through to its ultimate end, and extended his knowledge of nature to knowledge of human society.

The historical materialism of Marx has proved to be the greatest achievement of scientific thought. The chaos and arbitrariness which had hitherto prevailed in the conception of history and politics have been replaced by an astonishingly consistent and well-constructed scientific theory, showing how the growth of productive forces causes one system of social life to develop into another and higher system—how, for instance, capitalism grows out of feudalism.

Just as the knowledge of mankind mirrors the nature existing independently of it, that is, the evolving matter, in the same way the social knowledge of man (that is the various views and teaching of philosophy, religion, politics, etc.) mirrors the economic basis. We see, for instance, that the various political forms of the present European states serve for firmer establishment of the rule of the bourgeoisie over the proletariat.

Marx' philosophy is perfected philosophical materialism, placing powerful tools of knowledge within the reach of humanity, and especially of the working class.

II.

Having recognized that the economic structure is the basis upon which the political superstructure is erected. Marx devoted the greater part of his attention to the study of this structur. Marx' chief work: "Capital", is devoted to the study of the present state of society, that is, of capitalist society.

The classic political economic which arose before Marx's day developed in England, the most highly developed capitalist country. Adam Smith and David Ricardo, in their investigations into the nature of the economic structure, laid the foundation for the theory of value derived from, labor. Marx continued the work begun by these writers. He firmly established and logically developed this, theory. He showed that the value of all commodities is determined by the amount of socially necessary labor time required for their production.

Where the bourgeoists economists saw relations between things (exchange of goods), Marx discovered the actual relation between human beings. The exchange of commodities represents a connection between the individual producers, effected by the aid of the market. Money signifies that this connection is becoming continually closer, in that it binds the entire economic life of the individual producers together into one indivisible whole Capital signifies the further development of this association: human labor power is converted into a commodity. The wage worker sells his labor power to the owner of the land, factories, and means of production. The worker employs a part of his working day in covering the cost fo keeping himself and his family (wages), and for the rest of his working day the worker is working hours for nothing, producing for the capitalists that surplus value which is the source of profit, the source of the wealth of the capitalist class.

The theory of surplus value is the corner stone of Marx's economic theory.

Mayakovsky's Last Appearance in Chicago Next Tuesday Night

Vladimir Mayakovsky, the famous Russian poet, will speak for the last time in Chicago on Tuesday, Oct. 20, at Schoenhofen Hall, Milwaukee Ave. and Ashland Blvd., at 8 p. m. If you have not heard him this is your last chance.

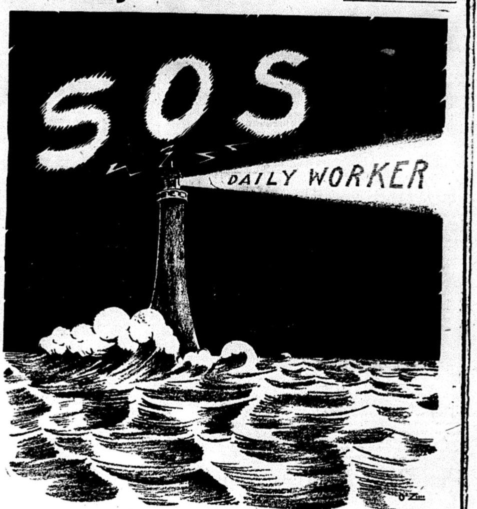
Altho the hall holds over a thousand a bigger crowd than even that is expected. The enthusiastic crowd that wildly cheered Mayakovsky at his last lecture is expected to pack this hall also. So come early!

DIVORCE LAW IN MOSCOW SIMPLIFIES LIFE FOR MISMATED

MOSCOW, Oct. 13.—"Zaks" is the name of the special bureau in Moscow which attends to marriage contracts and divorce papers. All the formality and red tape of other countries for the granting of divorce are scorned in Moscow. Couples who desire to separate fill out a blank at this office, attach their signatures and to this is added the Soviet stamp. That is all there is to the whole business, and the marriage contract is definitely cancelled. The cost of divorce is practically nothing.

Rally to the Daily Worker

By Jay Lovestone



OUR party membership and those workers who sympathize with our program, at least in a general way, are now answering the question: shall we have a daily paper that will fearlessly express our point of view and energetically defend our interests?

We have no doubt that all of these workers will answer this question emphatically in the affirmative. We do not doubt that every class conscious worker can be made to feel and realize the need of having a daily spokesman for the American working class.

But what we must strive to do is to make the workers not merely grasp the abstract need for the existence of a newspaper like the DAILY WORKER. We must spare no effort to convince these workers that it is their duty to insure the practical continuous existence of the DAILY WORKER.

THE best way to approach the workers in an appeal of this sort is to resort to practical examples of instances where the bourgeois press attacks and tries to undermine workers' movements and when the DAILY WORKER defends and tries to strenthen these same movements of the working class. Concrete examples which will be most easily grasped by the workers should be chosen by us, if we wish to get the greatest results.

Let us take, for example, the present anthracite strike. We can put it very simply and with straightforwardness to the workers. Show the workers how the capitalist press is lining up with the coal bosses, with the operators on every issue in the strike. Show the workers copies of bourgeois papers in which the striking miners and their demands are attacked. At the same time GIVE AWAY a copy or two of the DAILY WORKER in which the anthracite miners are defended, in which their demands are indorsed.

Then, we may take up the union-breaking campaign of certain reactionary labor leaders. Let us take the recent situation in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. We can show that the only paper printed in the English language which consistently and sincerely fought against the vicious expulsion policy and stood up for a united labor organization, for a solid union. was the DAILY WORKER.

THE present situation in Panama where the American soldiery is serving in the role of strikebreakers affords another practical, living approach to workers for getting some support for the daily. It certainly affords interesting and clinching argument to compare the columns of the DAILY WORKER with the columns of every capitalist sheet in the country in the handling of this critical situation. In every so-called big paper, that is in every paper of the bosses, the poor tenants of Panama are being denounced as rioters and the soldiers bayoneting the defenseless working men are hailed as heroes. Only in the DAILY WORKER will there be found a plea in behalf of the working men striking to reduce the rent bills for their miserable hovels.

A rent appeal in reference to Panama workers is not distant from the rent issue which is keenly felt by great masses of the American proletariat. The landlords in both instances are largely members of the same American capitalist class. There is much sympathy for the "under-dog" in the ranks of the American proletariat which we can exploit most constructively for the working class and its institutions like the DAILY WORKER.

THE ravages of the fascisti in Italy gives us an excellent point of approach to many thousands of workers. There is considerable hatred of the fascist murderers by the American working masses. We can certainly utilize this issue to disillusion the workers by showing them how the newspapers, which always slander and vilify them when they manifest the slightest resistance to the open-shoppers, repeatedly indorse the bloody crimes of the Italian government gunmen and hooligans. Then, we should bring up the way in which the DAILY WORKER has treated the fascisti abroad and the open-shoppers at home. Strike the point quickly and bring it home to the workingman.

Let us take a typical instance how to approach a poor farmer. Talk to him about the propaganda the capitalist papers are now spreading ceaselessly in behalf of increased freight rates. Compare for him the way in which the DAILY WORKER and his bourgeois farm papers have been handling the railroad barons, the coal magnates, and the big bankers.

IN short, every need and issue of the workingman affords us a starting point for appealing to him to support the DAILY WORKER. The DAILY WORKER is not only the organ of the Workers (Communist) Party of America. The DAILY WORKER is the organ of the whole American working class. It is precisely because the DAILY WORKER is the political organ of the Workers (Communist) Party that it is the organ of the whole working class. It is axiomatic for us that we Communists have no interests other than those of the working class as a class.

Our members have not appealed to a wide enuf mass of workers in behalf of our leading party organ, the DAILY WORKER. The support of the DAILY WORKER has been too much a "family" affair, in a sense, too much restricted to a too narrow circle. What we need now is to increase this "family," so to say. First of all, all our party members must get into the campaign to save the DAILY WORKER. Secondly, our party members must approach a wider circle of workers in appealing for support for the DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER is the most vital concern of every member of our party regardless of what language he speaks or reads. The DAILY WORKER must be made the concern of every workingman. Then only will our task have been achieved. Then only will the DAILY WORKER occupy the place in which it rightfully belongs in the lives of the American working masses.

Uncivilized!

An ancient ape, once on a time,
Disliked exceedingly to climb,
And so he picked him out a tree
And said, "Now, this belongs to me;
I have a hunch that munks are mutts
And I can make them gather nuts
And bring the bulk of them to me
By claiming title to this three."

He took a green leaf and a reed
And wrote himself a title-deed,
Proclaiming pompously and slow:
"All monkeys by these presents know—."
Next morning, when the monkeys came
To gather nuts, he made his claim:
"All monkeys climbing on this tree
Must bring their gathered nuts to me,
Cracking the same on equal shares;
The meats are mine, the shells are theirs."

"Buy what right?" they cried, amazed,
Thinking the ape was surely crazed.
"By this," he answered; "if you'll read
You'll find it is a title deed,
Made in precise and formal shape
And sworn before a fellow ape
Exastly on the legal plan
Used by that wondrous creature, man,
In London, Tokio, New York,
Glengarry, Kalamazoo and Cork.
Unless my deed is recognized,
It proves you quite uncivilized."

"But," said one monkey, "you'll agree
It was not you who made this tree."
"Nor," said the ape, serene and bland,
"Does any owner make his land,
Yet all its hereditaments,
Are his and figure in his rents."

The puzzled monkeys sat about;
They could not make the question out.
Plainly, by precedent and law,
The ape's procedure showed no flaw;
And yet, no matter what he said,
The stomach still denied the head.

Up spake one sprightly monkey then:
"Monkeys are monkeys, men are men;
The ape should try his legal capers
On men, who may respect his papers.
WE don't know deeds. We do know nuts,
And spite of 'ifs' and 'ands' and 'buts',
We know who gathers and unmeats 'em,
By monkey practice, also eats 'em.
"So TELL THE APE AND ALL HIS FLUNKEYS,
No man-tricks can he play on monkeys."
Thus, apes still climb to get their food,
Since monkey's minds are crass and crude,
And monkeys, all so ill-advised,
Still eat their nuts—UNCIVILIZED.

German Rail Heads Go West.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—Bert M. Jewell, president of the railway employers' department of the American Federation of Labor, is escorting on a middle western tour the five German rail labor executives who visited the convention in Atlantic City. They will see Cincinnati, Kansas City, Cedar Rapids, Chicago and Indianapolis headquarters of various unions.

Celebrating the Unity of Science With the Masses

MEMORIAL PUBLICATION OF RUSS ACADEMY OF SCIENCES REVEALS RESEARCHES OF EARLY SAVANTS

MOSCOW, October 16.—From a memorial publication prepared by the Russian Academy of Sciences for its 200th anniversray we take the following data about the contributions of Russian academicians to world science in the domain of mathematics, physics and chemistry.

Founder of Mathematics.

The first mathematicians of the Academy of Sciences, Leonard Eiler, was one of the principal founders of modern mathematics, and partly of physics. The international commission engaged in the publication of his works has already been working about 20 years, but has not yet published a half of his researches. The complete edition of his works will make about 50 volumes of 1,000 pages each.

The work began by Eiler was continued by Daniel Bernulli. Mathematics, mathematical physics, and particularly hytrodynamics, are still under the influence of his remarkable researches. Suffice it to mention that the Paris Academy of Sciences had ten times awarded him the prizes for the best researches in mathematics and physics. The first scientific treatise on the theory of the motion of fluids belonged to Daniel Bernulli.

Peasant Becomes Scientist.

A contemporary and then a successor of Eiler was the famous Michael Lomonosov, the son of a peasant fisherman, whose prolific researches could be fully appreciated only after the lapse of a century or more.

The French physicist Lavoisier used to be considered as the creator of modern chemistry; but the famous "Law of the Conservation of Matter" was discovered and demonstrated by Lomonosov 17 years before Lavoisier, while Lomonosov's experiments proved far more convincing than those of Lavoisier in demonstrating the aforesaid law.

Modern Chemistry Gets Impetus.

Thus, the foundations of modern chemistry were laid by the Russian peasant, Michael Lomonosov. From his works it may also be seen that he knew already the law of the conservation of energy, subsequently discovered by Myer and Helmhols.

Lomonosov's works contained also an outline of the fundamentals of modern physical chemistry. The introduction of weights in chemistry, was done by Lomonosov 20 years before Lavoisier.

The basic ideas of the modern mechanical theory of heat were expressed by Lomonosov and it was only a centry after his death that they were developed.

Electricity Experiments.

The first experiments in electricity, then recently discovered by Franklin, were also made by Lomonosov, who discovered the effect of ascending and descending currents upon the development of electricity in the atmosphere, pointing out their importance in meterology. He was first in appreciating the importance of lightning-conductors and in expressing the idea of the aurora borealis being due to electrical force. He began a great work on The Theory of Electricity treated in mathematical terms.

Freezing of Gases.

Lomonosov was first in observing the hardening of quicksilver and in determining its freezing temperature. He was also first in suggesting that the air and the gases in general may be converted into a liquid state by cooling and increased pressure.

It was also Lomonosov who established the geographical department, thus laying the foundation for the study of the country. Nearly the whole of the basic Russian scientific terminology was created by Lomonosov.

"SCIENCE BELONGS TO MASSES," IS TOLD WORLD SCIENTISTS AT 200th ANNIVERSARY OF ACADEMY

LENINGRAD, September 6—(By Mail.)—The solemn sitting of the Academy of Sciences in the presence of about two hundred foreign scientists, diplomatic representatives of foreign countries and members of the Soviet government with Kalinin, president of the central executive committee of the Soviet Union, at their head, took place today.

The ceremony was opened with the "International" played by the band of the philharmonic society and "Solemn Overture" under the conductorship of the famous composer Mr. Glazunoff.

Science Belongs to the Masses.

After a speech of welcome by Mr. Marpinsky, president of the academy, the word was given to Kalinin who said that the academy had rendered immense service to the world, which is proved by the presence of so many prominent foreign representatives of science. "But the academy could not approach the people"—said Comrade Malinin—"because conditions before the revolution made it impossible. The revolution changed it absolutely, having overthrown the former state of affairs. The academy must now approach the broad masses of the people which, after the revolution, have developed a power of self-consciousness."

Professor Oldenburg, permanent secretary of the academy, in his speech spoke of different phases, thru which the academy had to pass during long years of its existence. He described how the academy suffered during the war, and said that the present regeneration of the academy was due to the assistance of Mr. Lenin and his successors, who honestly and justly fulfilled their duty towards the highest scientific institutions in the country.

New Institutes.

The following new institutions and sections were established in the academy: Physico-mathematical institute, chemical institue, platinum institute, institute of physico-chemical analysis of the soil, philogical institute, and Caucasian history and archeological institute. All museums of the academy were widened and had received better premises. In conclusion, Mr. Oldenburg expressed confidence that the present meeting of foreign men of science with Soviet scientists will serve as a pledge of a co-operative scientific work.

In the end, Mr. Steklov, vice-president of the academy, announced that there were received altogether over 1,500 telegrams, addresses and letters of welcome from various countries of the world.

Fraternity with Peoples.

Comrade Lunacharsky, people's commissar of education speaking in four languages, declared that revolution and science have one common goal—the truth. Many national diplomatic representatives spoke, as did scientists and professors from several countries, all stressing the fraternity of scientists of the world with the Russian peoples.

Professor Betson of England said he felt proud of his membership in the academy.

Celebration Sunday in Chicago for U.S.S.R. Academy of Science

The 200th anniversary of the Academy of Science of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics will be celebrated on Sunday, Oct. 18, at 1 p. m., at Schoenhofen Hall, Milwaukee Ave. and Ashland Blvd. There will be speakers and a musical program. Admission 25 cents.

The following Russian organizations will participate in the celebration: The Federation of Children's Schools, Independent Peoples Society, Society for Technical Aid to U. S. S. R., Workers' Mutual Aid Society, the Co-operative Society, Women's Progressive Mutual Aid Society, White Russian Peoples Society, Worker Correspondents of Novy Mir, Chicago Russky Viestnik, Workers' House, Russian Branch of the Workers Party, Russian Branch of International Labor Defense.

Board of Education Plans to Establish Provincial Theaters

MOSCOW, Oct. 16.—According to the board of education investigation in Moscow there are 344 theatres, clubs and moving picture houses in the city for the entertainment and education of the workers. There are enough of these institutions to provide accomodations for 75,000 daily.

The board intends to close some of the theaters and send them into the provinces and in the places left vacant by the theatrical troupes, they are to establish moving picture houses.

Education Budget of Soviet Growing, Says Lunacharsky Speech

MOSCOW, Sept. 12.—(By Mail)—Lunacharsky, people's commissary of education, addressing the Academy of Sciences recalled that moment when just in the beginning of the revolution of Nov. 7, the academy being faithful to the spirit of the time declared its readiness to work on scientific problems jointly with the Soviet government.

Lunatcharsky noted the public zeal in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics towards education and pointed out that the reconstruction of the country requires energetic collaboration of science and the government.

Refering to the careful attitude of authorities towards scientific men, Lunacharsky quoted Lenin, who gave an idea of creating the state planning committee where Russian non-partisan scientists are working hand in hand with representatives of the government.

In conclusion, Lunatcharsky mentioned that the budget of the commissariat of education is rapidly growing and soon will surpass expenses of other commissariats.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

Mystery of the Orange Chamber

By Michael Koltzef

ALL doors flew open one after the other, no push, no effort was required.

The cast iron gates of the enormous works beyond the Narvskaya Zastava (Narva Gate) in Leningrad marked the initial stage of the magic which continued without end. Dividing themselves into groups, the envoys of the German working class made a careful investigation of our entire country. The Urals and Crimea, Ukraine and the Volga, hundreds of nooks and corners of the Soviet Union became known to them. The Germans witnessed the life and work of our state in all its majestic power and in all its unattractive simplicity. We did not scatter fine sand on the path which the German proletarians had to tread. And we can see that the German guests have appreciated this country which showed itself to them in its work-a-day clothes, in shirt sleeves without collar or tie and up to our eyes in work, and they appreciated it precisely because of this feverish activity in the work of reconstruction.

They Come Back Again.

The delegates, sunburnt, grown thinner, but with a new light in their eyes, are again in Moscow. Only one door has as yet remained closed to the delegation. The most disputed, the most mysterious, and the most remote door which, at the same time, is subconsciously so near and yet so attractive.

But the door of the Comintern did not behave any worse than the other door. Most of the members of the delegation belong to a party with which the Communists have long and bitter accounts to settle. But they are workers, and the door opened wide without any difficulty and with extreme hospitality.

It is one thing to listen to an opera in the Mariensky Theater, to pat a Russian Young Pioneer on the head, to receive information from the manager of a Soviet brewery. Caught in such criminal acts, a social-democrat can murmur something in his defense. But to penetrate into the orange chamber! To get right into the lion's mouth, to touch the tables on which the pernicious and agitating "Zinoviev letters" are written. To sit at these tables! I say, is that behaving like obedient well-mannered social-democratic lambs? Is it possible for a subscriber to The Vorwaerts to exhibit such boundless temerity?

They Meet Zinoviev.

THEY persisted. German and proletarian-like, they wanted to carry the matter to the end. They opened the last door, they sat down at the same table with Zinoviev, and listened. And what is the main thing—having got over their nervousness, they themselves spoke warmly, passionately and with all sincerity.

The tanned Freiberger has become even more tanned during these weeks. But his hoarse bass of a non-commissioned officer sounds as resolute as ever. And striking the Zinoviev table with the broad palm of his right hand, he bawls out:

"Comrades, let us have a straightforward talk with the Communists, without any subterfuges, for we are not before an official table in Germany."

There was really no need for this invitation. The delegates understood themselves that diplomatic conversations would be out of place in the orange chamber. There are other places and institutions for this kind of thing.

The social-democrat, Tonn, of Hamburg, might serve as a model for the portrait of a menshevik to a cantankerous Soviet caricaturist. The sober black clothes, the sarcastic tone of his voice, his petty-bourgeois fear of some sort of fire and brimstone, but nevertheless, the artist would have been mistaken. In Tonn, the mean compromiser, hard driven by the "leader" is contending with the honest worker, sincerely searching for some truth, some agreement and sadly longing for unity in the class struggle.

German Communists Bite.

TONN complained of the German Communists. He said they are irreconcilable. They are too rough and aggressive. They are ready to remove from their path any social-democrat just because he is a social-democrat. They do not spare party ambition. Let there be differences of opinion with Communists about the path leading to socialism. The path of dictatorship or the path of democracy—those are contentious matters which could be peacefully obviated, especially in all current trade union work. But why do they call us and our leaders approbious names? It is all very well for them to shout, "Ebert, Noske, Scheidemann," adding to these names the most approbious episodes. But after all, they are the fathers of our party. And Tonn added excitedly:

"We would be bad fellows indeed, if we agreed with this and fouled our own nest."

The sturdy fair-haired Pennevitz from Hemnetz, is also angry with the Communists. For instance, he said these Rote Fahne fellows have no idea how to behave. They published an open letter to the social-democratic leaders and gave them five days for a reply. But even before these five days had elapsed, the Rote Fahne in its impatience began to slam the addressees of the open letter.

"And then . . ." said the German in confusion, "there is such a great deal of talk in our country that our Communists are under Moscow rule. Such is also written about you, Comrade Zinoviev."

The whole orange chamber, including its permanent occupier laughed long and loud, and Pennevitz blushing up to the eyes, finds salvation only in Zinoviev's reassuring smile.

THE serious and excited Meihert of Dortmund, also endeavors as a working man to find a common language with the Communists and finds it very difficult. His accusation against the German Communist Party is that in the political struggle it does not differentiate between social-democratic leaders and the rank and file of that party. There is a vast difference between them. They must be approached differently.

Meinhert also indulged in reminiscences of frustrated hopes and joys, he is a Saxon. What a pity it was that the workers' and peasants' government did not materialize in Saxony. On that occasion the Communists co-operated, and yet it did not come off.

And the guests went on talking. How extremely interesting was this talk between the hated president of the execrable Comintern and the vile compromisers. Can it be an augury of international working class solidarity?

Orange Chamber Secrets Are Out!

The mysterious Zinoviev disclosed so simply and in such a matter of fact manner the great secrets of the orange chamber. What would the chroniclers of The Daily Mail not have given to penetrate this chamber and to listen. Only one such meeting was worth the long journey which the German delegates had made.

THERE were secrets and such secrets. They were worth hearing altho the Comintern never made a secret of them. It was only a matter of taking out the cotton wool which had been plugged into their ears by the bourgeois press and of listening to the serious, bitter and joyous truth of the historical progress of the proletariat.

"You want to know if we recognize the mistakes of the German Communists? Of course we do, just as we recognize our own mistakes. The shortcomings and mistakes past and present of the German Communist Party are severely criticised by us, and we will go on criticising them, but there are mistakes and mistakes. Let us take for instance, that mistake made by the German social-democrats in 1914. What have you to say about that?"

Their Part in New Wars.

In reply there were lowered heads, sighs and mournful acquiescence.

"Now, tell me quite openly, will the social-democrats repeat their July conduct on the occasion of the new war? That that war is not far distant is fairly obvious."

This very simple and quite ordinary question made all those present flare up. Some jumped to their feet. Others fidgeted on their chairs and others again were stung as if by a whip. There were cries: "Of course! On no account whatever! Without any doubt! One cannot predict as yet!"

The idylically calm and smiling face of the host brot calm into the excited crowd of his guests. He said: "There is no reason to be excited. Augury and prophecies are not required, all that is needed is a Marxist method, a good memory and a capacity to observe what is going on."

ARE not the French socialists supporting just now a very real war which is carried on under our very eyes, and in which almost half the French army participates? They support this ultra-colonial, predatory war in Morocco!

"And what about the 1918 revolution in Germany? Another 'tiny' error of the German mensheviks. Germany bore already the name of a socialist republic, was covered with a thick network of soldiers' and workers' councils. It was the social-democrats who liquidated these councils, who throttled the already accomplished revolution, who inflicted on it a defeat worse than the defeat of the Paris commune. Does such an historic affair bear comparison with the very coarse caricature of the social-democrats in the Rote Fahne?

"And the famous collaboration in Saxony? It did not come to an end somehow, but because the social-democrats sent 'just at the moment' armed forces from Berlin to Dresden.

"There are many secrets in the Comintern and in life in general. The question is, what is to be considered a secret.

Proud of Our Aim.

"YOU would like to ascertain if Moscow exercises influence on the German Party. Of course, it does. We acknowledge openly that thru the Comintern we are building up the world party of the working class. Have you never heard of it? In that case listen. We can maintain that up till now our cause has been a 25 per cent success. We are convinced that a 100 per cent success will be achieved. We do not try to conceal the establishment of a world Communist Party with one leading center. This is a thing we are proud of. It is our historic task. You would like to know the magnitude of Russian influence on the Communist movement thruout the world. This influence is, of course, considerable. There are 33 members in the executive committee of the Comintern, and only four of them are Russian. Not so long ago a foreigner expressed great surprise when he heard of such correlation. He was even annoyed and wanted to know why we keep silent on this matter. There is no necessity for us to proclaim what was published in all our papers in the ordinary way. No blame attaches to us. On the contrary, we deserve commendation and respect if the four Russians on the executive committee carry more weight than all the others. It is but natural that the Russian party has acquired this weight as it is the leader of the only victorious and actual revolution in the world."

They Enjoy Listening.

THERE were many more questions and everyone of them had to do with either a great or a little secret. The German social-democrats listened eagerly and Zinoviev disclosed with the greatest ease and readiness all the "secrets" of the Comintern. But the surprising thing was that the new listeners from another camp were not disillusioned, but carried away by this calm turning over of the pages of the great book of Leninism.

It was past midnight and the visitors were still in the orange chamber. Thru the open window floated from somewhere out of the rainy dark the fresh joyous singing of the Kremlin military students. The guests from a foreign country, from the enemy camp, did not feel inclined to go, they felt at home. . . . Will this feeling be fleeting or lasting? They made arrangements to meet again. Will they meet only once more? If you ask them, they will be silent and thotful.

A CALL TO ACTION!

Every member of the Workers Party, every lover and supporter of the first workers' republic, Soviet Rusia, has been appealed to to join in the the big drive for the defense of the Soviet Union and to arouse the American workers to the new dangers confronting the Soviet Union and make them understand that the fight for the Soviet Union is a fight for themselves.

A leaflet, "DEFEND THE WORKERS' AND PEASANTS' GOVERNMENT OF RUSSIA" will do that. This leaflet must be distributed, a million at least. So far we have received orders for 255,500. That is not enough. Less than 1,000,000 will not do.

Has your branch ordered their quota? Have you, reader of the DAILY WORKER, ordered your supply? Let us cover every shop and factory and others places where the working class is employed with the distribution of this leaflet. Send your order to the National Office, Workers Party, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill. Price in lots of 10,000 or more, $1.50. In lots less than that, $2.00 per thousand. Order at once. Cash with orders.

GENERAL DUTOV'S ACT OF MERCY

By L. LAYFULINA.

NOTE—This episode is taken from real life.

In 1919, in Orenburg the wife of the Commissary of Justice Burslatzev, who was shot was also sentenced to death although she was a non-party woman. The only charge against her was: wife of the commissary of justice. Her husband's parents petitioned for mercy, pointing out that she was pregnant and that by sentencing her to death, a death sentence was also passed on an unborn human being. The decision rested with the head of the army administration, General Dutov, his decision in connection with this petition was: Sentence to be carried out after the birth of the child.

I.

THE old woman's face bore an expression eloquent either of hatred or of love. The wind was merciless in its force driving blinding dust into her eyes, and, as if mockingly played havoc with her new black Sunday skirt and with the ends of her shawl.

She remained standing at the corner, her eyes fixed on a long building flanked by two sentry boxes and their despicable sentries. The street lay between her and the house. But the old woman was not concerned with the traffic of this street. People walked, drove, laughed, hurried, talked or were silent—she saw them as in a mist.

A YOUNG red-cheeked man in officer's uniform passed her. He looked at the old woman, his lips twitched as if in annoyance, he looked round and then approached her. The old woman was startled, and turned her inflamed eyes from the house towards him.

He asked awkwardly:

"You are the mother of Commissar B?"

THE old woman made a movement as tho roused from sleep. A smile of abject and painful supplication distorted her face. Her eyes were like those of a dog begging a favor. She made one low obeisance after the other.

"I am. . . his mother. . . yes, yes, sir. . I am his mother. . ."

THE officer avoided meeting the old woman's eyes. It seems as if he could not meet her gaze. He recalled how three days ago this old woman and her husband had been to see him. She had thrown herself at his feet, and had wanted to kiss his officer's boot. And the old man had stood with his head bent and said imploringly over and over again:

"The only son sir, our only son, we are christians. . . We did everything we could for him, educated him and even went without food to be able to do so."

THERE was a dull expression on the old man's face and he repeated the same words over and over again: "We did everything we could for him." The officer thought then: "He seems to be worrying more about his sacrifices than about his son."

The officer was counsel for the defense at the courtmartial. He had promised to do the best for their son just to get rid of them. He wast well-aware that they shoot without trial. "The sentence has already been carried out," and yet the old woman is watching General Dutov's house, what for? And then it struck him that the two old people were dressed in their Sunday clothes.

This brought the following picture before his mind's eye: These "christian" people had put on their best clothes, not to offend the eye of the high and mighty, they had gone to the court, to the generals and colonels in their homes, to the Zemstvo (country-estates), the party committees, in fact every where where admittance could be gained. They humiliated themselves, they supplicated for their son. This last and fruitless humiliation filled the cup of their life long humiliations, the officer had a sudden choking sensation in his throat.

THE officer shook his head. He was brought up in an intellectual family: had heard much about humaneness. This whole affair stirred him deeply and he was worried.

"Why is she outside General Dutov's house?" The old woman told him herself, she said: "My son has left a wife, and she is too to be shot. . . they told me and my old man. Only think, sir, she is not yet nineteen . . . Mishenka was in his 25th year, and she is but nineteen. It is not her fault that he was a commissary. Just think of it—only 19 years old."

THE officer did not know what to say. After a long pause, he said: "It is dreadful but what can you do, try to submit to it: she is the wife of your son, not your daughter."

"For Christ's sake, sir, do something for her. . . I have never seen her. Mishenka married her in town . . . It is not so much for her that I am asking mercy, but for the child. She is pregnant. She is soon to give birth to a child. Do not shoot her, let her live for her child."

"BUT you see. . . Laws must be observed. . ."

"Think of it sir, she is only 19. I have been told that she is non-party. She is with child, sir. . . Misha's child. . . She shed no tears, but her supplicant voice was like a sob.

The officer's lips twitched, he frowned and asked:

"But what do you want?"

"I want to present a petition to General Dutov. I was told that he can save her, altho sentence has been passed. They will not let me see him. I have been waiting for him for three days. If he comes out of his house I will throw myself at his feet. Yesterday he came out, but I was not quick enough, was afraid of the soldiers. He went off somewhere in his motor car. It is difficult to gain admission to such people they are so well-guarded. . ."

THE officer hesitated and then said: "You will not gain admittance to the general. Give me your petition, I will deliver it to him." The old woman positively trembled with grateful excitement, she took a big sheet of paper from her bosom and gave it to the officer.

II.

PERHAPS the powerful and healthy cry—"I want to live," had been stifled, for she could not hear its voice any longer. She had grown indifferent; it seemed as tho she had lived and suffered 70 years, not 19. She could only feel the heavy burden she was carrying, and only thought tortured her: to lie down and be comfortable. Yesterday, she was beside herself, she had cried and sobbed. They had given her General Dutov's decision. In answer to her petition to let her live for the sake of her child, the general had written: "Sentence to be carried out after the birth of the child."

She did not know any details, but the general had said: "like father, like son, but we are cultured people, and can allow the child to live."

SHE did not know this, but she knew something which did not trouble the general. A child whose mother suffered mental agony whilst carrying it, a child born in prison cannot have a long lease on life. Together with Dutov's resolution she had received news that Michael's father had had a stroke. The old woman is still alive, but how long can she last, after all this trouble? Who wants the child, why should it live? What does it all matter? She had no tender feelings, nor pity for the unborn child. General Dutov wished to preserve its life, but she will not be there. She will be shot, but what of it? Her only thought was to lie down somewhere comfortably. If she could only sleep, but sleep would not come. Suddenly she remembered a sentence in the letter which Michael had written just before he died.

"It pains me that you are still a mere girl with no experience of life which gives courage. You have not yet found your place in the world, and I have brought about your ruin. Will you find consolation in the thought that we are right . . ." Just now her mind is vacant, ruin seems to be everywhere. All of a sudden a fierce feeling of hatred takes possession of her. Such as she are not forgiven. They have made the child the executioner of the mother. As soon as it is born, she will be executed . . . This thought electrified her. Her eyes began to take note of the dirty walls of the solitary confinement cell, the window with the iron grating, she heard the heavy lagging foot steps in the passage. This is her last abode. As soon as she gives birth to the child, she will be killed. The child was stirring in her vomb. It was as if the unwilling executioner was knocking, was reminding her of his presence. She felt a choking sensation in her throat, but she could not cry. Suddenly, an unexpected wave of tenderness took possession of her.

"My child . . . . our child . . . It will be born and someone will tell it how it had tormented its mother It will have only delayed the inevitable end, will have only prolonged her agony."

AND then a vain hope came to her. Perhaps they will come . . . Our people will come and will drive the others away . . . . But hope soon deserted her again: "No, I will not live to see it, my hour is near, news from outside is bad."

She felt again the whole weight of the burden she was carrying. She threw herself face downwards on her bed. If she could, she would crush it so, that it could not move. It carries death with it. Why doesn't the end come at once? And she writhed in agony and fierce hatred:

"DAMNATION . . . damnation . . ." But whom was she cursing? She did not know. Probably she was cursing both, the general and the child. Dutov's act of mercy had robbed her of her last joy—the joy of motherhood.

STATISTICAL BACKGROUND OF THE AGRARIAN QUESTION IN THE U. S.

Number of farmers' automobiles, 110,600.

Approximate number of farmers in each category of our classification would be (in round numbers):

Workers	260,000
Poor farmers	41,000
Middle farmers	94,000
Well-to-do farmers	103,000
Total	498,000

Conclusion.

THE foregoing figures, which are indeed only rough approximations of the social and economic stratification of the agrarian producers, are yet of great value as the approach to a more exact estimate to be obtained when more information is available. At the same time they give a picture, which for general purposes of estimating the fundamental forces in agriculture and their direction of development, is entirely sound as a working basis. Some of the more important aspects of this will be discussed in another article.

For the purposes of this second article, we may sum up with a recapitulation of the figures by divisions, which give approximately the same numerical relations between the classification as that obtained in the first article dealing with agriculture as a whole.

Roumanian Capitalism Tortures Thousands

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Austria, Oct. 18. — Max Goldstein is dead, a victim of the white terror of the Roumanian monarchy and bourgeoisie, whose leaders are the Bratiano brothers, ruthless dictators supported by the powerful landlords.

Max Goldstein is dead. To call the attention of the world to the terrible torture chambers of white guard Roumania, he entered upon a hunger strike more than 25 days ago. Today his corpse in the Jourdan prison at Doftan, Roumania, calls the labor movement of the world to join the protes for which he gave his life.

Sentenced to Life in Prison.

Max Goldstein was a Communist and as such he labored for the emancipation of the Roumanian workers and peasants from the ruthless exploitation of the capitalists and landlords.

For this he was arrested and sentenced after a farcial trial, to imprisonment for life. His sentence has expired. But his release* by death calls aloud to the world proletariat to witness the tortures endured by the workers and peasants of Roumania under the rule of Romulus Voinescu, head of the dreaded "Siguranza," an institution patterned after the old czarist "Ochrana" and equal to the Spanish inquistion in its barbarities.

A White Terror Institution.

The Siguranza is a "state within a state," maintaining a huge apparatus of officials, a most powerful authorityl with a budget from the government far exceeding the sum given to the ministry of education.

The Siguranza brushes aside even the bourgeois laws, and has spread a whole network of spies over the country, set up literal torture chambers, wherein the most ghastly inhumanities are visited upon any who are even suspected of being Communists or revolutionaries.

Thousands Tortured.

So terrible have been the acts of the siguranza that human elements of the bourgeoisie are led to protest. C. C. Costa-Foru, secretary of the Roumanian league of human rights, a bourgeois and former hinister of government of the conservative party, has published a book in Vienna, Austria, exposing the torture chambers.

A. F. OF L. CONVENTION URGES CONGRESS TO PROBE PHONE TRUST

ATLANTIC CITY, October 18.—A resoution was unanimously adopted urging a congressional investigation of the Bell Telephone system. "This system," said the resolution, "controls the entire means of telephone communication of the nation. This monopolistic grip on a vital public service has become, year by year, more arrogant, more subversive of the rights of the people and more deterimental to the progress and welfare of the country."

RAIL WORKERS GO ON STRIKE AT HAGERSTOWN

500 Workers Walk Out on Western Maryland

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Oct. 18.—Following an almost unanimous strike vote, 500 engineers, firemen and hostlers of the Western Maryland railroad went on strike to force the company to grant the wage increase awarded by the United States railroad labor board.

The brotherhood chiefs at Hagerstown, the chief operating center of the road, declared that all but three of their membership walked out, tying up all trains. Not a freight train was able to move out of Hagerstown this morning. A few passenger trains manned by scabs are all that have been able to leave the city. Picket lines are thrown around the roundhouses and attempts are being made to make the strike 100 per cent effective.

This strike comes following a long series of negotiations between the union and the rail heads over the award granted the rail workers by the United States railroad labor board.

The company attempted to get the men to agree to forfeiting a part of the wage increase and also some of the union conditions which were won by the men.

When the bosses refused to give the workers the wage increase, a strike vote was carried on. The company then told the workers that each employe of the road must sign an agreement, agreeing to work under the conditions proposed by the road under the present wage scale. The men refused to sign the agreement and a strike followede.

LOCARNO - - -

By H. M. Wicks

AFRAID to report the results of Locarno a dismal failure and face the opposition in their home countries, the statesmen of the nations participating in the Locarno conference accepted a thing of shreds and patches; a miserable compromise that leaves everything about as it was before. With loud acclaim they hailed its opening the salvation of the world. It was to be an achievement that was to guarantee security forever to the chosen nations of the world. Before its final session they realized that it can scarcely be utilized as security for their own jobs.

No matter what their opinions regarding its prospects might have been as they journeyed to Locarno, the first session disclosed the basic antagonisms that doomed it to failure. But Austin Chamberlain had assured Great Britain that this was to be great achievement of the tory government, the triumph of the ages. If the conference failed the government was in danger. Aristide Briand, as the Big Bertha of the Painleve government, had to make a gesture toward lifting the heavy burden of taxation by reducing the armed forces in the occupational areas. Stresemann and Luther were forced to keep their eyes upon the political situation at home and, like the agents of the other powers, help to devise some sort of compact that would make it appear that they lost nothing and stood to gain something.

THE conference was called for a very definite and specific purpose. It was precisely what its name implied, a "security" conference. To guarantee the perpetuity of capitalism. For capitalism to continue to thrive two things were desirable:

1 Soviet Russia, embracing a sixth of the world's inhabitable territory, the outpost of the world revolution, is a standing challenge to capitalism. Its vast resources are badly needed for the rebuilding of the shattered industries of Europe. To gain access to those resources on Soviet terms means to strengthen this formidable enemy of capitalism. Hence the security conference aimed to create a powerful anti-Soviet bloc preparatory to an armed assault upon Russia.

2 The vast colonial empires of the victorious nations are in ferment. The ferocious conflict in Morocco, the symptoms of colonial resentment that flare up in assassinations and other acts of violence against the domination of the "civilized nations," clearly indicate a menacing situation that will soon require all the armed strength that can be mobilized to hold them in leash. The conference aimed to settle for the time being the disputes between the imperialist nations of Europe so that they could pursue their colonial conquests with increased vigor.

Neither of these things can be realized upon the basis of the achievements of the conference.

THE first day's session, lasting but a half hour, was sufficient to bring out in bold relief the real conflict. It arose over the question of guarantees for the eastern frontier of Germany. The Versailles treaty had arbitrarily shaved off portions of Germany and attached them to Poland and the Czech-Slovakian state, both dominated by French and American finance capital. Chamberlain of England supported the claim of Briand, of France, that these boundaries remain forever inviolate and that France itself be the guarantor of them.

This claim Germany hotly resented. In order to strengthen her case at the conference table France called in the representatives of the two border states concerned with eastern frontiers. But the German representatives, Foreign Minister Stresemann and Chancellor Luther, were adamant.

THE compromise finally accepted, when the attitude of the Germans threatened to wreck the conference, was that the eastern boundary lines of Germany, affecting Poland and Czecho-Slovakia would be subject to arbitration, with the league to act as arbiter. In order to conceal the defeat on this score, the versatile Briand signed separate documents with Poland and Czecho-Slovakia reaffirming the interest (?) of France in those nations and promising to aid them in every way possible.

Another provision is that Germany is to enter the league of nations and be given a permanent seat in the council. There are now four permanent seats in the league—Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan. When Germany joins it makes a fifth. There are six non-permanent seats, at present filled by Belgium, Spain, Sweden, Czecho-Slovakia, Brazil and Uruguay. These seats are filled by elections at the assembly of the league of nations. No decision can be made unless it is unanimous.

Since both France and Germany occupy permanent seats it is plain that the league council will never reach an agreement on the question of the eastern frontier of Germany, without causing a break by unseating one of the contestants.

On the western frontier of Germany the conference decided to maintain a neutralized zone about 30 miles wide along the Rhine frontier. This part of the compact is nothing new as it simply repeats the terms of articles 42 and 43 of the treaty of Versailles, which read:

> Article 42. Germany is forbidden to maintain or construct any fortifications either on the left bank of the Rhine or on the right bank to the west of a line drawn fifty kilometers to the east of the Rhine.
> Article 43. In the area defined above the maintenance and the assembly of armed forces, either permanently or temporarily, and military manouvers of any kind, as well as the upkeep of all permanent works for mobilization are in the same way forbidden.

England and Italy are to be joint guarantors of the Rhine pact, thus agreeing to protect either France or Germany against aggression by the other.

WHEN the entry of Germany into the league was under discussion the German foreign minister objected to the provisions of article 16 of the league covenant. This article provides that one power has the right to march armies over the territory of a second power in case any third member is attacked. The Germans feared further aggression by France and were justifiably suspicious that through intrigues with Poland they could incite border disturbances which would furnish an excuse for French troops to swarm over German territory. Their length of stay would depend upon the duration, of the "emergency."

The reason for the press striving to leave article 16 as it is, was the desire of France to have unhampered passage through Germany so that the military forces of that nation could unite with the Polish army, one of the largest in Europe, for the purpose of a military drive against Soviet Russia.

Germany, in her own interests, bitterly opposed entering the league until the objectionable article 16 was modified. This prolonged the deadlock that gripped the conference for nearly a week. The representatives of the entente had no power to change the covenant of the league, but they finally agreed to use their influence and votes in the league council to change the objectionable parts of the article. The main objective of the conference thereby came to naught.

PREMIER Painleive of France acclaims October 16, the date of the signing of the pact by the representatives of the powers "a historic date." He immediately dispatched congratulations to Aristide Briand, his foreign minister.

A close examination of the substance of the pact, discloses the fact that France least of all has reason to congratulate herself. It means a long step in the direction of complete defeat of her aspirations at the close

N. Y. POLICE AID HORTHY TERROR; ARREST PICKETS OF HUNGARIAN CONSULATE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Fifteen pickets participating in a demonstration against the new outbreak of the Hungarian white terror were arrested yesterday before the Hungarian consulate.

The demonstration was a part of the world-wide protest that is rising against the grim and ghastly preparations by the bloody Horthy government for new wholesale murders against the flower of the working class. Banners demanding freedom for Matthias Rakoski, a commissar of the short-lived Hungarian Soviet government, with a brilliant record as a revolutionist, who is slated to die at the hands of Horthy, were carried in the demonstration.

Other banners demanded liberation of other workers to be tried before an extraordinary court martial.

Consul Feigns Ignorance

The picketing was under the direction of the International Labor Defense and a committee was selected to enter the consulate and protest to the consul. He feigned ignorance of the terror in Hungary, but finally admitted that he considered it necessary to suppress the Bolsheviks.

Carry Defiant Banners

Among the banners carried before the consulate which is located in the heart of the Wall Street section, at Morris street, was one reading: "Horthy White Government Is Red With Workers Blood." Another was a direct slap at the vultures of Wall Street and defiantly proclaimed "Wall Street Finances Horthy; On Wall Street Lies the Blood Guilt." Many banners bore the slogan "Rakosi Shall Not Die!"

Arrests Follow Interview

The arrests of the pickets followed the interview with the New York agent of Horthy. The charge was disorderly conduct and the prisoners were held in jail for night court.

Vast crowds gathered and expressed in no uncertain terms their indignation at the arrests. The denizens of Wall Street seemed stunned by the events and hovered in small groups at a safe distance watching the activities of the pickets and the police.

In spite of the arrests the New York branch of the International Labor Defense announces that picketing will continue until the detestable government of Horthy is forced to recede from its murderous designs on the workers of that hapless nation that has been for years in the bloody clutches of a terror directed from Wall Street.

After the arrests a tremendous demonstration against the New York police aiding the upholders of the Hungarian terror was held, attended by thousands of workers as they poured out of the shops at noon. The meeting was addressed by P. Pascal Cosgrive of the Shoe Workers' Union, E. Gardes representing Hungarian Workers organization, J. O. Bentall of the International Labor Defense, and Ben Gitlow, candidate for mayor of the city of New York.

The thousands of workers present applauded the denunciation and exposure of Horthy and endorsed the demands for freedom of Rakosi and the other victims of the terror.

Resolutions unanimously adopted demanded immediate freedom of the working class leaders and called for emptying the Horthy jails of imprisoned workers.

Further meetings are to be arranged. Resolutions also were adopted calling upon unions to act in defense of workers in that benighted nation. Already many unions have protested to the state department at Washington.

Thousands of workers also attended the International Labor Defense ball held Saturday night where resolutions were adopted protesting against the merciless persecutions of Hungarian workers.

STRIKERS FORCE 10 PCT. REDUCTION IN PANAMA RENTS FROM LANDLORDS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.— From Panama the war department has received word that altho American troops "restored order" during the rent strike in Panama City at the request of the president of Panama, the landlords were forced by the strikers to reduce rentals ten per cent.

AMERICAN AGENT BLAZING TRAIL IN BUKHAREST

New Ambassador Has Long and Odious Record

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BUCHAREST, Roumania, Oct. 18.—While the leaders of the working class are being tortured to death in the dungeons of the Roumanian terror, the Roumanian economic association is entertaining William Smith Culbertson, representative of American imperialism, who is the new United States minister to Bucharest. At a banquet Thursday night fifty agents of the terror, dubbed by the capitalist press "leading Roumanian citizens," attended in honor of Culbertson. Since taking his post here Mr. Culbertson is announced to have studied Roumania's possibilities as an outlet for American goods and as a field for investment of American capital. The question of settlement of Roumania's war debt to the United States is involved in the speculations and the coming of Culbertson is unquestionably a move to bring this nation and its resources under the domination of Wall Street.

A Good and Faithful Servant.

William Smith Culbertson has a long record in the United States as the agent of the government in many shady economic and political maneuvers. He was the examiner for the United States tariff board and prepared the first volume of its report on the wool tariff for the Taft government in 1910-12, which recommended high protective rates for the woolen trust. Under Woodrow Wilson he was a member of the federal trade commission, studying tariffs and trade conditions in Brazil, Uruguay, Argentinia, Chile, Peru and Panama, an advance man for the armed forces of the Unietd States, and using his position as agent of the government to blaze the trail for deeper financial penetration by American finance and capital of South America. Appointed by Wilson to a post of the federal trade commission for a term of 12 years he served under Harding as vice-chairman of that commission. At intervals he has lectured before student bodies of American colleges on "commercial treaties and policies."

He is a republican in politics, a member of the Presbyterian church which follows the teachings of the maniac, John Calvin, who burned Servetius at the stake for disagreeing with him on biblical interpretation; a shining light in the Rotary club. He hails from Emporia, Kansas, whose leading citizen is the clownish newspaper editor, William Allen White. By birth, education, training and environment he is eminently fitted to play his present role of vassal of American imperialism.

Czechs Complete Arrangements for Funding War Debt

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Czecho-Slovakia has completed arrangements at the United States treasury department for funding its war debt to the United States.

The total of the debt, over which there had been some bickering between the Czech and American debt commissions, was set at $115,000,000.

NEEDLE TRADES SHOULD LIVE UP TO TRADITIONS

Revolutionary Past Not to Be Forgotten

By BERT MILLER.

TWENTY-FIVE years ago thousands of workers from Russia, Austria and the southeastern sections of Europe swarmed to this country in search of better conditions. They fled from the cruel persecutions of czarism and the crowded tyrants of Europe. They brot with them the highest revolutionary ideals and aspirations. Many of them came to New York City and entered the garment trades.

Instead of the promised land, the paradise which they had hoped for, they were met here by the sweat shop and the garment boss. Long hours and low wages and unsanitary conditions was their lot but they determined to get rid of these intolerable conditions. They determined to establish decent conditions in the garment trades. They resolved to organize.

The needle workers established their unions to fight against the sweat shop owners. They waged a brave, victorious fight against the biggest odds and established far-reaching reforms in the industry. They established the eight hour day and the forty-hour week. They did away with the unsanitary sweat shop and established union control over the industry. Fines and discrimination by the bosses was abolished.

Even in these early years when the labor movement of the United States was politically far more backward than it is today the needle trade workers established their union on the basis of the class struggle and demanded the abolition of the capitalist system and the establishment of a socialist commonwealth.

TODAY the needle workers face a critical situation again. The reactionary officials have adopted a policy of class collaboration which is resulting in defeat after defeat for the workers. Slowly but surely the garment manufacturers are increasing their strength. They are making steady inroads upon the garment workers' unions and the rights which have been won by the workers after years of organization and struggle. All these rights are in danger today. The reactionary officials are disgracing the revolutionary traditions of the garment unions by adopting a policy of class collaboration on the political field. They are entering into open partnership with the agents of the capitalist class in the republican and democratic parties.

In this critical hour the needle trade workers must show once more the revolutionary spirit for which they have won enviable place in the American labor movement. They have already repudiated their false leadership. They are establishing a leadership which really expresses the wishes of the rank and file. They must follow the same course on the political field. They must abandon completely the socialist party, the party of class collaborationists, which has betrayed them and must support the only party which is working in the interests of labor in the present election campaign—the only party which advocates the unity of labor's forces on the political field—a united labor ticket and a labor party. The needle workers must support the Workers Party in the present election campaign.

The International Tailoring Co. Strike - - By Ben Gitlow

THE International Tailoring Co. has distributed scab printed circulars thruout the city of New York offering $10.00 reward for the arrest and conviction of workers guilty of committing violent and illegal acts against the scabs working for the International Tailoring Co. Not one dollar of the $10.00 has been paid out The circular was isued on August 7th, 1925.

On August 12th Justice Thomas W. Churchill of the New York supreme court issued one of the most sweeping injunctions against the strikers of the International Tailoring Co. and their organization, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. The injunction issued and the motion, which was signed by Justice Churchill making it permanent, contains the following declaration by this eminent capitalist judge, "I dislike to interfere by injunction in an industrial dispute, but where violence is proved all other considerations must be subordinated to its suppression."

Wealthiest Company in Clothing Industry.

THE International Tailoring Co. is one of the welthiest men's clothing manufacturing concerns in the United States. It does millions of dollars worth of business a year. It has gigantic factories in New York and Chicago. It has decided to take up the fight against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. It is aided in its fight by the other manufacturers in the industry, and by the United Garment Workers of America, the scabbing organization of the American Federation of Labor, which has signed an agreement with the concern to supply it with strikebreakers during the strike.

The International Tailoring Co. in its war against the Amalgamated has recruited the worst elements of the underworld to terrorize the workers into submission. The fight of the International Tailoring Co. is a fight to lower wages, increase hours, speed-up production and to lower the standards of living of the workers. It can only do that effectively by smashing the strike and thus giving an impetus to the move of the capitalists thruout the United States to smash the organizations of the workers. The strike against the International Tailoring Co. is a life and death struggle for the Amalgamated. The injunction was issued for the express purpose, not to prevent violence because the International Tailoring Co. can make a display of violence without fear of court interference, but for the purpose of making it impossible for the workers to conduct their strike effectively so that the strike shall be lost and the opportunity given to the manufacturers together with the scab United Garment Workers Union to smash the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

Friend of Labor.

WHEN Churchill ran for election he was endorsed as a friend of labor by the Central Trades and Labor Council. Churchill true to the capitalist class he represents and serves, now comes to the asistance of the International Tailoring Co. and stabs the striking clothing workers in the back with the injuction which he says he dislikes so much to issue but nevertheless issues. The International Tailoring Co. injunction is an expression of government by injunction against the working class.

The International Tailoring Co. injunction, because it was issued by a so-called friend of labor, is also proof of the bankruptcy and treacherous effect of the policy of the reactionaries in the unions to support as friends of labor capitalist politicians of the republican and democratic parties. It is a warning to all workers that the workers as a class must unify their power on the political field against the capitalist politicians thru the organization of a labor party. Only by the workers carrying on an independent political fight for power against the capitalist parties can the workers hope to end government by injunction.

Defy Injunction.

TO recognize such an injunction as that issued to the International Tailoring Co. is to give up without a struggle those conditions which the workers have made valiant struggles to obtain. The workers must picket the International Tailoring Co. en masse. They must demonstrate to the whole capitalist class that they will not tolerate government by injunction and that they will defy every injunction issued to defeat the workers in their struggle for more human conditions.

If the officials in the Amalgamated are not prepared to make such a militant fight of the rank and file against the injunction then the left wing in the Amalgamated must make such a fight. In a militant defiance by the strikers of the Churchill injunction, the workers will get ful support and assistance of the Workers (Communist) Party, because the Workers (Communist) Party is the party of workers and fully realizes the menace of Judge Churchill's order against the workers.

Preserve Union!

The strike of the Amalgamated against the International Tailoring Co. is a strike to preserve the union. This strike must receive the full support of all workers. The Communists and the left wing in the labor movement do not look upon this strike as a thing separate from the struggle of all the workers in the United States against the open shop. The Communists and the left wing will do everything in their power to help the strike to a successful conclusion.

The defeat of the International Tailoring Co. strikers is the victory for the open shoppers, the ecab United Garment Workers and all the enemies of the workers who are seeking to further impoverish and enslave the American workers—and a defeat for the entire working class.

Hillman Class Collaboration.

WE wish to point out that the present situation confronting the men's clothing workers in the International Tailoring Co. strike brings policies that have been persued by the Hillman administration in the Amalgamated. The policy of class collaboration consinstently followed by the Hillman administration has weakened the organization and strengthened the manufacturers. The Amalgamated has in the last few years failed to maintain conditions for the workers because it has abandoned completely the idea of militant rank and file struggles against the manufactures for better working conditions. The Hillman machine of the Amalgamated is conducting a war against the rank and file represented by the left wing.

In the face of the offensive by the manufacturers the Hillman administration persists in carrying on this war with the result that the organization is being disrupted. The left wing cannot give up its struggle to get the Rmalgamated to adopt a fighting policy, to unify its ranks and to get rid of the leadership that stands in the way of the workers controlling the organization in their own interests. Had the present leadership carried out a militant rank and file policy, had the present leadership of the Amalgamated vigorously attempted to organize all the workers in the industry, had the present general faith in the effectivenes sand willingness to lead mass general strikes of the workers for better conditions, then there would be no International strike now and the chaos, demoralization and intolerable conditions which the workers now suffer would not exist.

THE International strike demonstrates that the building up of a powerful organization that can effectively fight against the encroachments of the bosses and for the betterment of the conditions of the workers can only come when the rank and file adopts and supports the policies and program of the left wing. The left wing has the only policy by which to effectively fight injunctions and that is by mass violation, picketing the shops in defiance of the injunction.

The left wing has the only effective policy of fighting the so-called "friends of labor" and the capitalist political parties and that is by building a mighty labor party consisting of workers' organizations.

The left wing has the only policy of how to effectively fight to improve the workers' conditions and that is by rank an dfile mass struggles, by general strikes of amalgamated industrial unions against the bosses.

The Communists support the efforts of the left wing in the needle trades and all other unions. The Workers Party supports the fight of the left wing particularly in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, to make it a real militant fighting organization of the rank and file.

INSOLENT ACTION STIRS WRATH OF N. Y. WORKERS

By ELIAS MARLES
(Special to The Daily Worker)

The dismay of the first moment over the barring of Benjamin Gitlow from the ballot has given way to widespread indignation among the workers of New York City. The insolent action of the election board in barring the candidacy of Gitlow, Workers Party candidate for mayor in the coming municipal elections when the requisite number of signatures had been secured on the petitions, and all the formalities had been complied with, knows no parallel anywhere. It has happened before that Communist candidates who have been elected have been unseated, but the barring of a candidate from the ballot is practically unheard of. It is an insult to the workers of the great metropolis, it is proof once more that the workers have no rights, that their socalled rights are trampled upon at will by the capitalists and the capitalist government.

The reason given for this action is that Gitlow is a felon, because he has been in jail. This is the way they are trying to cover up their action. One who has given a life-time to fighting in the cause of the working class is classed with any common criminal and treated as one. The real reason for this measure is that Gitlow is hated because he carries the message of Communism, because there is danger that he may enlighten the workers and snatch them out of the hands of wily capitalist politicians and labor fakers who are now leading them.

Many Protest Meetings

Meeting after meeting of protest is being held following the startling news. The socialist party which pretends to fight for the constitution and the rights of workers is silent as it is always silent when oppressive measures are taken by the capitalist government against the workers. But the workers themselves are not silent, and many who up to now have followed the socialist party are disgusted with the betrayers and are pledging their support to the Workers Party.

Help! Help! The Communists Are Coming!

By SAM LIPTZIN.

THE workers who want to measure the might and influence that the Workers Party has developed in the working masses can measure it in terms of the abuse hurled at the Communists by the government, the leaders of the American Federation of Labor, yellow socialists, etc.

These three forces, united in their battle against Communism, know very well that politically America is still safe from the rebels. The corrupt machine will not let Comrades Foster and Gitlow into the White House so easily because of a mere matter of votes. Their whole fright is caused by the economic situation. It is this that makes them realize that their end is coming.

The Workers Party, consisting of workers, has felt the need and suffering of the working masses and planting itself in the hearts of the toilers in shop and mine is finding a solution for their problems. This is why the government and its lackeys are getting so panicky that they have started attacks against the Communists.

TAKE for instance the A. F. of L. convention. When it came to the important workers' problems such as unemployment, injunctions, child labor, reduction of wages, etc., these were forgotten or treated in fake resolutions. But when the Communist question came up, everybody woke up. The mere resolution was not enuf. This was the most important issue of the convention. It is on this question, the fat-bellied lackeys concentrated their "minds and hearts." "The damnable Communists are interfering in their graft and crookedness, fighting their corrupt leadership and leading the workers towards militant struggles for their interests. Help! Help! What shall we do with the terrible Communists?"

Or, again, let us take the Amalgamated. It doesn't belong to the A. F. of L. For a while they tried their damnedest to win the favor of the Communists but as soon as the Communists let them know that in the Amalgamated there is also something rotten, then the Hillmans and the Schlossbergs joined the jazz band that makes the noise against Communism. Then they said, "You can talk about Communism but don't try to touch the union for it is our own private property."

Or, let us take the International Ladies' Garment oWrkers' Union where the yellows and the blacks combined together in a common crusade to tear the roots of Communism out of the hearts of the working masses. If the yellow gang had spent the thousands of dollars in a fight against the bosses that they spent on the fight on Communism, how many hundreds of shops would have been organized and how many workers would have bettered their conditions. But it is easier to fight Communist influence than to fight the bosses.

OR, take the socialist party. They lost their few teeth long ago, but they are still barking even tho they cannot bite, and they are barking not at capitalism but at the Workers (Communist) Party. Day in and day out, the yellow Forward prints sensational documents proving that the terribe Communists have organized a shop nucleus, that the terrible Communists have organized a meeting, that the terribe Communists have spoken to workers, that they are "interfering" in the unions; just as if we were hiding from them and as if we were ashamed of our activities on behalf of the workers. This work is our pride. If we could not help the workers in the shops, mines and unions, we would be as superfluous as the yellow socialists are to this earth.

The united trinity of socialists, A. F. of L. bureaucracy and the capitalist government are struggling against the Communists because they have opened the eyes of the workers politically and economically. The result of Communist work is seen in the re-building of the needle trades unions and the new fighting spirt developing within them. This is a good example of what can be done and the work has only started. If there are any who still do not understand the meaning of this struggle, they need only look at the united attack of the "holy trinity" against it and the victory of the lefts in the needle trades. The left wing is the leader of union struggle and the Workers Party is the vanguard of the working masses.

PRESSMEN APPLY FOR INJUNCTION AGAINST BERRY

To Restrain Henchmen From Lifting Label

Printing Pressmens' Union Local No. 3 has filed a petition for an injunction to restrain the Berry henchmen from molesting the members of the expelled local in shops having the Allied Printing Trades Council label.

The Berry servants have caused a letter to be sent from the Allied Printing Trades Council to the employers telling them that the newly organized local which is scabbing on the expelled local is the recognized union and that in order to keep the label, only members of that local may be employed.

International Vice-President Marks refused to discuss the question of the injunction with a DAILY WORKER reporter and stated that he had never demanded that the label be taken from the shops where members of the expelled local are employed.

"While we are in favor of the fight against Berry in the Pressmen's Union Local No. 3 of Chicago and in the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants Union, we are not in favor of the use of injunctions issued by capitalist courts," declared one the Printing Trades Progressive Committee national cammitteemen in an interview with a representative of the DAILY WORKER, "to carry on the fight against this reactionary outfit. In behalf of our committee, I can say that the idea of combatting Berry with injunctions is contrary to the principles enunciated by the left-wing in the printing traces."

The following letter sent by the Allied Printing Trades Council to the employers in the printing industry of Chicago and signed by William A. Lewis, a Berry henchman in the Web Pressmen's Union, is the evidence which gives the lie to the statement of Marks that neither he nor the International union has attempted to take the label out of the printing shops that employ members of the expelled union:

"To Label Offices,

"Gentlemen:

"You are hereby advised that Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 with offices located at 543 South Dearborn Street, is no longer affiliated with the Chicago Allied Printing Trades Council, in accordance with the laws of the International Allied Printing Trades Association, and this council, and is therefore not entitled to recognition in shops having a label license issued by this council.

"The Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union No. 3 affiliated with and subordinate to the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of North America, with offices located at 179 West Washington street, is affiliated with and recognized by the Chicago Allied Printing Trades Council in accordance with the law of the International Allied Printing Trades Association. This Local Union is entitled to all rights and recognition in shops having a label license with this council, to the same extent as any other local union which is affiliated with this council.

"The following rule is set forth from the label license for your further guidance:

That said party of the second part (firms) now employs and hereby agrees to employ and keep in its employ during the continuance of this agreement, in the composition, printing, binding, ruling, electrotypes, stereotypes and all other electrotyping matter, entering into printing and printing products, only members in good standing of unions affiliated with and represented in the party of the first part (council). . . . and such other unions as may hereafter become affiliated with and be represented in said party of the first part. (Council).

"Wishing you continued success, we are,

Fraternally yours,
Chicago Allied Printing Trades Council.
By W. A. Lewis, Secretary-Treasurer."

CHILEAN ARMY DICTATORSHIP IN TROUBLE?

Bright Election Idea Seems to Flivver

BUENOS AIRES, October 18.—Dispatches from Chile indicate that insurrectionary outbreaks have taken place. The army and navy official group which has been ruling Chile with an iron fist, yesterday allowed the following dispatch, evidently censored, to arrive here:

Censored News

"Nothing new. Troops continue to guard the moneda (government building). It is stated that this is simply a measure of precaution to avoid disorders. Official information says all measures necessary for maintenance of order and discipline will be taken. Admiral Schroeder, director general of the navy, arrived at noon."

An election is due to be held on October 24th. The military junta have a new and bright idea on preventing disorders during the election. It has issued orders that all parties agree upon one candidate. Of course, the junta expressed its opinion that this one candidate should be their choice, Senor Emiliano Figueroa Larrain.

A Fly in the Ointment

The bulk of the soldiery were supposed to fall in with the idea of their commanders and support Larrain. However, a ubiqutous army surgeon, Dr. Jose Salas, recently minister of public health, "complicated the situation" b yannouncing that he was a candidate against Larrain.

This has probably brought about the "disorders" so much dreaded by the military dictatorship, since Dr. Salas is appealing to the masses on a platform containing progressive and even radical ideas and his following among the workers are increasing in number.

THE FURRIERS' JOINT BOARD PROTESTS GITLOW'S REMOVAL.

GARMENT WORKERS' LOCAL No. 2 DEMANDS GITLOW'S REPLACEMENT.

DAVID RHYS WILLIAMS AND JAMES P. CANNON, PRINCIPAL SPEAKERS AT ANTI-HORTHY PROTEST MASS MEETING

Rev. David Rhys Williams, noted liberal and brother of the author of a book on the Russian revolution, will be one of the principal speakers at a mass meeting which will be held on next Tuesday evening, October 20, in Prudential Hall, corner of North Ave. and Halsted St., to protest against the latest murder orgy of the Horthy government in Hungary.

Mr. Williams is an excellent speaker and has always been willing to render aid in any cause for the welfare of the workers.

Another speaker whose ability to hold an audience is unsurpassed in the revolutionary movement is James P. Cannon, national secretary of the International Labor Defense, and member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party. Comrade Cannon is personally acquainted with Mathias Rakosi, the most prominent of the working class victims of Horthy's latest orgy.

R. Sauser of Hungary will give first hand information of the conditions in his native land. Other speakers may be announced later on. The case of Hungarian workers is attracting world-wide attention and radicals of many shades are interesting themselves in the movement to save them from the gallows.

BRITISH COMMUNISTS HELD FOR CONSPIRACY RELEASED UPON BAIL

LONDON, October 18.—Charges against the six arrested Communists, including Harry Pollitt and Albert Inkpin, Rose Campbell and others taken in the raid on the headquarters of the Communist Party and the National Minority Movement, were read in court yesterday.

Thomas Bell and Willie Gallagher were added to the six, making eight now arrested. These were selected by the Baldwin cabinet from a list of forty as the ones to prosecute.

The charge alleges conspiracy to publish seditious literature and are drawn under the mutiny act of 1739. 1739.

In spite of the supposed gravity of the offense and the campaign of "red scares" in the capitalist press, the bail was set at $250 each. This was furnished by Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of parliament and George Lansbury, labor member of parliament and publisher of a weekly paper. Great crowds of workers gathered outside the court to welcome the Communists with cheers and demonstrations of support.

FILIPINOS VIEW RUBBER AS BLOW TO INDEPENDENCE

Hope of Peaceful Liberation of Islands Vanishes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 18—American designs on the Philippine Islands as a fruitful field for the cultivation of crude rubber is viewed here as forecasting a long and bitter struggle for independence of these islands. For eighteen years a struggle has gone forward against American aggression and the effort to limit the influence of American investors has kept the public domain here largely uncultivated, awaiting the time the Philippines could obtain complete freedom and develop the resources thru native initiative.

Path Now Blocked.

Frequently the Washington government has appeared to be receptive toward the plea for freedom, but since the report of Congressman Robert L. Bacon, of New York, representing the rubber interests, that some of the islands are potential rubber producers, the change has been marked and it is believed here that Washington will never consent peacefully to the surrender of domination of the Philippines.

It is feared that the invasion of rubber means the abolition of the local legislative bodies and the substitution therefor of a federal administration directed by Washington.

Governor-General Leonard H. Wood openly expresses himself as favoring action by congress at Washington that will abolish the assembly elected to connect the internal policy of the islands.

Polish Barons Sell Tobacco Monopoly to Italian Bankers

ROME, Italy, Oct. 18.—The loan Poland has been seeking from the Italian Banca Commerciale is about to be signed.

Poland has borrowed 40,000,000 paper lire ($16,000,000) from the bank and now asks for 600,000,000 lire ($24,000,000) more, offering as securiyt the right to administer the Polish tobacco monopoly.

Poland in order to avoid having an economic dictator appointed either by the league of nations or the creditor nations, of whch France is the largest, to administer her financial affairs is selling her monopolies in order to raise funds to keep her vast army and spy system.

GITLOW SCORES NEW YORK CITY'S TAX LABOR LAWS

Communists Fight for Soviet Standards

By PAULINE ROGERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Ben Gitlow, candidate of the Workers Communist Party for mayor of New York City declared that the Communists were not out to maintain the existing New York standards for the protection of workers as the socialist party wants to do, but is out to achieve the standards of Soviet Russia.

"The socialists," declared Gitlow, "pledge themselves to maintain the New York standards; but we, the Workers Party say that the existing laws are very inadequate and do not meet the needs of the workers. Let us consider the so-called New York standards. First,—the workers' compensation laws do not cover all industries and employments in any state. There still remain many loop holes and low standards in the law. Clerks, professionals, farm hands and domestic servants are universally excluded. The law covers only 17 groups of 'hazardous employments' and only 19 of the most common occupational diseases.

"In case of injury, no compensation is paid the first week, and then the injured worker receives from 50 to 66 per cent of his salary. Besides this, workers meet constanly with unnecessary delay and unfairness in the settlement of claims.

"New York pays no health insurance to workers if their illness is not due to one of the 19 occupational diseases covered by the workmen's compensation law, and it has no system of insurance for the unemployed.

"Second, is the question of labor legislation for men. In New York, 75 per cent of the people employed are wage workers, and yet there are no laws limiting the number of hours a man may work, no minimum wage laws, no laws establishing paid vacations. There is a law requiring one day's rest in 7 but this law is weakened by many exceptions. There are codes of factory laws regarding dangerous machinery, elevators, fire-escapes, and poison gases, but the inspection is lax, and the laws are constantly violated. One quarter of our workers in New York are unemployed, and there is no law guaranteeing the worker a chance to earn his living.

"Third is the question of labor legislation for women. There is in New York, no minimum wage for women, there is no prohibition of night work, except between the hours of 12 p. m. and 6 a. m. No attempt is made to give women the same salary as men for the same work. There is a law demanding a minimum 9-hour day, for women, but violations of it are legion. One of the few protective measures for women is that physicians must report immediately all cases of occupational disease. But, where thousands of cases actually exist, only a few hundred are reported. Another law states that an employer should not employ a female sooner than 4 weeks after she has given birth to a child. There is no law granting her a leave of absence with pay however, and no provision made for day nurseries.

"We, the Workers Party repudiate all these meager measures, and pledge ourselves to attain the standards of Soviet Russia, where there is a minimum wage law for men and women, where the maximum day is 8 hours, and the night work lasts only 7 hours, where a 42 hour weekly rest is compulsory, where every worker after a year's service is entitled to a month's leave of absence with full pay where every citizen has the right to employment in his or her trade, where every worker for whom employment cannot be found is entitled to a subsidy from the unemployment insurance fund and where a sick or disabled worker receives the full pay of his group."

Barring of Gitlow

By AARON GROSS,

(Furriers' Joint Board Candidate for alderman, 29th district).

IN the barring of Ben Gitlow from the ballot in the New York City elections, we see a very good example of American "democracy" in action. In spite of all the talk that we hear about this country being the "land of the free," whenever the workers show any pretense of militancy, we see the capitalist class and its organ, the government, in its true light, the enemy of the working class.

THE capitalists realize very well, that in Ben Gitlow, the American workers have a fearless leader; one who has stood in the forefront of the battle in the American class struggle; a worker; a member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union; who has stood true to the working class, fighting labor's battles with a spirit and determination that raises in the working class a desire to fight on until it has freed itself.

NEEDLE Trade Workers! Brothers and sisters! In this election campaign, we must rally to the support of the only working class party with a worker as its standard bearer. We must raise our voices and in no uncertain terms make a mighty protest against the removal of Ben Gitlow's name from the ballot.

THE only political organization of the working class that supported the militant members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in their recent disagreement with Sigman, was the Workers (Communist) Party. It is the political expression of the working class that works for a government of, for and by the working class. Join us and let the capitalist class know that we do not approve of the removal of Ben Gitlow's name from the ballot. It is because he stands for the end of the present economic and political system, that they have attacked him.

Rally to the Workers (Communist) Party and fight shoulder to shoulder with Ben Gitlow, the workers' candidate in this campaign.

LEFT WING FIGHTING TO END CLASS COLLABORATION IN POLITICAL STRUGGLES

By CHARLES ZIMMERMAN,

Manager, Dress Dept. I. L. G. W. U., Candidate for Assembly, 7th A. D., Bronx

The recent big victory of the cloak and dress makers, led by the left wing, will go a long way toward liquidating the class-collaboration policy in the needle trades on the economic as well as the political field. When in the last United States presidential election, the leaders of the needle trade unions endorsed democrats and republicans, and tacitly supported Smith for governor of New York state, it was in line with what they did later on the economic field by handing over the most vital demands of the workers to a commission of capitalist politicians.

The left wing victory means above all that the needle workers are returning to the path of the class struggle on the economic and political field. The socialist party having lost its hold almost completely, because of its strong swing to the reactionary bureaucracy, is now a negligible factor, which makes the prospects of unity on the political field thru a labor party a tangible possibility for the near future. Any attempt in that direction will surely receive the support of the needle workers.

Sargent for "Law Enforcement" After Aiding Violations

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Atty.-Gen. Sargent, whose unwillingness to look into lawbreaking by Andrew Mellon of the aluminum trust and by the the promoters of the bread trust and electric power trust has brought a storm of ridicule and criticism upon his head, has come out for law enforcement in an article in "Justice," a new magazine published in Washington. Arthur E. Stilwell, financier, is president of the publishing company.

Machinists Put New Preference Proposal Before U. S. Congress

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.— Veteran employes in navy yards and arsenals, who were retained on essential war work in those plants in 1917 and 1918, are asking equal preferential rights in government employment with men who served in the armed forces of the government but did not leave the United States.

That is the position decided upon by a conference, in Washington, of representatives of District 44 of the International Association of Machinists, covering the navy yards and arsenals. Proposals that the union ask congress to abolish veterans' preference were dropped. Amendments to the existing law, safeguarding the jobs of the men who were kept in the plants, by the wish of the government, will be offered in congress this winter. Twenty-five thousand members of the machinists alone were taken from training camps and returned to skilled work in navy yards and arsenals under the selective system.

JUST IMAGINE!

Imagine that you could walk into the building at 1113 W. Washington Blvd. today. You would find a hive of activity. Six linotypes casting the type for a hungry press. A corps of skilled mechanics at the make-up tables arranging the type into forms and pages. Four printing presses turning out newspapers, magazines, pamphlets, leaflets. Mailers busily addressing and wrapping to rush the papers and other printed matter to readers. Auto trucks at the freight door to catch the fast mail trains.

THE DAILY WORKER; Radnik, South Slavic organ; Empros, Greek; Trybuna Robootnicz, Polish; Ny Tid, Swedish; The Young Worker; The Workers Monthly and a dozen other workers' peridocials are being produced together with hundreds of thousands of pieces of other printed propaganda. It is the "Source of all Communist Propaganda" at work.

• • • •

Imagine coming into THE DAILY WORKER plant a week later and finding a complete change. A splendid printing plant deserted; dust covering the tables, type cases and machinery; the humming motors silent. The flow of Communist printed propaganda in America frozen at its source.

• • • •

The first picture is what you would see today. The second is the nightmare which stares us all in the face unless—the vanguard of the American working class sends in immediately the thousands of dollars needed to Save THE DAILY WORKER.

Thousands of dollars are needed to keep the presses running, thousands more to buy the paper supply.

What the Party Gains Thru Reorganization

By EARL R. BROWDER.

When confronted by the difficult tasks of reorganizing the party into shop nuclei, many members put the question "What will the party gain thru reorganization?" Such a question must be met fairly and squarely, and definite answers given, for only thus can each member be made a convinced and enthusiastic worker for reorganization.

The most important gains to the party thru reorganization are:

1. Establishment of real centralization, which makes possible united action, in place of the present merely formal centralization which masks an actual autonomy of language groups that has paralyzed the party.

2. Mobilization of the membership to active participation in the political life of the party, and the systematic allotment of specific work to each and every member.

3. Organized contact with the masses of non-party workers in the shops and factories, placing the center of gravity of party life there, where the working class is most acutely made aware of its problems.

A Real Centralization.

The present formal centralization of our party exists only on paper. Actually the C. E. C. has had only such power as the leaders of the language groups were willing to allow, or which the C. E. C. could trick them of. What a farce is centralization, for example, when language bureaus can carry on political campaigns against the Central Committee for purely factional reasons.

Centralized leadership is impossible so long as there are 17 different "bureaus," each carrying out party directions or ignoring them, at its discretion; so long as the 28 different publications of our movement are not firmly controlled from one center; so long as the petty "federation" jealousies and peanut politics are not swept clear out of the general life of the party.

Shop nucleus reorganization, by putting aside the language groups to their proper positions as "Workers' Clubs," by centralizing all membership thru uniform and all-embracing nucleus, sub-section, city and district organizations, by making all payments flow thru a common channel, is a long and important step toward real centralization—which means toward a real Bolshevik Party.

An Active Membership.

Reorganization will draw larger numbers into active party life. This will be accomplished by abolishing the idea that the present "Workers' Clubs" that call themselves branches are really political bodies; by killing the idea that dramatic presentations will excuse a party unit from taking part in a political demonstrations; by destroying once and for all the idea that "federation" intrigue is more "Communist" than attending trade union meetings to fight for a Communist program.

But reorganization means an active membership NOW, not only when it is completed. For the reorganization will be a dismal failure if it should be considered bureaucratically, mechanically, as something imposed from above. No, the party reorganization process must itself be made the occasion for the responsible mobilzation of all the most active proletarian elements in our party, who will themselves (and they are the only ones who CAN) put into effect the life-giving organizational principles of the shop nuclei,

More important than all else, is the fact that shop nuclei put the party into organized contact with the masses of industrial workers. The form of organization is of primary importance because it automatically places certain questions "on the order of the day." And the shop nucleus form makes the first order of business always the question, "How can we win over more of our comrades in this shop?"

Every member of the party becomes thus an active propagandist and recruiting agent for our party, among just the most important elements, not the shop-keepers near where he lives, but the fellow-workers in the shops. And these are the masses from which we must build our mass Communist Party.

Isn't It Worth Fighting For?

And so we do not ask the members of the Workers Party if they will accept reorganization. We ask: "Isn't this something which we can fight for, can work for, can build over all obstacles?" We think it is, and all members who think likewise will establish a working and fighting cooperation to realize these ends.

Northside English Meets Tonight.

The Northside English branch will meet tonight at Imperial Hall, 2409 North Halsted street, at which the question of reorganization and final branch settlements will be attended to. Every member must be present. "Let's make this a rousing farewell to the North Side and a welcome to the new organization," says our secretary, Wm. Kuperman.

FINNISH FEDERATION OHIO DISTRICT ENDORSES REMOVAL OF ASKELI FROM TYOMIES

WARREN, Ohio, Oct. 18.—At the enlarged executive committee meeting of the Ohio District Finnish Federation of the Workers Party, at which active propagandists (agitprop workers) were also present, the following statement was unanimously accepted endorsing the Central Executive Committee for it action in insisting on the removal of Askeli from the editorship of the Tyomies:

"The editorial staff of the Finnish daily Tyomies, gave out its statement about the declaration of the trustees of Tyomies, which was published in No. 226 of Tyomies. We, the members of the Ohio District Enlarged Executive Committee and speakers on the speakers' roll of the Ohio district, meeting in joint convention in Warren, Ohio, Sept. 27, deem it necessary to make mention of it and draw the attention of the membership to it.

"In the first place, the editorial staff of Tyomies claims that the declaration of the trustees on the removal of Askeli from the editorial staff came to them (editorial staff and readers) as a surprise. So far as the readers (especially party members) are concerned, we are sure that the declaration of the trustees did not come to the readers as a surprise. They certainly expected a more thoro explanation than was received from Tyomies on why the party convention decided to discharge Askeli from Tyomies. By the convention reports which Askeli sent to Tyomies, one could get the idea that he was discharged from the editorial staff by a whim due to malice or at least, by a misunderstanding.

"At last the declaration of the trustees gave a different color to the case, altho even that was too narrow and evasive.

"As two weeks had elapsed between the party convention and the date when the declaration of the trustees was published, and the editors had not up to that time informed the readers and party members on the reason which caused the party convention to make its decision on why Askeli was discharged from the editorial staff, it would seem to us that this has been entirely a wilfull neglect. The claim that the declaration of the trustees came to the editors as a surprise can be understood as a surprise only in the case that the editors have gone to the defense of the Loreist deviation in the party which Comrade Askeli was found to represent and for which he was discharged from the Tyomies.

"The editorial staff informed the readers it has appealed the case to the Central Executive Committee of the party. This action proves the attitude the editors of the Tyomies would take if they were the dominant factor fulfilling the decision of the party convention. Has the Central Executive Committee any authority to annul the decisions of the party convention? Most certainly not! But the editors of Tyomies seem to have their own opinion about the party jurisdiction. The editors of Tyomies must learn to see things in a similar light with other party units, if they are at all willing to help us centralise and unify the party. They must learn to understand that the Central Executive Committee of the party is elected to fulfill the decisions of the party convention and not to annul them. The party convention is the supreme organ of the party, so it will show by its decisions that it is willing to obey and carry out the will of the Comintern.

"The trustees in their statement prove that Comrade Askeli's submission to the decision of the convention is only a pretense and that Comrade Askeli is carrying on propaganda in consequence of his discharge to weaken the value of the decisions of the party convention. Now the whole editorial staff of the Tyomies has joined in that intrigue. If this continues, we do not need to mention the harm that it will do the work we are now engaged in to Bolshevize and reorganize the party. The Finnish Federation reorganization is a more difficult task to perform than any other part of the party for many reasons. Therefore, we warn the editorial staff of Tyomies or any other unit of the party not to throw obstacles in our way by their intrigue. We are not satisfied with lip service, when the acts of the comrades are against the Comintern. We demand that the decision of the party convention must be obeyed.

"Finnish Federation Ohio District Committee, Warren, Ohio."

BALTIMORE MEMBERSHIP MEET UNANIMOUSLY ENDORSES NEW CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

By PHILIP CHATSKY.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 18.—The most interesting and important membership meeting in Baltimore was held on Sunday, Oct. 11, to discuss the present situation in our party and the future tasks of bolshevization and reorganization. Comrade Tallentire, the newly elected organizer of District 3, was the main speaker.

Reviews Party's Struggles.

In his speech he analyzed the stages of developments of our party until the present period.

"Whenever our party was a crisis," he said, "the C. I. came to our assistance and when we look back to all those decisions, we must admit that the C. I. was then, as it is now, correct and those who opposed the C. I. were not."

Quoting parts of Comrade Cannon's speech delivered at the Y. W. L. convention he pointed out the danger existing in our party from the new regrouping of forces: on the one hand all those who accept the C. I. decision wholeheartedly and carry them out, and on the other those who while accepting the decision formally, in reality are working against the C. I.

After introducing a resolution to endorse our new C. E. C. and all the resolutions passed by the convention, he appealed to all present, to vote for this resolution, and to realize that a new era is beginning in our movement, and the active support of all members must be mobilized.

A discussion, in which the comrades of various branches participated, demonstrated clearly, that the rank and file of our party, are all for the C. I., and all its decisions, ready to begin on reorganization.

The resolution was carried unanimously, with one abstaining from voting.

NEW INJUNCTION AIMED TO SMASH FORCES OF UNION

Churchill Writ Most Vicious Document

This is the famous injunction issued by Judge Churchill, "friend of labor," against the striking clothing workers of the International Tailoring Co., which forbids workers to congregate or stand in the street within ten blocks in any direction from the said place of business. Read the injunction and then tell us why we need a workers' government.

"Supreme Court
County of New York
International Tailoring Co.
Plaintiff vs.
Sidney Hillman,
individually and as General President, Etc., and others, Defendants:

"Motion to continue injunction is granted. There have undoubtedly been threats and violence and I am satisfied this misconduct is not to be explained on the theory that it is chargeable to strangers to the quarrel moved merely by sympathetic interest on behalf of the strikers. I have no doubt that it is the work of the former employes of plaintiff aided perhaps by other members of the union and in supposed furtherance of the purposes of the organisation. I dislike to interfere by injunction in an industrial dispute, but where violence is proved all other considerations must be subordinated to its suppression. If the union cannot control its members it must, to some extent, suffer the consequences of their misconduct. It can only escape the stigma of injunctions against violence by ridding itself of members who are guilty of violence. An injunction will issue against all defendants restraining them from using any violence or making any threats of violence or harm to any employe of plaintiff or to any one seeking such employment; from picketing plaintiff's place of business at 107 Fourth Ave., in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, in any manner whatever, and from congregating or standing in the street within ten blocks in any direction from the said place of business; from coercing, threatening, assaulting, intimidating and turning aside against their will those who go or would go to or from plaintiff's place of business, and those who are working or may work, or who seek or may seek or would be willing to work for the plaintiff; or endeavoring to persuade such employes or prospective employes against their will to leave or not to enter the employment of the plaintiff, or to join the union; from persuading or inducing or enticing, or from attempting to persuade or induce or entice, any employe or employes of the plaintiff to leave its employment before the expiration of any contract of employment for a definite time existing between such employe or employes and the plaintiff.

SOVIET RUSSIA TAKES STEPS FOR NATURAL RESOURCE CONSERVATION; 87 STATE RESERVATIONS PLANNED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, October 18.—The question of the conservation of nature had been discussed in the governmental institutions from the very beginning of the revolution, but it was only after the termination of the civil war in 1921, that the question could be put upon a concrete basis.

In September 1921, the decree "on the conservation of natural monuments" was promulgated and a start was made towards the creation of natural reservations and the protection of gardens and parks. In the areas coming under the action of the decree it was forbidden to cut down trees, to exploit the underground deposits, to carry on any hunting or fishing.

Special Board Created.

A special department for nature conservation was created upon the chief scientific board. The department has now under its control 97 gardens and parks and 8 forests which are considered as natural monuments. Among them are such celebrated spots as Sokolniki, Petrovskoye, Razumovskoye, Izmailovo, Ostankino, Kuskovo, Kunzevo and Arkhangelskoye (near Moskow); Peterhof, Pavlovsk, Gatchina, Dyetskoye Selo (near Leningrad); Massandra, Nikitsky Garden, Alupka, Gursuf (in the Crimea) and so on.

The following reservations are now liberally subsidized by the government: the Crimean reservation occupying an area of 14,500 dessiatines, which consists of mountain forests utilized for scientific researches, for the conservation of moisture and of the local fauna, particularly o fthe Crimean reindeer, which has nearly become extinct.

To Present Wild Life.

The great Caucasian reservation occupies an area of 250,000 dessiatines. Its main purpose is to conserve the Caucasian aurochs, which represent a rare species among all existing mammals, and also the numerous reindeers, muffions, gazelles martens, etc., which aboundin that region.

The Ibnez mineralogical reservation in the Urals constitutes a natural museum of minerology, where something like two hundred kinds of precious minerals are found upon a relatively small territory.

The Astrakhan reservation consists of three separate reserves: Obshorsky, Domtehinsky and and Trokhizbinsky. These reserves are situated on the Caspian side of the Delta of the Volga. Their purpose is chiefly to conserve the virgin nature of the district and the abundant animals and birds. Particular care is taken of the nearly extinct species of the egret.

The Penza reservation consists of three sections: virgin sod, swamps and pine woods.

Glacial Reservoir.

The Kosinsky reservation, situated 16 versts from Moscow, conserves the nature of the three lakes: Beloye, Tchernoye, and Sviatoye, with the adjacent swamps and woods, constituting a typical water-reservoir of glacial origin.

In the Ukraine Steppe in the world-famous reservation "Ascenia Neva," with its famous park of acclimatisation. An extensive literature about this reservation and park exists in the Rusan and in many foreign languages.

The department for nature conservation has worked out plans for a network of state reservation thruout the territory of the Soviet Union, comprising a total of 87 reservations of the nature of the different regions. The next reservations to be organized will be those of the Bargusinsky, Sayansky and Krassneyarsk regions, which abound in the precious sable which needs particular protection.

Skilled Auto Workers Leave Industry; Seek Work in Other Trades

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Study of recent trends in the automobile industry by an expert for a machine trades journal show that skilled men are leaving the automobile plants thruout the country, to enter the building trades. Quantity production in automobile factories has reduced the dependence of the industry on skilled mechanics. Wages and conditions are relatively less attractive now than formerly. Building wages and conditions are improving, and the demand for highly trained individuals in the building industry is found to be increasing.

This study is said to show that labor costs in the motor field are only 20 per cent of retail selling prices of machines. Of all the automobiles sold in the United States in 1924-25, 80 per cent were sold on time rather than for cash. Of the time sales, 65 per cent resulted in the return of the machines to the sellers, for lack of full payment.

Foreign Teachers in Soviet Georgia Find New Methods Applied

MOSCOW, Sept. 22—(By Mail)—Delegation of foreign teachers now on visit in the U. S. S. R. arrived to Tiflis when it was present at the session of the Trade Union Council of Georgia. Replying to addresses of welcome, Mr. Roscherr, member of the delegation, said:

"From the first day of our arrival to Georgia we saw that the Georgian people has full freedom and can develop its culture. When we return home, we shall refute false rumours alleging that Georgians are oppressed. Children of your country are full of enthusiasm. New ideas of education which are applied now by you in practice appeared first abroad. But we are ashamed to say that so far we could not realise them because we had no power in our hands."

Ford Negotiates with Cummins Car Co. for Paris, Ill., Factory

PARIS, Ill., Oct. 16—Representatives of Henry Ford are on the point of closing a deal for taking over the Cummins car factory here. The plant, one of the largest and best-equipped in the state would be used for the manufacture of parts and assemblage of cars if purchased by Fordfi it was said.

The Cummins plant, which has its offices in Chicago, for many years manufactured street cars and inter-urban coaches but recently has specialized on motor busses. If Ford acquires it, it will be used to accommodate the overflow from his Indianapolis branch.

WORKERS' SCHOOL TO TRAIN N. Y. NEEDLE WORKERS

Prepare for Control of Unions

The recent intensified activity of the left wing in the needle trade unions of New York led the workers' school to plan the organization of a special course dealing with the problems of the garment industry and the unions. Having valiantly conducted a struggle to win the management of the union from the bureaucratic machine in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the left wing elements have been called upon to assume responsible positions in that union. It behooves active workers in the left wing of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union not only to continue to exhibit the same ardor and devotion which they showed in their memorable struggle but to prove themselves capable of properly executing the various assignments with which they were entrusted by the membership.

The bureaucratic machines in all needle trade unions have maintained themselves long in the various union positions, never allowing rank and file members to occupy any of the offices and train themselves for technical service in the unions.

In order to aid those who have already succeeded in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and those who will be called upon, not before long, in the other needle trade unions to assume responsible union positions, a three-months' course, in which the various vital problems facing officers, executive board members, business agents and departmental heads, will be conducted at the workers' school beginning December 7. The development of the garment industry during the past 25 to 30 years; the history of the unions in this industry with special reference to the struggles of the rank and file for militant and democratic organizations; the vital problems peculiar to the different branches of the needle trades (seasonal fluctuations, contractors, jobbers, inside shops, size of factories); collective bargaining; agreements; employers' associations; methods of organization and administration of union activities (shop chairmen, organization committees, finances, benefits, office management, etc.) will be thoroly analyzed and discussed in the course. To insure a practical approach to all these problems, active union members, officers and others familiar with the particular phases of the needle trades have been secured to share their knowledge and experience with those who will take the course.

The committee which will supervise the organization and conduct of the course will consist of Ben Gitlow, S. Zimmerman, Zack, A. Trachtenberg and Bert Wolfe.

51 Eye Clinics for Chicago

The Illinois State Society of Optometrists in conference at the Hotel Sherman announce that a plan is under way to supply each ward in Chicago with eye clinics, making a total of 51. These clinics will be capable of handling 1,000 patients a day. They will be instituted in February of next year.

YORKVILLE FERRER SCHOOL TRUSTEE DENIES ADMITTANCE TO YOUNG COMMUNIST JUNIOR

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Margaret Rosenberg, 13-year-old member of the Junior section of the Young Workers League, has been barred from attending classes at the Yorkville Ferrer school, a school controlled by a group of anarchists, by a self-styled "class conscious" worker, Max Thuman, because of her membership in the Junior section.

This member of the Junior section addresses the following appeal to the parents and children at the Ferrer School:

"Comrades:

"I am 13 years of age and a member of the Junior Section of the Young Workers League and have been a pupil at the Yorkville Ferrer School for the last two years.

"Sunday, October 4, 1925, I was refused admission by one of the school trustees, Max Thuman, who calls himself a class conscious worker. He said that I could not attend the Ferrer School as long as I remained a member of the Junior Section. I told him I would not give up my membership in the Communist movement.

"My opinion is that I have the right to attend the Ferrer School even tho I am a Communist and do my duty as a workers' child for the benefit of the proletariat in spite of hypocrites and narrow-minded workers like Max Thuman.

"I hope the parents and children of the Yorkville Ferrer School will not act as Max Thuman and so far as I know them I believe they will aid me to stay further in the ranks of the class conscious workers' children.

"With Communist greetings,
"Margaret Rosenberger."

Protests College Students' Scabbing Way Thru School

DENVER, Oct. 18.—Scabbing his way thru school, is the way the Denver Building Service Employes' Union looks upon students that wash windows and do other jobs below the accepted scale in order to work their way thru college. The students under fire attend the University of Denver. Not only do they keep clear of the regular American Federation of Labor union and work at cut rates, but they have formed a dual organization to further their competition with the organized breadwinners. The university administration is conferring with the union to settle the controversy.

Imperialism Develops Indian Factories and Indian Proletariat

BOMBAY, India, Oct. 18.—The 1924 annual report on the Indian factories act shows that during the year the total number of registered factores increased from 434 to 465, and the number of those actually working from 399 to 434; while in the same period the number of operatives increased from 49,110 to 50,842. The report makes claims of improved working conditions for all factory hands, but it is known these conditions are incredibly bad.

Shops Doing Business the Test of "Peace" by Imperialist Army

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 18.—Major General William Lassiter, commanding the American troops which have invaded Panama City to break strikes beginning over a rent strike, reports to the war department, according to the news, the department releases to the press, that blessed "normalcy" is being approached, with "order" restored and the shops and markets open for business. The troops, however, are being held in the city under a "reserve status."

AMMUNITION NOW PROBLEM, SAYS GENERAL CONNOR

Need Bombs for Aims of Imperialism

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—America's national defense faces a "critical" situation on account of shortage of ammunition in all services because of administration economies, the president's air board was told today by Brig. Fox Conner, assistant chief of staff of the army.

What War?

Unless ammunition reserves are built up immediately, Connor declared, all branches of the national defense will be "helpless" in time of war.

The army air service, he declared, however, has been given better treatment and a greater proportion of available funds than any other service.

Reserve Dangerously Low

"Our ammunition reserve is disappearing," was Conner's warning. "It takes approximately eleven months to get into production of ammunition. Unless a reserve is maintained all arms, including the air service, are helpless until quantity production can begin. Since the world war virtually nothing has been done to maintain the reserve," said Conner.

Must Have Bombs!

"Deterioration is marked, especially in certain quarters and the situation is becoming critical. Over $15,000,000 yearly are needed to maintain the modest reserve we have established on paper. The shortage in bombs alone for the use of the air service is well over $12,000,000."

Conner also declared the United States was safe from foreign air invasions. He gave a different reason, however, than any preceding witness, contending that the enemy planes could never be landed from enemy ships in sufficient quantity to stage an attack.

One of the Locarno Sidelights.

> When President von Hindenburg, the German marshal of military might, and M. Vandervelde, the Belgian scoialist premier, agree on the Rhine compact it ought to be able to stand a good deal of rough treatment .... —Edwin L. James in THE NEW YORK TIMES.

This very efficient European correspondent of the Times seems to view Hindenburg and Vandervelde as representing two extremes in the arena of European politics. The Rhine treaty, hailed as one of the principal achievements of the Locarno "security pact," is thought to be doubly assured of being carried into effect because it is acceptable to both.

Marxians understand, of course, that its duration will depend entirely upon the length of time Europe can continue to patch up its insurmountable antagonism. When an impasse is reached that cannot be solved by peaceful methods then war will again flame forth and the Rhine pact will go the way of other diplomatic "scraps of paper."

But to classify Hindenburg and Vandervelde as political opposites is completely to ignore the roles they have played since the events of July and August, 1914. They were opposed to each other only inasmuch as one of them served the kaiser of Germany and the other the king of Belgium. Each of them served his ruler with equal fervor. It is impossible to compare the varying degrees of their crimes against the peoples of the countries in which they played dominant roles. They can never be calculated. But immeasurable as are the crimes, we can with a degree of accuracy estimate the criminals. Among criminals there are varying degrees of criminality.

As Victor Hugo said, crimes are committed on a grand scale or on a mean scale. "Ceasar passes the rubicon; Mandarin bestrides the gutter."

Hindenburg, the monarchist, the mighty war lord of imperial Germany, a life-long militarist, did precisely as he was expected to do. He had never been anything other than a militarist and a militarist he remained. He was expected to lead the German masses to the slaughter house for the glory of the empire and he did it. His crime was consistent. It was spectacular, carried out on a grand scale.

Consider Vandervelde, the vassal of his majesty, the king of the Belgians. He had been a life-long socialist, a world figure at international congresses where resolutions were passed declaring against participation in wars between capitalist nations. He was the leader of the international socialist movement, which at its Basle congress in 1912 declared against war and proclaimed its determination to use any means within its power to stop war once it started.

In the closing days of July and the opening days of August, 1914, when the hordes that were to form the magnificent Hindenburg line for the most sanguinary military drive in all the history of the world were on the march under the banners of imperial Germany; when similar scenes in varying degrees were being enacted in Russia, France, Austria and England; when, in a word, the very war anticipated at the Basle congress of the socialist parties flared into being, it was the duty of Vandervelde, as the head of that international, at any cost, and in spite of everything, to issue the call for the class conscious proletarian masses of the world to rise and challenge the impending butchery.

Instead of that Vandervelde entered the cabinet of the king of the Belgians, himself one of the most loathsome criminals in history. Albert, the king of Belgium, will go down in history as the monarch who deliberately murdered his subjects in the interest of foreign powers. The German armies desired to go thru Belgium and offered to pay indemnity for damage to roads and other property. Had they been permitted to do so there would have been no bloodshed within the boundaries of that nation. But an uninterrupted passage thru Belgium would have endangered France and England. So these two nations succeeded in inducing the king of the Belgians to throw his own people before the German cannons and bayonets where they were torn to shreds in order that the French and British could have time to mobilize their forces. While the kaiser slaughtered his people in what he believed would contribute to the glory of Germany, the king of the Belgians knew full well that the blood of his people was shed for the glory of other nations. He played a role similar to that of the colonial despots who, for the aggrandizement of the oppressor country, deliberately slaughter their own subjects. And Emil Vandervelde, one of the heroes of the socialist international, became a minister in Albert's cabinet.

Now, after eleven years, these two agents of the bourgeoisie meet on common ground. They have reached what they imagine is an amicable agreement. The millions of corpses whose blood is upon the heads of these two statesmen cannot rise to plague them. And when the time comes for the battle line to again form, if they still live, they will both be found holding in contempt the words written at Locarno. Each will express himself in his own way. Hindenburg with his spectacular blustering will, with one sweep, throw the pact into the scrap heap of history, while the detestable scoundrel, Emil Vandervelde, will write long treatises and deliver inspired speeches, reeking with sophistry, to prove that the other side violated the provisions of the pact and that according to all socialist precedents he must again reluctantly urge the workers to sacrifice their lives in the interest of his capitalist masters.

If Mr. James, the Times correspondent, was as familiar with the history of the heroes of the Second International as we are, he would not see in a document accepted by Vandervelde and Hindenburg any assurance of its provisions being carried out.

Everyone knows what to expect of the German war lord, his crimes are measurable, but no one knows the immeasurable depths to which a Vandervelde can sink. We only know that he will grovel just as low as is necessary to serve his masters, the bourgeoisie. Like the whole leadership of the Second International, Vandervelde can be relied upon to commit crimes in the interest of his capitalist masters that they themselves would shrink from committing.

The Fresh Wave of White Terror in Horthy Hungary

(Rakosi and 105 Workers Arrested and Tortured.)

By A HUNGARIAN COMMUNIST

FOR weeks past the Hungarian social-democratic party has been using every endeavor to destroy any possibility of revolutionizing the working class. Right from the earliest days of the white terror it has employed for this purpose the method of shameless denunciation. But it must be said that in recent times it has surpassed itself in this respect. When the delegates of the independent socialist labor party appeared at the international socialist congress in Marseilles, they were openly denounced by Payer as "Bolsheviki." When the working masses attended a public meeting of the social-democrats and and called their leaders to account for their treachery, these bureaucrats called in Horthy's police to deal with the revolutionary workers, described them as being hirelings of Moscow and called upon the police to take a note of the names of the interrupters.

WHAT was it that caused the Hungarian social-democratic party to expose itself to an extent unexampled even in Hungary? Why did the Horthy social-democrats, even at the risk of exposing themselves in the eyes of the very small upper section of the labor aristocracy, carry out shameful and criminal denunciations?

The "sanitation" in Hungary has brought about a crisis such as has never been experienced before in the economic life of the country. Unemployment, the misery of the masses, discontent and desperation are growing from day to day. Neither the social-democratic party leaders nor the trade union bureaucracy consider it necessary even to pretend to do anything in the interest of the working class. They declared quite openly that the present time is not suitable for even the smallest struggles. The trade union bureaucracy supported strikebreakers against the fighting workers, and, in spite of the enormous profits of the employers, have acquiesced in wages being reduced month by month. The discontent of the working class against the lackeys of the bourgeoisie increased. Hundreds and hundreds tore up their party membership cards and thousands withdrew from the trade unions, in spite of the efforts of the revolutionary trade union opposition to prevent this.

THERE was a movement going on in Hungary which was bound to cause the creatures of Horthy to fear that the ground would give way under their feet. They also realized that this movement would obtain a lead from the growing Communist Party of Hungary, which is providing the movement with proper aims and giving it a definite direction.

About three months ago the congress of the Tailors' Union adopted by an overwhelming majority a resolution welcoming the alliance between the English and Russian trade unions, and calling upon the workers to fight for revolutionary trade union unity. After the Marseilles congress of the Second International the Budapest shoemakers' organization held a meeting which was attended by 2,000 members, and which in a most impressive manner demonstrated in favor of revolutionary trade union unity. The meeting expressed its disapproval of the counter-revolutionary attitude of the trade union council, and instructed the delegates of the Leather Workers' Union to vote at the international congress of the leather workers in Paris for the admission of the Russian trade unions.

The Hungarian social-democracy, which not only has a decisive influence in the trade unions, but is organizatorily connected with them, felt that all this meant the beginning of the end. They decided, as the trade union papers announced, to take "determined action." This "determined action" has now been carried out. Within the last few days the executive committee of the Shoemakers' Union has been dissolved and all prominent revolutionary members expelled, while the Trade Union Council has artitrarily set up a commission to take the place of the dissolved executive.

BUT this was not all. All the spies and detectives were set to work. The trade union bureaucracy and the social-democracy worked quite openly hand in hand with the Horthy police. It has now come to light from official reports that the trade unions and social-democrats employed dozens of people, who not only worked in the Hungarian socialist labor party, but who also managed to smuggle into the ranks of the Communists as spies.

In this manner they succeeded in getting on the track of our Comrade Rakosi, who led the Communist movement in Hungary, and in having him, as well as over a hundred other comrades, arrested. By means of fearful tortures the police succeeded in extorting "confessions" from some comrades. And by means of lying fabrications bourgeois society in Hungary was "rescued."

The Nepszava, the organ of the Hungarian social-democratic party was overjoyed. It declared that the social-democracy itself has settled with the Communists, but every line betrayed its satisfaction. Its joy, however, was somewhat premature. Com. Rakosi behaved heroically before the police. The police did not succeed, even by means of the most fearful tortures, in extracting a "confession" from him. He admitted that he had come to Hungary in order to carry on Communist propaganda and to organize a strong Communist Party. To this work he had devoted his life, and because he knew that he had contributed something to this work he considered that he had not lived in vain. In the face of his tortures he delivered an impassioned speech against capitalism and against the Horthy regime in a tone which even won the respect of the jailers.

THE replies given by Rakosi to his questioners had such an effect that even the newspapers of the "race protectors, (fascists) reported his statements, which at once brought about a complete change in the pogrom mood. Only the Nepszava kept silence regarding them.

But this will not help the heroes of the pact with Horthy, the allies of hangmen. The attitude of Comrade Rakosi has called forth a fighting mood among the working masses in Hungary, so that the social-democracy and the Hungarian bourgeoisie will soon realize to their cost what a real Communist means even in prison. By his heroic bearing Comrade Rakosi had not only made a deep impression upon the working masses, but has rendered an indisputable service to Communism.

The working masses perceive not only the act of devotion, but also the direction in which they have to fight.

AS a result the Hungarian revolutionary labor movement is entering on a new phase. The glorious memory of the Hungarian proletarian dictatorship is again being revived, not only among the masses of the industrial proletariat, but also among the poor peasants, and this means an indestructable gain for the Communist Party. The road and direction have now been indicated, not only by words but also b yself-sacrificing acts, and this means a serious step forward for the victoriou revolution.

Locarno---The Thirteenth Conference

of the war, and follows the prophesies made during the sixth assembly of the league of nations last September, when for the first time every measure adopted meant a compromise with British interests. Whereas the previous assemblies, five of them in all, were manipulated in the interest of France, the last one was a triumph for England.

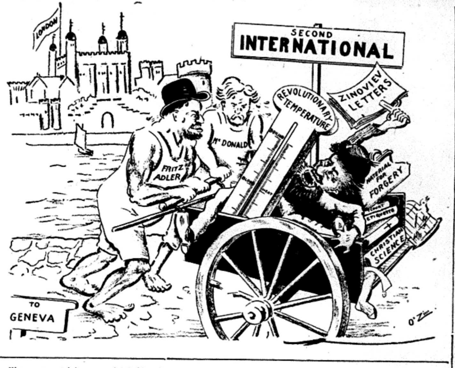
A demilitarized Rhine zone, to be followed by the evacuation of Cologne, which in turn is to be followed by a plebiscite of the inhabitants of the Saar valley (which will result in a declaration to be a part of Germany) means forever blasting the hopes of France to create an industrial unit by uniting Alsace-Lorraine with territory forcibly annexed from Germany under the pretense of sanctions (punishments) against Germany for failure to met reparations.

THE one marked change in European politics is the entry of Germany into the league of nations. At all times Germany was on an equal footing with the former entente powers, and frequently held the upper hand.

This was so, not because Germany, by her own might, has become powerful, but because the powers knew full well that to drive Germany too far would force her into closer economic alliances with Soviet Russia. At Locarno, as at Genoa, it was only as an ally of Soviet Russia that Germany could play an active role toward the entente. And at Locarno the history of Genoa repeated itself by impelling Germany toward a closer alliance with Soviet Russia.

IN the midst of the Genoa conference, Germany and Russia, on Easter Sunday, 1922, staggered Premier Lloyd George of England, Premier Facta of Italy, Poincare of France and the other delegates by defiantly signing the treaty of Rapallo. When at Genoa the victorious allies were striving completely to subdue both Germany and Russia, the two nations got together in a small town fifteen miles away and signed a treaty that enraged the diplomats of the other nations. Germany was accused of being a treacherous ingrate, Russia was charged with having designs upon "civilization," while the world was called upon to witness their own hapless plight at being betrayed in such an unheard of manner. It was indeed a heavy blow. The victims chosen by the executioners refused to bow their heads for the axe to fall. At Locarno the same thing happened. Less than a week after the conference opened that ever delightful court jester, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, made the sage observation that Russia was completely isolated as a result of his deliberations with his associates. The next day the history of Genoa was repeated by the signing in Moscow of a Russ-German trade treaty regulating the whole status of the economic relations of the two countries and definitely breaking the blockade against Russia.

This trade agreement will be immediately productive of good results, as Russia has harvested what is called in this country a "bumper" grain crop, with millions of bushels for exportation, while Germany is capable of supplying industrial products. At the same time there are inexhaustable supplies of raw materials in Russia that are required for German industry. It will be mutually beneficial to the two countries.



THE conclusion of the conference can only be interpreted as the political reflex of economic conflicts that are raging througout the whole world. Another handful of documents have been added to those frenzied products of various batches of European statesmen who have labored to heal the mortal wounds from which capitalism is suffering. But nothing is fundamentally changed, because the basic antagonisms still remain.

The revival of German industry threatens the industry of France. Yet, Germany cannot pay her debts to France without a revival of her industry. At the same time, since industry is the basis of military power, a revival of German industry is a military threat to France.

Britain will suffer by seeing her unemployed army grow ever larger in case of a revival of German industry. Yet without that revival she cannot collect the debts owing her by Germany. These irreconcilable contradictions mock the pompous diplomats of the countries involved.

In spite of the Locarno conference, the thirteenth international conference on a major scale since the close of the war, one thing and one thing only stands forth and that is the fact that the ruins of peace in Europe are evidences of a devastation equally as great as that of war. Capitalism is mortally wounded. Each of these conferences marks the progress of the malady that already has stamped the brand of death upon every feature.

The capitalist system is utterly doomed by its past and nothing that it can do now can ever revive it. The ambitious plans for reconstruction, for creating security pacts, for world domination, do not better the condition of the working class of the world. Instead these plans so elaborately devised pave the way for new military alignments, new balances of power, new wars in which the world will be turned into a vast abbatoir with the working clas as the victims.

WHEN the time comes that these political struggles cannot be prolonged at conference tables they will be carried out by force of arms. Then will be the signal for the oppressed of the world, whose labor makes possible the existence of these bloodthirsty governments, to refuse to fight the battles of the master class, but to rise in their might and sweep from the earth the last vestings of capitalism, by rallying to the ringing challenge of Nicholai Lenin: "Instead of fighting in defense of the conflicting governments, turn the imperialist war between nations into a civil war against capitalism."

An I. G. W. U. Convention Message

FELLOW Workers:

The great battle of the rank and file of the cloak and dressmakers of New York for the control of their union, has been successful.

For the first time in the history of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the autocratic union bureaucracy has received a crushing defeat. The beginning has been made for the building up of a strong union in the needle industry that will truly defend the interests of the workers.

What the Membership Has Won.

The recent struggle in New York has won many valuable rights for the membership. They have won:

The right to decide on the amount of dues to be paid.

The right to elect their own officials as leaders of the joint board.

The right to maintain a unified organization—thru the complete defeat of the expulsion policy.

The right to decide upon the question of proportional representation.

THE job is only half done. Victory is not yet complete. The smoke of the last battle has hardly begun to clear away and already the bureaucrats are scheming to rob the workers of the fruits of their successful struggle. They speak of peace, but they prepare for war. The Forward gang is preparing to reestablish the old, hated rule of the corrupt, bureaucratic machine in our union. They have their eyes on the coming national convention. There they will make a renewed attempt to fasten the chains of bureaucracy on the rank and file. We must be on our guard. We must prepare.

We Must Win a National Victory.

THE New York victory of the cloak and dressmakers has great nation-significance. But it is only the first step toward a national victory. Only a national victory will mean that all the needle trades internationals will be amalgamated into one powerful industrial union of the needle workers. With such a union we can successfully fight the jobbers for:

36 weeks guaranteed employment.

40-hour week.

Better wages.

No piece work.

The elimination of the speed up system.

A NATIONAL victory will mean that we will be able to build a national industrial union whose combined strength will be sufficient to organize all the out-of-town and unorganized shops. Thus we will establish full union control of conditions in the industry. A national victory will mean that the entire, useless, bureaucratic machine will be abolished. The union will be transformed into a live organization, thru the establishment of the shop committee and shop delegate system. Thus we will have a union of which the rank and file will have real and lasting control.

A national victory will mean that we will be nearer to the realization of a powerful labor party to protect us against injunctions, police, profiteers and landlords.

What You Must Do.

ATTEND all union meetings regularly. Organize yourselves into a group within your local and affiliate with us. Put up left wing candidates for the national convention. Support only those who are pledged to support this program:

1. Complete amnesty to all those expelled for their opinions.
2. Proportional representation to joint boards and conventions.
3. Amalgamation of all needle trade international unions into one departmentalized industrial union.
4. The formation of an all-inclusive labor party.
5. The democratization of the union thru the establishment of the shop committee or shop delegate system.

TWO SUPREME COURT DECREES HIT LABOR

DEMONSTRATION FOR RAKOSI ON BOSTON COMMON

Workers Demand There Be No Execution

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Oct. 19.—Historic Boston Common was the scene of a mass demonstration under the auspices of the International Labor Defense in protest against the torture and murder of workers by the Horthy Hungarian government. The bloody deeds of the Hungarian white guards were exposed and denounced by the speakers, John J. Ballam and Harry J. Canter, local secretary of the I. L. D.

Wall Street Rules Horthy Gov.

The inspiring story of Comrade Rakosi, people's commissar in the former revolutionary government, who is slated for execution by the Horthy bloodhounds, was told by Comrade Ballam. His declaration that "the voice of Comrade Rakosi cannot be strangled by the Horthy hangmen, but will resound thruout the world, inspiring and arousing ever greater masses of workers to revolutionary struggle," was warmly applauded.

Comrade Canter showed the connection of Wall Street with the Hungarian murder government and pointed out that the financial dictator of Hungary is a Boston Banker, Jeremiah Smith, the agent of J. P. Morgan & Co. "We must make these facts known to the working class of America," he said, "and break the conspiracy of silence in regard to the Hungarian white terror which is fostered by Wall Street."

The temper of the demonstration was indicated by the banners carried by a number of workers bearing the inscriptions: "The Horthy Hungarian Government Tortures and Murders Workers," "Free Mathias Rakosi," "Wall Street and Horthy—Partners," and many others.

Unanimous for Resolution

With shouts of approval the meeting voted unanimously to send the following telegram to the Hungarian ambassador at Washington:

"One thousand workers assembled on Boston Common have heard the cries of the tortured political prisoners in the prisons of Budapest. We demand that court martial trials of Mathias Rakosi and other workers be not carried out and that no executions take place. Failure to conduct these trials by ordinary civil process with full publicity is proof that the Hungarian hangmen are afraid to let the truth be known."

Henry Ford--Pacifist Turned Imperialist

First Installment of the Daily Worker's Exposure of World's Most Powerful Automobile Czar

By OWEN STIRLING

LITTLE Red Riding Hood didn't know a wolf when she saw one. The bible warned her against wolves in sheep's clothing. But did not warn her about wolves she might find in nice old ladies' beds, with nice old ladies' lace night caps on their heads.

She found a wolf in her grandmother's bed. But how was she to know it was a wolf? She saw his ears and eyes but even then she didn't know.

Finally she said: "But grand-mother, what large teeth you've got!

"The better to eat you with, my dear!" roared the wolf, leaping from the bed.

Then she knew.

HENRY FORD collects nice old furniture. He likes to surround himself with quaint chairs, what-nots, commodes and four-poster beds of an early period. He finds an old fiddler named Jep Bisbee in a little Michigan town and soon phonograph records are being made of Jep's fiddling. Just now Henry Ford is financing a revival of the old square dances.

But look out, Little Red Riding Hood, look out!

IN view of things that are taking place at River Rouge, Highland Pk. and Dearborn at present the development of Henry Ford and his huge vertical trust, the Ford Motor company, becomes more and more an outstanding object lession to the working class. An inevitable trend of events was apparent in the circumstances of the Ford purchase of the Stout Metal Airplane company last July.

As long ago as last February Commander Ralph D. Weyerbacher, chief engineer of the League Islands Navy Yard, at Philadelphia, and builder of the giant dirigible Shenandoah, went to the Ford airport at Dearborn to aid the Ford mechanics and engineers in the constructing of a mooring mast for dirigibles. He was formally assigned to the task by Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics of the navy. The mast may now be seen rising 200 feet above the flying field. There are only two large mooring masts in the United States for such ships as the Shenandoah and Los Angeles, one being at Lakehurst, N. J. It is significant as indicating the new aligment of the Fords that the navy department and the Ford Motor company should cooperate in the erection of one of them at the Ford airport.

DO you remember the Henry Ford of the early years of the war with his Quixotic peace-ship expedition? He was going to get the soldiers out of the trenches by Christmas. He fitted out a vessel, put a group of pacifists aboard and ludicrously sailed them away to Europe. He may have believed even then that the United States was in danger of being drawn into the war. He was in such a position industrially in that case that he preferred having men face machines in his shops to their facing machine guns in the trenches.

Not long afterward the Chicago Tribune referred to him as an anarchist. To the average reader of the Tribune that meant simply that Ford was an independent, subversive, illog-

Strawn Arrives at Peking to Attend Tariff Conference

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, Oct. 19.—Silas H. Strawn, one of America's representatives to the forthcoming Chinese tariff convention here, arrived in Peking today. He was one day late owing to the halting of his train by militarists in the Shanghai area.

ORTONVILLE, Minn., Oct. 19.—Jay Wentworth, 28, was burned to death when he rushed into a burning cottage on Big Stone Lake to save $1,000 in currency.

Illegal to Reduce Rates.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—An order of the Illinois commerce commission requiring a reduction in rate charges by the Illinois Bell Telephone company on coin box telephones was held unlawful today by the supreme court of the United States. The decision of the lower court was affirmed.

Plan Frisco-N. Y. Flight.

BOSSES' HIGH COURT UPHOLDS CALIFORNIA SYNDICALIST LAW

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 19.—The supreme court of the United States today inferentially upheld the legality of the California criminal syndicalism law, under which are imprisoned seventy members of the Industrial Workers of the World, the law being interpreted in California as making ordinary membership in that organization a felony, the members being convicted without any proof of criminal acts being committed by them as individuals. Similar laws have been passed by other states, but California has led all the rest in savage persecution of radical unionists, with Michigan a close second in its prosecution of Communists in the famous Bridgeman case.

The court refused to intervene in the case of Charlotte Anita Whitney, who was sentenced under this law to 14 years in the penitentiary. It held that it was without jurisdiction, and thus by negation, upheld the validity of the statute.

U. S. Supreme Court Knocks Out Arizona Women's Minimum Pay

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 19.—A state minimum wage law for women of Arizona was held invalid today by the United States supreme court. The court affirmed a decision by a lower federal court which granted an injunction against the state to A. Sardell, a Nogales merchant, who refused to pay his women employes in a store the minimum wage of $16 per week.

Mathias Rakosi

Faces Terror in Hungary.

MATHIAS RAKOSI was born 1889 in Adony near Miskolc. He studied in Budapest and graduated from the Orient College.

As early as 1912 and 1913 he actively participated in the labor movement. In these years he became a functionary of the so-called Galilei Club in Budapest. This club played an important role in the revolutionization of the Hungarian radical intellectuals and also in the labor movement.

Comrade Rakosi took an active part during the war, together with other members of the Galilei Club and with workers in the illegal agitation against the war.

When Comrade Bela Kun returned from Soviet Russia to Hungary in the fall of 1918 to carry on Communist propaganda, Comrade Rakosi immediately allied himself with the Communists and was one of the most active fighters besides Bela Kun for the Hungarian Soviets.

During the dictatorship in Hungary he had charge of the commissariat of the army and especially of the organization of the Red Army. He took an active part in the battles of the Red Army at the front.

After the downfall of the dictatorship Rakosi escaped with others to Vienna. There he continued his work for the illegal organization of the Communist movement in Hungary.

Later he went to Moscow where he was elected as a secretary of the Comintern in which capacity he did tremendous service.

In the meantime he worked indefatigably for the Hungarian proletariat. He was daring enough in spite of the danger to his life to return five times illegally to Hungary to work for the Hungarian proletariat. At last the Hungarian bloodhounds caught him and now want to execute him.

GERMAN UNION HEADS SPEAK IN CHICAGO

Social Democrats Visit Chicago Federation

When Franz J. Fertwangler and Herr Eckert, two of the German trade union delegates to the A. F. of L. convention appeared at the Chicago Federation of Labor Sunday, Fertwangler presented a letter from William Green, president of the A. F. of L. asking consideration from the local federation.

In his speech Fertwangler had to disclose that under the leadership of anti-Communist social - democratic trade union officials, the German Federation of Unions had fallen to four and a half millions from eight million. But he blamed this on the Communists who also, he charged, were responsible for the election of Hindenburg.

Delegate Swabeck of the Painters tried to question Herr Fertwangler, but was shut off by Chairman Nelson.

A resolution on the invasion of Panama by U. S. troops was introduced by Delegates Green of the Carpenters, and Swabeck of the Painters. Chairman Nelson's idea that it should be referred to the A. F. of L. without action was opposed by these delegates and Delegate Schussler of the Photo Engravers, who objected to "passing the buck."

The resolution, which sought to place the federation on record against U. S. imperialism in Lantin America, was as follows:

Resolution.

"Whereas, The Panama trade unions are engaged in a struggle on behalf of the worker tenants of the city of Panama against extortionate rents, the unions having declared a general strike to back up their demands and in battles ensuing with the police and troops, workers are known to have been killed, and

"Whereas, United States troops have unwarrantably intervened in the

CHINA UNITING AGAINST PEKING AND GEN. CHANG

Tariff Conference May Collapse Completely

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 19.—When the much fussed-over nine power "tariff conference" meets at Peking next Monday, it may find that it is dealing with a Chinese government which has lost control of all the rest of China.

Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, commander of five combined armies south of the Yangtze river, who last week routed Chang Tso-lin's troops out of Shanghai, has continued driving them northward, seizing all rear guards encountered and is even reported to have declared war against the Peking government.

Toothless Tuan Out of Luck.

This will be a popular war since the Pekin government, controlled by Chang Tso-lin, altho nominally directed by Tuan, has shown a slavish regard for knuckling to the imperialist powers, in fact, the tariff conference was agreed to between Tuan and the imperialist powers on conditions hateful to all nationalist elements.

It is quite evident that Tuan, with Chang Tso-lin controlling him, agreed with the imperialists to hold the conference upon the basis of the Washington treaty, which limits the subjects to be discussed to whether or not China shall be given a small increase in duties.

The Peking Betrayal.

It is also evident that Peking agreed to this fake concession and, in addition, agreed secretly to use all the power of Chang Tso-lin's troops and cantion betrayal of the nationalist movement, to crush the Canton Kuomintang center of nationalism and deliver China into the hands of her oppressors more tightly bound than before. This was agreed to in exchange for a big loan to be granted Peking on the successful conclusion of the tariff conference and for the "permission"—to this puppet government—of collecting two per cent more tariff duties.

The nationalist forces have succeeded in some measure of unifying all elements opposed to Peking against it and its servility to the imperialists. The opposition feels that mere revision under the existing treaties maintains foreign control over China's destinies and of her revenues. The nationalists claim that Chang Tso-lin expected to get a $20,000,000 loan out of the imperialists, which he would use to crush Canton and build his own power.

Unity Against Peking.

Against this threat both of nationalist betrayal and of subjection by Chang Tso-lin of all the more or less independent military governors, the nationalists and some of the military leaders appear to have united against Peking.

General Feng Yu-hsiang, the "christian general," now stationed at Kalgan, Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, whose armies are sweeping Chang Tso-lin's troops out of the territory south of the Yangtze, General Hsiao Yao-nan of the province of Hupeh, to the west of Shanghai, and former president Wu Pei-fu, who was left in the lurch by the imperialists for their favorite Chang Tso-lin, all are more or less joined against Peking and with them the rulers of all Chinese provinces except the extreme northwest.

Conference May Collapse.

This combined force gathering against Peking on the eve of the tariff conference bids no bright future for the imperialists, the Peking government and Chang Tso-lin. Chang is apt to be driven north clear to Tsientsin, the Peking government with the imperialist delegates to be nicely isolated in the northwest corner with all China against it and the conference to blow up entirely.

American imperialism, seeking to save its own interests and to advance them if possible, while Britain and Japan are in bad odor, has cautiously issued an intimation that it would reserve right of independent action in case the conference reached an impasse.

Imperialists Worried.

This has thrown shivers of distress into British and Japanese diplomacy, for fear America is going to take the role of playing up friendship to new China, thus leaving England and Japan to weather the storm of Chinese antagonism as best they may, with more and more of their trade in China lost to American business.

The Chinese are continuing to boycott the "judicial inquiry" the powers decreed for the Shanghai massacres. They take no part, and only one side of the case is heard, the Chinese stating that China will not recognize the verdict, whichever side it favors.

Bad For Oppressors.

But even with the testimony limited to police and officials, the evidence shows the higher officials at fault and this will not aid the imperialists at all. In fact, it damages them.

The Chekiang forces which occupied Shanghai, are welcomed by students and labor bodies and except for troop movements, the situation is without disorder and affairs are running smoothly.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

CANTON GOVERNMENT LEADER WELCOMED TO MOSCOW BY BIG CROWD

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 19.—Soviet Russia today paid high tribute to Khu Khan Min, generalissimo of the Cantonese army, who arrived here for a four-months' visit to study the Solvet system of government.

Khu Khan Min was accompanied by Li Ven Van, general secretary of the Canton government, Tai Kho Tung, general war secretary of the Canton government and a full staff.

Five thousand persons and a guard of honor of red troops were at the station to greet the Cantonese leader.

J. LOUIS ENGDAHL SPEAKS ON LEFT ACTIVITY IN UNION

Pittsburgh Workers Renew Fight

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 13.—Renewed activities to organize the left wing in the local labor movement under the leadership of the Trade Union Educational League resulted from the enthusiastic mass meeting addressed here by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER, speaking on the convention of the American Federation of Labor just adjourned at Atlantic City.

Engdahl stressed the need of the organization of the unorganized showing that little would be done in this direction by the present regime in the American Federation of Labor and this was really the task of the left wing.

Fear Unorganized Workers.

"The Greens, the Wolls, the Duncans and the Lynches in the American Federation of Labor fear the organization of the unorganized, because it will bring new masses of workers into the unions whom they fear they cannot control," said Engdahl.

COOLIDGE GETS SLAP IN FACE ON PEACE PLEA

French Roast American Militarism

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 19—President Coolidge's suggestion to the European nations at the conclusion of the Locarno conference that they assemble here in the near future for another disarmament conference received a slap in the face from European nations.

The suspicion is widely prevalent here that in the negotiations at Locarno there was a quiet agreement among the powers not to participate in any more armament conferences called by the United States, but to consider such conference exclusively within the jurisdiction of the league of nations.

Government Embarassed.

The contemptous rejoinder of the spokesmen of French imperialism to the White House suggestion was distinctly shocking to the down east Yankee, and he tried to conceal his visible embarassment by falling back upon his tawdry stock of puritanical platitudes.

On Mr. Coolidge's behalf, it was said today, he has no desire to force an arms conference upon Europe if Europe does not want one. Neither, it was said, will the United States be put in the "undignified" position of "bidding" against the league for the production.

It was emphasized from the White House today that the American position is now, as it has always been, one of unselfishness in promotion of the theory of armament reduction. It means, officials said, more to impoverished Europe than it does to the United States, separated as we are by two wide oceans from potential trouble.

Ford–Pacifist Turned Imperialist

ical and generally dangerous character. And the average reader of the Tribune was not surprised that he should be thus described. His industrial tactics were assumed to be generally dangerous to the prestige of the vested interests.

BUT Henry Ford sued the Tribune publishers for damages. In the trial, at Mt. Clemens, Mich., he was shown to be unusually deficient in information on certain subjects. On the witness stand he was asked to identify Matthew Arnold. Ford confused him with Benedict Arnold. Matthew Arnold, he said, was a famous traitor to the United States in the revolutionary war. And the conventionally educated, industrially reactionary millionaires, with the journalist-propagandists of like minds, laughed heartil at him. In spite of his spectacular successes as a manufacturer, Ford of the peace-ship and Ford the "anarchist" was ridiculed as an exotic growth among the lilies and other conventional "cut flowers" of the field.

THERE were more important points of differences between Henry Ford and the other class A industrialists. Ford was short on the usual run of factory thugs, known as guards, watchmen or detectives on the pay roll and was long on factory welfare workers. He introduced the minimum wage of $5 a day at a time when it was startling to have it put suddenly in effect on such a large scale. Such methods were alarming to the other industrialists, who didn't see their way clear to follow him in his innovations. He slashed prices on his automobiles at embarrassing moments, moreover. And it was his habit to speak frankly for publication on such delicate but fundamental matters as the gold exchange, the housing problem in industrial districts, the eight-hour day, the five-day week and shop hazzards.

HE was no oridnary wolf. He was a lone wolf and as in the case of Red Riding Hood's wolf he was more dangerous because in disguise. He didn't run with the pack. He was hardly ever seen at the board of commerce. He was feared and disliked by his competitors who were organized in the employers' association of Detroit, the board of commerce and the Michigan manufacturers' association.

Ford was faced with failure in 1921 and needed millions of dollars at once. But none of those other men, magnates of another tradition, shed tears for him. And no one would lend him money. There seemed to be a conspiracy against him. The old guard was out to "get" him. But Ford didn't shed any tears either. Instead he shortened the economic distance between mine and mill and between mill and dealer. He sped up the assembly line. Assembly lines and other fixtures are now so arranged that no employe in the shops bends over in an operation. He isn't permitted to waste that fraction of a second which, repeated hundreds of times daily, would make minutes.

The millions of dollars the Ford Motor company needed were sweated out of the bodies and minds of 150,000 workers. The situation was saved thru the most ruthlessly cold-blooded and methodical application of sensate human beings to insensate machinery and raw iron ever attempted since capitalism was initiated in revolution more than a century ago. Any other organization would have collapsed under similar circumstances. This maneuver demonstrated better than anything else the independence f the Ford Motor company insofar as a capitalist can be independent under capitalism.

CORRESPONDINGLY independent was the Ford acquisition of coal mines in Kentucky and West Virginia, iron mines in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan and a railroad and vessel line. His own railroad and vessel line now carry his own basic minerals to a private dock siding and dock within reaching distance of the very cranes that feed the blast furnaces at River Rouge.

In fact within the capitalist system the Ford Motor company has built a relatively autonomous structure that is distinct from any other of its size. Pursuant to this policy was the eventual centering of all the original stock of the company in the Ford family. Edsel B. Ford, succeeding his father as president in 1919, purchased the remaining 41½ per cent of stock then outstanding.

The company was then reorganized, July 9, 1919, with an authorized capitalization of $100,000,000 and a charter to manufacture automobiles, trucks, tractors, aircraft, internal combustion engines, ships, locomotives and all allied products.

ONE hundred and five acres are now der roof at the parent plant at Highland Park. The plant area at River Rouge is 1,100 acres. At River Rouge are blast furnaces, foundry, coke ovens, machine shops, tractor plant, saw mill, cement plant, glass factory, body plant, locomotive repair shops, more than a mile of dock frontage and storage bins with a total capacity of 2,000,000 tons for iron ore, coke and limestone.

Manufacturing units in the United States are operated at Kearney, N. J., Hamilton, O., Green Island and Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Glassmere, Pa., St. Paul, Minn., and in Michigan at Pheonix, Waterford, Northville, Plymouth, Nankin Mills and Iron Mountain. A saw mill and body plant at Iron Mountain are on a timber tract of 455,000 acres. The Ford coal reserve is estimated at 600,000,000 tons. At Poughkeepsie are manufactured the Johansson gauges, a standard system for controlling mechanical measurements, purchased with sole American manufacturing rights in 1923. At Dearborn are the Ford engineering laboratory and the publishing plant of the Dearborn Independent,—Ford's weekly magazine,—in addition to hundreds of acres of wheat, oats and fruit land and Ford's home.

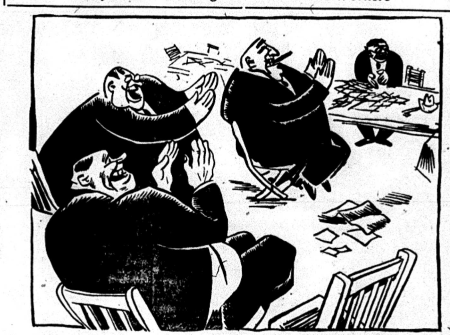
They Didn't Talk Organization of Auto Workers



"The Fat Boys" at the American Federation of Labor, wake up in time to applaud the German delegate who drones: "Communism is the religion of the starving." That's right, old boy! Fat people don't need Communism.

An Infant Giant---The Auto Industry

By EARL R. BROWDER.

IN the past twenty years there has sprung up a new industry in America which has become a veritable young giant—the automobile industry. While in 1900 only 5,000 motor vehicles were produced in the United States, and in 1905 only 25,000, yet by 1924 the production had increased to 3,617,602 vehicles. In this latter year the shipment of automobiles from the factories amounted to 740,578 carloads (figures of the American Railway Association), being the third largest item of railroad freight, exceeded only by petroleum products, and iron. The automobile industry thus presents one of the big problems before the labor movement. A first step toward meeting this problem is to know its scope, and the measure of forces that must be dealt with.

Size of Industry.

THE number of persons directly employed in connection with automobiles has been estimated at 2,893,563.* This includes factory workers, tire workers, dealers and salesmen, garage employes, repair shop workers, chauffeurs, truck drivers, etc. Of this number we are directly concerned only with the wage worekrs engaged in the production of motor vehicles, bodies, and parts. The total number of such workers in 1923 (Biennial Census of Manufacturers) was 404,886, which was an increase from 212,777 in 1921, only two years before. In this brief space of time, automobile manufacturing almost doubled its number of workers.

The product of these workers ranks first in gross value of all industries in the United States, being, in 1923, more than 3 billion dollars, slightly more than the total for steel works and rolling mills, and much higher than the industries which follow—slaughtering and meat packing, foundry and machine shops, cotton goods, petroleum, etc.

Production in 1925 continues to increase over last year, being 6 per cent more for the first eight months of this year than for the same period last year, and larger than in 1923. The industry is still expanding.

It is not necessary to pay much attention to automobile production outside of the United States because it is comparatively negligible in quantity. America produces approximately nine-tenths of the world's automobiles, and uses 83 per cent of them. Of the total of 21,264,752 motor vehicles in the world in 1924, 17,591,981 were in the U. S., a ratio of one car for every six persons. In 1924 there were 464,241 cars exported to other countries, as against only 604 imported.

The Motor Plants

THE U. S. Census of Manufactures divides the industry into two main sections: motor vehicles and motor bodies and parts. The first named contains the heart of the industry.

In 1923 there were 241,356 wage workers directly engaged in these motor production plants. The average earnings per worker were $1,680 per year, or approximately $32 per week.

These workers are employed in 351 different establishments. Only 140 of them are of any size, however, employing 87.5 per cent of all the workers. Of these 140 larger establishments, each producing more than one million dollars value per year, the most important, overshadowing all others, are the General Motors and Ford.

Approximately half of the industry (by volume of values) is concentrated around Detroit, Mich. The number of workers in Detroit is about 60 per cent of the total. Ohio is the next largest producer with a little over 10 per cent. Indiana and New York produce about 7 per cent and 5 per cent respectively. It is thus clear that the problem of the automobile industry is before all a problem in Detroit, Michigan.

Concentration of Capital.

IF the automobile industry is a problem concentrated in Detroit, then Detroit is a problem of Ford and the General Motors Co. How these two great producing units stand in relation to the industry as a whole is seen by comparing the ten leading companies, by value of plant, total assets and accumulated surplus (from Wall Street Journal, June 16, 1924) as follows:

	Plant	Total Assets	Surplus
General Motors	$276,576,056	$593,123,717	$120,699,299
Ford	87,689,443	568,101,639	442,041,081
Studebaker	52,472,636	122,424,280	34,533,734
Willys Overland	27,210,768	67,326,473	13,002,418
Maxwell	15,507,462	58,725,752
Packard	21,626,916	54,936,771	8,676,024
Nash	4,969,330	37,320,392	8,793,687
Hudson	10,050,272	27,386,747	9,459,979
Hupp	7,902,513	22,359,244	9,393,938
Chandler	3,282,711	13,938,880	4,003,185

In the total assets of one and one-half billion dollars of these ten corporations, Ford and General Motors hold more than one-third each (more than half a billion dollars apiece).

Of the total number of cars produced, Ford is responsible for more than half. In 1922, out of a total production of 2,659,064, Ford produced 1,351,333; General Motors (producing larger and higher priced cars) produced in that year 456,763 cars. The two firms together produced more than two-thirds of all cars produced in the United States.

The Problem of Unionization.

THIS tremendous industry is run on the "open shop" basis, and is bitterly hostile to labor union organization. With its tremendous resources, and its extremely resourceful and militant management, it has easily defeated all efforts of the moss-backed bureaucrats at the head of the American Federation of Labor, to organise the workers.

The reactionary labor "leaders" have openly recognized this fact. P. J. Conlon, head of the organization department of the Machinists' Union, declared publicly just before the A. F. of L. Convention (see Locomotive Engineers Journal, October 1925, page 745); that he and his fellow bureaucrats give up the job of unionizing the automobile workers, and said they were prepared to "Let Foster do it." The report says:

"Ford Plant Jurisdiction Offered to Foster.

"'Let Foster do it! This is the conclusion reached by P. J. Conlon, oldest of the executives of the Machinists' Union and ranking vice president, after years of study of the Detroit auto industry. Craft unions are impotent to organize men who have no crafts, Conlon admits. Now why doesn't Foster, head of the Workers Party, or the I. W. W. or the One Big Union, go into Detroit and prove their oft-repeated claims that only industrial unions can organize the Ford workers, Conlon asks.

"The tool room is the heart of the plant," Conlon declares. "If our men were to strike, they could tie up the whole works within six or seven weeks, because the plant has to have new dies out. Our men get the best wages, and their conditions are not so bad as the unorganized who comprise the regular productive force.

"But craft lines have been wiped out by the machine processes in these plants. Each man does one simple thing, over and over. It amounts to common labor, plus a few days of training. There is no feeling of craft skill there. Instead, there is a great crowd of men, who, if they ever protest, will protest all at once, regardless of advice from experienced leaders, and they will develop a sort of revolutionary fury.

"I would say that Detroit and Pittsburgh are the two cities in this country where the chance of revolutionary strikes is greatest. When those movements do come, they will make the country up to the industrial meaning of quantity production.

"Conlon thinks the machinists and the A. F. of L. will be quite willing to hand over the job in Detroit to 'any of these radicals that think they can organize the proletariat that is out of the craft unions.'"

From all of which it is clear that everyone recognizes that only the left wing, with the Communists in the lead, has the energy, the intelligence, and the devotion, necessary to bring the power of the automobile workers into play in the general struggles of the working class or even to make ordinary trade unionists of them.

Mayakovsky's Last Appearance in Chicago

Vladimir Mayakovsky, the famous Russian poet, will speak for the last time in Chicago tonight at 8 p. m., at Schoenhofen Hall, Milwaukee Ave. and Ashland Blvd., at 8 p. m. If you have not heard him this is your last chance.

Altho the hall holds over a thousand a bigger crowd than even that is expected. The enthusiastic crowd that wildly cheered Mayakovsky at his last lecture is expected to pack this hall also. So come early!

CHICAGO LABOR WILL PROTEST AGAINST HORTHY

Protest Rakosi Hanging at Meeting Tonight

The workers of Chicago are urged to attend the protest meeting to be held at the Prudential Hall, North Ave. and North Halsted St., Tuesday evening, October 20, at 8 o'clock and raise their protest against the attempted legalized murder of Mathias Rakosi for his devotion to the working class of Hungary and against the persecution of the Communists in Hungary.

Expose Hungarian Conditions

The International Labor Defense which is calling the protest meeting has arranged to have David Rhys Williams for chairman, James P. Cannon of the International Labor Defense to speak in English and R. Sauser to speak in Hungarian. These speakers will tell of the conditions that the workers of Hungary have been laboring under since the advent of the Horthy regime which was brought into power thru the actions of the present American secretary of commerce, Herbert Hoover, who at that time was in charge of relief work in Austria and Hungary.

The International Labor Defense is attempting to secure a number of other brilliant speakers for the protest meeting.

Calls For Protests

In conjunction with the announcement of this meeting the Chicago section of the International Labor Defense also calls upon the workers to introduce resolutions into the unions and other organizations they may belong to protesting the attempted legalized murder of Mathias Rakosi and the frame-up trial of 100 Hungarian workers for their membership in the Communist Party of Hungary.

Labor Bank Clerk Is Trying to Oust Workers' Official

An attempt led by Duane Swift, renegade Communist and conscientious objector who turned respectable and is now publicity director and new business getter of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, Jackson Blvd. and Clark St., and also vice-president of the Bank Clerks' Union to oust J. Shafir from the presidency of the Bank Clerks' Union for introducing the resolutions favoring recognition of Soviet Russia, world trade union unity and against class collaboration in which labor banks were scored, and for his membership in the Workers Party, was made known by members of the Bank Clerks' Union to a representative of the DAILY WORKER.

In an interview with Duane Swift, he stated that no action would be taken against Shafir, if Shafir would resign from the presidency of the Bank Clerks' Union. He thus intimated that if Shafir did not resign, action would be taken.

J. Shafir, president of the Bank Clerks' Union, in an interview with the DAILY WORKER representative, denies rumors that are being circulated quoting him as saying that he would resign.

Storm Warnings Issued.

Northwest storm warnings were ordered displayed by the weather bureau today on the Great Lakes, except on western Lake Superior and the western and extreme southern portions of Lake Michigan.

T. U. E. L. GENERAL MEETING THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, TO HEAR REPORT ON A. F. OF L. CONVENTION AT ATLANTIC CITY

The regular general meeting of the Chicago Trade Union Educational League will be held Thursday, Oct. 22, at 8 p. m. in Northwest Hall, corner of North and Western Aves. J. Louis Engdahl will speak on "The A. F. of L. Convention and the Left Wing Movement."

This subject is of great importance to all left wing trade unionists. The Green administration has shown itself to be just as subservient to capitalism as the late Gompers was. This convention is of importance because A. A. Purcell, fraternal delegate from the British Trade Union Congress, raised the issue of world trade union unity and support for Soviet Russia. The action of Green in repudiating the movement for trade union unity does not settle the matter. The convention served as a sounding board to acquaint the American workers with the need of international trade union unity, and this issue will grow more important in the near future.

All left wing and progressive trade unionists are invited to this meeting. Besides the main speaker there will be time for questions and discussion.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—A fire in a tenement district of Yonkers which broke out early in the morning imperiled the lives of many, seven being seriously burned and taken to the hospital.

HEIR OF BRITAIN'S THRONE BECOMES A FEMALE IMPERSONATOR

LONDON, Oct. 19—Photographs of the prince of Wales dressed as a flapper have aroused a storm of protest here.

The photographs were taken when the prince played the female leade in a playlet given on the Repulse enroute from South America.

Staunch old timers, who have been bewailing the fact that the younger generation of Englishmen is not sufficiently virile, declare that pictures of the prince in the clothes of a woman do not encourage the young men of Great Britain to sterner manners.

It is understood that Buckingham palace is not pleased with the publication of the pictures, feeling they are hardly in keeping with royal dignity, and may expose the real character of the prince.

RED INTERNATIONAL OF LABOR UNIONS

(R. I. L. U.)

THE T.U.E.L.

Represents the Left Wing of the Labor Movement. Its Purpose is to Strengthen the Labor Unions by Amalgamation of Existing Unions, Organization of the Unorganized, and by Replacing Reactionary and Class Collaboration Policies with a Unified Program for the Transformation of the Unions into Organs of Revolutionary Class Struggle for the Overthrowal of Capitalism and the Establishment of a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

DAVIS, STEEL UNION HEAD, SEEKS GRIEF

In Rash Moment Agrees to Debate Foster

WARREN, Ohio—At a meeting of the Liberty Lodge of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, which was held on Oct. 10, in this city, D. J. Davis, national secretary-treasurer of the association, delivered himself of much wisdom and many platitudes.

Brother Davis spoke about the rise of labor from slavery to its present position, at the expense of many sacrifices. He spoke of the usurpation of power by the United States supreme court in the matter of the child labor law, and of the decision in the Corona case, which makes it possible for all unions to be sued for losses to employers caused by strikes.

Wants Living Wage for the Dead.

He then switched to the question of sick and death benefits and declared that the electricians pay $2.70 per quarter for insurance, while the Amalgamated Association is furnishing it for 75 cents for three months. This seems to be one of the main slogans of the conservative labor leaders, who see in insurance one of the most important means of helping the working class. This is so much the more glaring, when one considers that there are only 11,000 out of the 500,000 to 600,000 steel workers organized in the Amalgamated.

He pointed out that the wages were high during the war, but that now the capitalists are competing for the foreign markets. At least he realized the necessity of carrying on a campaign to organize the unorganized. It was a decision of the 1924 convention of the Amalgamated Association, but Mike Tighe, the president of the association, has no intention of obeying the decisions of the convention. This latter statement Davis did not make, for it was clear that he merely posed as one with faithful intentions of carrying out the decisions of the Amalgamated.

White Criticizes Lies

During the discussion, Comrade William J. White attacked the Amalgamated Journal for its vicious campaign of slander and lies against the Communists and the I. W. W. In a recent issue of the Journal, there was an article of the National Labor News Service—an A. F. of L. organ—attacking George Hardy for his services in the I. W. W. and Communist movement.

Davis answered by making statements about the Communists. White challenged Davis to mention the name of a single Communist who had been disloyal to the labor movement. Davis heatedly attacked Wm. Z. Foster. White declared that Foster came out of the steel strike with a record that bears comparison with any one.

Get the Same Apple Tree.

White challenged Davis to meet Foster on a public platform and to make his statements in Foster's presence. Davis accepted the challenge, and it is the hope of the steel workers of Warren that they witness this debate—for they are sure Foster will make the feathers fly.

Detroit Carpenters' for Saklatvala

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 19—Local 2140 of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners joined other locals in denouncing the exclusion of Shapurji Saklatvala from this country because of his advanced working class views. After considerable discussion by the members of the union, many of whom hail from various parts of John Bull's domain, the resolution adopted by Local 420 which appeared in the DAILY WORKER Oct. 9, was presented by one of the members and unanimously endorsed.

Retail Clerks Sign Contract Retaining Present Wage Scale

The Retail Clerks' Union has signed a contract with the Retail Clothing Merchants' Association, which provides for a retention of the present minimum scale of $40 a week for men and $25 a week for women. The agreement calls for a 54-hour week for the men and a 48-hour week for the women.

The contract was signed for a period of one year following a meeting of the union which voted to accept the old contract.

JUDGE ATTEMPTS TO BLOCK UNION DRIVE IN W. VA.

Federal Court Outlaws United Mine Workers

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Oct. 19.—Judge George W. McClintic of the United States district court has handed down a permanent injunction against the United Mine Workers of America in behalf of virtually every mine in a belt south of the Kanawha river and running almost to the southern end of the state.

Against Miners' Union

This injunction directed against the members and the officials of the United Mine Workers' Union is an attempt to stop the organization drive now being attempted by the union.

The decision was handed down in twelve injunction cases involving 309 coal companies that sought an injunction to restrict union activities.

Territory Involved

The territory covered by the companies involved includes the Williamson-Tug river, the Winding Gulf, the New River, the Green Brier fields, and all the Kanawha field south of the Kanawha river.

The judge in issuing his decision in behalf of the coal operators stated that the United Mine Workers of America was "unlawfully combined and conspired absolutely to monopolize and control all labor in the U. S. and on the American continent engaged in mining and producing coal."

Sides With Operators

The judge took the side of the operators thruout the entire proceedings and every opportunity that presented itself was used as a means by the judge to blacken the union. He charged the union with violation of the interstate commerce law, saying the union conspired to stop all shipments of coal produced in nonunion and unorganized mines. He also claimed that the union miners were inciting riots and strikes.

Most Drastic

The injunction that was issued is the most drastic and sweeping that has been issued in this section of the country by any judge.

Hobo Convention to be Held in Denver; Trade Unions Invited

DENVER, Oct. 19.—The 20th annual convention of the International Brotherhood Welfare Association, popularly known as the Hobo Welfare League, opens in Denver November 10. Delegates come from local groups of the association but trade unions and others are invited to send fraternal delegates. Free transportation to and from jobs is one of the topics interesting this gathering of migratory workers. Other convention themes are old age and unemployment insurance, shorter workday, international cooperation and industrial superpower. The national headquarters are at 410 Clinton St., Cincinnati, A. V. Darroch, secretary.

TOPEKA COUNCIL SENDS DELEGATE TO NEGRO MEET

Also Talks on World Trade Union Unity

(By Worker Correspondent.)

TOPEKA, Kans., Oct. 19.—The industrial council of Topeka, Kansas, and Hod Carriers' Union are sending William Bills of the Hod Carriers' Union to the American Negro Labor Congress to be held in Chicago starting October 25 and ending with Oct. 21. Both bodies have decided to share the expenses.

The members of both bodies in their speeches brought out the absolute necessity of organizing the vast mass of Negro workers in America. The sending of a delegate to the American Negro Labor Congress was considered as a means of bringing about the organization of the Negro workers in America.

World Trade Union Unity.

J. E. Snyder of the Butcher Workmen's Union of Kansas City gave a talk on world trade union unity. In his speech he showed the absolute necessity of having labor unite on a world-wide scale to carry on an effective struggle against the bosses. Snyder had stopped at Topeka on his way to attend the Farmers' Union meet at Hays, Kansas, where he was also to talk on world trade union unity.

A haloween dance is planned by the building committee of the industrial council to raise money for a new labor temple.

Print Saklatvala Speech.

The entire speech of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, who was barred from the interparliamentary union congress and this country by an act of Secretary of State Kellogg for a speech in behalf of Indian independence in the British parliament, will be printed in the labor paper that is issued here and also in the one that is issued in Wichita, Kansas.

FIRE WORKERS FOR REFUSAL TO SIGN AGREEMENT

CUMBERLAND, Md., Oct. 19.—Eighteen engineers and eighteen firemen have been discharged by the western Maryland railroad for their refusal to sign an agreement accepting a revision of rules and working conditions, which the company heads tried to force on the men.

The company issued a notice telling the men employed by the road they must either sign the agreement or leave the employ of the railroad.

"Not Discharging."

"We are not discharging the men who refuse to sign the agreement. We have changed the working rules as an economic measure, and unless they are willing to work under these new rules, they are considered to have left the service of the company voluntarily," declared Arthur Williamson, superintendent of the Elkins division when interviewed on the discharge of the 36 rail workers.

Despite this denial of the discharge by the superintendent, the union heads point out, that he called the men into his office and asked them if they were willing to sign and work under the terms of the agreement. Upon the men telling the superintendent that as union men, they could not sign such an agreement as it would injure the union in their rewages and told their services were to hand over their keys and books of rules, were given an order for their wages and told hteir services were no longer required.

The agreement which the men were asked to sign was such that if they did sign, they would have been immediately expelled from the uion.

British Labor Party Delegation Visiting the Soviet Republic

MOSCOW, Sept. 15.—(By Mail.)—The English parliamentary delegation consisting of several members of the labor party including Messrs. Walhead Taylor, Grenfell and others that lately arrived at Moscow, visited the session of the Central Executive Committee of the U. S. S. R. When the delegates appeared in the hall, Comrade Kalinin, president of the C. E. C., suspended the sitting and welcomed English guests. Mr. Walhead, in capacity of chairman of the delegation, said in reply:

"We are very grateful for the cordial reception accorded to us and we congratulate you on a brilliant success of your work of reconstruction of Russia. Your union must unite all peoples into one strong union. We intend to study your methods and follow your path. We try to bring pressure on our government in order that it put relations with your country on the same level with other countries."

Kalinin replied by stressing the significance of the closer rapprochement between the English laborers and the U. S. S. R. that is taking place lately. "We should like you" he said, "to study all that is being done in the Soviet Union and, after your return to England, to use it in the interests of the working class."

TOM MANN, VETERAN LEADER OF BRITISH LEFT WING MOVEMENT, WRITES OF SCARBOROUGH MEET

The left wingers and revolutionary militants who, in the American labor movement, aspire to direct the organized masses into channels leading to revolutionary action, have something to learn from Tom Mann, veteran fighter of revolutionary labor, still actively in the harness at an age after a stormy career that would send the average man to toothless decadence at the fireside.

As one who for two decades has followed the correct line of revolutionary work within the trade unions, Tom Mann, speaks with authority, as well, of the National Minority Movement, of which he is the active head. His advice to revolutionary unionists that influence in the unions can be won only by accepting the burden of years of laborous devotion to trade union work of a comparatively humdrum character, is something that is needed for American militants. The T. U. E. L. offers his article on the Scarborough congress as an interesting account of that event, but first of all as a lesson to our own left wingers.

By TOM MANN

In order to judge correctly of the nature of the change in outlook and disposition of the trade unionists of Britain as shown by the decisions of the congress at Scarborough, it is necessary to have regard to the congress decisions for several years previously.

It is sometimes the case that a match vote can be obtained that does not reflect the real view of the delegates or of those they represent. On many previous occasions delegates have been active at the congress who had a real revolutionary outlook and the congress has on a number of occasions voted by substantial majorities in favor of the overthrow of capitalism.

The last three congresses have witnessed definite attempts at co-ordinating the left wing policy, and the concentrating upon the most vital questions and securing the greatest results.

How to Win Influence.

In the nature of things, allowing for the growth and development of the unions, the officials have had an overpowering influence as compared with the rank and file, and they have edged aside and ruled out of order efforts of the rank and file to throw the movement to the left.

This power the officials will have, mainly because of the lack of steady and tactful persistency on the part of the men with the right outlook, particularly in their refusal to accept positions on committees, branch secretaryships and other official positions in the union, the acceptance means giving a considerable amount of time and energy to work of a comparatively humdrum character.

Purcell's Beginning.

Last year, at Hull, a real substantial advance was made. When Purcell as president of the congress, struck out boldly for the waging of the class war and for real internationalism, he knew he had a number of colleagues prepared to stand for and fight for that policy, and Purcell's courageous attitude, beyond doubt, gave a real stimulus to many of the delegates especially the unofficial element.

Of course, the punishment meted by the master class in cutting wages made it extremely urgent that a bold attitude should be taken up, or self-respecting men would cease to have any confidence in the movement.

The evidences of left wing developments which the capitalist press saw and denounced and villified in every possible way, had its counterpart in the increased popularity of those buffers on behalf of capitalism, men like Thomas and Clynes.

Must Serve and Work.

Here is where the Minority Movement rendered excellent service. They extended their propagandist activities to the utmost extent. They laid it down as vital that their members must not be content with criticizing the reactionaries, but must demonstrate their readiness to fill any position of usefulness in the unions, serve as delegates on the trades councils, visit other union branches, serve on special organizing committees, and in every way possible add to union membership and militancy.

The persistency of this work resulted in a distinct manifestation on the part of the members in favor of a revolutionary attitude, aiming immediately at some betterment of their position and ultimately at the overthrow of the capitalist system.

This was reflected on many trades councils and on many union executives, and also on the general council of the Trade Union Congress.

This year's president of the congress, A. B. Swales of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, did splendidly. His presidential address gave tone and direction to the congress from the first jump. The press had carried on a virulent campaign; they had villified Russia and every one that dared declare in favor of Russia; they lied foully against the Minority Movement, and Communism was denounced, condemned and villified in unprecedented fashion. Notwithstanding all this, as the various questions came up discussion, vote after vote went left and not right.

Undoubtedly many of the delegates were sitting on the fence ready to go whatever way was to turn out successful, and this applied particularly to some of those that were candidates for positions on the general council.

Amongst those who spoke out courageously were Cook, Bromley, Tillett and Bramley.

HARRY POLLITT
British Communist Leader, Delegate from Boilermakers to Scarborough Congress.

Comrade Harry Pollitt did magnificently. Again and again his tact and alertness saved the stiuation for the reds.

Brown, Jacobs, Elsbury and others acquitted themselves most creditably

Pollitt Wins Against Thomas.

At almost the last hour of the last day of the congress a trial of strength took place. Reactionary J. H. Thomas M. P., the most blatant of all who pretend to speak for labor, made an attack. After he had spoken, Pollitt followed and when the vote was taken the revolutionary side won on a membership card vote by more than three millions.

Another three years of intensified propaganda and real education and I have no shadow of doubt that the Trade Union Congress of England will be out and out revolutionary and ready to face any situation.

Striking Waiters of Frisco Learn That Progressives Are O. K.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Oct. 19—After a struggle of eight weeks, the striking waiters of the San Francisco and Palace Hotels have been permitted to return to work by their union, upon recommendation of the strike committee.

At a meeting of strikers only, the day before above action was taken at a regular union meeting, the boys voted by secret ballot, 83 to 65, to make it a bitter-end fight.

Bosses Can't Understand.

The employers, including the industrial association are baffled by the tactics used by the Waiters' Union.

As stated in a previous article in the T. U. E. L. page, all other trades, including the cooks, stayed on the job; the Central Labor Council which is controlled by the conservative element and some would-be politicians (endorse your friends and punish your enemies) did not give us any effective assistance.

Fight All Alone.

Our International (Hotel and Restaurant Employes) gave us a paltry financial donation of $5,000 but no cooperation. In fact International President Floree, who came out here at our request after the strike had started, disgraced himself in the eyes of the membership by his compromising behaviour.

On the other hand the managers of the two big hotel corporations went for help to the powerful industrial association, the strikebreaking agency of the chamber of commerce, and received its full co-operation. And so our strike turned into a fight of organized capital on one hand and the membership (2,200) of Waiters' Local No. 30 on the other hand.

The vast majority of the union membership have learned this important lesson, that the progressives, by advocating amalgamation in the hotel and restaurant industry, do not do so to disrupt our union but to make it stronger, so that some day we may gain a clear-cut victory over our bosses

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

McNIDER TRIES "TREAT 'EM ROUGH" STUFF ON WOMAN LABOR SPEAKER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Hanford McNider of Iowa, selected by President Coolidge as assistant secretary of war, has a record as one of the "treat 'em rough" inciters of the mob which drove a labor woman speaker from her home town, Mason City, about four years ago. He and his father are bankers.

INSPIRATION AND AUTHORITY FILL POTTS WITH PEP

Call Police to Keep Militants Out

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 19.—Potts, Botterill, Sharock, Welch & Co., including a few other weaklings who lack the courage of their renegade convictions were in attendance at a meeting of Local Union 19 Monday, Oct. 12, and with the aid of plain clothes thugs armed with blackjacks "and something more," as they intimated, proceeded to exclude those whom Indiana's leading stock man, Wm. L. Hutcheson, (incidentally president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters & Joiners) has frowned upon.

The rank and file have long since gotten hep to these parasites, and their sympathies are all with the excluded rank and filers. Potts and his ilk, not having the support of any within the union, have used the state cossacks and the Detroit police, but these no longer being available, they have resorted to the use of a bunch of semi-official thugs, who, like themselves, have a "for hire" sign on.

Even these people find it impossible to support Hutcheson's cause. The thug in charge that night requested one of Hutcheson's victims to cease arguing with Business Agent Jack Welch because Welch was drunk and only the drink was talking.

Though Hutcheson is drunk with power, his agent Potts, finds it expedient to keep his dupes drunk with moonshine. Their acts are consistent with such inspiration.

Milwaukee Council Has an Argument But Misapplies It

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—A recent resolution by the Federated Trades Council of Milwaukee should have been referred to the A. F. of L. convention and been read just following the patriotic speech of Green about the American government being the best possible form of government and relating how beautiful a country it is for the workers who are so fortunate as to live here and work no more than 12 hours a day for an average of about $25 a week.

The resolution states that even in the land of LaFollette, strange to say, there is poverty and distress, and it quotes the First Wisconsin National Bank as stating that:

"Out of every 100 men, who arrive at the age of 65 years, six become wealthy, nine are self-supporting, and 85 are dependent on relatives, friends or charity."

The council wants the provision for old age pensions, enacted in 1925 by the Wisconsin legislature, put into effect,—"so that the workers of Milwaukee county, who have worn out their usefulness in industry, need not become objects of charitable institutions, but shall be legally entitled to an old age pensions."

But, of course, the council is not yet convinced that the A. F. of L. non-partisan" policies is ineffective and that labor should have a labor party. The council has some lessons to learn yet from the failure of LaFolletism.

CONNECTICUT PAINTERS AID ANTHRACITE

Will Take Matter to State Conference

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 19—At the meeting of Painters' Local 4, held last night, it was decided to support loyally the striking anthracite miners. Not only was the following resolution adopted, but it was decided to introduce it at the coming state conference of painters:

"Be it resolved: That we pledge our support both morally and financially to the anthracite miners in their strike, and be it further

"Resolved: That we demand that both the federal and state government do not intervene in the anthracite strike, and that neither in any way use governmental power against the struggling workers of the anthracite field, and be it further

"Resolved: That we pledge our support to a campaign of publicity thru public meetings, resolutions, etc., in support of the demands of the anthracite miners and to mobilize the workers generally for resistance against the attacks of the employers upon the standard of living of the workers."

Bricklayer Wants to Throw a Couple at His Union Officials

By UNION BRICKLAYER

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 19—On the one side a union bricklayer sees the treachery of the fakers in the Bricklayers' Masons' and Plasterers' International Union, Bowen, Thornton, Gleason and cohorts; and on the other side faker McGivern and his bunch representing the Operative Plasterers' Union.

Now these fakers are struggling among themselves for dues from the workers and blood money from the masters. Of course, amalgamation is out of order, say the chief. bloodsuckers, and according to a statement made by Bowen, Gleason and Thornton to the N. Y. Times of July 7th, we are not trying to amalgamate with the Operative Plasterers' Union.

After a resolution was passed at the last convention at Saratoga, N. Y., by the B. M. I. Union for amalgamation.

Of course, the O. P. U. fakers were afraid of losing their jobs, so the masters suggested to the fakers a jurisdictional award committee at Washington, D. C., and between all these leeches the poor lambs are bled to death.

During the past three years Bowen and Thornton, labor fakers of the Bricklayers' International Union, with the assistance of the local labor fakers, have scabbed every job in New York City. The latest being the new Madison Garden job, Tex Richard's new heaven of thievery.

Fuller Construction Co. Abandons Open Shop Idea

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Because it advertised for bricklayers to work under "open shop" conditions in Florida and in Rochester, the George A. Fuller Co., one of the largest construction companies in America, has been compelled to make special terms of peace with the Bricklayers,' Masons' and Plasterers' International Union.

The Fuller concern was struck by the Bricklayers' International because it signed an agreement with the Operative Plasterers' International which recognized the claims of the latter organization during its recent quarrel with the Bricklayers. Peace between the bricklayers and the operative plasterers was restored by an agreement reached at Atlantic City this month, restoring the former terms of allotment of work between the two.

The bricklayers refused to return to work on the Fuller jobs, involving $250,000,000 in building contracts, until the Fullers retracted their "open shop" talk.

MASS MEETING

SPEAKER:

J. Louis Engdahl, Editor of Daily Worker

Subject: The A. F. of L. Convention, and the Left Wing Movement.

Everybody Welcome——Admission Free

Auspices of the Trade Union Educational League, Local Chicago

Mobilize for Unity and Work

Call of the National Executive Committee to the Membership of the Young Workers League of America.

COMRADES: The third national convention of the league is over. It has chosen a new leadership on the basis of the decisions of the Comintern and the Y. C. I. and has entrusted to this leadership the tasks of the bolshevization of the league and its transformation into a mass Communist league of young workers. It has laid the foundation for the liquidation of all factionalism in the league and for the beginning of a period of mass activity.

We have just passed thru a period of prolonged factional struggle—which at times assumed bitter and impermissable forms. Out of this struggle, however, there developed the possibilities for the unification of the league. Thru this struggle there crystallized the correct Leninist line of policy for the league. Thru this struggle there was developed and brot out a co-ordinated leadership capable of carrying this line of policy into effect. Thru the ideological struggle the whole policy of the league was brot out to light, examined, and analyzed before the membership as a whole. Thru the prolonged discussion, the political level of the membership was raised and the league as a whole more educated to an understanding of its role as the vanguard of the working youth in its struggle for everyday demands, and as the leader in the struggle for the emancipation of the whole working class.

The convention has acted and the period of discussion and controversy is over. The political basis of the struggle in the league liquidated even before our third convention when the national convention of the Workers Party, with the help of the Comintern, finally put an end to the controversy that had raged within the organization for nearly two years. The liquidation of the political controversy in the party carried with it similar consequences for the league inasmuch as our league leadership had accepted the incorrect line of policy of the former majority of the C. E. C. The solution of the crisis in the party, therefore, was politically the greatest step forward in the process of unifying the league. There is no longer any basis for factions or factionalism in the Young Workers League.

Comrades: We, the Young Communist League of America, stand before a period of great revolutionary opportunities. The sharpening of the class struggle in this country is drawing the young workers more and more into the arena of economic and political struggle. The young workers are beginning to awaken; they are beginning to take up the struggle for the necessities of their everyday life, for better conditions of life and work, for greater opportunities for self-development—a struggle that is full of the greatest revolutionary implications. It is the task of the Communist youth not only to facilitate and accelerate this process of awakening and struggle but to crystallize it, organize it, expend and develop it, assume the leadership of it, and to transform it from an immediate struggle for every day demands into a conscious fight against the capitalist class and the whole capitalist system. We must stand in the front ranks of all the struggles of the young workers; we must assume our role as the vanguard of the toiling youth.

The Young Workers League can only achieve this role of the vanguard of the young workers in their struggles if the entire membership stands united and ready on the platform of action behind the leadership and line of policy of the N. E. C. and the Y. C. I. Every member must take his place in the ranks and on the field of struggle. The unification of our organization now becomes our revolutionary duty. Only if we unify our ranks, only if we bolshevize our league and convert it into an unyielding iron cohort of the revolution can we win the confidence of the masses of young workers and establish our leadership over them. Unity and work!

The tasks that are facing the league at this period are many and difficult. The N. E. C. is determined that these tasks shall be met in a Bolshevik manner and our league proves itself a worthy section of the World Communist League of Youth—the Young Communist International. It calls upon the entire membership to close the ranks of the league and unite and mobilize for work!

Into the masses of the young workers in the shops and factories! Become an organic part of the working youth. Participate in all their struggles. Take the lead in all the struggles of the young workers!

Forward to a united league!

Forward to the bolshevization of our league and to a mass Young Communist League in America!

National Executive Committee,
Young Workers League of America.

PARTY MEMBERS TO BE TRAINED FOR LEADERSHIP

Registration in Workers' School Starts Now

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—A course, to train party functionaries, active trade unionists and active party workers generally for capable leadership in the unions and other party work, is offered by the New York Workers' School, 108 East 14th St., New York City.

To gain admission to this course, members must prove their activity and sufficient previous preparation to qualify them for pursuing their studies to advantage. Those in doubt about eligibility should confer with branch educational directors or the director of the Workers' School.

In order that the most active members of the party can take the course, it is so planned that they will be required to devote only one night a week for a period of six months.

During the first three months, they will take a course in "Marxism," instructor, Bert Wolfe, and a course in "Party History and Problems," instructor, William W. Weinstone. During the second three months, they will take a course in "Leninism," instructor, Bert Wolfe, and a course in "Our Work in the Trade Unions," instructor, Bert Miller. A group of twenty-five active party members will be selected for this course on the basis outlined above. It will be given on Tuesday nights from 7:30 to 10:30 beginning the second week in Nov. A second group will begin on Wednesday nights to pursue the same course in reverse order that is "Marxism-Leninism" for a period of six months and for the first three months "Work in the Trade Unions" and for the second three months "Party History and Problems."

Registration for this course should not be delayed a single day as each applicant will be personally examined and a selection made of the most active and best fitted to pursue the course. Activity is much more important than previous training altho some minimum requirement in previous training will be insisted upon so that the applicant shall have read the "A. B. C. of Communism" and either "Value, Price and Profit" or "Wage, Labor and Capital," and either "The Communist Manifesto" or "Socialism—Utopian and Scientific." or can give evidence of equivalent study.

NEW HAVEN MEMBERSHIP MEETING PLEDGES SUPPORT TO NEW C. E. C.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 19.—The membership meeting of New Haven (District 15) of the Workers (Communist) Party went overwhelmingly on record in favor of supporting the new C. E. C. and its activities for the reorganization of the party.

Vote On Resolution 58 to 0.

By a vote of 58 to 0, with 6 abstaining, the resolution, introduced by Comrade Wolfe, who reported for the C. E. C. was carried by the meeting after a long and interesting discussion of the technical problems of reorganization and of the political meaning of the resolution. Comrade Wolfe, in making his report, summarized briefly the history of the party and its recent convention in so far as it pertained to the light they threw on the Bolshevization of our party.

Party Crises Reviewed.

He pointed out that the party had gone thru three main crises which he named:

1. The crisis of the formative period—(Who shall enter our ranks and how shall we distinguish ourselves from the opportunists?)
2. The problem of our relation to the masses—(legality, united front, labor party.)
3. The Bolshevization crisis—(attitude toward opportunistic elements and elimination of the social-democratic form of organization.)

The speaker pointed out that in each of the three crises, the Communist International had intervened and greatly aided the party in solving its problems. In the first crisis, it had compelled unity between the C. P., the C. L. P., and the U. C. P. In the second, it had thrown its influence on the side of those who favored a legal party, active united front campaigns and the labor party; and in the third case, hastened the liquidation of Loreism and opportunism and hastened the Bolshevization and reorganization of the party.

Taking up the recent party convention. Comrade Wolfe showed how unanimous decisions on the fundamental questions of immediate reorganization, the expulsion of Lore, the removal of Askeli and the unanimous acceptance of the C. I. cable had laid the basis for united action of the entire party for its reorganization and Bolshevization. He emphasized the fact that an attempt to cast doubts upon a C. I. decision was an un-Communist act and described in detail the attacks of Lore upon the Comintern and its decisions. He then described the activities of the new C. E. C. for the Bolshevization of the party and detailed the entire reorganization plan specific application to the problems of the New Haven district. After explaining the importance of this reorganization and urging immediate activity on the part of the district, he ended with an appeal for unified support of the C. E. C. in its efforts to reorganize and Bolshevize the party.

Comrade Wolfe was followed by Comrade Simons, organizer of District 15, who recounted the recent experiences of the district which throw light upon the practical problems of reorganization and described the success that reorganization had had in France and Germany.

Questions Show Live Interest.

A great number of questions, addressed to Comrade Wolfe, revealed the intense interest of the membership in the reorganization and that, to quote the speaker, "District 15 was mentally already reorganizing itself."

Following a general discussion on the C. I. decision, the recent convention, and the problems of reorganization and Bolshevization, Comrades Markoff, Spector, Gurevich, Weisberg, Kreas and Schuchman spoke against endorsing the recent C. I. cable until they had further information. Their speeches took the form of a proposal to strike paragraph four out of the resolution, which was introduced by Comrade Wolfe into the meeting. The proposal was, however, voted down and then the entire resolution was adopted by the vote of 58 to 0, with the 6 abstentions mentioned at the beginning of this report. The resolution which puts the New Haven district and record for united activity in support of the Central Executive Committee for the reorganization and Bolshevization of the party was practically the same resolution adopted by the New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and Boston membership meetings.

CLASSES IN ENGLISH AT NEW YORK WORKERS' SCHOOL START THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—The Workers' School begins courses in elementary, intermediate and advanced English this week. On account of the re-organization of the party, they are of exceptional importance. All party members must now learn English. The courses and instructors are as follows:

Elementary English: Instructor, Anna Jacobson—Mondays, from 8 to 9:30 p. m.

Intermediate English: Instructor, Sonia Ginsburg—Wednesdays, from 8 to 9:30 p. m.

Advanced English: Instructor, Eli Jacobson—Wednesdays, from 7:30 to 9 p. m.

All of these courses begin this week. Register today as you will not be able to keep pace with the class if you do not begin at the beginning.

WORKERS PARTY IN NEW HAVEN ELECTION FIGHT

Slate of Communists Against Labor Foes

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 19.—Local New Haven has filed the necessary amount of signatures with the state secretary at Hartford for the municipal election in the city of New Haven. Last year the workers of New Haven had an opportunity to vote for the state ticket of the Workers Party and this year for the municipal ticket.

Good List of Workers

The ticket consists of workers well known in New Haven. For Mayor, R. S. Kling is put up, born in New Haven, a laundry driver who organized the laundry workers' union recently and whose record as a machinist is paved with blacklisting for organization work.

For controller, Abraham Horwitz, member of Carpenters' Union 1742, with a long record of service in an official position in the union. For treasurer, Joseph Schlossberg, a structural iron worker. For city clerk, Rose Markle, needle trades worker, who was arrested recently for distribution of literature to the Shelton textile workers. For collector, Joseph Joffe, a worker in a watch making establishment.

Opposed to the Workers (Communist) party candidates will be the republicans, democrats, and socialists. The democrats now in office have renominated their entire slate with the exception of mayor, the candidate for president of the board of aldermen being the president at the same time of the New Haven Trades Council, showing the close relations between the democratic party and the labor leaders.

The republican forces have not yet made their nominations, a fight being on between the local Ullman machine and the Willard group which is the local expression of the state controlling Roraback machine—but the outcome will not help the workers any.

The socialists are led by one who is the chairman of the Workmen's Circle district committee, who has stooped to all methods to discredit the Communists and who is accused by the workers of the city of supplying the capitalist press with material against the Communists.

The Workers (Communist) Party ticket is the only ticket in the field which represents the real interests of the working class of the city.

SOUTH BEND ON SHOP NUCLEUS BASIS

The local of the Workers (Communist) Party in South Bend has been completely reorganized on the basis of shop nuclei.

It is not necessary to state that the shop nucleus form of organization will revitalize and increase by leaps and bounds the activity and well-functioning of our party. We will, however, quote below excerpts from a letter by the newly elected secretary, which shows how the comrades in South Bend feel about the reorganization:

"All existing Workers (Communist) Party branches in South Bend have reorganized, under the name of the 'Studebaker Shop Nucleus' consisting of about 32 members. Not all members are working at the Studebaker plant. Those working in other factories will make reports to the Studebaker nucleus and when they become strong enough, they will organize a separate shop nucleus in their factories. An executive committee of seven was elected. . . .

"Reorganization has put new life into the movement here. We have been pretty much of slackers thru lack of right organization, tactics, and help. I pledge to do my utmost to build this nucleus. Will send detailed reports later."

LAST LECTURE ON RUSS POETRY BY MAYAKOVSKY GIVEN TONIGHT, OCT. 20

Youngstown and Toledo Comrades, Take Notice

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Oct. 19.—On Sunday, Oct. 25, at 3:30 p. m., there will be a membership meeting in Youngstown, Ohio, at the Hungarian Hall, 338½ W. Federal Street, to discuss bolshevization and reorganization of the party.

On Wednesday, Oct. 28, at 8 p. m., a similar meeting will be held in Toledo, Ohio, at the Labor Temple, 131 Michigan Street.

All comrades are instructed to lay everything aside and attend this meeting. Comrade I. Amter, district secretary, will speak at both meetings, so that, after thoro discussion, the comrades will be familiar with these important problems, and will be able to proceed with the complete reorganization of the party.

The meetings will begin promptly and all comrades must be on hand in time.

Workers' House to Present a Tolstoy Play Saturday Nite

"Ot Ney Vse Kachestva" by L. N. Tolstoy, and "Vyigraly" by E. Veruyustchy, will be presented next Saturday night, Oct. 24, at the Workers' House, 1902 W. Division St. Some of the best local Russian players are participating.

At the same affair a raffle will take place. A violin, a ladies' purse and a ladies' watch will be raffed off.

The proceeds will go for the Workers' House.

MONROE, Mich., Oct. 19.—Fire of mysterious origin today destroyed the France Stone company's plant here, entailing a loss of $400,000.

SECTION ONE

(LOOP—SOUTH TERRITORY)

Attention!

The section membership meeting of Section No. 1, which takes in the following branches: South Side English, South Side Scandinavian, Englewood English, Clothing Shop Nuclei Nos. 2, 3 and 4, will be held Wednesday, October 21, 8 p. m. sharp, at the South Side Community House, 3201 S. Wabash Ave.

Every member of the Workers Party attached to any one of the above named units, must attend this meeting if he or she wishes to retain membership in the Workers (Communist) Party.

Registration of all members will take place here, for reorganization purposes and assignments, as to where the various comrades belong, will be made.

It is of the utmost importance to the successful reorganization of the party in the city of Chicago that every member belonging to Section No. 1 attend this meeting.

DAILY WORKER BOOSTER WANTS RELIEF CLUB ORGANIZED TO AID DAILY THRU FINANCIAL STRESS

Dear Comrades:

Is it not possible that we can form a club or combination to help our good friend, the DAILY WORKER, over its financial trouble, or to form a relief committee of unlimited number who would give $1 per month for a set time to be agreed upon? I would suggest a period of 12 months.

Our experience in the cause dates back to the exil days of 1870-71, when that demon the Marquis de Gallifet, murdered 40,000 of our good people in Paris, France. At present we find that there are many countries repeating the act of Gallifet by the slaughter of innocent people in Italy, Spain, Roumania, Germany, et al, and it may be our turn next, when the iron heel will become a fact.

Yours for peace and happiness for all who toil with the brain or brawn.—William F. Haywood.

"Better Late Than Never."

Dear Comrades:

I am following the saying "Better late than never" in sending my contribution of five dollars to the DAILY WORKER fund, and am glad that you have been able to weather the storm so far. Why not start a reserve fund?—Johanna Cozier, Vallejo, Cal.

matter, have occupied the city of Panama and are acting the role of strikebreakers, and

"Whereas, The conditions surrounding this invasion of an ostensibly independent country, together with the facts that such invasions are nothing new in the history of Panama and that the United States government has at all times exercised financial and political control over this so-called republic, plainly reveals the true status of Panama as that of a subject nation or protectorate, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Chicago Federation of Labor denounces the use of American soldiers as strikebreakers and demands their immediate withdrawal from Panaman territory, and further demands that the United States government publicly relinquish all rights of supervision, interference or control in the affairs of the republic of Panama secured to it by the treaty and constitution forced upon the Panaman people in 1903, and be it further

"Resolved, That we declare that the American workers have nothing in common with imperialistic adventures in Latin-America or anywhere else, but are unqualifiedly opposed to them and further that we pledge our support and solidarity to our striking brothers in Panama in their struggle."

Following the federation meeting a number of those who desired to ask Fertwangler questions gathered and began asking questions. When the question of the Communists electing von Hindenburg was raised Fertwengler reiterated that it was true.

When it was pointed out to him that in the primary elections the social-democrats, the Communists, the monarchists and the people's party had their separate candidates for the presidency of the German republic and that in the regular elections when the monarchists or nationalists put up von Hindenburg, the Communists offered to make a united front with the social-democrats and vote for the social-democrat candidate, the social-democrats instead of making a united front supported the people's party candidate, Marx, he began to grow nervous and embarrassed taking his questioner by the coat lapel and fawning over him as tho he could thus make the criticism of the German social-democracy milder.

Fertwangler attempted to make all kinds of excuses but when confronted with the fact that the social-democracy of Germany had control of the state power and that no revolution had taken place to make the power away from them but that they had gradually given over the power to the bourgeoisie he claimed he could not discuss the question as his English was too limited. The questioner then told him to speak in German.

The two had been speaking in German but a very short time when Fertwangler became very nervous and began to act as tho someone had pushed into a bunch of cactus. He immediately turned his back to his questioner and began talking to one of the other listeners who was standing nearby.

COLORED FREIGHT HANDLERS TO MEET IN KANSAS CITY TO DISCUSS UNION STATUS

By ESTHER LOWELL.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 19.—Representatives of all colored freight handlers' federal unions will attend the conference arranged between the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, colored freight handlers who are asking full membership admission in the Brotherhood, and a representative of the American Federation of Labor. The colored delegates to the 45th annual American Federation of Labor convention are working for the fullest possible representation of their organizations at this important meeting which is to be held in Kansas City, Oct. 29.

Because of the bitter jurisdictional dispute between the railway clerks and the teamsters, action upon the resolution introduced by the colored delegates was delayed to nearly the close of the convention. The organization committee finally was able to arrange for the Kansas City meeting and its action was approved by the convention. At this conference the colored freight handlers will urge that they be given full membership in the Brotherhood of Railway & Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes with all its duties and privileges. They are now under direct charter from the American Federation of Labor, but all their working conditions are determined by the brotherhood's agreements with employers. The colored workers' grievances go to brotherhood system representatives, whom colored workers help support by their payment of 50 cents per capita to the brotherhood.

Colored freight handlers will have to protect themselves, however, in view of the threat of the clerks that they will leave the American Federation of Labor, says Albert C. Campbell, president Union No. 17,775, Kansas City, one of the delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention. The colored workers will have to make some proviso in whatever settlement they may make with the clerks that in case the clerks withdraw from the American Federation of Labor the colored freight hanlers' unions shall revert to the American Federation of Labor. If the brotherhood accepts suspension from the American Federation of Labor rather than obeying the decision of the 45th convention which gives jurisdiction over express drivers and helpers to the teamsters, the colored workers may ask for a charter as a national freight handlers' union.

No specific action was taken by the convention on the resolution introduced by one of the colored delegates proposing further organization of colored workers, greater attention towards having International unions which bar colored workers change their attitude, and American Federation of Labor championing "of the Negro's social demands as the demands of the most abused and exploited section of the working people." The resolution related "that the most effective and sincere manner by which the American Federation of Labor can ensure a response to its efforts to organize the Negro workers is to take up in an aggressive and whole-hearted manner the cause and defense of the Negro against legal and social discrimination and abuses, such as lynching, segregation, disfranchisements, etc."

I. L. D. Meeting Wednesday.

The first regular meeting of the Northwest Side Branch of the International Labor Defense will be held at Humboldt Lodge Hall, 1621 N. California Ave., Wednesday, Oct. 21, at 8 a. m. A speaker will outline the activity and the role of the I. L. D. in the labor movement in this country.

NEEDLE TRADES TALKING UNITY IN PITTSBURGH

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 19.—A mass meeting for the purpose of discussing the question of amalgamation in the needle trades was held Monday, Oct. 19th, 8 P. M. in the Moose Hall, 628-634 Penn Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. The meeting was called by joint council of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and the Journeymen Tailors' Local of the city. The members of the Journeyman Tailors' Union, Cap Makers and Furriers are also taking a keen interest in this joint movement of the rank and file to impress upon their higher officials the need of amalgamation.

The movement of the joint council of the two organizations of this city is evidence enough of the timely need for an amalgamation of all the needle trades unions of this city. In this city, for example, the members of the Amalgamated are practically all custom tailors and in most cases are working in the same shops where members of the Journeyman Tailors Union are working. Yet each of the unions are unable to make demands upon their bosses for the reason of the antiquated form of organization still existing in the needle trades. The rank and file realizes fully that there is no place for six different craft unions in the needle trades.

Among the speakers announced were M. J. Sillinsky of the Journeyman Tailors, and Mother Ella Reeve Bloor.

FINANCE GIANTS MEET TO SOLVE CHINESE PUZZLE

The House of Morgan Shelters Conference

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.— Delegates representing the American, Japanese, British, French and Chinese groups of the Chinese consortium will meet tomorrow in the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. This meeting is significant inasmuch as it is the first held in New York. Heretofore the meetings of the consortium have been held either in Paris or London.

The general situation in China will be discussed with particular attention being given to the financial and economic situation as affected by the various military conflicts in that country and also a review of the effect of the Shanghai events of last May and the Shanghai conference that is endeavoring to place responsibility for the disturbances.

Moguls in Attendance.

It would require astronomical figures to estimate the billions of dollars represented at this conference, the aim of which is further financial penetration into and enslavement of China.

Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co. is the American member of the executive council. The British and the French members are Sir Charles Addis of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking corporation, London, and R. Saint Pierre of the Banque de l'Indo Chine, Paris, who are scheduled to arrive today. The Japanese representative will be H. Kashiwagi of the Yokohama Specie Bank.

Forty American Banks.

The Chinese consortium is made up of various groups of international bankers representing the United States, England, France and Japan, and was organized late in 1920 under the pretense of aiding China in its financial and economic problems. Originally it was organized for five years, but its existence will be continued indefinitely. The American group consists of approximately forty banking and investment firms.

No New Loans to China.

It was pointed out that since the inception of th econsortium conditions in China had been such as to make it impossible to undertake new loans to that country, and it was considered doubtful that any program would be outlined at the meeting which would clarify the situation. It was intimated that several propositions were made at one time to reproposal would be made at the comfund China's debt, but that no such ing conference.

Seven Longshoremen Drown.

VICTORIA, B. C., Oct. 19.—Delayed reports reaching here today indicated that seven longshoremen of the salvage tug Hope were drowned late Saturday night, when a tide-rip caught their craft and hurled it against the stranded steamer Eemdyk on Bentinick Island, near Victoria. Twenty-eight longshoremen were aboard the Hope at the time, removing a cargo from the Eemdyk which went aground Thursday.

MELLON'S OPEN SHOP DRIVE IN PENNSYLVANIA COAL FIELDS MEETS WITH LITTLE SUCCESS

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The attack on the supremacy of the United Mine Workers in the Pennsylvania western field, led by Secretary Mellon's Pittburgh Coal Co., has fallen far short of notable success, according to facts in a special article for Coal Age by Sidney A. Hale. Hale was on the engineering staff of the United States coal commission. His review of western Pennsylvania and southern Ohio goes far to explode the capitalist press attempt to show a rapid drift of union miners to the mines which the Pittsburgh company is trying to operate on a non-union 1917 scale basis.

"District No. 5 of the United Mine Workers, the western Pennsylvania area," says Hale, "has a membership of approximately 45,000 of whom, according to union figures, 23,000 are now employed in the mines of the district. Less than 400 men have accepted the conditions of employment at the two Banning operations of the Pittsburgh Coal Co. The Pomeroy Bond group of mines are in District No. 6. This district had a union membership of 48,000 at the peak of power in 1920; the most claimed for the 1917 scale and co-operative operations in the Pomeroy Bond area is less than 700. The combined totals in the two fields when compared with union membership of over 220,000 in the central competitive field as a whole, is pitiably insignificant."

So scarcely more than 1 per cent of the union miners in the two districts where Pittsburgh Coal is making its antiunion drive have gone over to the enemy altho the scheme has been in operation since May 1.

The Dark Hollow mine which opened about May 1 had a working force of 156 men by the middle of July. The average for the first week of September was still 156. Similarly the Forest Run mine which opened the last week of May had an average of 131 men by the end of July. From then on the number slowly dwindled with an average of 123 employed the middle of September.

Hale says the union has been completely successful in holding its lines against the fake co-operative diversion by which Indiana operators tried to get out from under the Jacksonville contract, that it has checked a similar move in Ohio, and that Illinois is still firmly union. He also shows that right down thru 1923 the predominantly union Pennsylvania western field holds its share of the country's total output. In 1923 it turned out 202,703,000 tons, 35.9 per cent of the total, compared with an average of 35.7 per cent in the 5 years 1916-1920, 32.8 per cent in the 5 years 1911-1915, and 34.1 per cent in the period 1906-1910.

Mellon's contract-breaking Pittsburgh Coal Co. now has behind it the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce which has a special department in charge of the renegade E. S. McCullough, former vice president of the miners' union, to recruit mine labor willing to desert the union. To quote Hale: "Neither the Pittsburgh Coal Co. nor the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce can now retire without a heavy loss of prestige."

SOCIETY DAME FALLS OUT OF BED, DIES IN BOTTLE-STREWN ROOM

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 19. — Mrs. Craig Biddle, a prominent society woman of Philadelphia, died suddenly here in her apartment yesterday and the coroner's inquest revealed traces of alcoholic poisoning.

The apartment was strewn with empty bottles. Bruises found on the body of the woman are said not to indicate violence, as she rolled out of bed shortly before she died, the fall causing the bruises. It is not thought she was poisoned as the autopsy revealed no traces of poisoning, her heart being swollen no more than is usual in deaths from drunkness.

Two Supreme Court Decisions

Two news dispatches from Washington, D. C., today regarding two decisions of the United States supreme court are illuminating inasmuch as they shed a dazzling light upon the character of that institution as one of the most powerful bulwarks of capitalism. With one hand it throttles the working class by upholding the California criminal syndicalist law and with the other comes to the aid of an Arizona exploiter of women by holding invalid the state minimum wage law for women.

The court refused to intervene in the case of Charlotte Anita Whitney, convicted under the California criminal syndicalist law, claiming that it had no jurisdicton, thereby "inferentially" holding it to be constitutional.

But it could intervene in the case of the Arizona state law and declare it unconstitutional because a woman wage worker demanded of a Nogales merchant that he pay her a minimum wage of $16 a week, the amount set by an act of the legislature as the very least amount on which a woman can exist.

Always defending the interests of the capitalist exploiters and erecting legal fortresses from which they can direct their operations to distill the blood of women and children into profits and with equal vigor striking down every effort of the working class to struggle against the greed and avarice of their exploiters, this malignant institution clearly reveals the true class character of the government. When, on rare occasions, the state legislature of a given state, from sentimental or other reasons, so far forget themselves as to pass laws objectionable to the capitalist interests, the United States supreme court can always be depended upon to come to the rescue. Such acts prove the fraudulent nature of our much heralded democracy, and while their immediate effect is to cripple the working class, they serve as a means of convincing ever larger numbers of workers that there is only one solution for their ills and that is the class struggle consciously directed to the conquest of the capitalist state and the establishment of the rule of the working class.

Organize the Auto Industry

The series of articles on Henry Ford starting today in another column of THE DAILY WORKER again emphasizes the necessity for organizing this gigantic industry. One of the largest industries in the whole world, it has successfully resisted all efforts of labor organizations to unionize it.

At a time when Wall Street market quotations reveal soaring stocks of the automobile industry, including all its auxiliaries, announcements of wage cuts are also made. While profits' steadily rise, wages are being reduced. Constant reductions is the price paid for lack of organization.

There is nothing in the nature of the industry itself that makes organization impossible, on even more difficult than other industries. The fault is to be found in the methods hitherto employed to organize the workers of this industry. The efforts of the craft unions within the American Federation of Labor proved unavailing because of the jurisdictional tangles ensuing. Each international union endeavoring to gain a foothold in the industry tried to get as much control as possible, with the result that efforts in this direction have been paralyzed.

The most essential preliminary to tackling the job of organizing this industry is to amalgamate the metal unions and start an organization drive that will bring under one head all the workers in the industry. Those who oppose the amalgamation of craft unions into industrial unions oppose the first big step necessary to organize the wage slaves of this country on a large scale, and thereby serve the interests of the exploiters of labor.

Coolidge Neutrality on Coal Strike

President Coolidge announces that he is determined to stick to his policy of non-interference in the antharcite strike. This announcement should not be misinterpreted to mean the government at Washington is a neutral agency that stands above the class struggle. The reason Coolidge does not interfere is because there is no need for governmental intervention.

The anthracite coal monopoly not only has sufficient local police power to back it in its struggle against the miners, as is evidenced by the arrests of Pat Toohey, Alex Reid, and others who urged a real fight in this strike, but it also has as its loyal servants the whole Lewis machine of official bureaucrats at the head of the Miners' Union, who can be relied upon to use all their power to crush any development menacing to the mine owners.

No one should mistake the "neutrality" of Coolidge to mean that the government itself has gone out of the strikebreaking business. The capitalist government is today and, as long as it lasts, will remain the instrument of coercion by which the master class holds the working class in subjection. If the miners should be able effectively to challenge the combined power of the local authorities and the treacherous officialdom of the union, Coolidge neutrality would come to an end and the power of the national government would be mobilized in a savage assault upon the strikers.

The tremendous increase in profits of the automobile industry and the simultaneous reduction in wages eloquently refutes the contention of those labor fakirs who contend that only by increasing production can wages be increased.

What happened to the reptile press that it permitted the facts in the demise of an elegant Philadelphia society lady and patriot, who died drunk, to be flashed to the world? Someone slipped up, somewhere.

The red raids in Britain followed the classic lines laid down by the Palmer and Daugherty regimes in this country. The party here arose stronger—so it will in England.

ECONOMIC DICTATOR TO MAINTAIN POLAND AS BUFFER STATE AGAINST SOVIET RUSSIA IS FRENCH PLAN

WARSAW, Oct. 18.—Poland's present economic crisis will bring about the establishment of an economic director to manage the financial end of the Polish government by the creditor nations, of which France is the largest and most insistent on the economic dictator, in order to save Poland as a buffer state against the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

Currency Shortage.

A serious country-wide shortage of currency exists in Poland. Of that which does exist only 31 per cent is backed by gold or foreign currency.

The largest banks in Poland are either not paying their obligations or are deferring payment to some future date. The Polish State Bank is meeting but a small part of its obligations.

Must Have Cash.

All commercial transactions are carried out in cash. Business concerns refuse to accept checks or drafts and will not sell on credit as the banks are not able to meet obligations imposed on them.

Workers Demonstrate.

In Lodz large demonstrations of the workers are taking place against the non-payment of wages by the firms and also against attempts to lengthen hours. Many of the firms are unable to pay the wages owed the workers. Some have moved to Roumania and a number of Jewish capitalists are thinking of moving to Palestine.

Increase Army.

In spite of the money shortage, vast sums are being shipped out of the country in order to buy supplies for the army which is kept in readiness to crush any movement on the part of the working class of Poland to follow the example of the workers of Russia.

MAYOR DEVER TO BE INFORMED ON SALARY SCHEDULE

Teachers and McAndrew Send Committees

A committee was appointed at the last meeting of the Chicago Teachers' Federation to call upon Mayor Dever to protest against the proposed salary schedule sponsored by Superintendent McAndrews and now before the finance committee of the board of education for final action. This move was decided upon because of information received by the teachers that principals who are favored by the McAndrew schedule were being sent to Mayor Dever by McAndrew to enlist his support.

Civic Clubs Discuss Schedule.

A number of civic and welfare clubs have combined in the holding of meetings for discussion on the salary schedule for teachers at which a representative from the federation and one for McAndrew lead off the discussion. These meetings were held thruout last week at the Chicago Women's Club. A luncheon discussion will be held next Thursday at 12:15 at the Chicago Women's Club at which recommendations will be drawn up to be sent to the members of the finance committee of the school board.

Electrical Stations Around Donetz Basin Generate Much Power

MOSCOW, Oct. 18—The present year will see the completion in the Donetz Basin of the powerful Scheroff Electrical power station, which will provide about 100,000 kilowatt electrical power. But this is not all that is done for the electrification of the Donetz Basin. It is also being electrified now by another method, that of an electrical ring.

All the existing electrical power stations in the Donetz Basin are now being extended and connected with each other, into one ring, by means of electrical transmission lines. When this work has been completed the combined power of these electrical stations in the Donetz Basin will be 670,000 kilowatt. It is estimated that this great work will take 15 years, but some results have already been achieved. In some parts of the Donetz Basin, parts of the great ring, which will embrace the whole basin, already exist. Here and there these parts are already being linked up into one whole. Strenuous work is going on in the Donetz Basin, which will put everything on an electrical basis, including ploughs and trucks.

MELLON'S EFFORT TO SMASH MINER UNION FAILURE

Scabby Cabinet Official Meets Resistance

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press)

The attack on the supremacy of the United Mine Workers in the central competitive field, led by Secy. Mellon's Pittsburgh Coal Co., has fallen far short of notable success, according to facts in a special article by Coal Age by Sidney A. Hale. Hale was on the engineering staff of the U. S. coal commission. His review of western Pennsylvania and southern Ohio goes far to explode the capitalist press attempt to show a rapid drift of union miners to the mines which the Pittsburgh company is trying to operate on a nonunion 1917-scale basis.

Miners Hold the Fort.

"Dist. No. 5 of the United Mine Workers—the western Pennsylvania are," says Hale, "has a membership of approximately 45,000 of whom, according to union figures, 23,000 are now employed in the mines of the district. Less than 400 men have accepted the conditons of employment at the two Banning operations of the Pittsburgh Coal Co. The Pomeroy Bend group of mines are in District No. 6. This district had a union membership of 48,000 at the peak of power in 1920; the most claimed for the 1917 scale and co-operative operations in the Pomeroy Bend area is less than 700. The combined totals in the two fields when compared with union membership of over 220,000 in the ecntral competitive field as a whole, is pitiably insignificant."

Very Few Desertions.

So scarcely more than 1 per cent of the union miners in the two districts where Pittsburgh coal is making its anti-union drive have gone over to the enemy altho the scheme has been in operation since the first of May. In fact Hale's figures show that after the first few desertions following the openshop move the company has made no gains.

The Dark Hollow mine which opened about May 1 had a working force of 156 men by the middle of July. The average for the first week of September was still 156. Similarly the Forest Run mine which opened the last week of May had an average of 131 men by the end of July. From then on the number slowly dwindled with an average of 123 employed the middle of September.

Fake Co-operatives Lose.

Hale says the union has been competely successful in holding its lines against the fake co-operative diversion by which Indiana operators tried to get out from under the Jacksonville contract, that it has checked a similar move in Ohio, and that Illinois is still firmly union. He also shows that right down thru 1923 the predominantly union central field its share of the country's total output. In 1923 it turned out 202,703,000 tons, 35.9 per cent of the total, compared with an average of 35.7 per cent in the 5 years, 1916-1920, 32.8 per cent in the 5 years 1911-1915, and 34.1 per cent in the period 1906-1910.

Must Pay Union Scale.

It is a war of attrition with the miners' worale still good. The operators have lost their old ally—immigration of cheap labor. They have to persuade thousands of miners, who know what the union has done for them, to give it up and enter again the old bondage. Otherwise the operators' have the choice of paying the union scale or being unable to man their mines.

Mellon's contract-breaikng Pittsburgh Coal Co. now has behind it the Pittsburgh chamber of ocmmerce. It has a special department in charge of the renegade E. S. McCullough, former vice president of the miners' union, to recruit mine labor willing to desert the union. To quote Hale: "Neither the Pittsburgh Coal Co. nor the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce can now retire without a heavy loss of prestige. The other union operators of the district are reported watching to see whether Mellon's big company can get away with it."

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 19.—Two white women, sisters, were taken from the city prison farm at Jacksonville where they were serving sentences for disorderly conduct and were tarred and feathered by a mob of over a hundred men on Sept. 12.

NEW CRISIS FOR POWERS IN CHINA

Opposition Unites to Whip Chang Tso-lin

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 18.—The Shanghai Trades Council in a manifesto addressed to the workers says: "Sun Chuan-fang's forces have reached Shanghai and the Fengtien army has fled. Martial law will be rescinded. The General Labor Union headquarters will soon be re-opened and imprisoned workers released."

This expresses briefly the victory of the nationalist opposition over the mercenary troops of Chang Tso-lin, whose Fengtien army invaded Shanghai two months ago, declared martial law, shot labor organizers without trial, dissolved the General Labor Union, and under the benevolent protection of the British, American and Japanese armed forces controlling the international settlement, carried out a policy of ruthless extermination of the nationalist revolutionary movement led by the labor unions.

Hailed as Deliverer

While Marshal Sun Chuan-fang is not fully identified with the nationist movement led by the Kuomintang party, his 15,000 troops who poured into Shanghai Friday, are hailed as deliverers. Students and labor unions are rallying to his support, Sun having stated in an interview that he was opposed to the so-called "tariff conference" of the nine imperialist powers scheduled to open at Peking on Oct. 26, as a new trick of the imperialists to pretend to grant a little more autonomy to China while denying her any real independence.

The troops of Marshall Sun now cow controlling Shanghai come from Chekiang province to the south of Shanghai, which lies in the province of Kiangsu on the middle coastal region of China, on the great artery of trade, the Yangtze river. Sun's troops expect to drive Chang Tso-lin's fleeing Fengtien soldiery out of Kiansu province and north of the Yangtze.

Shantung May Go Nationalist

In addition, Chang Chun, the military governor of Shantung province north along the coast from Kiangsu province, is reported wavering in his allegiance to Chang Tso-lin, and if he joins the nationalist opposition to Chang Tso-lin, the military forces sympathetic to national liberation will be in control of practically the entire Chinese coastal provinces from Canton northward to Kiao Chow.

Chang Tso-lin's open service to the imperialists, their subsidy of his armies with money and arms, and his savage suppression of the nationalist and labor movements, has driven all elements of opposition together against him. It is now possible that the Kuomintang will reach an accord with the Chihli faction which opposes Chang Tso-lin, and with General Feng Yu-hsiang build a military movement which will demand an end to the deceitful and prolonged "negotiations," a scrapping of all treaties and a new deal for a new China.

If this occurs, the powers, which were due to debate solemnly at Peking as to whether or not they would permit China to raise 2½ per cent more tariff on imports, are liable to be lucky if they get away with their clothes.

Rockefeller Bank Boasts of Mob-Proof Vaults in Chicago

Bankers' fears of popular uprisings against the capitalist system are reflected in advertisements by the Security bank, a Standard Oil organization in Chicago. The safe deposit vaults in its new building are claimed by the bank to be not only fire and burglar proof, but mob proof. The 70,000 pound doors have 24 bolts, each almost 4 inches in diameter, and protecting shields with burn-resisting metal

LUDENDORF, GERMAN WAR LORD, AFRAID OF REDS SENDS S.O.S. FOR POLICE

BRESLAU, Germany, Oct. 19.—Gen. Ludendorff, one of the war lords of imperial Germany and, since the fall of the kaiser, an outstanding figure in the nationalist movement, became alarmed at a crowd of Communists who assembled as he was leaving a nationalist meeting today and remained concealed inside the building until the police could come to his rescue. Ludendorff's fears were unjustified, as the Communists hold him in such contempt since he and Adolph Hitler, the German fascist, staged their opera bouffe, beer hall, "revolution" against the republic, that they would not give him the publicity he craves by attacking him. He is the clown of the nationalist movement and not taken seriously anywhere.

TYPOGRAPHICAL WORKERS' WAGES CONTINUE TO INCREASE WHILE WORK WEEK BECOMES SHORTER

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Wages of typesetting machine operators in the printing trades are still distinctly on the upgrade. A report of the U. S. department of labor on union wages and hours from 1913 to 1925, shows increases during the last year for those employed in newspaper composing rooms in 13 of the 39 cities covered while those in job shops secured increases in 11 cities. For each group there was but one city in which the scale was reduced.

The 44-hour week is practically universal as far as the book and job typesetters are concerned, the only exception being Detroit, famous for Henry Ford's speeding-up tactics. After two years of the 44-hour week, Detroit returned to 48 hours May 1. In newspaper work there is no such uniformity, the established day varying from a minimum of 7 hours to a maximum of 8 hours and the week from a minimum of 36 hours to a maximum of 48 hours. The 48-hour week is most frequent, with the 45-hour week next. During the year the week has been lengthened in three cities and shortened in two.

Operators have the highest scale in New York city where the hourly rate for newspaper work is $1.333 and for book and job work $1.205.

The minimum hourly rates for union typesetting machine operators in newspaper shops, in 1913, 1920 and 1925 are given for 18 leading cities as follows:

Altogether the figures seem to show that these workers are below the average in per cent of gain compared with pre-war, taking the figures year by year, we find that in the period 1913-1919 in which war industries were boosting a majority of industrials, the scales of typographers failed to keep pace with the general advance. Since 1920 they have been slowly overcoming the handicap.

HAPPY CAILLAUX, CAN BE IN TWO PLACES AT THE VERY SAME TIME

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NICE, France, Oct. 18—The so-called "radical socialist" party congress here today gave testimony to its sense of humor when it accepted the statement of Finance Minister Joseph Caillaux that in refernce to the congress decision to introduce a capital levy bill into parliament, Caillaux accepted it, "but only as a member of the party and not in his ministerial capacity."

This leaves Caillaux perfect freedom to support the bill as a member of the party but to oppose it to the death as a member of the cabinet.

The capital levy is being insisted upon by the party, which declares that France stands between that action and ultimate bankruptcy thru inflation. M. Caillaux, as a thotful citizen of France may support the capital levy, but as a member of the cabinet anxious to sustain the government against criticism of the bourgeoisie who will certainly attack it if it speaks of a levy against capital, M. Caillaux will vigorously oppose such measure.

FEDERAL JUDGE BLOCKS ATTEMPT TO CUT FARES

Injunction Upholds 20 Pct. Rate Increase

Tuesday morning the suburban commuters on the Chicago & Northwestern railway must either present new tickets to the conductor or pay cash.

This announcement from the company came following the granting of a temporary injunction by Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe restraining the Illinois commerce commission, the governor, the attorney general and the state's attorneys of Kane, Cook, Lake, DuPage and McHenry counties from interfering with the collection of the increased rates.

The injunction hearing is to be held Friday, October 23, where the company expects to get a permanent injunction enjoining the Illinois commerce commission from interfering with the company's fare boost.

The old ten and twenty-five ride tickets will have to be turned in and new tickets purchased by the suburban commuters before Tuesday, Oct. 20 as the train conductors will refuse to accept the old tickets after that date. Monthly commutation tickets will be good to the end of October.

The interstate commerce commission in a recent decision allowed the company to increase its fares 20 per cent.

The suburban commuters are preparing to fight the case before the Illinois commerce commission, which claims to have jurisdiction of all traffic within the state and claims the interstate commission had no right to increase the fares as the increase affects only cities located in the state of Illinois and not transportation between cities in different states.

Suburba ncommuters on other lines that enter Chicago are also looking with interest at the fight being put up by those that use the Chicago and Northwestern railway as an increase on one road will mean an increase on all roads.

Denmark Commission Plans Inducements for Soviet Trade

(Special to The Daily Worker)

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Oct. 19.—A trade and industry organization his appointed a committee to find means to induce Soviet Russia to do more trade with Denmark. While in 1924 Denmark's exports amounted to 400,000 crowns (about $100,000), showing that this country can compete with other nations, Russia bought only 2,000,000 crowns (about $500,000) worth, as against 72,000,000 crowns (about $18,000,000) in exports it sent to Denmark.

Trade and industrial interests are taking all possible steps in order to induce Russia to buy more goods in Denmark.

MOSCOW ACADEMY PUBLICATION LISTS MANY RUSSIAN SAVANTS AMONG EARLY RESEARCH WORKERS

MOSCOW, Oct. 18.—In the 200th anniversary publication published by the Moscow Academy of Sciences a number of noted Russian scientists who have contributed to the development of scientific researches are mentioned.

Among the noted savants who have contributed to the scientific world was the academician, M. V. Ostrogradsky, who made many valuable contributions to the study of mathematics, mechanics and mathematical physics. His researches in mechanics were concurrent to those of the famous Hamilton.

Academician Buakovsky made valuable contributions to the development of mathematical science. His monumental work on The Theory of Probabilities constituted the first treaties in this domain, containing a series of independent deductions.

Academician Somov made valuable contributions to the science of rational mechanics, particularly to the theory of gravitation. His treatise on rational mechanics has lost none of its value to this day.

Devise Arithmetic.

The genius of academician Tchebishev applied itself to practical manufacturing questions arising from the quite new theory propounded by him on "functions least deviating from the zero." Tchebishev's arithmometer constituted the first Russian-made appliance, which was followed by other improved types, e. g. the arithmometer of Odner.

The only model preserved of Tchebishev's appliance is kept in Paris.

Academician Lyapunov was the author of classical researches on the persistence of motion and the theory of gravitation. He studied the fundamental problems of mathematical physics and carried out important researches on the figures of equilibrium of planatary bodies and evolved new methods to prove the basic theorem of Tchebishev on the theory of probabilities.

Academician A. A. Markov wrote a series of treatises on the theory of Tchebishev's functions, on differential equations, etc.

Academician A. N. Krymov made a series of practical discoveries, such as new planimeters, a new theory for ship stabilization, etc.

"Steklov's Functions."

Academician Steklov has made new discoveries concerning the movement of solid bodies in fluids, the movements of a solid body around a fixed point, and the new fundamental functions which have become known as "Steklov's functions."

Academician Uspensky has attained new results on the theory of numbers and continued some of the researches initiated by the late Tchebishev.

CHICAGO IS SEEKING SOVIET TRADE

AMERICAN LABOR DEMANDS RAKOSI MUST NOT DIE

Protest Demonstrations Held in Many Cities

The protest campaign to save the lives of Mathias Rakosi and his comrades from the gallows of the Hungarian hangmen of the notorious Horthy is gaining great momentum. The American workers are making their voices heard in no uncertain terms in protesting against the latest murder banquet which the bloody chefs of the Hungarian capitalists are preparing.

Wall Street Guest at Blood Feast.

Already the workers in New York and Boston have held mass demonstrations which have focused attention on the conspiracy which Horthy and his Wall Street backers would execute behind a veal of silence.

Messages are pouring daily into the headquarters of the International Labor Defense telling of plans for mass protest meetings, and from every part of the country telegrams are being forwarded to the Hungarian embassy in Washington and to the Horthy government in Hungary demanding the dismantling of the gallows built to snuff out the lives of Rakosi and his comrades.

The following cities have sent in notices of mass meetings already arranged:

Minneapolis: Mass meeting in the Unitarian Church at 8th and La Salle streets on Wednesday, Oct. 21, at 8 p. m. Prominent speakers will address the meeting.

Cleveland: Protest meeting Sunday, Oct. 25, at 7:30 p. m. in Insurance Center Building, 1783 East 11th street on the sixth floor. Prominent leaders of the trade union movement will speak.

Philadelphia: Meeting in Mercantile Hall, Sunday evening, Oct. 25 at 8 p. m. at 849 North Franklin street. Speakeres in Hungarian and English.

Washington: Meeting Saturday, Ost. 24, 8 p. m. Hall will be announced later. Prominent speakers.

Kansas City, Mo.: Protest meeting Oct. 28, with Carl Brannin, as principal speaker. Hall will be announced later.

As The DAILY WORKER goes to press the great mass meeting arranged by the Chicago section of the International Labor Defense is about to open. Our next issue will carry a report of this demonstration.

According to our Washington correspondent the Hungarian embassy is keeping his home government completely informed on the development of the American campaign to save Rakosi and his comrades. At first there was a tendency in Hungarian

Henry Ford--Pacifist Turned Imperialist

Second Installment of Daily Worker's Exposure of World's Most Powerful Automobile Czar

By OWEN STERLING.

FOREIGN branches and associated companies are operated at Buenos Aires, Montevido, Santiago, San Paulo and Havana in South America and Cuba; at Antwerp, Rotterdam, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Bordeaux and Trieste in Europe and at Ford, Ontario, Cork, Ireland, and Manchester, England, in the British empire. For comparative purposes it is worth stating that the largest automobile manufacturer in the British empire is the Ford Motor company of Canada, at Ford, with an anual output of 150,000 cars and trucks.

Those are the essential units of the largest private enterprise in the world. It is not only very large but very private. The one factor which controls production in this enterprise from day to day is the flux and flow from it of the private income of Henry and Edsel Ford, nothing more or less than that. They also control the jobs of 165,000 men and women in the United States alone. If the Ford enterprise were actually an autonomous industrial colony, its population, consisting only of employes and their dependents, would be in the neighborhood of 500,000.

PARALLELING this industrial development is a political development since the pacifist days of the peace ship that affects the Fords and the status of their industry. The pacifist of yesterday, who could be called an anarchist, however erroneously, will be the militarist-capitalist of tomorrow.

The majority of the working men and women of this country have talked and acted as if they believed Henry Ford were somehow independent of or exterior to the capitalist system. They didn't see that he was merely an unusual capitalist. A common attitude a few years ago in a large section of the working class toward militant trade unionists who urged class solidarity and organization is expressed by the phrase, "Let Ford do it." But his career actually has at all times been linked with the capitalist system and been dependent on its perpetuation.

THE recent imperialist war, in which the Fords participated as soon as the word had been spoken by the capitalist government of this country, was a primary factor in bringing about a clear demonstration of the Ford solidarity with his class. His powerful resources were marshalled in the war to aid in preserving the imperialistic dominance of a certain international capitalist group or alliance. And his resources would be even more quickly mobilized to preserve the capitalist system from being supplanted by a Communist order initiated by the working class.

In periods of routine exploitation the Ford Motor company has profited by pursuing courses that were independent of or even in opposition not to capitalism but to accepted capitalist procedure. But smartness in business must not be confused with basic action that is really revolutionary. And with the really revolutionary Communist International growing more powerful the Ford Motor company will continue to hew close to the line.

THE welfare workers are gone. Guards, or thugs, have taken their places, just as in any other stronghold of capitalist production, excepting that the Ford Motor company are somewhat better equipped to slug or kill.

ORDINANCE officers from the war department are today working in the Ford Motor company laboratories side by side with Ford mechanics and engineers. The war department knows to a day how long a time would be required to put the Ford Motor company on a war-time basis in the event of another imperialist war or a general strike. Among the specific things the war department is interested in studying at the Ford laboratories are a new type of airplane motor, developed from the old Liberty engine of the last war, and equipment for the transportation of ordnance on the ground.

When the Ford bid for Muscle Shoals was a major topic of discussion the majority of the working class thot of the concession as being chiefly a source of hydro-electric power and cheap fertilizer. But the nitrates extracted there are useful not only for fertilizer but for explosives. One of the Muscle Shoals nitrate plants is the largest in the world. Many politicians and capitalists are opposed to the Fords having Muscle Shoals but that is only for personal or factional reasons. The nitrates at Muscle Shoales would be as safe with the Ford Motor company as with the United States Steel corporation or the war department itself.

WITH the purchase of the Stout Metal Airplane Co. this summer, the Ford Motor Co. went into a new phase. It had been shipping by air as well as by water and rail for some time. With this purchase the Fords began the manufacture of planes. Military aviators are elated.

"The Ford Motor company's entrance into aeronatics is the greatest incentive to commercial aviation in the history of flying," Col. William Mitchell, former assistant army air chief, said the other day in an interview printed in a Detroit newspaper while he was a guest of Henry Ford.

DON'T be mislead by his specifying "commercial aviation." For even if the Fords restricted their production permanently to that type of plane—slower by many miles an hour than pursuit planes, — the commercial planes would become transport planes in war-time. And in military aviation transport planes are as essential as pursuit planes or bombers.

SOVIET RUSSIA'S DELEGATION IN CHICAGO FINDS BUSINESS INTERESTS EAGER FOR TRADE

The eagerness of American business interests and espcially the agricultural and packing house interests, for opening of trade relations with the Union of Soviet Republics, was strongly expressed in the greeting accorded M. S. Pereferkovitsh, manager of the livestock department of the commissariat of agriculture of Soviet Russia. Michael F. Ivanov, professor of the Timiriasevskaja Academy of Moscow and N. N. Klebnik, official interpreter of the Russian delegation in America to purchase live stock.

W. W. Burch, editor of the American Sheep Breeder, on behalf of the representatives of the animal husbandry, railroad, packing house and agricultural interests greeted the Russian commission that is now stopping in Chicago.

For Trade Relations.

"I am sure that I voice the sentiment of this group of American representatives of agriculture, livestock husbandry and packing interests in extending a cordial greeting to these, our guests, who represent in Russia what we represent here. Russia is passing thru the birth pangs of a reorganized government and a reorganized social and economic system." declared W. W. Burch, American sheep breeder, in his greeting to the Russian workers' delegation.

"Russia's heart is sound and honest. Russia, so to speak, is getting her second breath after the world's war and the new order of things over there.

"It is common sense and good business for us to cultivate as rapidly as passible trade relations with Russia. With her almost boundless natural resources, Russia will, in the very nature of things, command a permanent place in the front ranks of great economic nations and especially so along agricultural lines."

Russian Conditions Improve.

The representatives of the working class government of Russia pointed out to The DAILY WORKER representatives in an interview that the industrial and agricultural condition of Russia has improved by leaps and bounds since the Russian revolution.

No Danger of Famine.

"The famine that we had a number of years ago has become but a memory. Today our agriculture, our industries, our production is better than it ever was. The danger of another famine is not likely," declared M. S. Pereferkovitch, manager of the livestock department of the Russian commissariat of agriculture.

"Our purpose in Aemrica is to purchase the best we can in livestock. We have been instructed by our government not to speak of the political situation in either Soviet Russia or the United States. We are here to do business.

"We have visited 40 different ranches since we have been in America and have purchased sheep and other livestock in Wyoming, Utah, California, Colorado, Ohio and Oregon.

Need Finer Wool.

"In Russia we have vast amounts of land not fit for any other purpose than the pasturing of sheep. The sheep which we are purchasing will be used for breeding purposes.

"We aim to cross the sheep we buy abroad and thus get a better yield of BERLIN, Germany, Oct. 20.— The socialist press here is echoing the government in praise of the "achievements" of Locarno, praising the pacts as "masterpieces of logic." Thus again the social-democrats whose hands since the great betrayal of 1914, have dripped with the blood of the working class, voice the desires of thteir masters, the capitalist class. They maintain officially a perpetual united front with the bourgeoisie, and it is only on rare occasions that some of their sections form a united front with the proletariat.

There is considerable criticism of the official social-democratic press among the left elements of that party, mostly concentrated in Berlin, who formed a united front with the Com-

CHANG, FORCED BY DEFEAT, IN "PEACE" PLEA

War Lord Transformed by Sound Thrashing

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 20.—Like all war-makers, Chang Tso-lin, taking a lesson from western imperialist diplomats, has come out strongly for peace. In a message sent to Peking this famed "war lord of Manchuria" declares that he is "striving to the utmost to preserve peace at this critical period in which China may find an opportunity to settle many long standing international questions."

Chang's passion for peace may be better understood when it is considered that he sent his troops a short time ago into the south as an invading army to punish with death any Chinese who agitated for a strike or boycott against the further domination of China by foreign imperialist exploiters.

Chang's Idea of Peace

His idea of peace was a complete dissolution of the Shanghai General Labor Union, the execution of all agitators his troops could lay hands upon, and a censorship over the Chinese workers' and students' papers which the imperialists themselves

U. S. BAYONETS STILL MENACE PANAMA CITY

Deportations for Talk Against U. S.

By MANUEL GOMEZ, Sec'y. All-American Anti-Imperialist League.

ARTICLE IV.

Newspaper reports that the American troops are leaving Panama are now proven to be false. Likewise the story that the Panama landlords have given in to the striking worekr-tenants. And the regimental band is playing, "We won't come back till its over over there!" Only a portion of the troops are leaving. The rest are staying behind to complete the job of jailing workers,. crushing. Panaman nationalist (i.e. "anti-imperialist") sentiment and rendering the strikers helpless before the landlords.

Even when the last American soldier packs up his tent and departs, if that time ever does come, it will be "au revoir but not goodby." In England during the height of the woman suffrage agitation, a peculiar police method was adopted, characterized by what was known as the "cat and mouse law." Under this ingenious law suffrage agitators who became weak from hunger-striking, were let out of jail until they could get a little of their strength back, whereupon they were promptly rearrested and put behind bars again. The government played with the suffragists "as a cat plays with a mouse." It is that way with the United States government and Panama. Whenever the nationalist movement and the anti-imperialist trade unions gather strength, the bayonets of American soldiers are called into play. The troops are always close at hand, massed threateningly just across the border in the Canal Zone.

Finance Capital Dominates.

The hand of American imperialism lays heavy on the so-called republic of Panama at all times. Even in "normal" times, there is an American financial "adviser" to look over Panama's finances in the interest of Wall Street investors, an American customs' "inspector" to take charge of Panaman customs' receipts for debt payment, an American railroad commission to take charge of the railroads and an American police inspector to see that Wall Street's investments are not endangered by strikes or other undue disturbances to "law and order." In addition, there is the

DEFIANCE AGAINST ILLEGAL EXPULSIONS BY "B. & O. BILL" VOICED BY J. F. ANDERSON

When "B. & O. Bill" Johnston called J. F. Anderson, his opponent whom William H. counted out with neatness and dispatch in the last election of the I. A. M., to appear before the executive council of the Machinists' Union, he probably thought Anderson wouldn't show up. Anderson had been suspended, and "B. & O. Bill" actually wanted him to apologize for saying Johnston's personality and integrity was somewhat below par. Anderson, appeared, however, and tho refusing to apologize, gave Johnston and his gang a defi which in part, was as follows:

On Sept. 3, 1925, the general secretary-treasurer wrote me requesting that I appear before you. I appear only as a matter of form, because our laws prescribe such a procedure and in order that this important case can reach our membership who alone are competent to consider and pass fair judgment on same.

The time has come when a great fundamental issue must be openly, clearly and comprehensively studied and discussed by those intrusted with responsibility of administration—as well as by our membership—because our cherished rights, to have opinions and express them have been taken from us.

Second Installment

(Editor's Note. In the DAILY WORKER yesterday the story was told of how Henry Ford, disguised as a pacifist, and a "good boss," who pays good wages and "looks after" his workers, who was a queer duck with funny ideas but a big heart for labor, was —after all—only a wolf in sheep's clothing. A lone wolf who fought the big wolves of Wall Street, even; but who got a great reputation as a humanitarian while building a slave-driving efficiency system that beat the world. Now the wolf has gobbled up railroads, steamship lines, mines, smelters and what not, and squeezes the last drop of energy from his thousands of wage slaves at his Rouge River plant and his factories. Moreover, this "pacifist" has become an imperialist and has a business understanding with the U. S. navy. The story is concluded in today's issue.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The department of justice is co-operating with the federal trade commission in investigating Allied Radio Manufacturing interests with a view to determining whether a monopoly exists in manufacture and sale of radio devices thruout the country, it was announced here today.

U. S. S. R. GIVES SWEDEN $2,500,000 CONTRACT FOR AUTOMATIC PHONES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Oct. 20.—Preliminary agreements have been concluded between the Soviet government and the Ericsson Telephone company of Sweden for the construction of three modern automatic telephone stations in Moscow, and one at Rostov-on-Don. The cost will be $2,500,000. Contracts for other stations will be made later.

Strikers Get Jail Terms.

T. U. E. L. GENERAL MEETING THURSDAY, OCTOBER 22, TO HEAR REPORT ON A. F. OF L. CONVENTION AT ATLANTIC CITY

The regular general meeting of the Chicago Trade Union Educational League will be held Thursday, Oct. 22, at 8 p. m. in Northwest Hall, corner of North and Western Aves. J. Louis Engdahl will speak on "The A. F. of L. Convention and the Left Wing Movement."

This subject is of great importance to all left wing trade unionists. The Green administration has shown itself to be just as subservient to capitalism as the late Gompers was. This convention is of importance because A. A. Purcell, fraternal delegate from the British Trade Union Congress, raised the issue of world trade union unity and support for Soviet Russia. The action of Green in repudiating the movement for trade union unity does not settle the matter. The convention served as a sounding board to acquaint the American workers with the need of international trade union unity, and this issue will grow more important in the near future.

All left wing and progressive trade unionists are invited to this meeting. Besides the main speaker there will be time for questions and discussion.

WORKERS OF DETROIT: SUPPORT COMMUNIST AGAINST SMITH AND BOWLES, CAPITALIST TOOLS!

Statement by the District Executive Committee of District No. 7, Workers (Communist) Party Regarding the Municipal Elections.

The workers of Detroit are being asked to vote in the municipal elections on the basis of religious prejudices. They are being asked to vote for Smith because he is a catholic, opposed to the ku klux klan and for Bowles because he is an anti-catholic and is endorsed by the ku klux klan.

The workers of Detroit should repudiate both Smith and Bowles, who appeal to them on the basis of religious prejudices. But not only for that

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 20.—The trade unionists of Kansas City have arranged a date for A. A. The famous leader of 20,000,000 organized workers comprised in the Amsterdam International, is expected to get a great crowd of trade unionists not only from Kansas City, but from surrounding cities where the name of this outstanding figure of international labor is recognized as a symbol of progress and unity in the labor mvement of the world.

Purcell will speak at the Labor Temple in Kansas City, at 14th street and Woodland, at 8 p. m., on November 4. The admission is merely nominal, being only 25 cents. A committee of local unionists are in charge of the arrangements.

"Hail the Conquering Heroes."

PARIS, France, Oct. 20.—An artificial demonstration organized by government functionaries, clerks and others on the pay roll of the French government, greeted the well-timed arrival of M. Briand, French foreign minister, and Austin Chamberlain, British foreign minister, as they arrived here from Locarno. Like two light opera comedians they strutted thru the station while the claquers wildly applauded. A considerable crowd gathered and participated in the demonstration.

The hour of arrival was not published for fear of hostile demonstrations on the part of Communists. The information was quietly spread thru government channels. The performance recalled to old timers the days before 1871 when all the hangers-on, beggars, peddlers and other near-vagabonds were employed to create "mass demonstrations" for Louis Napoleon (Louis the Little).

To Evacuate Cologne.

Shortly after the arrival of Briand and Chamberlain, Premier Painleve returned to Paris from Nice. In the afternoon the premier held a lengthy conference with Chamberlain where they discussed plans for the evacuation of Cologne and the regrouping of the troops of the allies in the Rhineland and Ruhr.

Tho both declined to comment upon the outcome, from unofficial sources it is learned that the British army will leave Cologne as soon as possible and that their forces will be concentrated at Wiesbaden. The French troops are to leave Cologne, undoubtedly because France wants them to join the colonial forces in Northern Africa.

In spite of the fact that the publication of the documents of Locarno revealed the correcteness of The DAILY WORKER analysis that the pact could not outlaw war and that the assembled statesmen recognized the impossibililty of such an outcome, Austen Chamberlain, at a banquet last night unburdened himself of a lot of sentimental rot about world peace, and repeated his interview with press correspondents earlier in the day.

LINTON, Ind., Oct. 20.—Joe Stephenson, 57, and Will Stephenson, 30, father and son, were killed instantly in a gas explosion in the Little Betty mine near here, shortly before noon today.

finer wool than we are now getting.

Agriculture Booming.

"Russia has had an exceptionally fine year for agriculture. At present our livestock has increased so that we are near to the pre-war level. We have the same number of sheep today that we had in the year just before the outbreak of the world war. We not only have sufficient wheat for ourselves, but we will be able to export some to other nations.

"The textile industry of Russia is demanding more and more of the fine wool. At present we must import this fine wool to our country, later we expect to produce enough for our own industry.

Need Machinery.

"We have also taken some machinery from America which we will use in Russia. We are going to train Russian farmers how to use shearing machinery. First we will use hand machines, later we will introduce power machinery. Russia lacks tractors and other agricultural machinery. We are trying to make arrangements to import more machinery.

To Train Farmers.

"The Russian commissariat of agriculture intends to take young workers and send them to schools where they will be taught agriculture along scientific lines.

"These young men will then be taken and sent to every section of Russia, where they will teach the farmers how to carry on agriculture scientifically.

To Study American Methods.

"Our program of buying good livestock for breeding purposes and educating the young men to be teachers will cover a period of ten years. In this time we expect to develop agriculture to the highest possible point in Soviet Russia. We will be back next year. Instead of just three, we are going to send ten. These ten will study animal husbandry and agricultural production in America, and upon their return to Russia they will instruct the Russian farmers and workers in American methods," declared the Russian delegate.

After Three Year Fight.

To The DAILY WORKER representative Burch pointed out the difficulties that have been in his way to bring the delegation to America to meet the American agricultural and animal husbandry interests.

To Trade With Russia.

"This delegation is here to do business. They are buying sheep and other livestock. They have paid large prices for the best rams in order to use them for breeding purposes in Russia. These men certainly know the sheep business," declared Burch. "We want their business and will do all in our power to do business with them."

CAPITALIST POLITICAL BODY ENDORSES BLOCK SOCIALIST CANDIDATE

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The Citizens' Union, an adjunct of the Tammany Hall machine, has endorsed S. John Block, socialist candidate for justice of the supreme court.

Thus the same aggregation that rules Ben Gitlow, Workers Party candidate for mayor, off the ballot, thru one of its numerous auxiliaries, endorses a socialist candidate.

In a review of the life and activities of Block this capitalist outfit finds nothing that will in any manner stamp him as an enemy of the ruling class, but it realizes full well the implacable foe of capitalism it finds in Ben Gitlow and the Workers (Communist) Party he represents.

longed for but could not enforce outside the international settlement.

Now this "war lord" has suddenly been transformed into a sucking dove, sighing for peace. All because the nationalist forces, in a rapid maneuver with the military governors of some of the most important of Chinese provinces, have fallen upon Chang's armed messengers of peace and smote them hip and thigh, driving them out of Shanghai, capturing Nanking, 210 miles west after sharp street fighting and driving them to retreat north across the Yangtze.

Run Now—Or Fight First?

Here they are at present, at Pukow, unable to decide whether to keep on running or to stop and give battle to the troops of General Sun Chuan-fang, commanding about 200,000 men of five middle southern provinces who swept up out of Chekiang and took Shanghai last Friday, allowed the labor unions to reopen, released labor prisoners who led the nationalist movement, and declared war upon Peking, its tariff conference and all its works, including Chang Tso-lin, its lone supporter.

Chekiang provost guards are impressing recruits to add to their forces at Shanghai. Chang's Fengtien troops at Pukow are announcing that they may give battle against further retreat when they get "reinforcements" of the troops driven from Shanghai. Ordinarily, troops driven into retreat make poor reinforcements.

Getting Licked Not "Weakness."

Chang Tso-lin himself announces that his great desire for peace has led him to order his troops to withdraw clear out of Kiangsu province and as far north as Hsuchowfu, while vigorously protesting that this is "not a sign of weakness," but an effort to defend Peking.

Chang makes a point of defending Peking now, proposing to General Feng Yu-hsiang, his most likely and powerful enemy, that Feng, too, come out for the defense of Peking, thus trying to place Feng in the bad light of being a rude militarist who wants to disturb Chang's beautiful plans for peace. Feng has 200,000 men at Kalgan, and yet is keeping his intentions to himself, but his allegiance to the nationalist cause is already known.

More Trouble Ahead.

Wu Pei-fu is consolidating himself in central China. He, also, has been dark as to what he is going to do with his armies in Hupeh province, altho the Chekiang forces who were supporting him are actively in the field with Sun Chuan-fang. Yu Wei-chun, governor of Honan province, is threating to take the field against Chang Tso-lin and invade the province of Kiangsu.

Chang Tso-lin says he is "unable to understand" the hostility of Sun Chuan-fang, who has started out to drive Chang, the war lord of Manchuria, back to Manchuria. As usual, Chang accuses Sun of being in league with the Bolsheviks and "taking orders from Moscow."

U. S. BAYONETS STILL MENACE PANAMA CITY

Deportations for Talk Against U. S.

American diplomatic staff—no mere polite handshakers, in a Latin-American country—forever browbeating and bullying.

Over all Central America and the Caribbean area the "Panama system" prevails in greater or less degree. It is the workers and peasants who suffer directly. While American imperialism rides rough-shod over the native capitalists whenever its interests demand, it tries to attach an entire section of them to its own golden chariot wheels; it does not hesitate to render prompt assistance to these petty bootlickers of imperialism whenever they are confronted with a militant and aroused working class. Amreican workers enjoy little enuf freedom of movement, but the underpaid toilers of these semi-colonies have no freedom of movement at all.

Wholesale Deportations.

Some weeks prior to the military descent upon Panama, American imperialism decided that there must be one of the regular periodical clean-ups in the near Latin-American area. The native labor movements were growing restive under the barbarous working conditions, under the leadership of Spanish, South American and other foreign workers who had won the confidence of the natives by their intelligent and resolute championship of labor's interests. This was bad enuf, according to Wall Street. Some of the bolder elements, however, went so far as to commit the unpardonable sin.

They denounced American imperialism. Immediately, the American diplomatic bulldozing machine got busy, and every single foreign worker "known to have spoken against the United States" in Cuba, Panama and Central America, was arrested and deported. More than a score of workers were deported from Cuba during the raids. Men who had lived in Cuba for 18 years were torn away from their families and unceremoniously shipped out of the country. Native Cubans fared little better: Instead of being deported they were thrown into jail, one of the first to be imprisoned being Julio Antonio Mella, secretary of the Cuban section of the All-American Anti-Imperialist League.

A similar procedure was followed in the other countries. A labor leader by the name of Wendel was deported first from Costa Rica, and then from Panama. His instructions were to "Get out of Latin-America and stay out." In a number of cases the newspapers stated plainly that the men were being deported for speaking against the United States.

Part of American Empire.

Now it may seem a serious enuf violation of the supposed right of free speech to deport workers for speaking against American imperialism in the United States, but the unitiated worker might be forgiven for believing that no such action could be taken under any circumstances for speaking against imperialism in the so-called independent countries of Latin-America . . . That is, for defending the liberties of those countries! Nothing of the kind! Any such assumption ignores the fact that the Central American and Caribbean countries are part of the American empire. To speak against the United States government in Cuba or Panama is "treason," just is it is "treason" to speak against his majesty King George V. in India. That is the unpardonable sin, for which follows swift and sure reprisal.

The wholesale deportations from nearby Latin-American countries for the crime of denouncing American imperialism, proves conclusively that these countries are mere satrapies of Wall Street. Such complete domination as this reveals is made even more brutally manifest by the military occupation of the City of Panama. It will of course continue, whether or not the American troops remain there or finally go into temporary retirement across the border in the Canal Zone.

American domination will continue in Latin-America as long as the oppressed peoples of those countries can be kept powerless. But the national liberation movement is everywhere taking on impetus. The growth of the sections of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League in Cuba, Mexico and Central America indicates clearly that American imperialism is failing in its endeavor to crush out the liberating impulse in the oppressed peoples. If the working class in the United States lends active support to the Latin Americans in their struggle against the joint enemy, Wall Street, an irresistible force will be created which all the governmental might of American imperialism will be unable to resist. Such a combination can take the American soldiers out of Panama and keep them out, and at the same time usher in a new day of freedom for the wage-workers of the United States.

Russians in Chicago to Buy Sheep and Hogs for the Farmers Back Home

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, 700 meat packers are meeting in Chicago plotting and planning to make this branch of American food profiteering triumphant in the world. They have gathered at the Drake Hotel, on the Gold Coast, where less respectable bandits happened to kill one of their victims and are now facing death on the gallows.

F. Edson White, who has displaced J. Ogden Armour, at the head of Armour & Co., notifies the others that the American packing industry in common with all this nation's industries must prepare itself "to meet within the next 20 years the most severe competition it has ever experienced."

• • • •

It was perhaps rather significant that at the same time White was delivering his warning, three representatives of the Union of Soviet Republics were wandering about the stockyards, in this same Chicago, picking up a few thousand rams here, a few thousand sheep there and somewhere else a few thousand hogs. All in all, the Russians spent about a quarter of a million dollars in making their purchases.

The Russian workers and peasants do not intend to eat those sheep and hogs. They paid high prices for them and they are going to use them to breed better sheep and hogs within the Soviet Union. Russian agriculture and animal husbandry are still in their primitive stages to a very great extent, but they are rapidly forging to the front.

• • • •

Michael S. Pereferkovitch, manager of the live stock department of the Soviet government, who heads the mission here, says Soviet rule is doing everything possible to aid its farmers.

That should be interesting reading for American farmers who have learned, thru many bitter experiences, that the American capitalist government at Washington, does everything it can to help those who fatten off the farmers, the bankers, the absentee landlords and the food gamblers. No such triumvirate sits longer upon the backs of the Russian peasantry.

• • • •

White tells the American packers that "scientific study, intensive research, more elaborate inventions and continued substitution of machines for man-power must be used to the limit to fight this competition," that threatens American industry. Which means they must be used to produce cheaper goods that can be sold at greater profits than the products of other countries.

The Russians will certainly join with the American multi-millionaire packer in declaring that scientific study, intensive research, more elaborate inventions and continued substition of machines for man-power are all good. But for the Russians they are only good to lift the burden of toil from labor's shoulders, so that the farmers under emancipating Soviet rule may stand erect and free for the first time in all Russian history, and to improve all Russian agriculture.

• • • •

White did not say that he was thinking of the Union of Soviet Republics when he spoke of the approaching era of greater competition.

Better sheep mean better wool for better clothing. More hogs mean a greater export of bacon and other products to Great Britain and western Europe. Even the old Russia was considered the bread basket of Europe. This will prove even more true of the New Russia, where the abolition of profits has unchained the struggling efforts of the many to build for a better life.

• • • •

In such a competitive struggle it can easily be seen on which side the victor's crown will rest. Free peoples have always conquered enslaved peoples. Russian agriculture will for this reason in time not only outdistance American agriculture, but the Russian people will also show the plundered peoples of America how to follow in their footsteps and achieve their own triumph over their oppressors.

NEED FOR A GENERAL STRIKE SEEN IN USE OF BITUMINOUS COAL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 20.—Anthracite coal in New York state is fast dwindling away and substitutes must be used by every one, according to reports made today to Governor Smith by members of the state coal commission.

"Members of the coal commission have told me that it will not be long before the supply of anthracite coal in the state is gone," the governor said.

The governor said he understood there was plenty of soft coal and substitutes for anthracite, but that people did not like to use them.

official circles to make little of the campaign but the widespread publicity created by the New York and Boston demonstrations and the announced interest of Senator Borah in the case is reported to have caused the American agents of the "Hangman of Hungary" to give his proposed murder plot more serious consideration.

Comrade James P. Cannon, secretary of the International Labor Defense declared to The DAILY WORKER that the campaign is only beginning to gain strength. Branches of the organization in every part of the country are taking steps to mobilize the protests of the workers against the proposed execution of Rakosi and the other leaders of revolutionary Hungarian proletariat.

N. Y. UNIONS PREPARE FOR PURCELL MEET

Leader of 20,000,000 Unionists to Speak

NEW YORK, N. Y., Oct. 20—A preliminary conference of the trade union committee for organizing the Purcell meeting in New York City, was held at Beethoven Hall, 210 East 5th St., on Sunday afternoon. Delegates from unions representing over 100,000 organized workers of this city, were present.

Great interest was manifested in the coming of Purcell to this city for the purpose of addressing the workers of the local unions. It will be remembered that A. A. Purcell was the fraternal delegate of the British Trade Union Congress to the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Head of Amsterdam International.

Purcell is the president of the International Federation of Trade Unions representing over 20 million workers, and is a labor member of the British parliament. He is touring this country to speak on the subject of world trade union unity. He represents over 4,500,000 organized British workers.

The conference elected M. Rosen, of the Carpenters' Local Union 376 as chairman and E. Marks, of Cloakmakers' Local No. 2.

Want Biggest Hall Possible.

Since Madison Square Garden is not now available it was felt that considerable difficulty would be found in securing a hall large enuf to hold the distinguished British labor delegate. However, arrangements were left in the hands of various committees which were appointed.

The next meeting of the conference will be held on Sunday, November 1, at 3 p. m.

New York City is among the list of cities where local trade unions are arranging speaking dates for the distinguished visitor. Great mass meetings for unionists are already assured the treat of hearing Purcell speak at Kansas City, St. Louis, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Toronto and Montreal, besides here in New York City.

Storm Signals Warn Shipping as Heavy Winds Bring Snow

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 20.—With vessels scurrying to safety, storm signals were displayed along all Lake Erie shores, following heavy winds which carried with them icy snowflakes.

The waters of the Lake, lashed by the stiff breeze, at times approached the proportions of a gale. Shipping officials expressed the belief that none of the vessels out of port were in danger.

Smallpox Hits Mexico.

"One Step Forward--Two Steps Backward," for Mr. Green

By Jay Lovestone

No one will question the fact that the deadening spirit of Mr. Samuel Gompers ruled the deliberations and dominated the decisions of the last convention of the American Federation of Labor. We need but look at the indorsement given by the delegates to the capitalist schemes of militarism, to the vicious anti-Soviet Union policy of the Washington government. Who is there who can forget the deaf ear turned to the eloquent plea of Purcell, the chairman of the Amsterdam International, for international trade union unity?

The Labor Party Question.

YET, in one respect, there was a new keynote struck at this convention of the American Federation of Labor. This was in reference to the labor party.

It is true the resolution for a labor party was overwhelmingly defeated. But the utterances of President Green, in urging the defeat of the labor party resolution, are instructive as well as significant. In every previous convention of the American Federation of Labor, the leaders of the Gompers' machine, from Gompers down, denounced the idea of independent working class political action, the plan for the organization of a labor party, as absolutely incongruous with "American ideals" and absolutely impossible for American workers. All the piffle and balderdash about the purity of American capitalist democracy and about the American workers being constitutionally unfitted to act as a class against their exploiters were usually played to death by the loyal henchmen of the Gompers' clique in their attacks on the labor party at the previous conventions of the American Federation of Labor.

"Not Opposed to Labor Party in Principle.

THIS year, Mr. Green, who sways Gompers' presidential scepter of reaction as much as the "Grand Old Man" did in his balmiest days, turned just a wee bit aside from the hackneyed path of discrediting and rejecting the idea of a labor party for the American workers.

Mr. Gompers used to denounce the labor party idea in principle. To him the idea of a labor party developing in the United States was synonymous with and the sure forerunner of the collapse of all the glories of the American ruling class which he so loyally served. Mr. Gompers and his aide-de-camp time and again have categorically rejected the idea of a labor party in principle, forever, absolutely.

This year Mr. Green did not reject the labor party idea "in principle," for the American workers. Mr. Gompers' successor fought the labor party resolution as violently as it was ever fought at a convention of the American Federation of Labor. But Mr. Green fought the labor party idea mainly on the ground that it could not pay the American workers at this time. President Green declared that today a labor party could not successfully defend the interests of the workers as well as the time-dishonored policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies," the so-called non-partisan political policy of the American Federation of Labor could.

This loyal labor lieutenant of capital cited as proof of the correctness of his contentions the experiences of the American workers with the LaFollette campaign, which never was a labor party campaign, which in reality aimed at destroying the labor party movement then afoot in the United States. Nor must we forget that even the LaFollette movement to which the Gompers' machine formally pledged some support, was sabotaged and was stabbed in the back by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor. The Gompers' wrecking crew saw in the LaFollette campaign a movement of the masses towards the left, a movement away from the discredited non-partisan policy. Therefore, the American Federation of Labor leaders secretly undermined the LaFollette movement to which they publicly proclaimed their allegiance.

"A Labor Party May Be Desirable."

But let us listen to the words of "wisdom" showered upon the delegates by Mr. Green in his tirade against the idea of a labor party for the American workers. This reactionary labor bureaucrat declared:

"Utilization of existing political parties and indorsement of none is the only wise course for American labor.

"When America ceases to be an agricultural nation and becomes industrialized, a labor party may be desirable, but for the present, we must elect our friends on existing tickets as we have just done with young Bob LaFollette. The workers can make of this government what they wish it to be. There is no need of a class struggle in this country.

"We have respect for the opinions of all those who believe that thru a labor party the workers could advance their political and economic interests, but the great mass of the working people of America do not believe that way. . .

"There may be a time when we in America can organize a labor party, but we will have to change from an agricultural into a semi-industrial country before we can make a success along that line."

These are certainly signified words. Mr. Green no longer rejects the labor party in principle. Mr. Green is not opposed to a labor party "in principle," that is, not forever. Mr. Green is opposed to a labor party just now, today.

Mr. Green no longer denounces the labor party advocates only as dangerous destructionists. Mr. Green says he even has respect for the opinions of those who are for a labor party. To Mr. Green the class struggle is no longer an eternal impossibility in the United States. Times do change.

But we know the methods employed by the enemies of all policies, the application of which would set masses into motion, stir proletarian masses into action against the bourgeoisie. Usually they are not opposed "in principle" to an application of a certain policy, or a certain principle. Usually they are opposed to its application at a particular time. Usually this particular time is always, whenever the advocacy of the application of the particular policy is made.

Yet, the admission by Mr. Green that a labor party may come in the United States, that a labor party may be of help to the workers in the defense of their economic and political interests, or that the American workers even have interests of any kind which differ from the interests of their exploiters is significant. Especially are these words meaningful when they come from the mouth of a member of the royal family of the ruling clique in the American trade union bureaucracy. The writer well recalls how he saw the same Mr. Green sit as a delegate from West Virginia, side by side with the notorious murderer of striking workers, Sheriff Don Chaffin, in the last national democratic party convention in New York City.

For such a gentleman and deserving democrat, such words are certainly blasphemy of the fundamentals of all that is holy to bourgeois America!

But let us examine the reasons given by Mr. Green for a labor party not being timely at present. In our examination of these reasons we will resort to the investigations and data prepared by the very capitalist government which Mr. Green so anxiously wants to maintain.

Mr. Green now tells us that a labor party is undesirable today and he is opposed to it at present because the United States is still an agricultural country. Mr. Green tells us that a labor party may be desirable in the future when the United States becomes at least "a semi-industrial country," "when America ceases to be an agricultural nation and becomes industrialized."

Some Indisputable Facts.

We will be very frank and blunt about things with you, Mr. Green. On the basis of the reasons you have given above, your case against the labor party doesn't have a leg to stand on. It won't hold a drop of water. It is full of holes. In plain language: You are off. You don't know what you are talking about, Mr. President Green of the American Federation of Labor.

Here are the facts:

You are asleep as to what has been happening in the United States in recent years. America is no longer an agricultural country. The United States is no longer a semi-industrial country. The United States left this stage some decades ago.

In the last ten years America's urban population has increased 28.8 per cent and its rural population increased only 3.2 per cent. In 1922 alone there was a net migration of 1,200,000 from the country to the cities.

For the past fifty years there has been a steady fall in the agricultural proportion of those gainfully employed in America. From 1900 to 1920 the proportion of the total gainfully employed to be found in agriculture in the United States declined from 35.7 per cent to 2.3 per cent. From 1910 30.8 per cent of the total gainfully employed in agriculture fell 1,705,924. The last five years have seen a further fall in this direction. At the same time the number gainfully employed in the manufacturing and mechanical industries, in mining, transportation, etc. increased 4,130,497.

More than that, Mr. Green, we now have a big, definitely crystallized working class, despite the fact that somewhere in the back of your head there still lurk the illusions of the existence of "free land and untrammeled, equal opportunities" for the working masses.

In the years of 1910 to 1920 the total number of wage earners—manual and clerical— has increased from 22,406,714 to 26,080,689. Today, while you are opposed to a labor party, Mr. Green, on the ground that the United States is not yet even a semi-industrial country, the wage-earning elements constitute about 63 per cent of the total gainfully employed in this country.

The proportion of persons engaged in manufacturing and mechanical industries in the United States has risen from 22.5 per cent in 1900 to 30.8 per cent of the total gainfully employed in 1920.

And the United States official census figures show that the industrial proletariat—that is the wage workers in mining and quarries, building trades, transportation, manufacturing, stationary engineers and firemen—increased from 12,800,325 in 1910 to 15,540,486 in 1920. Today, while you are opposed to a labor party, Mr. Green, the industrial proletariat is nearly sixty per cent of the whole wage-earning class and the wage-earning class is nearly sixty-three per cent of the total gainfully employed in the United States.

With a wage-earning class of more than 26 millions and an industrial proletariat of more than fifteen and a half millions, America is far from being an agricultural country. Under these conditions the time and material for a labor party are at hand, now, today, and not in some unknown date in the distant future.

Mr. Green Asleep at the Switch

If we were polite, Mr. Green, we would say that you are a sort of a Rip Van Winkle. You have been asleep a good many years—in so far as the development of an American working class and the protection of its interests are concerned. The imperialist development of America, the world war, the Dawes plan, the rise of America into playing the role of the world's banker and manufacturer as well as the world's pantryman have all escaped your observation and understanding, to express it charitably.

These very powerful social forces with their deep going effects on class relations in the United States, which you profess to be ignorant of, Mr. Green, have for some time been working energetically and against you.

The very fact that you are now compelled to take one step forward and tell the world that you are no longer opposed to a labor party in principle, Mr. Green, shows that these social forces working behind your back which you have so shamefully turned on the workers, are driving you to see the hastening collapse of your dastardly policy of reward your enemies and hang yourself, the breakdown of your beloved so-called non-partisan policy.

Towards a Labor Party.

Nor, Mr. Green, will your moving two steps backwards, by urging the American workers to believe that the United States is still in the days of 1870 or earlier and that they should therefore today reject the idea of a labor party, halt the operation of and fermentation by these social forces.

Backward or sideward, as you may move, Mr. Green, the reasons you have given the last American Federation of Labor convention against a labor party are shoddy, threadbare. The fabric of your case is full of holes.

Economic and political developments are weaving a new warp and woof of class relationships in the United States. America is headed towards a labor party, separate and distinct from and opposed to the political parties of the capitalists. The American workers are waking up despite the fact that the Greens, the Wolls, and other high-priced lieutenants of capital in the ranks of labor may be asleep, blind, or bitterly hostile to this forward movement of the working class in the United States.

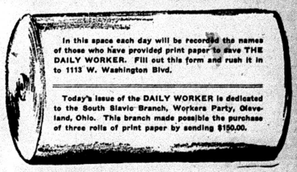
GIFFORD PINCHOT BEGS CAL COOLIDGE TO SPARE BUTLER

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 20—Gifford Pinchot, governor of Pennsylvania was at the White House where he requested President Coolidge spare Brigadier General Smedley Butler of the marine corps and allow him to remain in Philadelphia to carry on "law enforcement." President Coolidge made no promises to Pinchot.

Gifford Pinchot poses as a liberal and styles himself "friend of the laboring classes." His begging President Calvin Coolidge to allow Brig. Gen. Butler, who under Wilson's regime dispersed the Haitian congress with the use of United States marines and has always taken the "treat 'em rough" attitude towards the workers in America who go on strike for better living conditions, show the workers of Pennsylvania that the interests of Gifford Pinchot are to defend the capitalist class and its institutions.

THE DAILY WORKER SAFE FOR ANOTHER DAY!



In this space each day will be recorded the names of those who have provided print paper to save THE DAILY WORKER. Fill out this form and rush it in to 1113 W. Washington Blvd.

Today's issue of the DAILY WORKER is dedicated to the South Slavic Branch, Workers Party, Cleveland, Ohio. This branch made possible the purchase of three rolls of print paper by sending $150.00.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS MORE ARE NEEDED TO KEEP THE PRESSES RUNNING, THOUSANDS MORE TO SUPPLY THE HUGE ROLLS OF PAPER.

FOR another day the DAILY WORKER is safe.

Paper for today's issue, three rolls, sufficient for thirty thousand copies spread broadcast over the United States, was supplied by the $150.00 sent by the South Slavic branch of the Workers Party of Cleveland, Ohio.

Paper is the food of the press. Like so many slices of bread, the three rolls were swallowed up. Tomorrow three more will be needed to feed the hungry machines and to turn out food for thought for the workers.

And paper is but one small item of the multitudinous needs of a daily newspaper.

To supply the other demands of a printing plant, DAILY WORKER readers thruout the country have responded generously this week-end, bringing in a total of $1,142.55. Included in this is $208.50, the results of the first DAILY WORKER Rescue Party. This was given Sunday night in Chicago by the North Side English branch of the Workers Party, inaugurating a series of SAVE THE DAILY WORKER parties to be launched nationally.

Other branches that have militantly rallied funds to pull the DAILY WORKER thru the crisis are the South Slavic branch of Detroit, Mich., the Workers Party comrades of Springfield, Mass., the City Central Committee of Denver, Colo., and the Ukrainian Down-town branch of New York. Fifty dollars to buy a roll of paper was sent by Maurice Auerbach of Chicago.

HUNDREDS ATTEND PARTY TO RESCUE WORKERS' DAILY

Art Exhibit Attracts Men and Money

The first Chicago DAILY WORKER "Rescue Party" held at Imperial Hall by direction of the North Side branch attracted hundreds of workers who were delightfully surprised.

Drawings Go Quickly.

Decorating the walls of the hall were framed, mounted and unmounted drawings and cartoons of the best artists in the labor movement. The choice work of Bob Minor, Fred Ellis, Maurice Becker, Lydia Gibson and many others, all of which have appeared during the past two years in the DAILY WORKER and the Workers Monthly, were sold and some auctioned in a novel manner that entertained the workers who crowded the hall and brought spirited bidding for choice original drawings from workers who searched their pockets and "went the limit."

A gang plank to the stage brought visitors "on deck" to the ship where a game was played that helped to "save the DAILY WORKER," and gave cigars to accurate horse shoe pitchers.

Coffee and Doughnuts Popular.

Coffee and "life preservers" were distributed freely without charge—and many took advantage to subscribe to The DAILY WORKER on the subscription "bricks" attached to the doughnuts.

A spirited contest for an original cartoon to be made of the winner by Fred Ellis, narrowed down to two popular members of the sex (supposedly) "easier to look at" and was won by Anna Lawrence (over Billie Shachtman) in a last minute rush of five hundred votes from an admirer—at a penny a vote. Both contestants being so "easy on the eyes," Comrade Ellis, the cartoonist, offered to make drawings of both, and everybody was happy.

A Finnish orchestra did "do-funnies" that made dancing easy and good fun. Sandwiches were good and cake so good that it pleased the cake eaters.

A radio set was donated and raffled. Even a couple dozen Gillette razors, also a donation, were sold around the hall to bearded Bolsheviks. It all helped nicely to "bring home the bacon."

It was a night of real good fun—for a real good purpose—and this "painless way" of raising funds for the DAILY WORKER is now being adopted in many cities. Chicago has already two others in the making, while New York has six rescue parties on the way.

The bosses use the police and courts. We must take them from the bosses.

TEMPORARY SUBDIVISION OF THE CITY OF CHICAGO PROPOSED BY C. E. C. DIST. REORGANIZATION COMMISSION

SECTION ONE

(LOOP—SOUTH TERRITORY)

Attention!

The section membership meeting of Section No. 1, which takes in the following branches: South Side English, South Side Scandinavian, Englewood English, Clothing Shop Nuclei Nos. 2, 3 and 4, will be held Wednesday, October 21, 8 p. m. sharp, at the South Side Community House, 3201 S. Wabash Ave.

Every member of the Workers Party attached to any one of the above named units, must attend this meeting if he or she wishes to retain membership in the Workers (Communist) Party.

Registration of all members will take place here, for reorganization purposes and assignments, as to where the various comrades belong, will be made.

It is of the utmost importance to the successful reorganization of the party in the city of Chicago that every member belonging to Section No. 1 attend this meeting.

MICHAEL FRUNZE, SOVIET ARMY HEAD, TO UNDERGO OPERATION IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, Oct. 20.—Gen. Michael Frunze, successor of Leon Trotsky as commissar of war, is seriously ill in the Kremlin hospital from ulcer of the duodenom, and an immediate operation has been decided on. Like M. Trotsky, who is also ill with intestinal and kidney disorders, Gen. Frunze worked from fifteen to eighteen hours a day at the commissariat of war.

District 2, Y. W. L. Calls Trade Union Conference

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 20.—Comrade Sam Don, district organizer of the Young Workers League in Dist. No. 2 announces the calling of a trade union conference of all members of the league for the purpose of discussing the tasks of the Communists in the unions. The conference will be held Monday evening, October 26th, at 5 p. m. at 105 Eldridge St.

Gitlow Will Speak

Comrade Benjamin Gitlow, member of the central committee of the Workers Party, will lead the discussion. All league members and particularly those who are members of the trade unions have been urged to come.

This conference will strike a blow at the journalistic conception of becoming a mass organization. It will point out that the Young Workers League must assume the leadership of the struggles of the young workers by actually participating in their daily struggles. In order to frustrate any tendency which may manifest itself to leave or refuse to join the reformist trade unions it will point out that the trade unions are the mass organizations of the working class and it is essential to work within them and to revolutionize them.

More Effective Union Work

The question of the greater exploitation of the young workers, the lack of attention on this score by the trade unions, the organization of the unorganized young workers into the trade unions with lower initiation fees and dues will be discussed and acted upon. At this conference the Young Workers League will proceed with the further organization of Communist youth fractions, so that the struggle on behalf of the young workers in the unions and the Trade Union Educational League will be organized and effective.

Attention, Group Leaders!

A group leaders' meeting will be held tonight at 2613 Hirsch Blvd., at 8 o'clock sharp. All those interested in junior work are urged to attend his meeting. Very important.

DISTRICT ORGANIZATIONS RESPONDING TO THE CALL TO RESCUE THE DAILY WORKER

The various district organizations are respondng in a lively manner to the instructions sent out by the organization department of the C. E. C. for mobilizing the entire party membership and sympathizers to SAVE THE DAILY WORKER.

We quote the following reports as typifying the response received to date:

Agricultural District on the Job.

"Dear Comrade Lovestone:— Received your hurry up call to save The DAILY WORKER, and wish to say that I have laid aside everything else for the time being and am rushing over the territory as fast as the Ford will go.

"Fraternally yours,

"Alfred Knutson."

Cleveland Mobilizes.

"Dear Comrade:— Received your wire and also Comrade Lovestone's directions for an emergency campaign for The DAILY WORKER.

"I immediately sent out an alarm call to all the branches, incorporating the methods that they must employ at once in order to raise money to save the daily.

"Tonight we held a meeting of the branch organizers in Cleveland, most of them turned up and mapped out the immediate steps that they must take. I believe that you will receive some money immediately, and within a few weeks, more should come in. The comrades agreed that help must be given and promised to do everything in their power to get it together.

"They are to see their, executive committees within the next two days. They are to visit the fraternal organizations and sympathizers. We shall cover the trade unions and other organizations that are at all sympathetic.

"If the comrades meet the situation at all comensurately, money should be forthcoming without delay.

"Fraternally yours,

"I. Amter, District Organizer."

Pittsburgh Gets Good Start.

"Dear Comrade:—Received your special delivery and telegram informing me of the difficult situation in which The DAILY WORKER finds itself at this time. We shall make an effort to raise as much as possible, but this will take a few days. The secretariat was instructed by the district executive committee to take steps that 'Save The DAILY WORKER Committees' are organized by all and every unit of the party in this district.

"Last night we were down to the Jewish branch where a pledge for $100.00 was made. A $30.00 check was sent immediately. We will also try to settle the literature account with The DAILY WORKER and I have written Com. Loeb about this matter. Out of the $409 due The DAILY WORKER for literature, there is about $200 worth of literature on hand and $40 was sent to Comrade Loeb only yesterday.

"The district committee decided to recommend the appointment of Comrade George Papcun as The DAILY WORKER agent for the time being and I hope that recommendation will be approved, in view of the fact that we have to put some life into the distribution of The DAILY WORKER and literature in this district.

"We will send out committees to all other branches in Pittsburgh and see to it that as much money is raised as possible. You must realize that we are handicapped at this moment due to the fact that we are carrying on a campaign to raise money for defense, having a special organizer, Comrade Bloor, in the field. However, we shall do the best we can, to save The DAILY WORKER.

"Fraternally yours,

"A Jakira, District Organizer."

PROTEST AGAINST BARRING GITLOW FROM N. Y. BALLOT

Needle Trades Workers' Meeting Wednesday

NEW YORK, Oct. 20—Local 15 of the Furriers is the latest union to join the storm of protest to the exclusion of Gitlow from the ballot. Previous protests have already come from the Joint Board of Furriers and Locals 2, 9 and 22 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers which protested the same night that the board of elections issued its order.

A petition has begun to circulate to which it is expected to get 100,000 signatures demanding that the elections board reverse its decision. Even Norman Thomas, the socialist candidate for mayor, has joined the list of those protesting against the act.

Philadelphia Mobilizes for Daily Worker

The political committee of the Workers Party in Philadelphia has held a special session to consider the mobilization of all resources to save the DAILY WORKER.

A special meeting of all The DAILY WORKER agents has been called for Thursday, Oct. 22.

A special campaign committee is to be elected to take charge of the "Save The DAILY WORKER Campaign."

Every party unit of the district is to be called into action.

A good response from the entire membership and active support of the sympathetic workers is expected.

Down with injunctions! Forward to a workers' government.

ROBERT MINOR TO GO ON BIG WESTERN SPEAKING TOUR FOR ORGANIZATION DEPARTMENT

The organization department of the Workers (Communist) Party has arranged for a tour of most of the party centers in the West. Comrade Robert Minor will be the representative of the Central Executive Committee and will address the party membership on the problems of party bolshevization.

Subject: Reorganization.

Comrade Minor will deal at length on the party reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei. He will also address a number of public meetings in celebration of the 8th anniversary of the proletarian revolution in Russia

The dates of these meetings follow:

Wednesday, Nov. 4, Spokane—Anniversary and organization meetings; Friday, Nov. 6, Seattle—Organization meeting; Saturday Nov. 7, Seattle—Anniversary meeting; Sunday, Nov. 8, Tacoma—Anniversary meeting; Monday, Nov. 9, Portland—Anniversary meeting; Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 11 and 12, San Francisco—Anniversary meetings; Friday, Nov. 13, Oakland or Berkeley — Anniversary meeting; Sunday, Nov. 15, Los Angeles—Anniversary meeting; Monday, Nov. 16, Los Angeles—Organization meeting; Wednesday, Nov 18, Salt Lake City — Anniversary meeting; Friday, Nov. 20, Denver—Anniversary meeting; Saturday, Nov. 21, Omaha—Anniversary meeting.

Richmond, Va., Party Members Pledge Their Support to the C. E. C.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 20—Comrade Norman Tallentire of Philadelphia was the principal speaker at the special membership meeting held here. In a masterly speech he explained the shop nuclei form of reorganization. He then traced the internal history of the Communist movement in America to the present day and stressed the necessity of recognizing elementary Communist discipline. He urged the comrades to sincerely support the C. I. decision and concluded by submitting to the branch the resolution which was endorsed by the Philadelphia membership meeting.

The Richmond, Va. branch maintained its usual Bolshevik traditions by endorsing the C. I. decision and pledging loyal support of the new central executive committee.

CHICAGO DISTRICT PARTY FRACTION MEETINGS FOR UNION MOBILIZATION

In addition to the fraction meetings organized in a number of cities in southern Illinois, which will be visited by Comrade Arne Swabeck, the following party fraction meetings have been scheduled. These will be addressed by Comrades Martin Abern, J. W. Johnstone, Tom Bell and others.

Thursday, October 22—Waukegan, Ill.
Friday, October 23—South Bend, Ind.
Sunday, October 25—Lake County, Ind.
Monday, October 26—Milwaukee, Wis.
Wednesday, October 28—Kenosha, Wis.
Friday, October 30—Joliet, Ill.
Saturday, October 31—Sheboygan, Wis.

CLEVELAND COMRADES, TAKE NOTE!

All Cleveland comrades working in industry are instructed to attend a membership meeting on Saturday. Oct. 24, 8 p. m., at the South Slavic Hall, 5607 St. Clair Ave. A most important question will be taken up, of great significance to the party work. Hence, no comrade should fail to attend. No excuse will be taken. Ample notice has been given in the press—and there will be a check-up of all the comrades.

TWO MORE FEDERATION BUREAUS ON JOB WITH REORGANIZATION

The organization department of the C. E. C. has received response from two more federation bureaus, which have elected reorganization commissions to conduct intensive reorganization work among the members of their sections.

The Lithuanian bureau has selected a reorganization commission of five, consisting of Andrulis, N. Katilus, J. Gasiunas (Chcago), R. Mizura, A. Bimba (New York).

The South Slavic section has elected the following reorganization commission: Chas. Novak, T. Cuckovich, and M. Krasich.

RIVERA BOAST OF VICTORIES CAME TOO SOON

Riffs Invade Spanish and French Lines

(Special to The Daily Worker)

FEZ, French Morocco, Oct. 20.—When Primo de Rivera, the Spanish dictator, told newspaper correspondents that the Moroccan war was ended and claim to have defeated the forces of Abd-el-Krim, little did he realize the determination with which the Moroccans are fighting for their independence.

Primitive Warfare

With Abd-el-Krim's forces numbering but 25,000 tribesmen scattered all over the Riffian country in small bands against the combined force of 200,000 French and Spanish troops pitched battles are little to be expected. The Riffian tribesmen resort to the guerrila form of warfare which is highly effective.

Riffs Smash Imperialists' Lines

The Riffs attacked the Spanish near Adjir and ambushed two squadrons of French cavalry near Taza. The Moroccan tribesmen break thru the French and Spanish lines continually, forcing the French and Spanish troops to be on their guard at all times and to be equipped to the fullest possible extent.

Rain Stops Aviaton Bombing

The French bombing squadrons consisting chiefly of American mercenaries are unable to do any bombing or to bring food to the troops that are isolated in their posts by the tribesmen, because of the heavy downpour which also continues to turn the Moroccan fields into mud impassable to the heavy transport wagons and guns of the French and Spanish.

Must Stay Thru Winter

When General Primo de Rivera made his boast that the war in Morocco was over, he told of his plans to withdraw some of the troops which he has in the land. Up to the present day very few soldiers have been allowed to return to Spain. General Primo de Rivera is now telling his staff to prepare for a winter's stay and to build suitable quarters so that they could resist the climatic change.

James Deering After Skinning Workers Doles Out Charity

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 20.—Bequests totalling $1,500,000 were made to Miami and Chicago charitable institutions by the late James Deering, farm implement manufacturer of Chicago. Deering died at sea Sept. 21, last.

Under the terms of the will, a sum of $500,000 is placed in trust to be used for the maintenance of a charity ward in the Miami City hospital. The sum of $500,000 each also was bequeathed to the Children's Memorial Hospital and the Visiting Nurse Association of Chicago.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

McNIDER APPOINTMENT MAY BE FOLLOWED BY RAID FOR FEDERAL JOBS BY FASCIST LEGIONNAIRES

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Hanford McNider of Mason City, Ia., former state and national commander of the American legion, leader in the fascist element in that organization, has been named by President Coolidge as assistant secretary of war.

This is the first big federal job awarded to one of the "treat 'em rough" group in the legion management. Thousands of men and women in the scientific and social welfare branches of the government service are wondering whether his advent in Washington means a general raid is to be launched by the hard-boiled politicians within the legion, similar to the one that almost wrecked the government after the civil war. In the latter case it was the Grand Army of the Republic that served as a vehicle to the salary-counter.

McNider was state and national commander of the legion at the time when that organisaiton was identified with mobbings and other acts of violation of civil rights in all parts of the country. In Mason City, his home town, where McNider and his father have two banks and other big business interests, a woman speaker was mobbed and deported by the 100-percenters for her labor views. None of the legionnaires in that mob were punished.

McNider represents the type of business man to whom fascism appeals. He was an officer in the Iowa national guard before going to France in the world war. He resumed banking when he got out of the army, but he made fiery speeches against radicalism of every kind. When the old guard failed to defeat Brookhart in the primaries in 1924, young McNider became one of the most conspicuous backers of the democratic nominee, Steck. They were close companions, and McNider was credited with having raised most of the big fund which Steck used. After Steck filed his contest of the election in the senate, McNider came to Washington and demanded of a democratic leader a statement as to his attitude on seating Steck. This senator sharply told McNider that that was none of the business of a hard-shelled republican.

C. H. McNider, the father, was one of the members of the federal reserve bankers' conference held in the spring of 1920, which decided to "deflate" the American farmers. Iowa farmers are just now recovering from the ruin that followed the deflation order. This elder McNider is at present under indictment in the federal district court for northen Illinois, eastern division, in the so-called cement trust case. The indictment was filed March 9, 1922. It names McNider, senior, as president of the list of defendants then charged with controlling 90 per cent of the cement sold in their territory; the indictment set forth that they charged "'arbitrary, noncompetitive and excessive prices" which were based on the exchange of information between them.

McNider is already mentioned in the administration press as the logical successor to Senator Cummins, and it is suggested that his present appointment is offered as an aid to his wider career. He is counted on to deliver the legion vote and its agitational machinery to the support of the Coolidge program.

Colorado Feels Earth Shocks.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 20—Seven severe earth shocks were recorded on the seismograph at St. Regis College, at 3:48 o'clock this morning, reports Father Forestall, who is in charge of the instruments. The maximum intensity was from 3:49 to 3:51 with the distance placed at about 1,500 miles. The direction, on the first investigation could not be ascertained, but Father Forestall placed it somewhere on the American continent.

Plan to Take Armies Out of Cologne Area

PARIS, Oct. 20.—Negotiations for the evacuation of Cologne, as the result of the Locarno security pact, are already under way it was announced by the foreign office today.

Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister, and M. Briand, French foreign minister, will meet this afternoon to discuss plans for the evacuation of Cologne.

While French opposition to a disarmament conference called by Pres. Coolidge is being openly expressed in the newspapers, Paul Boncour, French delegate to the league of nations, today suggested that the United States should cooperate with the league of nations efforts for disarmament.

Deny War For General Motors.

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Wall Street speculative leaders today scouted the idea of a fight for control of the General Motors corporation, between the Durant and Morgan-Dupont interests and characterized as untrue rumors that William Durant was seeking to acquire sufficient stock in the open market to control that corporation.

WHEN WILL JOHN L. LEWIS GIVE US TALK LIKE THIS?

British Miners' Union Head Talks Turkey

LONDON—(By Mail.)—I found Herbert Smith at the M. F. G. B. headquarters, still grim and a little flushed after the critical meeting with the premier half an hour before.

"How do you explain Baldwin's attitude, Mr. Smith?" I asked.

"There is only one explanation," he replied, very deliberately. "The government are encouraging the employers to attack wages.

"When our men find that price lists which have been honored for years are swept away without any warning, they naturally refuse to accept this flagrant breach of the truce. And when they go and claim unemployment benefit, the government representative tells them 'this is a trade dispute, and you are not entitled to the benefits which you yourselves have paid for.'

"Here's the position in a nutshell: "If a miner has been earning 2s. plus 50 per cent for a certain job (i. e., 3s.), and the employer lowered the percentage to 48 per cent, making the wage 2s 11½d., that would be a breach of the truce, says the government, and the miner would be entitled to benefit.

"But if the mine owner lowers the basic rate to 1s. 10d., and calculates 50 per cent on that, making a total wage of 2s. 9d., that is not a breach of truce! And our men who refuse to work are told they are on strike, and therefore may starve."

I asked Mr. Smith whether he thought the mine owners were acting in agreement with the government.

"I am certain of it," he said emphatically. "They are in strict cooperation and collaboration with the government now, not a mine department!"

"The object is to smash the national agreement, and to force us back to sectional district agreements. The prime minister actually ventured to suggest this at one of our meetings, and this is a new and ingenious way they think they have discovered to force us to accept it. In Durham alone we have over 20,000 unemployed."

"What did you reply to the prime minister?"

"Our reply was this: Reductions? Not a cent! Longer hours? Not a second! That's what I told the prime minister."

Recalling the recent meeting of the Miners' International and the stories of disunity which the capitalist press had so assiduosly spread, I asked Mr. Smith, who is president of the International, what that organization would do in the event of a fight.

He replied: "Certain countries have already promised us their full support in every way. The Germans are in a very difficult position, owing to their compulsory arbitration act, and the state of things brought about by the Versailles reparations scheme and the Dawes report.

What's This?

I suggested to Mr. Smith that the recent resolution of the International, reproving A. J. Cook for telling miners' conferences the truth about the Dawes plan and the unity campaign, might militate against this.

"No," he said, "I believe that the German miners, and their leaders as well, realize that we must have a stronger and more virile International than at present, an International that will be of real use. Not necessarily to bring about big strikes. The stronger you are, the less necessity will there be for big strikes. That is my belief.

"That also is why I am trying hard to break down the obstacles in the way of the Russian and other miners coming in and forming one united Miners' International.

"Tell your readers that we are not afraid of the alliance between the government and the mine owners, providing we can rely—and I believe we can rely—on the support of organized labor. A united working class front has beaten the masters once, and we can do it again."

THOUSANDS OF NEW YORK WORKERS ACCLAIM RED EDITOR IN HIS EXPOSE OF TRAITOROUS A. F. OF L. LEADERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—The meeting arranged by the Workers (Communist) Party, at Manhattan Lyceum, was an inspiring demonstration of the loyalty and devotion, the militant workers of New York have for the Workers (Communist) Party and the DAILY WORKER.

Tremble in their Thrones.

Comrade Engdahl, who attended the sessions of the A. F. of L. convention at Atlantic City, reported on the pow-wow of the fat bellied reactionary labor leaders. He opened his remarks by stating that in the fossilized reactionary A. F. of L., revolution was beginning to be feared as never before. The millionaire labor leaders had made every attempt to keep the militant element at the convention from being heard. In spite of their close watch, however, the progressives managed to submit seven resolutions. The resolutions for recognition of Soviet Russia, for the abolition of child labor, against injunctions, for international trade union unity, for relief of the unemployed, for a labor party in America were all referred to the resolutions committee. The delegates allude to this committee as the burial ground.

Comrade Engdahl declared that the treachery and betrayal of working class interests by the socialist trade union leaders was further demonstrated at this convention. Zaritsky of the Capmakers', Sigman of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and Kaufman of the Furriers did not lift a voice in protest against the actions of the Greens and the Lewises in killing resolutions of such great importance to the workers. The socialist delegation, together with the reactionaries of the A. F. of L., refused to support the Sacco-Vanzetti appeal. This at a time when Sacco and Vanzetti face the electric chair in a direct betrayal of the working class.

Purcell Has Them Worried.

The socialist labor leaders were concerned with nothing of greater importance than presenting a bust of Samuel Gompers to the A. F. of L. The convention appeared to be more concerned with memorials for the dead than with doing anything to improve the conditions of the living. The only outstanding feature of the convention was the stirring appeal for international trade union unity made by Arthur A. Purcell, delegate of the British labor unions. Purcell pointed out to the delegates that conditions in England were creating a basis for a revolution. He said that the duties of the trade unions were to prepare for the taking over of the industries and government, as the Russian workers have done. He also stated that on his last visit to Soviet Russia with the British delegation, he was amazed at the progress made by the workers in building up the economic order in Russia. Therefore, he maintained that it is the duty of organized labor the world over to support the workers and farmers of Russia. The delegation of reactionary labor leaders was taken aback by this report. Green, in answer, launched a vitriolic attack on Purcell, on Soviet Russia and on the Communists in America.

But Workers Are Enthusiastic.

Comrade Engdahl informed us of a splendid meeting held in the working class section of Atlantic City. "In the near future," he said, "Comrades Tomsky and Losovsky will visit us as real representatives of the working class. In spite of the hatred and treachery of the reactionary labor leaders, the message of Communism is being accepted by the working class and when the conditions are ripe in America, the workers will do as the Russian workers have done."

Among the other speakers were Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for mayor on the Workers Party ticket, Comrade Bentall, former editor of the Duluth Truth, and Comrade Carl Brodsky, candidate on the Workers Party ticket in the Eighth aldermanic district. Comrade Juliet Stewart Poynts presided.

NEW YORK COMRADES ANSWER THE CALL FOR DAILY WORKER RESCUE PARTIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—Just as in every other instance, the New York comrades will not let the call for help coming from our DAILY WORKER go unheeded. Immediately we received word of the precarious financial condition of our daily, our comrades got busy arranging rescue parties, which we are certain will be enthusiastically participated in by the workers here.

So far the following have been arranged for:

Daily Worker Rescue Parties in New York.

Saturday, Oct. 31—Hungarian Workers' Home, 350 East 81st St. Branches co-operating: Yorkville English, Esthonian, Yorkville Hungarian, Yorkville German, German Night Workers, Yorkville; Y. W. L. N. 4, Hungarian; Y. W. L. No. 7, English Czecho-Slovak.

Saturday, Oct. 31—Barbers' Union Hall, 56 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn. Branches co-operating: Jewish Williamsburg.

Monday, Nov. 2—Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th St., N. Y. C. English Downtown, Ukrainian Downtown, Rusisan Downtown, Armenian, Italian Downtown, Oriental and Polish Downtown. Branches co-operating: Y. W. L. No. 5, English; Y. W. L. No. 28, Russian.

Monday, Nov. 2—Finnish Workers' Hall, 764, 40th St., Brooklyn, Finnish South Brooklyn, English Boro Partk, Lithuanian Boro Park, Russian South Brookyn and Scandinavian South Brooklyn. Branches co-operating: English Coney Isand.

Saturday, Nov. 14—Bronx Workers' Hall, 1347 Boston Road, Bronx, English Bronx No. 1, English Bronx No. 2, Hungarian Bronx No. 45, Jewish Bronx, No. 1 and 2; German Nigth Workers, Lettish, Lithuanian Bronx, Ukrainian Bronx and Russian Bronx. Branches co-operating: Y. W. L. No. 1, English; Y. W. L., No. 12, Jewish; Y. W. L., No. 22, Jewish; Y. W. L., No. 29, Russian.

Admission at all Rescue Parties to be fifty cents

Additional "DAILY WORKER Rescue Parties" are being arranged for Harlem, Astoria, Williamsburg, and Brownsville with the co-operation of the branches in those sections, and will be announced at an early date.

MANY SOCIETIES PROTEST BRUTAL POLICE RAIDS

Denounce Raids Upon Cleveland Chinese

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 20—The unwarranted raid of the Cleveland police department on the Chinese colony has roused protests from many organization over the high handed methods used by the police in the arrest of 600 innocent Chinese workers, students and merchants because of an unsolved murder of one Chinese tongman.

"Finding Guilty Culprit"

The tong killing which resulted in the raids to find the "guilty culprit" was but one of over 100 unsolved murders that have taken place in Cleveland since the first of the year. The method used to find the "guilty culprit" among the Chinese was not resorted to in the other unsolved murders.

"Cleaning Up City."

Safety Director Barry, when roundly criticized for his damnable action, claimed that it was an attempt to clean up the city's dirtiest section. The different societies of Cleveland could not be convinced that it was necessary to raid, arrest 600 Chinese, hold them in prison incommunicado for days crowded into cells so that they must stand still all the time that they were in there, in order to make Cleveland a cleaner city.

Race Segregation.

Cleveland is noted for its attempt to keep the darker races in a segregated district which has been allowed to deteriorate. The streets and houses have few repairs. Neither the landlords nor the city administration pays much attention to complaints from residents in these districts.

Even the reactionary Cleveland Bar Association was horrified at the high handed methods of the police and demands that the city of Cleveland apologize to the Chinese consul in Washington, D. C., and destroy the Bertillon measurements and the fingerprints which the police subjected every Chinese to that fell into their grip.

Pregnant Women Terrorized.

The raid was organized in such a manner that every house in the district was broken into and everyone found in the house arrested and brought to the filthy Cleveland jail. A number of women who were pregnant have been sent to hospitals after their incarceration in the crowded cells where they could not sit down, and the hospital doctors claim that life-long injury has been done these women and that the children that will be born will be marked for life because of the terrible experience which their mothers have passed thru.

Courts and police break picket lines; election boards throw workers off the ballot; that is why we need a workers' government.

Henry Ford in a New Role

Henry Ford, whose methods of piling up millions by turning his wage slaves into automatons are being exposed in THE DAILY WORKER, essays into the field of sociology and economics in the current issue of his personal magazine, The Dearborn Independent. His erudition is revealed in the assertion that:

> "The actual situation anywhere, at any time, corresponds exactly to the moral and mental status of the people."

Paraphrasing the man whose most famous saying is: "History is bunk!" we will add "Henry Ford's sociology is bunk."

While Ford, thru most inhuman exploitation of labor can convert piles of iron and tin into flivvers and tractors, this quotation proves that his education has been sadly neglected in other fields. For it is an established fact, known to all intelligent people since the publictaion of the works of Marx, that the morals and mental status of the people do not determine material conditions, but that material conditions determine all the customs and ideas of a given period.

This is on a par with the thought processes of Ford's chief publicity agent, Mr. Allen L. Benson, who while he was candidate for president of the United States on the socialist party ticket in 1916, devoted most of his time to eulogizing Ford because of the establishment of the 8-hour day and five dollar a day wage in the Ford plants. Benson was at that time severely assailed by the Marxists in the socialist party, most of whom are now in Workers Party. We, at that time, pointed out precisely what is being proved today, that in the development of capitalism hours of labor frequently have been voluntarily reduced by the employer because with highly intensified application of labor to industry it is possible to extract more surplus value out of workers in a short period of time, than over a longer period.

Ford did not inaugurate the 8-hour day as a philanthropic move, but because experience had taught him that he could just as easily extract all the vitality out of a worker in eight hours of intensified labor as he could by ten hours of labor under the old conditions.

Tearing the hypocritical mask from this unscrupulous apostle of the open (scab) shop and revealing his new projects for exploiting more thousands of workers ought to be an incentive to the Ford slaves to strive to organize and revolt against the despotism of the Detroit exploiter.

The Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan

His Eminence Mr. D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana ku klux klan, that militant exponent of white, protestant, native-born 100 per cent Americanism, and defender of American womanhood, is on trial at Noblesville, Indiana, charged with murdering Madge Oberholtzer, after he and two other patriotic members of the hooded order had ravaged her.

Two weeks have passed since the opening of the trial and the jury is not yet selected, the second venire of 100 prospective jurors is nearing exhaustion and a third gang of his peers must be summoned to try Stephenson and his associates.

The delectable nature of the klan is brought out in bold relief as the selection of jurors proceeds. From the questioning of jurors by the defense it develops that no effort will be made to conceal the fact that Stephenson and other klansmen held frequent debauches with the co-eds of Butler college, one of those institutions where the daughters of the petty bourgeoisie go to attain culture.

Difficulties encountered in selecting a jury for this case are indicative of the widespread political influence of the klan in Indiana. It has become an important factor in the political movement of the small capitalist class, deriving its principal support from that element beset by the ever-growing power of the big capitalists.

Former supporters of the socialist party contribute a large portion of the membership of the klan in Indiana. The mummery of the klan strongly appeals to these ex-socialist elements, most of whom were spiritualists, theosophists, christian scientists, and other queer individuals. When the socialist party became so aneamic that they could no longer break the dull monotony of their pretty bourgeois existence they flocked to the klan striving to become dragons, imperial kleagles, most of whom, if the facts were known, are in reality buzzards of the calibre of Mr. Stephenson.

Birds of a Feather

Tammany Hall, in its far-flung ramifications, has many adjuncts. One of its main supports is from the underworld and the slum proletariat of New York. Its connections there are so well known that comment here is superfluous. But it has other supporters among the super-respectable element of New York life. It unites the upper and lower strata in one reactionary mass against labor.

The maurading bands of gangsters, pickpockets, thugs and gunmen infesting Cherry Hill and Hell's Kitchen, enjoying the favor of Tammany, have their counterpart in eminently respectable organizations among the upper strata. One of these is the Citizen's Union. This aggregation recently endorsed the socialist, S. John Block, as candidate for justice of the supreme court.

This organization, professing to be non-partisan, really serves Tammany by endorsing its regular candidates and waging punitive expeditions against those democrats that do not hew strictly to the Tammany line. It sometimes endorses republicans. Sometimes socialists. This proves that, in the eyes of Tammany, both these parties can be relied upon to defend the capitalist system.

It also emphasizes the fact that the same outfit that ruled Gitlow off the election ballot endorses a socialist, which eloquently proves that only the Workers Party candidates defend the interests of the working class.

Make every day an Anti-Imperialist Day.

Concentration of Capital in Coal Industry - -

By Earl R. Browder

THERE is probably no industry in the United States in which more deep-going changes are occurring at present than the coal mining industry. And in response to the laws of development of capitalist economy, one of the outstanding features is the growing concentration of capital. Figures are available now which give a picture of the situation as a whole.*

Concentration has proceeded the furthest in the anthracite branch of the industry. This is largely because the anthracite fields are concentrated geographically in a few counties in Eastern Pennsylvania and offer all the physical prerequisites for monopoly. The extent to which this has developed can be seen from a few facts.

FOUR operators produce over 5 million tons per annum, a total of 48.8 per cent of all anthracite produced. Nine other operators, producing 1 to 5 million tons annually, contribute 30.2 per cent of total production.

The so-called railroad companies (owned or controlled by railroads) produce 74 per cent of the total output and control 90 per cent of underground reserves.

The combination controlled jointly by the Reading and Central Railroad of New Jersey, produced 20 per cent of the total annual output, and controlled more than half of the unmined reserves.

Production of so-called independent operators, which in 1895, amounted to 45 per cent of the whole, in 1905, dropped to 25 per cent; while by 1921, it had further decreased to 19 per cent.

Thus, in the important anthracite branch of the coal industry, concentration of capital has long been at the stage of relative monopoly, which is rapidly approaching an absolute monopoly.

IN anthracite this concentration of capital is closely and intimately bound up with the general process of concentration, and particularly with that in the railroad industry. Thruout the coal industry this has been and is today, the case; that the most important steps in concentration of capital and centralization of production is carried out under the control and initiative of the railroad, steel, oil, and banking combinations.

The railroad coal companies controlling the anthracite industry, with the value of assets carried on their books at the end of 1922, are shown in the following table. This gives some measure of the stage of monopoly reached. While a very large part of these "assets" represent capitalization of prospective future earnings, this fact only emphasizes the monopolist nature of the present stage of development.

Company	Assets
Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co.	$115,064,815
Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company	77,018,864
Glen Alden Coal Co.	72,240,000
Lehigh Valley Coal Co.	68,245,151
*Pennsylvania Coal Co.	56,000,000
*Hillside Coal & Iron Co.	43,000,000
Hudson Coal Co. interests	42,100,782
Lehigh & Wilkes Barre Coal Company	39,127,208
Coxe Bros. & Co., Inc.	8,154,085
Scranton Coal Co.	4,697,333

The vast sum of more than a half-billion dollars here represented is an integral part of a still more overwhelming combination of railroad capital.

BITUMINOUS coal does not present such favorable physical preconditions for monopoly and concentration. Instead of being geographically concentrated, as anthracite, in a corner of a single state, bituminous coal is scattered over 80 fields in 26 states and represents numerous grades of fuel. But altho representing a lower degree of concentration, bituminous coal is also going thru the same process toward monopoly organization and large scale production in the hands of a few great corporations.

While there seems to be a tremendous contrast between the number of separate producers in bituminous and anthracite, this is not an accurate gauge of the different degree of concentration. According to data of the United States Geological Survey, there are 12,122 bituminous coal producers, as against only 174 anthracite producers. Of this large number, however, 8,194 produce less than 10,000 tons per year, and only 2.4 per cent of the total output. It is clear, therefore, that only 3,928 producers require serious attention. Even this, of course, shows that concentration in bituminous mining is far behind anthracite.

THERE are 80 bituminous producers with a production of more than one million tons per annum. They produce 34.2 per cent of the total output of the industry. This compares with 13 producers and 79 per cent in anthracite.

Producers of one-half up to one million tons per annum, number 109, and 13.2 per cent of total output. Those producing 100,000 to 500,000 tons per annum, number 891, with 31.8 per cent of the total tonnage.

These figures show that bituminous coal is also well started on the road of concentration and monopoly.

Here also concentration is lead by forces from outside the coal industry itself. These forces are the United States Steel corporation; the railroads, and combinations of banking and industrial interests such as the Consolidation Coal Co. with $181,718,324 assets; 340,000 acres of coal lands, producing in 1920 about eight million tons; and the Pittsburgh Coal Co. with $160,120,347 assets, 165,000 acres of coal lands, which in 1920, produced more than 12 million tons.

IN certain fields, concentration has gone far ahead of the bituminous industry as a whole. There is, for example, the Pocahontas field in West Virginia. This field, opened up over 50 years ago, produced about 20 million tons in 1916, its peak year. There were 50 operators in this field, but almost all of them operate under lease from the Pocahontas Coal & Coke Co. and the Crozer Land Co. which own 95 per cent of the producing land in this field. The first mentioned of these companies is by far the largest, and is entirely owned by the Norfolk and Western Railway Co. It has about 300,000 acres of coal land, of which 178,000 are under lease to operators.

The U. S. Steel corporation owns or controls thru subsidiary corporations about 750,000 acres of coal lands. These lands are distributed thru the states of Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Indiana and Illinois. The output of these properties in 1920 was about 31 million tons.

AS the total coal production for the United States in 1920 was 568 million tons, it will be seen that these four interests produce 12.5 per cent of the bituminous coal in this country, and about 5.5 per cent of the whole world's production of 1,300 million tons.

As an accompaniment of the present crisis in the coal industry (marked by "overdevelopment" to the extent of productive capacity of 850 million tons as against a market of 500 million tons per annum; with 200,000 "surplus" miners in the industry; with production being shifted systematically from the unionized fields to the non-union fields) there is going on a tremendously accelerated process of concentration of capital. Rumors are rife in Wall Street publications of a coming 500 million dollar corporation which is to shift the center of bituminous coal production to the non-union fields, stabilize it there and smash the United Mine Workers' Union.

actionary, and with denying their members the freedom of expression we accord ours. We have boastfully held ourselves up as leaders in democratic principles in labor union administration.

Disillusioned.

The facts revealed concerning the last three elections in our organization, however, has disillusioned that part of our membership who have been permitted to hear the truth. They have learned that the membership no longer rules, but that instead a select few have usurped the power to say what shall be our laws and who shall be our officers.

Exercising the rights any member should have, I have endeavored from time to time to give my views on laws needed and to acquaint our members with existing evils, particularly and most recently the outrageous manipulation of our last election. For doing these things I have long been marked undesirable as an officer and finally suspended from a membership which I have held without a mark of discredit as a union man for over 25 years.

Accusers Cannot Be Judges.

I am not here to be tried. This body is not competent to sit as judges in my case because you have pledged yourselves without reservation to support the president. Most, if not all of you have expressed views prejudicial against me, and for other reasons you can not pass fair judgment on the case.

You are my accusers and in no courts are accusers allowed to try, or pass sentence on an accused.

If a trial is required to pass judgment on my conduct I demand the simple, but ordinary justice of being tried by a body of my peers in my own lodge, and full compliance with all the provisions contained in Article 22, pages 48 and 49, Grand Lodge constitution.

Wants Trial by Lodge.

The order of procedure is clearly outlined in Section 4 and 5 of Article 22 both for filing information and location of responsibility. The local lodge is not deprived of its original and legitimate authority. Only in the event that a local lodge fails to act is the International president permitted to intervene and then only as, (1) as complainant, or (2) a messenger, or (3) a responsible official, or (4) as a member of the Executive Council he can praticipate in a trial of an accused member.

The injection of the implied powers contained in Section 5 of Article 3 which may be assumed by the International president in certain cases of alleged delinquencies by a member has nothing whatever to do with a case like mine.

Suspended Without Trial.

In its most complete analysis my alleged offense is nothing more than asking the simple question as to whether men could be trusted with certain responsibilities when they had been proven faithless in others and for that my suspension is ordered to take effect immediately, without a hearing, without a trial, without any regard to the constitutional requirements accorded and guaranteed to the vilest traitor and scab during a strike.

Insult is added to injury when the International president commands: "You are suspended until such time as you will file a satisfactory apology and retraction with the General Executive Council, etc." Still no hearing, no trial by my peers in my own lodge as specifically and imnutely laid down in Article 22.

Will Not Be Silent.

I have always valued my membership in the I. A. of M. very highly. I have tried to conduct myself as a union man should and be worthy of this membership.

I want my membership restored to me but I refused to be bribed, bullied, coerced, or intimidated. I will not be silent, either with voice or pen. I pledge myself to resist and denounce evil, wherever it exists, in the I. A. of M. or out of it. As to the offensive suggestion of an apology for doing what is right, that which the I. A. of M. has schooled me to do, I spurn the offer with the contempt it so richly deserves.

Workers of Detroit! Support Communist Against Plute Agetns of Capital

reason. The most important reason for repudiating Smith and Bowles is because both represent the capitalists who are robbing and exploitng the workers of Detroit.

The attempt to make the workers of Detroit decide the muncipal elections on the basis of religious prejudices, is part of a game of the capitalists to prevent the workers from using their political power in order to fight in their own interests. Both Smith and Bowles are playing this game of the capitalists. Both prefer to have the workers vote catholic or anti-catholic rather than have them them vote on the basis of relief for unemployed workers, no use of police in strikes, for better housing and sanitary conditions in the working class sections of Detroit and other issues of interest to the workers and affecting the lives of the workers.

Smith makes claim for the support of the workers of Detroit on the basis of his record. But what did Smith do in 1924, when 50,000 workers were without jobs and unable to earn a living? Did he demand that the capitalist bosses must either give the workers the opportunity to work and earn a living or pay them wages? Did he demand that the city of Detroit should tax the capitalist employers in order to furnish money for relief of the unemployed workers?

Every worker of Detroit knows that Smith did none of these things. They know that he stands for the capitalist system and the capitalist method of making profit out of the workers and that he would not move one inch in support of workers without jobs.

Bowles is no better than Smith in this respect. He also supports the capitalist system of exploiting the workers which throws tens of thousands of workers on the streets whenever the bosses cannot make big profits out of their labor.

It is on the basis of such issues as unemployment and the attitude of the candidates asking their support on this question that the workers should take their stand in the municipal elections, but not on the basis of racial and religious issues.

The capitalist bosses want the workers to divide on the basis of racial and religious issues because they know that workers who are influenced by these prejudices will not make a fight for their own economic interests.

The workers of Detroit have nothing to gain and everything to lose by supporting either Smith or Bowles, or any of the capitalist candidates in the municipal elections. The workers must organize as a class to fight their political battles against the capitalist bosses. They must use their political power in support of their economic interests.

That is what the capitalists do. They want to elect either Smith or Bowles in order that they may have the power of the office of mayor in their hands for use in support of the capitalist system of exploitation. Workers of Detroit must organize to fight for that power so that they can use it to support their struggles against the capitalist exploiters.

Some workers believe that Smith is the candidate of labor. But everyone who examines his record closely knows that he is the candidate of the capitalist bosses. The workers cannot expect that any candidate who supports the capitalist system against the workers will represent their interests. Some candidates may play the game which Smith has been playing of sometimes throwing something in the direction of the workers in order to fool them into supporting him. No worker who understands the conflict of interests between the capitalist bosses who are in business for profit, and the workers who produce wealth and must constantly fight for decent wages, will be fooled by this game of a smart politician.

The Workers (Communist) Party proposed to the Detroit Federation of Labor early this year that it take the initiative in organizing a party of workers—a labor party—which would support labor candidates in the municipal and other elections. The proposal of the Workers (Communist) Party was not accepted, therefore, there is no labor candidate on the ballot in the municipal election. The formation of such a party is the only way in which the workers can fight their own political battles. It is the only way in which they can use the power they have as an organized group in support of their economic struggles.

The workers of Detroit must demand the formation of a labor party and that labor drop forever the outworn policy of "rewarding friends and punishing the enemies of labor" which means in every instance, electing the representatives of the capitalist bosses to public office. The Workers (Communist) Party calls upon the workers of Detroit to express themselves in the interests of their own class at the ballot box at this election in spite of the fact that there is no labor candidate on the ballot. It calls upon them to repudiate both Smith and Bowles, to repudiate the efforts to blind the workers by making the issue the religious question and to take a stand on a political platform in the interests of the workers.

The Workers (Communist) Party calls upon every worker to write in on the ballot on election day the name of the Workers Party candidate for mayor, Edgar Owens, and thus take the stand for the working class against the capitalist class.

It asks the workers of Detroit to support the Workers Party candidate for mayor, Edgar Owens, by writing his name on the ballot on the following platform:

1. The organization of a labor party based upon the trade union movement of Detroit to include representatives of all trade unions, labor political parties, co-operatives and fraternal organizations, to fight for labor in its political struggles.

2. Use of the power of the government of Detroit to compel the relief of the unemployed when the workers are thrown out of jobs. City appropriations thru special taxes on capitalist bosses to create an unemployment fund to be distributed by the trade unions.

3. No use of police in labor disputes. No use of police to arrest strikers. Against the use of strikebreakers paid by capitalist bosses.

4. Against the use of injunctions in labor disputes.

5. Full support of the workers of Detroit in organizing the unorganized workers for the fight against their bosses.

6. The establishment of workers' control in every institution of the city of Detroit employing workers, thru the election of shop committees which shall have full access to everything concerning the management and to be represented in the management.

7. Support of the extension of this principle to all the industries of Detroit.

8. The control of housing conditions by the city and action to create better housing conditions for the workers by the city government.

9. A workers' and farmers' government for the United States.

Workers of Detroit! Repudiate the candidates of the capitalist bosses.

Repudiate their attempt to blind you by racial and religious prejudices!

Take your stand for a workers' struggle against the capitalist bosses by writing in the name—Edgar Owens, for mayor—on election day.

air." Col. Mitchell continued. "We must look to the Fords now for progress because governmental activity is practically at a stand-still. I am thankful the Fords are in the game now. It makes everything a little brighter."

DON'T be misled either by the fact that Col. Mitchell is no longer assistant army air chief. He is something of a political exile from Washington because of his exposure of the inefficiency of the government's present air organization. Tho reduced in rank and stationed at Fort Sam Houston, in Texas, he is the country's leading proponent of a larger military air service independent of the army and navy and is recognized as the most brilliant and aggressive among this country's military aviators.

The Shenandoah broke in two in the air in a wind storm over southeastern Ohio and crashed to earth with the loss of several lives Sept. 3. It was starting on a naval demonstration flight over eleven states and on its return was to have tied up at the Ford airport mast. After the crash it became known that Henry Ford and the chief engineer of the Ford Motor company, William B. Mayo, had been authorized to ride in the Shenandoah either to Bay City, Mich., and return or to Lakehurst. It would have been Ford's first trip in the air. The Shenandoah was the government's only military dirigible. Its flight was a strictly military maneuver. All on board were naval officers or enlisted men. The authorization to Ford and his chief engineer to ride in the Shenandoah and the intention of the two to take the trip shows the friendliness that now exists between the Fords and the navy. Such an authorization was never given before in the case of the Shenandoah.

DO you remember also the time when Edsel Ford was branded as a "slacker" by the patriots for claiming and obtaining exemption from the draft? Reactionary patriotic newspapers attacked him. Patriots looked upon him as bad company. It was thumbs down for him. But he was among the "distinguished guests" invited to be present on visitors' day at the citizens' military training camp at Camp Custer, Mich., Aug. 14. A member of the Young Workers' League was evicted from this camp in violation even of the army policy, as defined in a statement given to the Federated Press by Maj. Gen. William S. Graves, commander of the army sixth corps area. And the speaker of the day was Charles G. Dawes. The tide has turned indeed when Edsel Ford is invited to be a "distinguished guest" in such company.

There is a recent instance also in which the Fords carried to conclusion a large scale business deal with the government, an agency which class conscious workers recognize as the agency thru which the capitalist class functions politically. When the United States shipping board decided to sell a fleet of ships as scrap steel the Ford Motor company was among the bidders. The Fords turned out to be the successful bidders, with an offer of $1,697,470 for 199 steel ships and $297,500 for seven tugs. Three at a time the ships are now on the way to River Rouge to be cut up.

THE Ford Motor company has not only its mechanical equipment and trained industrial army of 165,000 workers but around its holdings everywhere an atmosphere of sinister power, corresponding psychologically to the divine right power of a monarch. Such an atmosphere makes military conscription easier for a capitalist government.

In contrast to the doubt that once popularly existed as to the direction in which the Fords were developing, the Ford Motor company and its vast holdings are henceforth ready in time of need as an adjunct to the arsenals, barracks, hangars and navy yards of the capitalist government at Washington, as a result of the Fords' comparatively swift, generally unexpected but quite inevitable "reformation."

THE Fords will cut prices again competitively if to do so will enlarge their income. And the company may not pay interest, or tribute to Wall Street, since the Fords carry a cash reserve to finance their own industry. It is worth noting incidentally that the Ford Motor company is the only large enterprise under capitalism in this country that has not passed into the hands of the bankers, or finance-capitalists. But in the Fords the capitalist rulers of the United States have staunch new allies who once had the appearance of being capitalist scabs.

In fitting conclusion let us add that several members of the Workers' Party were arrested and one was beaten near the Ford gates in Highland Park and River Rouge last May day while distributing the DAILY WORKER.

Communists know that the Ford myth is like any other myth for the working class. It is a hoax and at its best a good story.

RUS U. S. DESTROYERS TO NEW WAR ZONE

PANAMA LABOR NOT AIDED BY A. F. L. STAND

Fundamental Demands are Ignored

By MANUEL GOMEZ, Sec'y., All-America Anti-Imperialist League.

Article V.

Hopeful Panaman workers, struggling desperately for decent living conditions in the face of the military strikebreaking occupation of the City of Panama by United States forces, must have experienced a momentary thrill at hearing that the American Federation of Labor convention in Atlantic City had adopted a resolution asking the U. S. government to explain why American soldiers are engaged in breaking the strike of worker-tenants in a friendly and supposedly independent country.

The Panamans have no confidence in the friendly purposes of Wall Street, nor of its ready instrument, the United States government; but they feel instinctively that the American working class is their ally. They know that imperialism is as much the foe of the workers in this country as in Central America and the Caribbean area. This is especially true of the organized workers, who are pitted against the bosses in day-to-day struggles, and whose own interests must force them to fight the debauching of labor standards by American imperialism. It is but natural that the beleaguered Panamans should look to the convention of the A. F. of L. for help.

Resolution an Insult.

Actual reading of the resolution, however, must have brought disillusion. It was not a rank and file resolution. It was introduced by President Green with the approval of the other misleaders of the federation, and its purpose was plainly not to render support to the Panamans but to prevent such support. The bureaucrats knew that the rank and file members of the A. F. of L. would be waiting for some action by the convention in regard to the Panama situation, and the idea was evolved of lulling them to sleep by a resolution. Digging into the actual phrases of the resolution adopted, one sees that they are decidedly ambiguous, that they are in fact an insult to our striking brothers of Panama.

The resolution provides no real help for the Panamans, neither in their immediate struggle against bosses and landlords, nor in their long-term struggle to get free of American imperialism.

It does not demand the unconditional withdrawal of American troops.

It does not condemn their presence on Panama soil.

It does not even express sympathy with the Panaman strikers.

It merely asks the United States government to investigate the use of the troops for "alleged" strike-breaking activities in Panama.

IMPERIALIST SCHEME FOR DOMINATING IN CHINA NEAR COLLAPSE

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Civil war conditions in China make it uncertain whether the proposed Chinese customs conference can meet in Peking on Monday as planned, it was stated at the foreign office today.

Reports to the foreign office, which are considered as showing a serious position in China, were taken up by the cabinet today.

Anthracite Miners! On Your Guard!

A Statement by the Trade Union Educational League

ANTHRACITE miners must keep an alert watch for a new attack from the coal operators.

The order has been issued from Wall Street, the general headquarters of American capitalism, that the anthracite strike must be smashed "at any cost."

In the COMMERCIAL AND FINANCIAL CHRONICLE, leading publication of the ruling interests of America, of Oct. 17, in the special American Bankers' Association issue, there is a long leading editorial on the strike. In this editorial the coal operators are given instructions to SMASH THE ANTHRACITE MINERS' UNION. This is what it says:

"THE CONTEST AGAINST THEM (THE MINERS) MUST BE UNRELENTINGLY WAGED, WHETHER THE TIME REQUIRED IS THREE MONTHS, SIX MONTHS, OR EVEN A YEAR."

What do these words mean? They mean to smash the union so that it can never strike again, "SO THAT A REPETITION OF SIMILAR ATTEMPTS CAN NEVER AGAIN BE INDULGED IN." That is the order of Wall Street.

How do these rulers propose to smash the union? Here are their own words:

"But obviously the fight against them (the miners) cannot be made successful if the mines are permitted to remain closed. AN ATTEMPT MUST THEREFORE BE MADE TO MINE COAL—AND MINE IT AT ONCE."

MINERS! Do you realize what this threat means? Do you realize that these are the words of the supreme rulers of industry in America today, the bankers of Wall Street? What are your leaders doing to meet the new attack that is coming, the gradual reopening of the mines with scab labor and military protection?

The Trade Union Educational League points out this grave menace to your lives and to your organization.

PREPARATIONS must be made to resist this new attack!

The leaders of the U. M. W. A. must be called upon for a policy of fighting against the scab and military menace.

Against such a move by the operators, the miners have a strong and crushing weapon, if the rank and file can force their timid officials to adopt it as the policy of the union.

THAT WEAPON IS THE 100% STRIKE!

If the operators believe they can smash the union, it is because they think that union men will help them do it! They think that the maintenance men will work with scabs, and keep the mines ready for scabs as fast as they can be found.

THE effective way to head off this attack, or to defeat it when it comes, is to adopt the slogan:

"WHEN THE FIRST SCAB ENTERS THE MINES, EVERY MAINTENANCE MAN IN THE ANTHRACITE MUST WALK OUT."

Anthracite miners! You are in danger! Be prepared! Be ready to fight! Demand a policy—a fighting policy—a winning policy—from your leaders!

Against the importation of scabs—a 100% strike!

GENERAL WU JOINS WAR ON PEKING

Chang-Tso-lin's Troops in Mutiny

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 21.—That the rising tide of nationalist revolution has in some measure welded all forces outside of the imperialist hireling Chang Tso-lin against the puppet government of traitors to the Chinese cause at Peking, is seen in the portentious news that Wu Pei-fu, who was military dictator from 1922 to 1924, when the imperialists changed their favors to Chang Tso-lin, has—after consolidating his forces in central China, again taken the field against Chang and the Peking government.

Wu to War on Chang

Messages arriving here say that Wu Pei-fu is expected to arrive at Hankow today, and there to announce his assumption of the title of commander in chief of the central provinces, this alliance to include Kiangsu, in which Shanghai is located, Chekiang, Anhui, Kiangsi, Hupei and Fukien.

Wu has definitely announced his opposition to Peking and to Chang Tso-lin, and reports indicate that Wu Pei-fu has reached some sort of an agreement with Feng Yu-hsiang, who at his headquarters in Kalgan has for several months been preparing for war, presumably against Chang, the "Mukden war lord."

Mutiny Against Chang.

Two divisions of Chang Tso-lin's Kiangsu troops, formerly loyal to his command, have mutined and allied themselves with the armies thrown against Chang Tso-lin.

This threatens the whole imperialist scheme of the tariff conference at Peking, so carefully built up by joint action of America, Britain and Japan to trick the nationalist revolution into accepting empty compromises and petty reforms in exchange for a more tight control by foreign exploitation.

Crashes Into Train; Dies.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., Oct. 20.—Hiram C. Chittwood, forty, of Herrin, was killed here when a car of which he was the lone occupant crashed into a Chicago and Eastern Illinois freight train, which had blocked the state road at the New Orient mine switch just north of this city.

STATE DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCES TROOP WITHDRAWAL FROM PANAMA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Reports in circuation here claim American troops probably will be withdrawn from Panama City within the next 48 hours. They emanated from the state department.

Alleged "disorders in the city," resulting from clashes between landlords and tenants over rent charges, have been suppressed, the state department now claims.

It is said only 120 soldiers remain in Panama City.

CHICAGO FURRIERS TO SUPPORT PROGRESSIVE POLICIES IN THE LOCAL AND INTERNATIONAL UNION

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT.

The Furriers' Union, Local 45, of Chicago for the past three months has had many lively sessions, not only of a local character, but upon issues dealing with the affairs in the International. Too long has Local No. 45 slumbered, allowing things to happen in our union locally and nationally that has been very detrimental to the interest of the furriers.

We are on the eve of a convention, the results of which will either mark a step with progress, or shove us back further into the mire of class collaboration. Which shall it be?

New York Progressives Have Won.

President Kaufman is doing all in his power to retain his strangle hold on the organization. In New York he stooped to the use of east side gangsters to help him to control the New York joint board. Brother Gold and many others have felt the hard fists and clubs of these gangsters, for a time everything looked black, but they kept the fight up for a clean-cut progressive fight, and they have been crowned with victory. Today you cannot find a single furrier who openly supports Kaufman.

In Chicago the fight has not been so intense altho the same idea prevailed among many of our officials. The progressives have been met with insults, intimidations and assaults. Milson is to the Chicago local what Kaufman is to the International, they are birds of the one feather.

Wake Up, Chicago!

The Chicago furriers must understand the importance of the coming

Missouri Politicians Rob the Blind, and We Bet They Draw Salary

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Oct. 21.—Although the last Missouri legislature increased the tax levy for blind pensions from two to three cents per $100 assessed valuation, payment of pensions to Missouri's blind has been suspended, due to inadequate funds. Approximately 3,500 pensioners have not received their money. The state pension is $25 a month payable in quarterly installments.

Scramble for Ralston's Seat.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 21.—The scramble for the seat in the United States senate left vacant by the death of Samuel M. Ralston last week, was on in earnest today. Supporters of Albert J. Beveridge, former senator who was defeated in 1922 by the late Mr. Ralston, came to the front today with a concerted effort to bring about his appointment to the vacancy.

CHICAGO I. L. G. W. LOCAL 59 GIVES LEFT WING VOTE

Convention Delegates Are Progressive

In the elections for delegates to the special convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Chicago Local No. 59 showed a significant swing of the garment workers to the left, indicating a close following of the New York victory over the the Sigman regime. The left wing in Local 59 completely defeated the reactionary machine and never has there been so great a number of votes cast since the creation of the local.

The left wing delegates who will go to the Philadelphia convention are the following: Sister F. Ashkenozy, 186 votes; Brother Jacobson, 194 votes; Bertha Penhasik, 179 votes.

Jaffe was the only right winger to be elected as delegate with a total of 94 votes.

The defeated reactionaries are:

G. Sher, chairman of the local, also of the executive board and the joint board. He got only 76 votes. The second reactionary defeated is the secretary of the local, Trubakoff, who is also a member of the local executive board and a delegate to the joint board. He also got but 76 votes.

Business Agent Harry Ruffer lost with 96 votes. He was one of the sluggers used at the Abramovich meeting against the Communists.

A lickspittle of Ruffer, P. Gold, received but 64 votes.

Abe Ruffer, a brother of Business Agent Harry Ruffer, lost with 64 votes.

This lacal has been the stronghold of the reactionaries up to the present. The left wing won in this electio· because it insisted on the right to watch the counting of the election ballots.

BORAH ASSAILS COOLIDGE PLAN ON WORLD COURT

Next Congress Forum for Big Battle

In a terrific assault upon the proposal of the administration at Washington to enter the world court, Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, speaking to a crowd that filled the Auditorium Theater, denounced the league of nations and its creature, the world court, as agents of the militarists and imperialists of Europe.

The tone of the speech indicated the nature of the coming fight that Borah will launch in the coming session of congress against this country's proposed entrance into the world court. The senator, conceded to be the most formidable debater on the senate floor, spoke under the auspices of the Women's Roosevelt Republican Club, and consistently maintained the identical stand that he has taken since the world war against participation in European affairs. He and the late senator, Medill McCormick, of Chicago, fired the opening gun in the fight that sent the democratic party to defeat in the 1920 elections over the issue of the league of nations. When Harding first intimated the possibility of the United States entering the world court it was Borah who influenced him to pursue a careful course. Now he again openly chal-

Officials of the Chicago and Northwestern railway were determined today to uphold the 20 per cent increase in suburban rates which was put into effect at midnight, Monday following a grant by the interstate commerce commission, despite a decision handed down by the Illinois commerce commission late yesterday suspending the increase.

DANISH LABOR UNIONS INVITED TO VISIT AND EXAMINE SOVIET LABOR

COPPENHAGEN, Oct. 21—The labor unions of Soviet Russia have invited the Danish unions to send a delegation of twenty members to visit the Soviet workers and investigate the conditions under which the Russian workers live. The invitation includes attending the gigantic anniversary celebrations in Russia of the establishment of the Soviet government on November 7, 1917, and the Russian congress of metal workers. A number of Danish unions are expected to participate, among them the marine union of sailors and firemen.

AMERICAN WARSHIPS STEAMING INTO NEAR EAST WATERS MAY AID THE FRENCH AGAINST DRUSE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Two American destroyers of the Asiatic squadron have been ordered from Gibraltar to Alexandria, Egypt, a short sailing distance from Damascus, where Druse tribesmen are reported to have seized the city, it was admitted at the navy department.

There are a number of Americans in Damascus and the navy department is using their presence as an excuse to be in a position of assistance to the French in case it will be needed, against the Druse tribesmen.

More than 150 Americans are in the vicinity of Damascus, according to reports to the state department.

James U. Keeley, American consul at Damascus, reported to the department that French forces were preparing to bombard the city and repulse rebel tribesmen.

Not Likely to Ask Death Penalty for Ku Klux Murderer

NOBLESVILLE, Indiana, Oct. 21.—That the prosecution in the case of the former ku klux klan dragon, D. C. Stephenson and two associates, Earl Klinick and Earl Gentry, also klansmen, will not ask for the infliction of the death penalty, in their trial for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer, was indicated today when two talesmen passed by the state declared they opposed capital punishment.

Eleven jurors have been accepted and the twelth will probably be chosen today. Late this evening or early tomorrow morning Prosecutor Will H. Remy, of Indianapolis, may make the opening address of the state to the jury setting forth the nature of the crime and a suggestion of the evidence that will be introduced.

Opinion here is rife that the accepting of the two jurors opposed to the death penalty reveals the fact that the klan has reached the prosecution with money or other means of persuasion.

Belgrade Court Sends Woman Worker to Jail for Red Aid Pamphlet

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, Oct. 21.—The Belgrade court sentenced M. Lubicic, a working woman who was arrested while carrying a bundle of International Red Aid pamphlets entitled To the Aid of the Fighters Against Reaction to the postoffice from the printing plant, to five years in the fortress.

The court gave as its excuse for the heavy sentence that the booklets contained "elements of prohibited Communist propoganda."

The same Belgrade court sentenced Comrade Pajade to 20 years of hard labor, Comrades K. Cincic, G. Pasic, M. Schiwotic to 10 years, Comrade Wukovic to 6 years and Comrade S. Ciccio to three years of hard labor for working in a secret printshop.

New York Dealers in Deal for Welsh Hard Coal to Break Strike

LONDON, Oct. 21—New York coal dealers have bought 50,000 tons of anthracite and semi-anthracite coal from the Welsh mines. It is intended to ship this to the Atlantic sea board to cover the shortage caused by the strike in Pennsylvania.

CHICAGO LABOR DEMAND HORTHY RELEASE RAKOSI

Protest Sent to Chief Henchmen in U. S.

Thousands of Chicago workers gathered in Prudential and Schoenhofen Halls, heard with great indignation of the torture, frame-up, and threatened execution of Mathias Rakosi and 100 other Hungarian workers by the American-made Horthy regime.

Abolish Courtmartial!

The demand for the abolition of the Hungarian courtmartial proceedings, for the cessation of torture of the prisoners, for the freedom of these staunch fighters for the workers' cause in Hungary and for the rights of the workers of that country to organize themselves politically or economically was unanimously expressed in the resolution and telegram sent to the Hungarian legation in Washington, D. C. by the mass meeting.

David Rhys Williams, chairman of the meeting at Prudential Hall, stated that meetings of this kind were the most important that could be held and were being held all over the country in an effort to save Mathias Rakosi.

International Solidarity Needed.

Ralph Chaplin, the I. W. W. poet who spent a long term in the Fort Leavenworth prison, spoke with great feeling on the growing exhibition of and the need for international solidarity of the workers against the capitalist iron heel. He called upon the workers to redouble their efforts on behalf of their Hungarian comrades and in their own defense as a class.

Wholesale Slaughters.

James P. Cannon, national secretary of the International Labor Defense stirred the meeting with the

ROUMANIAN BOYAR GOVERNMENT TRIES TO DESTROY LABOR AND PEASANT MOVEMENT IN NEW DRIVE

By A. BADELESCU.

Nineteen leaders of the Unitarian Confederation of Labor were arrested in the Bucharest trade union local. These workers, who were arrested, form the General Trade Union Commission, and had come to an ordinary meeting where the following questions were on the agenda for the day: The trade union position, election of members for the labor councils, council election, trade union congress, the press, trade congress, industrial internationals, etc., etc.

TONIGHT 8 O'CLOCK T. U. E. L. GENERAL MEETING AT NORTH-WEST HALL.—J. LOUIS ENGDAHL SPEAKS ON A. F. OF L. CONVENTION

POWERS FEAR CHINESE DEMAND FOR ABSOLUTE CUSTOMS AUTONOMY WILL WRECK COMING CONFERENCE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, Oct. 21—The refusal by the powers of the demand to give China absolute customs autonomy may mean the wrecking of the Chinese customs conference to be opened Monday. This demand coupled with the renewed activity of the Chinese war-lords has spiked the conference as far as real results are concerned is the fear of the powers that are involved in the present conference.

One of the first proposals that will be presented to the conference by the Chinese delegation will be the demand that China be given immediate absolute customs autonomy. China lost her customs autonomy in 1842 when she signed the treaty of Nanking following the opium wars, allowing England to fix the tariff schedule.

The demand for a complete customs autonomy is led by Dr. C. T. Wang, who headed the Chinese delegation that refused to sign the Versailles treaty. The powers fear that Dr. Wang will be a strong factor in the Chinese delegation and that if the customs autonomy demand is not granted, he may wreck the conference by leaving the meeting with the Chinese delegation.

The expulsion of Saklatvala and the barring of Gitlow show who own the government.

U.S.S.R. WILL EXPORT TO ENGLAND 20,000,000 RUBLES WORTH OF GOODS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Oct. 21.—During the next four months the Centrosojuz will export to England 20,000,000 of rubles' worth of agricultural products. Among the most important of these are furs and animal products.

Panama Labor Is Not Aided by the A. F. of L.'s Stand which draw their substance from imperialist exploitation—have never shown any fellow-feeling for the lowly Panamans. In fact when Gompers was in Panama last year, he proposed to Secretary of War Weeks that no Panamans be given employment in the Canal Zone (which is technically Panaman territory) above the grade of laborers or messengers!

The resolution introduced by Green, besides being a sham and a betrayal, perfectly expresses the unity of Green, Woll and the other A. F. of L. bureaucrats with the United States government, and with American capitalism—that is to say, with American imperialism. Their purposes are neatly summed up in another resolution adopted at the Atlantic City convention, supporting the Monroe doctrine and going so far in service of Ameriacn imperialism as to declare a "labor Monroe doctrine" against "European or revolutionary labor influence in Latin-America."

Side by side with Wall Street's "Pan-American Union," the A. F. of L. misleaders have created the "Pan American Federation of Labor" which supports imperialism at every point.

This is "pan-Americanism," the slogan of J. P. Morgan, Calvin Coolidge and William Green, alike! But it is not the slogan of American labor. The American workers demand solidarity and support of their Latin-American brothers. And "support" means action, not two-faced resolutions. The presence of American soldiers in Panama is a test for every self-respecting worker. What are we going to do about it?

FASCIST HEADS IN NEW ATTEMPT TO BLUFF THE WORKERS

ROME, Oct. 21.—The fascist council, in which Premier Benito Mussolini participated, has decided to expel the nineteen members from the fascist organization who were caught in the raids on the Florence masons in which 3 of the masons were killed. Two of those who are held "responsible" are to be arrested and tried. This attempt of Mussolini to curb his followers is chuckled at by many of the Italians as nothing but a bid for popular support. Mussolini's rule has been most unpopular. Every time raids have been pulled off in Italy it has cemented the opposition to the fascist dictatorship closer together in the effort to oust the blackshirt leader.

NEW SETTLEMENT PROPOSAL FROM FRANCE LIKELY

Washington Plan Not to Be Accepted

PARIS, Oct. 21.—The French government will probably offer a new debt settlement proposal to the U. S. before November 1st, it was announced today by the foreign office.

The tentative five-year temporary agreement, made between M. Caillaux and the American debt funding commission, is not likely to be presented to the French parliament.

Strong Opposition

M. Caillaux, it is understood, has found that public and official opposition to the five-year settlement terms so strong that it would be unwise to present this proposition to the chamber of deputies or the senate.

New proposals are now being drafted and it is understood that they will be forwarded to Washington thru the usual diplomatic channels.

The financial position of France is such that it seems probable that any new offer to the United States can not be more favorable that those which were made by M. Caillaux and his mission when in Washington.

M. Caillaux will meet with the cabinet on Friday and will lay down his financial program for meeting the present financial situation, and it is expected that the whole matter will be taken up by the chamber meeting on Oct. 29.

Washington Not Surprised

WASHINGTON, Oct., 21.—No great surprise was occasioned here today by the announcement in Paris that the French government shortly will submit a new offer for funding its $4,000,000,000 war debt.

Joseph Caillaux told members of the American debt commission before leaving here several weeks ago that the 5-year agreement would either be accepted or negotiations for a permanent settlement renewed, and he apparently has chosen the latter-alternative.

Serious Situation Seen

Some of the more cynical members of the commission were inclined to believe that the new French offer reported coming will be more of a gesture than anything else.

French credit, French bonds and the franc have been hard hit since the failure of M. Caillaux to settle the debt here, and restorative measures are imperative from his standpoint. The failure of the internal loan also is considered very serious by financial experts here.

No official cognizance of the reported new offer will be taken until it actually arrives. Until that time the treasury has taken the attitude that "the next move is up to France."

Dawes Plan Looms

The decline of the franc and the general unfavorable position of France may furnish the basis for a counter proposal by the United States to any proposition coming from France to submit to a survey of industry and agriculture with a view of determining the amount France can pay to the United States. In plain words the American government is striving to bring about a condition where France will have to bow to the yoke of a Dawes plan, similar to that now imposed upon Germany.

BORAH ASSAILS COOLIDGE PLAN ON WORLD COURT

lenged Coolidge's sympathy for the thing.

Stands On Old Platform

Senator Borah made it plain to his hearers that he stands today where he stood in 1920—against the league and everything connected with it. He quoted the words of the framers of the world court against them to prove that it was an integral part of the league and that the league controlled its every act.

Elihu Root, the American representative ,according to Senator Borah, said: "We must first consider that this new court is to be provided for as a part of the system of which the league of nations is the entire part."

The world court, said Borah, is "tied to the league in every conceivable way which the ingenuity of these men (the jurists) did not provide for." He then related that the league selects the judges, regulates the amount of their wages, pays them and all the attaches of the court and all expenses connected with its functioning. The league fixes the conditions under which the court shall be open to other nations and no state or nation can use the court without the consent of the league.

Proves League Connection

Amassing a vast array of quotations from prominent members of the league and the world court, Borah clinches his argument with a statement of Sir Robert Horne who, while speaking before the interparliamentary union the other day, said: "The United States has not formally joined the league of nations, yet I am glad to say that she is likely to give her adherence to the most important part of the league, the international court of justice."

Both the league and the world court have failed to function in the questions confronting the world. He cited the Ruhr question, the events taking place in China and the recent Locarno conference as proof that new organs of adjustment of disputes had to be constantly created.

Assails Powers on China

The Chinese situation was seized upon by Senator Borah as illustrating the character of both the league and the court:

"Look over in China tonight," he said. "China is a member of the league of nations. China is a member of the court, and has a distinguished Chinese sitting on that court. England is a member of the court, England is a member of the league, Japan is a member of the court and Japan is a member of the league. France is a member of the court and France is a member of the league, and the league pledged them to respect the territorial integrity of nations.

Court Does Not Act.

"What is taking place in China? Why does not the league of nations raise its voice in behalf of the nation which is being aggressed against by the four great powers of the earth?

"Why does not China, a member of the court, bring those nations to the court? Because they will not consent to be sued.

"There in China the blood of Chinese children is being coined in dollars and cents by the foreign powers. Children from 5 to 15 years of age work in the factories for from nothing to 12 cents a day.

"The opium traffic has been fastened on China at the point of the bayonet. China has been denied the right to collect sufficient tariff to maintain her government.

Chinese Murders

"And, then, when their people protest, they are either shot down or tried in a foreign court.

"And yet here is this court of which every nation engaged in the controversy is a member, and the reason why they cannot use it is because the wrongdoing nations will not consent to be sued.

"If they will give the wronged nation the right to sue the wrongdoing nation, you will have a tribunal which will command the respect of the nations.

"But now this court has no jurisdiction until the militarists and the imperialists and those who believe in war consent.

"That has been the trouble with all these peace programs—that the instruments of peace, the machinery of peace, have been all along under the control and manipulation of those who believe in war."

The Borah Remedy

As a substitute for the present world court as an adjunct to the league Senator Borah proposes a new code of international law in which war shall be specifically branded as a crime and those responsible for war shall be held accountable. The new court should have power to bring to the bar of justice any violating the code.

The present court has no such power and has not, during its existence, brought a single warring nation to the bar in defense of its aggressive acts.

British Spy Head Bares Propaganda Methods of Capitalism's Lie Service

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the truth comes out, after ten years, about the gruesome story spread by the British during the world war, that the Germans boiled down the bodies of their soldier dead to utilize fat for fertilizer.

British and German capitalisms are supposed to be close friends again, after the Locarno conference, so Brigadier General J. V. Charteris, who was chief of intelligence of the British army during the war, eases his conscience by confessing to the fake, and at the same time exposing how propaganda is used in the imperialist war game.

• • • •

Then as now, England was worried about China, feeling that the Chinese republic might drift to Germany's side. General Charteris joined in this worry. So, when photographs came to him, taken from German soldiers, he exercised all the ingenuity of an American newspaper photographer in doping them up to suit his own purposes.

Thus on a picture of a train containing dead horses being hauled to the rear for rendering, appeared the word "cadaver". Another picture showed a train taking German soldier dead to the rear for burial. In German the word "cadaver" refers only to animals, but in English it is also used in referring to the human corpse. So the general transferred the word "cadaver" to the picture of the train containing the dead soldiers, and the story was spread in China of this alleged desecration of the dead.

• • • •

This canard caused a sensation. Scientific men discussed it. The British house of commons debated it. When called to account, General Charteris declared that from what he knew of the German mentality, he was prepared for anything.

The general, who made his confession before the National Arts Club in New York City, said others wanted to go still further and plant a fake diary in the pocket of a dead German soldier, telling how he had actually been sent to work in the grease factory where his brother soldiers were being boiled down.

• • • •

But the same crowd that listened to the British spy herder, will continue to believe all the fraudulent propaganda that this same British intelligence department is spreading about the Union of Soviet Republics. This was shown, for instance, in the effect that the publication of the fake "Zinoviev letter" had upon the British electorate in the last parliamentary elections.

• • • •

Great Britain fears the Soviet Union today much more than she feared the late kaiser's Germany before and during the last war. Capitalism ruled in both countries and would continue to rule, no matter which side won, if the workers did not seize power. But in the Soviet Union the British capitalists behold a challenge and threat to the whole social structure that supports the empire. It can be depended on that no fake that human ingenuity can invent against the workers' republic will prove too weird for circulation by the spy system of this British empire. General Charteris admits the crisis that confronts the social system of his masters in England when he said:

> "I find in this country (the United States) a feeling that England is down and cannot win thru, a feeling that the present economic depression is too much for us, that the British empire will break up and England's day is over. I appeal to all Americans to give England your sympathy in the present economic struggle."

American labor must turn a deaf ear to this plea, that is made on behalf of labor's enemy class in England.

American labor must turn back the tide of malicious propaganda that has been circulated against the Soviet Union, and that will be spread in greater quantities than ever in the days ahead, against Soviet rule.

Nail the lies of the capitalists with the truth as it is known, now more than ever, by the workers.

LABOR SPOKESMAN MUST SERVE TIME IN SAN QUENTIN PRISON UNDER THE CALIF. CRIMINAL SYNDICALISM LAW

OAKLAND, Cal., Oct. 21.—Miss Charlotte Anita Whitney, veteran in the labor movement of California, who must serve 14 years in San Quentin state prison as a consequence of the United States supreme court upholding the legality o fthe California criminal syndicalism law, sent word from Carmel, where she is living, to authorities here that she would give herself up. She was arrested five years ago just after addressing a public meeting.

Economy Is Argument Advanced to Justify Junior High Schools

With the establishment of junior high schools for Chicago public school system for all seventh, eighth and ninth grade pupils a saving of $7,200,000 will be gained in 25 years. This is the latest propaganda advanced to drum up interest in junior high schools. The statement was issued by Julius F. Smitenka, chairman of the finance committee.

The junior high school system is a means of depriving workers' children of the benefits of higher education. In junior high schools higher education is eliminated and trades are taught in its place. Children between the ages of 13 and 16 serve an apprenticeship in some trade in school and are thus equipped to serve their future master.

The junior high system has been rejected by the committee of teachers appointed by the Chicago school board to investigate them in cities where they are employed. This committee of educators judged the system from the premise of education gained. But the business men sitting on the school board are not concerned with that phase of the matter.

DETROIT RACE HATE VICTIMS TRIAL OCT. 30

Charged with Murder of Klan Rowdy

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 21.—The trial of Dr. Ossian H. Sweet and ten others charged with first degree murder in the death of a certain Breiner who took part in a mob that stoned and fired on the residence of the Negro doctor, will take place on Friday, October 30, with Clarence Darrow, a Chicago lawyer and Arthur Garfield Hayes of the American Civil Liberties Union defending the Negroes in their right to live in any part of the city of Detroit they may see fit.

Climax to Race Hate Drive.

This case is the climax to the race hate stirred up in Detroit by a group of "exclusive whites" who attempted to terrorize the Sweets into leaving the Garland avenue residence which they had built and occupied.

The housing shortage in Detroit has become acute since 1920 as a result of the growth of the Negro population from 8,000 in 1911 to 80,000 in 1925. Attempts were made to segregate the Negroes in one section of the city, prohibiting their moving into any other section of the city. These attempts failed. Negroes began to move into other sections of the city and out of the districts that were badly neglected.

Throw Furniture Out of House.

In June, Dr. A. L. Turner bought a home on Spokane avenue on the east side and moved his belongings to his home. His home was stormed, the furniture loaded onto a van, brought into the district that was predominantly Negro and dumped there. Dr. Turner fearing for his life did did not try to re-enter the east side district.

Dr. Sweet had bought a home site on Garland avenue and was building a house. When the house was completed he decided to move into the new home which he had built. During the period when his home was being erected, he received numerous letters that were signed "K. K. K.," telling him to sell his home and stay out of the district.

During the early part of September he decided to move into the new home. As the doctor, his wife, child, chauffeur and a friendly dentist moved in, a crowd of over 600 gathered in front of the house and began muttering threats of lynching, etc. A squad of police dispersed the mob.

Rowdies Throw Stones.

The following evening a crowd of young boys of about 18 years of age began to gather around the home and throw stones at the house breaking the windows.

As Dr. Sweet tried to enter his home with a number of friends they were forced to pass a gauntlet, being clubbed kicked and stoned until they got inside the doors of the house. There they found the wife and some visitors crouching in corners fearing to be struck by the flying missiles.

The mob outside the house grew larger and someone in the mob fired shot at the house. The firing of the shot at the occupants of the house was followed by a general rush on the house. In self-defense one of the eleven who were in the house fired a number of shots to scare the mob. One of these shot the prosecuting attorney claims killed Breiner.

Police Falsify Facts.

Despite the fact that the police who arrived on the scene after the shooting spent many hours in dispersing the mob that had gathered, in their report to their commanding officers they claimed that there were but 10 or 12 people in front of the house. On the strength of the police testimony that ammunition, guns and other death-dealing instruments were found in every room in the house, making it appear that the Sweet residence was an arsenal, Judge Faust, who has since died, refused to grant them release on bail. Mrs. Sweet has since been released on $10,000 bail.

Klan Issue in Elections.

It is believed that it will be hard to pick a jury as the mayoralty campaign is in full heat and the klan is the big issue. The Workers Party has Edgar Owens as a candidate in Detroit against the klansman that is running for office.

SUSPEND LAW TO AID HARD COAL BOSSES

U. M. W. Breaking Its Own Strike

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 21.—That capitalist municipal governments, like all their more important institutions, are willing and glad to help break a strike whenever possible, is proven by the city authorities of New York City and the cities of northern New Jersey suspending all anti-smoke laws to allow for low grade anthracite and bituminous coal to be used as substitutes for that which should be mined by the miners on strike in the Pennsylvania anthracite region.

The anthracite owners are making hay while the sun shines, selling millions of tons of low grade anthracite which ordinarily is unmarketable, that has piled up around the pits in Pennsylvania.

Lewis Allows Union Scabbing.

In addition, the Lewis leadership of the U. M. W. of A., is aiding the strike breakers indirectly by failure to call out the bituminous miners and allowing bituminous mines to furnish coal to the anthracite market. This is shown by the increased production in the bituminous fields, production there increasing by six per cent for the week ending October 10, over the that of the preceeding week.

During that week bituminous production was 11,696,000 tons, or 688,000 tons more than the week before, an increase of 6.3 per cent and the highest weekly output since the middle of January.

Total anthracite production during the calendar year up to October 10, is 61,693,000 tons, or 12.5 per cent lower than the same period of 1924.

Coolidge Intervention Not Needed.

Meanwhile these forces of city, state and reactionary union leadership are combined to defeat the anthracite strikers, President Coolidge does not feel that any action on his part is necessary. While he is willing to intervene and break the strike he does not feel it necessary as long as the responsibility for strike breaking is assumed by city, and state authorities and by John L. Lewis.

That the anthracite strikers would win if it were not for such betrayal by Lewis and the suspension of laws by capitalist authorities, is shown by the admission of big consumers, F. R. Howe, head of a big corporation of builders and managers of apartment houses of New York having written to the anthracite operators that there was some basis for the miners' demand for a wage raise. Howe wrote, in part, as follows:

"With the present wave of prosperity it seems a bad time for operators to try to force a reduction in the wages of coal miners. There is, doubtless, inflation taking place all over the country, and the general 'boom' attitude of mind. This is a very poor time to force a wage dispute on labor."

New York Coal Body Proposes Suspension of Anti-Smoke Laws

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The New York state coal commission has issued an order recommending the suspension of all anti-smoke regulations so that soft coal may be used for heating purposes as the strike in the Pennsylvania district has cut off the supply of anthracite.

The health commissioner of New York City, Dr. Frank J. Monaghan, intimated that the New York anti-smoke law would be suspended when it was found to be necessary, but that it was not a necessary step at the present.

Chicago Furriers Back Progressives

convention. You must not allow the machine to intimidate you into voting for their candidate, to do so means to place the organization to remain in the hands of the incompetent and reactionary Kaufman machine.

Our New York brothers make up the majority of the members. They have offered to finance the Montreal strike. This the International refused to accept. Why? For the simple reason that the International wants to assess the members so that only part will go to the strikers, and the other part to go to their depleted treasury. If they had the Montreal strikers' interest at heart, why then, did they refuse to allow the New York joint board to finance the strike?

Kaufman's strength comes from the smaller locals which have not wakened to the seriousness of the situation, because it has not yet been thoroly explained to them. Our paper is not open to the membership. The Chicago membership, however, had the opportunity to hear both Brother Gold and Kaufman debate the issues; it was a very one-sided debate to be sure, the membership were with the New York joint board, and Kaufman cut a very sorry figure.

Votes Count—Guard Them.

However, applause and approval of a policy is very good, but not enough. Kaufman does not give a tinker's damn for the membership as long as he can get, by hook or by crook, the majority of the delegates to the convention.

He has expelled the New York joint board, altho he very generously takes the per capita tax. He does not want this progressive group in the union but he needs their dough. Altho taking their per capita tax, he will try to keep their delegates from being seated at the convention. The Chicago membership should instruct their delegates to vote to seat the New York contested delegates.

But what about the Chicago election? There are so far only four nominees, three supporters of the Kaufman-Milson machine and one progressive. Tomorrow is the election. There is still time to nominate two more progressives. The slogan of the Chicago furriers should "Away with Kaufmanism; we step with progress."

Support Progressive Policies.

Issie Landau is the progressive candidate for delegate to the international convention, he should and will receive the vote of all the militant members of the union who are sick and tired of this looking after the bosses' interests first, and the workers' interests afterwards.

If you believe in building a powerful union based upon the class struggle, if you believe that there should be only one union covering the entire industry, if you believe that the workers should have a labor party to carry the struggle into the political as well as the economic field, then send progressive delegates to the convention.

Make each candidate state where he or she stands, and base your choice upon policy and not upon the good looks or the popularity of the individual.

N. Y. CARPENTERS BATTLE DISTRICT COUNCIL FAKERS

Unseating Local's Men Brings Trouble

By MIKE ROSS
(Worker Correspondent)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 21—The fakers in the New York District Council of Carpenters were terror stricken over the election of two progressive delegates to the D. C. One delegate was A. Kivowitz of Local 2717 a liberal and opponent of the present reactionary machine.

The other, Morris Rosen of Local 376, a progressive, who was former candidate for general president of the U. B. of C. & J. of A. on the progressive carpenters' program, and stood for amalgamation, a labor party, job control, trade union unity, rank and file control, and other progressive measures.

The Same, Identical Rosen.

Rosen was excluded after a delegate asked if this is "the same Rosen" that ran for general president. After a protest was raised they tried to justify their action by the fake reason that he is not a carpenter being afraid to unseat him for running for general president on the program.

This was done in order to becloud the real reason for not seating him. They did not even take the trouble to give an excuse for unseating A. Kivowitz of Local 2717.

A committee of Local 376 was sent to the D. C. to speak. While they were waiting for their credentials to be acted upon, John Halkett, president of the N. Y. Building Trades Council, appeared and threatened to throw these terrible reds out if they would not leave immediately, they were then forced to leave.

Appoint Delegates Locals Didn't Want.

Later in order to free themselves from this "taint of Bolshevism" and purify the atmosphere, the D. C. fakers appointed Samuel Goldberg of Local 2717 to act as delegate in place of the duly elected one, Kivowitz.

This Goldberg was accused by Joseph P. Hirch, secretary of the Parquet Floor Layers' Union, for asking for $2,500 graft in order to give a charter and take them in the Carpenters' Union. This was sworn to before Justice Gavegan in court. Everything, however, wasn't peaceful among these birds of a feather. Local 376 sent out a circular letter and resolution to the locals exposing this frameup and demanding that Rosen and Kivowitz be seated immediately and Local 2717 sent a protest in the D. C. against their illegal action in seating Goldberg.

In the meantime the fight carried on by the militants for a five-day week and a $12 per day wage received such support that the officials of the D. C. in order to cover their own corruption were forced to send the matter out for a referendum vote.

Developing a Mass Movement.

The militants know that these measures will never be carried out even if approved by all the members and the fight to seat the militants in the D. C. and oust these fakers is developing into a mass movement.

An amendment to the D. C. constitution proposed by Local 2163, that D. C. officials should be elected every year by direct vote, instead of every three years by the D. C. delegates, received the indorsement of about nine locals, despite all oppression.

"It is not an attack on me, it is an attack on the workers."

WAR LOOMS AS GREECE MASSES TROOPS; DEMANDS INDEMNITY IN ULTIMATUM TO BULGARIA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 21.—In an ultimatum with a 48-hour limit Greece demands that Bulgaria pay an indemnity of 2,000,000 French francs, send an official note of regret and punish the officers of the Bulgarian army that participated in the frontier fighting near Demirhissar.

Tho the Bulgarian government claims that the fighting which occurred near the Demirhissar post was the work of comitadjis (irregular bands), the Greek government has evidence showing that the fighting which lasted over twenty-four hours was the work of the Bulgarian regular army.

Following the sending of the ultimatum, Greece ordered her troops to take up strategic points along the Greco-Bulgar frontier in the Demirhissar region in Macedonia, northeast of Saloniki. Scouts are watching the massing of Bulgar troops. Any move on the part of the Bulgars to mass troops will mean a declaration of war.

After a ministerial conference Greek troops were ordered to advance along the Rupel valley and invade Bulgarian territory. The commanding officers have been instructed to occupy Petrish, which is the headquarters of the Macedonian-Bulgarian committee, and hold Petrish until Bulgaria has made full amends for the damages done. The Greek army intends to also disarm and disband the comitadjis or irregulars that are located in Petrish and have continually harassed the border posts.

CHICAGO LABOR DEMAND HORTHY RELEASE RAKOSI

Protest Sent to Chief Henchmen in U. S.

story of the noble effort of Rakosi and his comrades in their struggle to build the revolutionary working-class movement in the face of the most cruel and devilish persecution and provocatory frame-ups, which followed the overthrow of the Hungarian Soviet government. He vividly described the wholesale slaughter and imprisonments that have continued ever since.

The spirit of the meeting indicated that the demand for the freedom of these Hungarian comrades would come from tens of thousands of Chicago workers when the facts were known, and would continue thruout the period of trial of Rakosi and his associates.

BUFFALO, Oct. 21—Protest meeting against Horthy murder conspiracy will be held here next Friday, 8 p. m., at Labor Lyceum, 376 Williams street. Prominent speakers.

Hungarian Protest Grows.

WASHINGTON — Protests from Aemrican liberals and from Americans of Hungarian birth or descent, against the threatened wholesale execution or imprisonment of alleged plotters against the Horthy dictatorship in Hungary, have made an impression on Budapest. This is indicated by the anxious attitude of legation officials who refuse to discuss the situation. They appear to be astonished that the arrest and reported torture of prominent radicals and socialists in Hungary should become known in the United States and should lead to public discussion.

Horthy has not indicated whether his prisoners will be tried by courtmartial or by civil courts.

Rakosi Meet in Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—The proposed execution of Mathias Rakosi and his comrades by the Horthy government was condemned by workers of this city at a mass meeting held at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller street, on Tuesday, October 20.

The meeting was addressed by Ella Reeve Bloor and was held under the auspices of the local branch of the International Labor Defense.

Horthy Government Slows Up.

BERLIN, Oct. 21—Reports reaching this city from Budapest indicate that the worldwide protests against the proposed executions of Mathias Rakosi and his comrades have at least compelled the Horthy government to slow up in its avowed intention to try the workers before drum head courtmartial and send them to the gallows or before the firing squad within twenty-four hours after the death sentences were passed.

The Horthy government reached the conclusion that the agitation in other countries against his white terror injured Hungarian interests abroad. Instead of proceeding with the courtmartial as at first proposed it is now reported that the prisoners will be given a civil trial. This change of method by no means implies that the executions will not take place. It is looked upon as a concession to liberal protestants who are oftentimes more concerned with the forms of oppression rather than to the results.

The Berlin section of the International Red Aid declared that there would be no let up in the worldwide campaign to save Rakosi and his comrades.

North Dakota Head Refuses to Appoint Successor to Ladd

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BISMARCK, N. D., Oct. 21.—Gov. A. G. Sorlie announced today that he has determined not to appoint a successor to serve out the unexpired term of the late Senator E. F. Ladd and as a result North Dakota will have only one senator at the December session of congress.

HUNT FIFTEEN FOR BOMBING NEGRO CHURCH

Fifteen prominent members of a number of southside property "protective" associations are being sought for in an attempt to fix the blame for the bombing of the Bethesda (Negro) baptist church, located on the southeast corner of Michigan Ave. and 53rd street.

This church was formerly a Jewish synagogue and was sold to the Negro baptists. The surrounding neighborhood has been thickly populated with white residents and Negroes are now beginning to settle in the neighborhood. It is expected that the klan element which lives in this district is responsible for the bombing.

Realtors Behind Bombing

One of the Negro detective agencies has found a woman residing in the district who attended a number of meetings of these "protective" associations, where the bombing of the Bethesda church was discussed. The name of the witness is kept a secret as fears for her life have been expressed if some of the realtors in the district who are behind these associations know her identity.

Funds Disappear

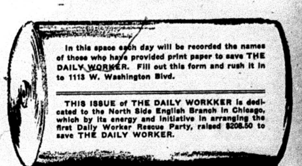
This woman further testified that funds were raised at a number of meetings of these "protective" associations to fight the "invasion of Negroes." Several of these funds have disappeared. One fund of $100,000 which was raised to fight the "invasion" has disappeared from the southside bank in which the funds were kept.

The bombing of the church was carried out by a group from the "protective" associations to frighten the Negro residents in this district to move away and go further to the north where the Negroes are segregated in what is known as the "black belt" of Chicago. Negro residents in the district refuse to be intimidated in this manner and have decided to find the guilty culprit and have him punished for the bombing of the church.

Some eye-witnesses to the bombing say they saw a high-powered automobile draw up to the church, out of which a man jumped out and walked up to the church doors. He then returned to his the waiting automobile and sped away. A short time later the explosion occurred destroying the entire front of the church. It will necessary to rebuild the church.

Windows for blocks around were shattered when the bomb exploded. No one was injured as the church was empty at the time the bomb exploded.

Its a Tremendous Job But Communists Can Do It!



In this space each day will be recorded the names of those who have provided print paper to save THE DAILY WORKER. Fill out this form and rush it in to 1113 W. Washington Blvd.

THIS ISSUE of THE DAILY WORKKER is dedicated to the North Side English Branch in Chicago, which by its energy and initiative in arranging the first Daily Worker Rescue Party, raised $208.50 to save THE DAILY WORKER.

THE biggest job that Communists have so far undertaken in America has been the establishment and maintenance of The DAILY WORKER. In the fall of 1923 the work was started. In the winter of 1924-1925 another big effort was made in the campaign to insure The DAILY WORKER for 1925. $75,000 was raised originally to establish the Daily and more than $30,000 to insure it for 1925.

It looked for a time that the third period of intensified struggle for our Daily would end in failure. At the very least $40,000 will be required to Save The DAILY WORKER. With only a little over $10,000 received it appeared that those who must be relied upon to support their paper were falling down on the job.

Now matters are improving again. Saturday and Monday yielded over $1,000. Tuesday brought over $600. If this keeps up The DAILY WORKER can be saved.

It's a big job, but Communists can do it.

MELLON UNITES WITH GARY TO SLASH TAXES

Cut Will Affect Large Incomes Only

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 21.—Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon, one of the richest men in the United States and the owner of the aluminum trust, opposed the exemption of these whose incomes are less than $5,000 annually before the ways and means committee, of the senate, now in session discussing a proposed tax reduction program to be presented for ratification in December.

Mellon Presents Program

Andrew Mellon presented his program before the ways and means committee in which he recommends that the rate of taxation on large incomes be lowered to half of their present taxation and the rates on incomes below $150,000 receive minor decreases.

The program presented by Andrew Mellon of the United States treasury differs but little from that presented by the national industrial conference board, located in New York which is controlled by the steel and building interests. The small texpayer gets little consideration in either of those programs.

Closed Doors In Appeal Courts

The industrial conference board insists that the features of formal court procedure and the publicity attendant thereto be eliminated in connection with cases that appear before the board of tax appeals. The large corporations realize that a closed court would enable them to get great reductions in taxes upon appeals.

Program of "Liberals"

The recommendations of many of the republican and democratic leaders in the senate favor leaving taxation of large incomes at the present rates and the exemption of tax-payers whose income are less than $5,000.

Mellon put up a desperate fight to convince the committee of the necessity of placing the payment of the war debt on the shoulders of the small tax-payers saying:

Government on 5 & 10 Basis

"It must be remembered that great businesses have been built upon small returns and large volume. The most conspicuous example which comes to my mind is the 5 and 10 cent store.

"As a matter of policy it is advisable to have every citizen with a stake in his country. Nothing brings home to a man the feeling that he personally has an interest in seeing that the government revenues are not expended, as the fact that he contributes individually a direct tax, no matter how small, to his government."

To Pay Debt to Bankers

The treasury head also made known that he intends to have the war debt which the United States owes the banking interests paid in this generation by using the surplus which accumulates in the treasury department to pay off some of the debts.

SOUTH SLAVIC CONVENTION UNANIMOUS FOR C. E. C. AND COMINTERN

The convention of the South Slavic section of the party took place in Chicago during the four days—October 17, 18, 19 and 20, 1925. There were 29 delegates present who represented 1,360 members of the South Slavic section.

The first order of business taken up by the convention was the report of the Central Executve Committee which was given by Comrade C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the party.

Comrade Ruthenberg reviewed the world political and economic situation and showed that the partial and temporary stabilization of capitalism was only a temoprary change in the curve showing the general decline of capitalism and the development of the proletarian revolution. He pointed out that it was exactly in this period of a seeming lowering of the revolutionary spirit of the working masses that it was necessary to take up the question of Bolshevization of the existing Communist parties. After having treated the general situation, he took up the situation witihn the Workers Party, reviewing the work of the party during the last 18 months. He emphasized that the factional conflict within the party was not to be looked upon as an evil but as an incident in the Bolshevization of the party and in the clarification of its policy, that the party followed a correct Leninist line.

Comrade Ruthenberg pointed out that the errors made by the former C. E. C. majority represented a tendency to return to the sectarianism which had dominated the party during the first two years of its existence—1919-1921. The discussion in the party on this question and the final decision of the Communist International, supporting the labor party policy was a decision against the new wave of sectarianism in the party and should make certain that the party would not again fall into this error.

Comrade Ruthenberg also pointed out that the fight within the party developed into a struggle between the right wing elements supporting sectarianism and the left wing which was following the line of the Communist International. It was the policy of the Comintern, as was shown in its decision, to separate the Communist elements from the right wing and to a Leninist line of policy.

The fact that this was not achieved in the national convention of the party was the basis, in the opinion of Comrade Ruthenberg, of the decision made by the Communist International, supporting the present Central Executive Comimttee majority as more loyal and closer to the views of the Communist International.

After analyzing the party situation, showing that this situation was part of the process of Boshevization of the party, Comrade Ruthenberg took up the concrete fact of the reorganization of the party, handing in detail the plan for the organization of shop nuclei and the role of the language fractions in the party after its reorganization. The speaker showed that the language fractions will be even a more effective instrument in carrying on party propaganda among the various language groups than the language federations which had previously existed.

Upon the conclusion of the speech by Comrade Ruthenberg, resolutions similar to the resolutions adopted by the various membership meetings in support of the C. E. C. and the C. I. decisions was submitted and after discussion was unanimously adopted by the 29 delegates present.

C. E. C. Statement on Federation Situation.

Comrade Ruthenberg in the name of the Central Executive Committee also presented to the convention a statement of the C. E. C. in reference to the controversy which had been going on in the South Slavic section. The statement took up the charges made against the majority of the bureau by Comrades Fisher and Michalachky in relation to the party discussion, the policy of the bureau, and in relation to work in the fraternal organizations. The statement fully upheld the bureau on the question, and called upon the convention to take a united stand against the enemies of the party and the South Slavic section who were endeavoring to use the discussion within the section for the purpose of a fight against the Communist movement among the South Slavic workers. The statement was unanimously accepted by the convention in connection with the report of the bureau which was submitted by Comrade Cuchovich.

The remaining two days were devoted to discussion of the question of Bolshevization, reorganization of the South Slavic section, the line of the general reorganization of the party, the question of the work in fraternal organizations, work in support of the labor party, support of the International Labor Defense, and the campaign in defense of the Soviet Union. On all these questions resolutions were adopted laying down the line of work for the South Slavic comrades among the South Slavic workers of this country.

Particular emphasis was given to the question of reorganizaiton of the party in the South Slavic section. The convention was unanimous for the reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei and street nuclei and for the establishment of the language fractions in place of the present existing language federation.

The convention without a dissenting vote elected a new bureau of fourteen members. This bureau consists of eight comrades who will live in Chicago and who will constitute the executive council to direct the day to day work and six from the country at large. The Executive Council consists of the following comrades: C. Novak, L. Zinich, F. Boric, F. Krasich, M. Roikovic, T. Cuckovich, M. Goreta, and S. Loyen. The other members of the bureau are A. Kraznorich of Detroit, J. Vrdjuka of Pittsburgh, G. Levnaich of Canton, O., V. Crnich of Christopher, Ill., Popovich of West Allis, Wis., and F. Sepic of Neffs, Ohio.

New Bureau Organizes.

The new bureau of the South Slavic fraction organized immediately after the convention by electing C. Novak as the secretary, L. Zinich as editor of the paper with Comrade Loyen and Boric as associate editors.

FIRST ISSUE OF NOVY MIR, LIVING NEWSPAPER BY CHICAGO WORKER CORRESPONDENTS IS HUGE SUCCESS

The first issue of the living newspaper "published" by the worker correspondents of the Novy Mir was a huge success. Altho the hall was not crowded, a fairly good audience listened to the reading of the different news stories and articles all written and read by the workers themselves. There was also some good poetry and jokes, mostly at the expense of the local counter-revolutionists and their newspaper.

After the reading was over criticism was invited from the public. Some criticism came forth from the audience.

At the invitation of the chairman, a test vote was taken and the audience unanimously voted for the continuation of the living newspaper.

RIFFIANS GET GOOD LAUGH AT INVADERS' COST

Made Heavy Attack on Barren Hillside

ADJIR, Spanish Morroco — (By Mail)—The combined air, artillery and heavy guns of the island fortress of Alhucemas were directed against a hillside where thousands of Riffians were supposed to be shelling the town of Adjir.

Deseprate French-Spanish Attempt.

For three weeks one-third of the combined forces of the French and Spanish fleets rained heavy shells on this hillside. Airplanes dropped their bombs. Heavy guns boomed from the island fortress. The newspapers of Europe were filled with the "heroic deeds" of the French and Spanish soldiery.

When one goes behind the lines and learns what really was happening on the hillside, a good laugh at the frantic efforts of the French and Spanish imperialists is produced by the tale the Riffs tell.

Seven Artillerymen Draw Fire.

The garrison which defended this hillside consisted of but seven fighting soldiers. Besides these seven artillerymen there were a cook, a 12-year old boy, and two telephone operators.

Little did the French and Spanish commanders realize that the bombs and shells that rained on the hillside exploded on barren desert soil with little effect on the defenders of the hillside.

Riffs Bluff Imperialist Generals.

The French and Spanish generals have labored under the impression that the region about Alhucemas Bay was heavily garrisoned by the Riff tribesmen. Abd-el-Krim has maintained but 100 artillerymen in this region who are the crack shots of his forces, but this small group of artillerymen have raised much havoc with the invaders.

Concentration at Moro Nueva.

Here the Spanish fleet attempted to land 5,000 soldiers at Wad Lau Tgizas and Sidi Daiss, after unsuccessful attempts of landing. The Riffians concentrated their best infantry forces here, dug themselves in and battled with the invaders. In spite of four days' heavy fighting, the Spaniards have been unable to drive the Riffians back any further than 300 yards from the shore. Heavy losses of life have been inflicted on the Spanish invaders.

Mayakovsky's Last Meeting in Chicago Draws Great Crowd

More than 1,200 people packed Schoenhofen Hall to listen to the second and last lecture in Chicago by the famous Russian poet, Vladimir Mayakovsky. The attacks on Mayakovsky in the local Russian counter-revolutionary sheet helped to swell the crowd. He gave a neat "trimming" to these whiteguards in a short but sharp reply to their attacks.

The beautiful and strong poem on the death of Lenin made a deep impression on the audience. The other poems brot cheers and applause. He answered questions and also took up a collection for the Novy Mir which brot about $60.

Taggers for the International Labor Defense sold $16.76 worth of tags at the meeting.

Whitewash Tobacco Trust

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The United States circuit court of appeal today held that the American Tobacco company had not violated the Sherman anti-trust law, nor had it acted in restraint of trade in refusing to sell goods to wholesalers who in turn sold to retailers at a price not allowing a commensurate profit.

FINLAND BUYS LARGE QUANTITIES OF GRAIN FROM SOVIET RUSSIA

LENINGRAD, Oct. 21.—Finland purchased during the present year from Soviet Russia 5,000,000 poods of grain. The first carloads of grain are already arriving in Finland. The fruit markets of Finland are largely stocked with Russian fruit.

Texas Legislators to Impeach Governor for Misuse of Funds

FORT WORTH, Texas, Oct. 21.—Impeachment proceedings will probably be started against the "Ma" Ferguson, woman governor of Texas and her husband for the misuse of public funds.

Husband Runs Office

Tho Mrs. Mirian A. Ferguson was elected governor, the actual work of the office is being carried on by James E. Ferguson, her husband. All appointments of the various state officials has been done by the husband who receives a salary three times that of the governor from the Sugarland Railroad company.

Since "Ma" Ferguson was elected, the state highway commission which the husband appointed has spent over $20,000,000.

It is also charged that Ferguson solicited advertising for his newspaper on the stationary of the executive mansion, forcing advertisers to pay as high as $2,000 for an advertisement.

Fear Graft Expose.

The governor refuses to allow the state legislature to meet fearing that impeachment charges will be preferred for waste of public funds, inefficiency of management, letting contracts to highway bidders to the highest instead of the lowest bidder.

At the last session of the state legislature the solons passed a law allowing the speaker and fifty members of the legislature to call a special session for impeachment purposes when the governor refused to do so. Moves are now under way to have a special session called.

Railroad Monopoly Don't Like Buses; Asks Injunction

BELLEVILLE, Ill., Oct. 21.—The Chicago & Alton railroad, thru W. G. Bierd, receiver, has applied to the Belleville circuit court for an injunction to halt motor bus operations between East St. Louis and Jacksonville. The petition asserts the busses are hurting railroad profits.

Build the DAILY WORKER.

Springfield, Mass., to Enjoy Entertainment and Aid Our "Daily"

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 21—Our DAILY WORKER Rescue Party will be held on Friday evening at 8 o'clock, Oct. 23, at the Workmen's Circle Hall. Tho the comrades immediately upon receiving word have donated (not all) seventy dollars, they are not satisfied with the small amount raised and have arranged this affair to raise more money. Let no class conscious worker who understands the value of the revolutionary press miss this affair!

A celebration mass meeting will be held on Sunday, Nov. 8, at Liberty Hall in honor of the 8th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution. A well-known speaker will be sent by the national office. This celebration should draw a large attendance from among the many friends and sympathizers of the Soviet Union.

Educational Work.

The Jewish branch of the party is carrying on systematic agitational work in a number of fraternal organizations. The Jewish Culture Club, an "impartial" organization of the Jewish youth, has invited our branch to supply them with speakers for the winter season. Comrade Abramovitch will lecture on "Proletarian Culture," Comrade Jack Feldon on the "First, Second and Third International," and Comrade Benjamin Levine will deliver a series of six lectures on the "World's Labor Movement" which will also cover the Red International of Labor Unions and the Trade Union Educational League. The same work is carried on in other organizations like the Workmen's Circle, etc.

Philadelphia Workers to Celebrate Victory of Russian Revolution

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 21.—The workers of Philadelphia will celebrate the eighth anniversary since the victorious Russian revolution on Friday, Nov. 6, at 8 p. m., at the Labor Lyceum, 6th and Brown St. The speakers will be Comrades Jay Lovestone, Norman Tallentire and others. The Freiheit Singing Chorus had made special preparations for this occasion and will sing some new revolutionary songs. Admission will be 25 cents. Tickets can be obtained at 521 York Ave. and at the Freiheit office, 426 Pine St.

Needle Trades in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURG, Pa.,—An important meeting of all Workers Party members in the needle trades industry, will be held at the Workers Party headquarters, Friday, Oct. 23rd, 8 p. m. All party members who are engaged in this industry must attend without fail. This applies to all tailors, garment workers, cap makers, and furriers.

N. Y. Y. W. L. to Discuss Bolshevization and the Question of Loreism

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The Young Workers' League here is undertaking in earnest the task of bolshevization. A general membership meeting has been called for Sunday, October 25, at 2 p. m., to take place at 105 Eldridge street.

At this meeting Comrade William W. Weinstone, general secretary of the Workers Party for District 2, will lead the discussion on the question of the expulsion of Lore and the removal of Askeli from the Finnish organ, The Tyomies, are the general tasks and the bolshevization process.

The organizational steps which have been taken against Lore and Askeli shows that the Communist movement cannot tolerate within its ranks opportunists whose main aim is the undermining of the Leninist role of the party and league. The meeting will make clear that in order to prevent any manifestations of Loreism, we must not only take organizational steps but must also carry on a persistent ideological campaign against all forms of opportunism. Thus the league will become permeated with a Bolshevik ideology.

This meeting marks the beginning of the ideological campaign of the Young Workers' League here against all forms of opportunism in the Communist movement.

Philadelphia Prepares for Reorganization

The political committee of the Philadelphia district is on the job and taking positive steps towards reorganizing the district along the lines of organized first. The city has been shop nuclei.

The city of Philadelphia will be redivided into five industrial sections. These are: (1) The Southern, (2) the Central, (3) Western, (4) Northern, (5) Chester.

Members of the organization committee will visit all the branches in these sections and will complete the registration in preparaton for the organization of the membership into shop nuclei and street nuclei.

Special speakers will attend all branch meetings and explain fully the reorganization program of the Central Executive Committee.

Milwaukee Workers Announce Lively Fall Festival and Dance

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 21.—"A fall festival and dance will be held by the Workers Party, local Milwaukee, on Sunday, Nov. 25, at Miller Hall, 802 State St. A fine program has been arranged. From the minute the affair starts at 2 in the afternoon the fun begins. The dancing in the afternoon will be followed by a regular entertainment in the evening beginning at 8, at which there will be speeches recitations and a play arranged by the junior groups. A member of the N. E. C. of the Y. W. L. will be one of the principal speakers. After the entertainment, dancing will be continued. Admission will be only 35 cents. All workers are invited to participate.

Philadelphia, Attention!

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 21.—Do you want to have a good time? If so, come to the masquerade party and dance given by the Rosa Luxemburg (West Philadelphia English) branch of the Y. W. L. on Saturday, Oct. 24, at 3952 Girard Ave., at 8 p. m.

Much effort has been put by the branch to make this affair the greatest moral success ever achieved by any Y. W. L. affair. Besides the fun of the many beautiful masks we will have dancing, singing, games, refreshments, etc. Everything combined for 25 cents.

You may come as a Red Guard,
You may come as an Elf,
You may come as a Worker,
Or come as yourself.

Vote for the Workers (Communist) Party!

MOVE ON TO BAR PUBLICATION OF RADICAL WORKS

Boss Printers Scheme to Enlist Aid of Unions

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 21—A move to censor the printing of radical literature can be seen in the action taken by the Employing Printers' association to obtain the help of the Allied Printing Trades Council to have an ordinance passed by the municipal assembly licenseing all print shops in the city.

The ordinance would establish complete police control over the print shops. Sponsors of the bill openly admit that one of its main purposes is to prevent the printing of "seditious literature."

The boss printers admit that the ordinance is doomed unless it is endorsed by the union men. The union refused to indorse a legislative bill to the same effect two years ago. The measure came out of the bill drafting committee in the closing days of the session and the union was unwilling to endorse it on such short notice, so the bill fell thru.

The home rule act was passed since then and the boss printers behind the bill were adivsed to present their measure to the municipal assembly. Before laying their plans for submitting the measure as an ordinance, the sponsors of the licensing plan explained the objects of licensing to the union men, who were under the impression that it was a scheme to license only the workingmen.

Wants Union to Co-operate.

In order that the members of the union might be made partners to the scheme they were promised representation on a board of examiners, which would have power to approve or reject an application for a license before the commissioner of licenses took action.

The ordinance in its present shape provides for a board of examiners, to include—a representative each of the employing printers' association of New York City and the Allied Printing Trades Council of New York City. Each organisation would submit a list of 20 names, from which the commissioner of licenses would pick two examiners. The two examiners jointly would submit another list, from which the commissioner of licenses would pick the third member of the board of examiners.

American Cotton in the U. S. S. R.

ARCHANGEL, Oct. 21.—Seventeen steamers with American and Egyptian cotton have arrived in the port of Murmansk—totally an importation of 1,300,000 poods.

CROP OF SEED FLAX 40 PCT. MORE THAN FOR LAST YEAR IN U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW, Oct. 21.—The crop of seed flax all over the Union is 38,000,000 poods, or 40% more than the crop of 1924, and 10% more than that of 1913. The flax fiber is about 16,000,000 poods, out of which 12,000,000 will go to the market.

MOTHER JONES, IN LETTER TO MINERS, INFERS SHE WOULDN'T BE FOUND DEAD WITH GOMPERS

MT. OLIVE, Ill., Oct. 21.—Too ill to be with her miner boys at the 27th annual commemoration of the heroic defense of Illinois unionism at Virden, Mother Jones dispatched a letter to the arrangements committee in which she picks her last resting place and tells the rank and file to carry on.

"They stood bravely on the hill and told the scabs to return to St. Louis," Mother Jones writes of the mine battle of Oct. 12, 1898, when the openshop drive, tho launched by bullets that killed four Mt. Olive union miners, failed to break the resistance of the workers. "I wish every state would follow Illinois in organizing its workers. My heart beats today with devotion to those brave boys as it did the morning that they gave up their lives for a holy cause.

Not With Gompers at Sleepy Hollow.

"When I am called I want to take my last sleep with my brave boys in Mt. Olive. Under no circumstances would I choose to take my final rest in Sleepy Hollow with Carnegie and the rest of the capitalist exploiters," Mother Jones writes, taking a left-hand slam at Sam Gompers' choice of cemeteries.

"To be with my boys both living or dead is all that life means to me now. Be it to their credit the workers have always rung true to the cause, while the same cannot be said of their leaders who in some cases have bartered their principles for a mess of pottage and prolonged the struggles of the workers instead of standing like men true to their pledge.

Stand by Your Guns.

"And now, my dear boys, I wish you success and the final triumph of labor. Stand by your guns when the cause is a just one."

Former International President White spoke to the assembled miners in behalf of Pres. John L. Lewis who was in the east. A parade to Miners' Union cemetery where the murdered defenders lie buried, was a feature of the commemoration.

To Use Aeroplanes in Exploring Dutch New Guinea Jungles

The first American expedition to venture into the unexplored wilds of Dutch new Guinea will leave Chicago, Tuesday, Oct. 29, by aeroplane for San Francisco, according to an announcement made by Stanley A. Hedberg, historian of the expedition.

The expedition headed by H. W. Stirling, former assistant curator of the division of ethnology of the U. S. Museum, will sail from San Francisco Nov. 21, transporting their aeroplane to Batavia, Java, where the flight into the wilds will start.

The purpose of the expedition is to make a study of the land and pygmy races of Dutch New Guinea, one of the largest islands in the world. One half of the island is owned by the Netherlands and the remainder by Great Britain. Both governments have cooperated in the expedition.

The use of the aeroplane for reconnoitering is expected to facilitate the selection of a point at which the heavy jungles of Dutch New Guinea may best be penetrated, and to make possible the accomplishment of the trip into the interior.

A refrigerating system has been installed on the specially constructed plane, to keep photographic chemicals, films and provisions in condition in the scorching heat of the jungles. The machine will carry a load of 2,300 pounds and has a flying range of seven hours continuous travel.

I. L. D. DANCE AND TABLEAU SAT. EVENING

Chicago Defense Grows and Flourishes

If anybody asks, tell 'em the International Labor Defense is going ahead with a bang in Chicago. Saturday night, the 24th, the big dance of the Labor Defense comes off at Temple Hall, Marshfield and Van Buren Sts., and the Lettish Dramatic Club has prepared a treat for those who attend, in the way of a "Labor Defense Tableau"—and other things, too, besides the dance.

Workers' organizations are purchasing tickets in advance at 50 cents each, and a large enthusiastic crowd is expected at this, the first big Chicago affair to raise funds for aid to the class war prisoners and defendants.

1,600 More Members

The I. L. D. has recently added 1,600 more to its local membership, the local executive announcing that the following organizations have lately affiliated:

Workers' Sick and Death Benefit Fund, Local 275; Workers' Sick, Benevolent and Educational Fund, Local 194; the German-Hungarian Sick and Benefit Society of Chicago; and the Workers' Sport and Athletic Alliance.

Trade unions continue to contribute for the Zeigler Miners' Defense, Local 39 of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers having just donated $25.

Labor Defense in the Shops

The Loop Branch of the I. L. D., made up of three or four needle trade shops in or near the loop, is building up. At its last meeting ten or a dozen new members joined, bring the total membership to over 25. This branch meets between 5 and 6:30 after work. The committee is planning a widely advertised meeting in the near future.

When Some Branches Meet

Tonight, Oct. 21, at 8 o'clock, the Northwest Branch meets at 1621 North California.

Sunday, October 25, at 10 a. m. the Polish Branch meets on the South Side.

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, the Finnish Branch meets at Imperial Hall, 2409 North Halsted.

Monday, Oct. 26, at 8 p. m. the "Ford and Suhr Branch" meets at 3118 West Roosevelt Rd., and Fellow Worker Fred Mann will speak on the California prisoners, especially on the cases of Richard Ford and Herman Suhr.

The "Tom Mooney Branch" meets on Tuesday evening, Oct. 27.

Pittsburgh I. L. D. to Hold Protest Mass Meeting for Rakosi

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURG, Pa. Oct. 21—The International Labor Defense committee of Pittsburg is proceeding very speedily with its work. At the last meeting of the executive it was decided to start an energetic campaign to organize branches of the International Labor Defense in various sections of the city of Pittsburgh. A city central committee will be called in the very near future. Arrangements were made to hold a big mass demonstration to protest against the attempt of the Horthy government of Hungary to murder Comrade Rakosi, former people's commissar of Soviet Hungary.

F. Randa, president of the Journeyman Tailors' Union here, was elected treasurer and Margaret Yeager was elected financial secretary. Dr. M. Rasnick, the recording secretary. All communications and checks are to be sent to the International Labor Defense, 805 James St., N. S. Pittsburgh, Pa.

American Class War Victims.

The cases involving Merrick, Myerscough, Jenkins and others will come up for trial the end of November. Money for the defense of these comrades is rapidly coming in. However, a large sum is still to be raised and all workers and organizations are called upon to make remittances as soon as possible.

GRAND OPENING

AMERICAN-MADE DAWES PLAN TO HIT AMERICAN FARMERS; GERMANS BOOST TARIFF RATES

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

How the Dawes' plan will hit the American farmer is shown in an analysis of the new German tariff by H. L. Deimel, assistant chief, division of foreign tariffs, U. S. department of commerce. Deimel says, "The change to be encountered by our foodstuffs trades with Germany will consist of a number of increases over existing rates, coupled with the application of duties to many articles which have been entering free of duty for 10 years."

Germany has been forced to this tariff change by the reparations payments. The German worker must consume less and produce more. Germany must secure an export surplus where at present the balance is the other way. The new tariff will force German workers to consume home products and reduce their consumption of imported products.

The duties provided for rye, wheat, barley, oats, malt, cattle, sheep, hogs, flour, sugar, molasses and fresh meats became effective Sept. 1, and most other duties Oct. 1, altho certain reductions will be allowed until July 31, 1926. The new duties directly affect the market for this year's crops.

The old German duties, the new duties and the pre-war duties on imported farm products and on certain manufactured products are shown in parallel columns below. The duties shown are per 100 kilos (about 220 lbs.).

German import duties	Old	New	Pre-war
Wheat	Free	$ 1.88	$ 1.38
Flour	Free	4.69	2.55
Malt	Free	3.19	1.44
Dried fruits	$1.00	2.50	1.00
Fresh meat	Free	11.25	8.75
Lard	Free	3.13	3.13
Canned meat	Free	18.75	15.00
Safety razor blades	12.00	200.00	6.00
Calculators	60.00	90.00	15.00
Small electric motors	2.25	20.00	2.25
Tele. & phone accessories	15.00	30.00	$1 to $10
Electric auto appliances	15.00	75.00	$1 to $10

The importance to American farmers appears when we note that in 1924, Germany bought from the United States 308,541,000 lbs. of lard; 934,780,000 lbs. of wheat, barley and rye; 364,800,000 lbs. of flour and 125,581,000 lbs. of dried fruit, to mention a few leading articles affected. The new duties on these four items alone would add about $20,000,000 to their cost to the German people.

These duties, particularly those on agricultural products, are also expected to serve as a basis for bargaining. The German government in negotiating trade treaties will offer concessions to secure lower duties on the articles which it exports. Germany under the Dawes' plan must cut down its imports and increase its exports. To gain a market for its manufactured products in the United States it wants to persuade the United States to cut the high tariff which now imposes a barrier.

When the bargaining starts, Germany's concessions to help the American farmer find a market will be balanced by American concessions which will bring the American factory worker face to face with severe competition. The new German tariff emphasizes that American producers on the farms and in the factories owe the Dawes plan anything but gratitude.

Laborers Strike for Wage Increase on Atlantic City Job

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 21.—Laborers working on the new President Hotel, Albany Ave. and the Boardwalk, have gone on strike. They ask that their wages be raised from 40 and 50 cents an hour to 75 cents an hour.

It was said that if nonunion laborers were employed all members of the fourteen other trades belonging to the Building Trades Council would strike.

Alabama Feud Claims Another.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 21.—The little town of Hayneville was quiet today, under the patrol of state and county law enforcement officers, following the sensational shooting of Russell Haynes, 34, in the corridor of the court house.

The shooting was the result of a family feud between the Haynes and Rives families which has raged for several years and in which several persons have been killed, according to delayed reports reaching here.

SECRETARY OF WAR TO CALL COURT-MARTIAL FOR COL. MITCHELL

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Court-martial papers for Col. William Mitchell, who charged his superiors with "criminal inefficiency" in administering the country's air forces, have reached the desk of Secretary of War Davis.

They came thru military channels, with the recommendation of Col. Mitchell's superiors that he be tried for "conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline."

Secretary Davis is expected to order the court after an examination and study of the papers.

U. S. Rail Board Calls Union and Railroad Heads to Chicago

The United States railroad labor board, thru its chairman Ben Hooper has summoned the Western Maryland railroad heads and the officials of the striking engineers, firemen and hostlers to Chicago for a hearing on the strike that has taken place at the Western Maryland railroad at Hagerstown, Maryland.

It was this board that granted the men employed by the Western Maryland railroad the wage increase over which the union heads and company officials have had a series of conferences.

At these conferences the union heads insisted upon wage increases and the company officials were willing to grant the wage increases only on the provision that certain conditions which the men had won from the rail company be forfeited. The company after being refused these concessions then tried to force the issue and a strike resulted.

Suburban Rail Rates Go Up.

DRAMATIC CLASS PITCHES RIGHT IN ON NEW PLAY

All Interested in This Work Can Help

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—"The Unexpected Hero," a light satire on war, endorsed by Lunarcharsky, will be the first play to be produced by the Workers' Dramatic League of the Workers Party, District 2, in the near future. Classes have already started to prepare for the production of this play. The money raised will be used to launch the proletarian theater and to enable it to give good propaganda plays.

All those wishing to attend classes should do so immediately, so that no time is lost in casting the play. Language is no bar as there are many non-speaking parts. The knowledge of dramatic technique which you will get will enable you to direct others groups and you can help in that way to develop the proletarian theater.

The Workers' Dramatic League meets regularly on the following dates: Tuesday and Friday nights from eight to eleven, and Sunady afternoons from four to seven o'clock.

The place of meeting is Lo Hartmann's studio, at 28 East 14th street (top floor, front), New York City.

The work of each session is divided into two parts. Half the time is spent in general study of dramatic arts and the other half in rehearsal of a play.

On Tuesdays the first half of the session is devoted to the following subjects: History and theory of art, mimodrama (facial expression), musical reading.

On Fridays the following subjects are taken up for one and one-half hours: Solfagia (training of the ear), history of costume, rythmical gymnastics, mimodrama and make-up.

On Sundays the first half of the session is devoted to training of the body and reading.

He Wins a Prize.

To the DAILY WORKER: Thank you very much for the book you sent me, Romance in New Russia. I was very much surprised to be chosen the winner of the prize and when all the comrades from the Greek branch congratulated me I didn't know what to say. I shall strive hard to some day be truly worthy of the honor given me and to become a writer for our beloved DAILY WORKER. Another article which I am working on now will soon be sent to you.

The Retort Discourteous

The poetic conception that the French are exceedingly polite people received a rude jolt when the response of the Paris press to President Coolidge's suggestion for another disarmament conference became public.

Le Temps, the newspaper whose semi-official character was indicated by its editor coming to the United States as a part of the Caillaux debt mission, observes with ill-concealed bitterness that this government sees in limitaiton of armaments "the means of allievating our (France's) financial burden in such a manner as to make it possible for us to pay more largely our debts to creditors who were our allies and associates in the great war."

France learned, thru the experience of its debt mission to the Unietd States, that the 150-year legend of LaFayette's self-sacrificing devotion to and heroism in the American revolutionary war, tho useful for textbooks to fool school children, cannot be turned to the credit of the French bankers of today.

The United States is the world's banker and the government at Washington exists for the specific purpose of defending the interests of the banking combine on Wall Street. The House of Morgan has reason to suspect that at Locarno the debtor nations there assembled planned secretly to place all questions of boundaries, reparations and disarmament before the league of nations without consulting the United States.

The American government, ever watchful of the interests of its masters, suggested a second Washington arms conference. It was a feeler for finance capital. Tho prevented, by recalcitrant groups of industrialists, from entering the league when the jackal pack representing the victorious allies concluded their labors at Versailles, the House of Morgan has steadily forced this government to become more and more involved in European affairs. Economic forces overcame the artificially constructed political barrier and remoulded politics to suit their interests.

France's unofficial retort to Coolidge has a two fold meaning. On the one hand it deeply resents the fact that the United States bankers insist not only upon all the loot of the world war, but that they are endeavoring to reduce all continental Europe to the status of a colony.

France raised no objections to a Dawes plan for Germany, but when the recent rebuke by the American government of the Caillaux mission brot France within the shadow of a Dawes plan a loud clamor rose from the semi-official press at its first opportunity.

Objections will be raised for a time. The French will, in reams of denunciatory documents, upbraid the United States, but will eventually bow to the inevitable. Even Caillaux, the "finance wizard," the sum total of whose achievement thus far in France has been to strive to lighten the burden upon the big capitalists and place it upon the shoulders of the small capitalists and the working class, will find means of justifying on paper the placing of the yoke of the House of Morgan upon that country.

Tho the Locarno "security pact" may for a time ensure the maintenance of the geographical lines between France and Germany, there will be no boundary that separates the exploited workers of one nation from the other. All alike, as one mass, they will be slaving and starving to pay tribute to Wall Street bank capital.

The economic and political preliminaries for a Dawes plan for France—and for that matter Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Roumania and other small nations—are at hand. Locarno could not change this fact. The next step toward its consummation is a committee of bankers to make a survey of the industrial and agricultural potentialities of those territories and then decide upon the amount that can be loaned under another Dawes plan.

There is no other alternative for capitalism in continental Europe. The bourgeoisie of these war shattered nations will become the willing pawns of Wall Street. The only way of averting the extension of this plan over Europe is for the workers to rise in their might and shatter their own capitalist class, thus frustrating the designs of Wall Street.

Carrying Civilization to China

Charges by the Chinese ministry of justice that foreign consuls possessing judicial power in China are open to corruption has brought forth an emphatic protest from the dean of the foreign diplomatic corps, who resents putting the situation so bluntly. The Chinese have not grown accustomed to American and European diplomacy. When they see Chinese shot down in the streets by armed bands serving the interests of various imperialist groups they call it plain murder. When murderers are protected by the venal lackeys of foreign governments who sit in judgment upon such acts, they call it corruption.

Good Americans scoff at such unsophistication and lack of cultural appreciation of the finer distinctions of diplomacy. Surely a people living in the year 1925 who resent official corruption are backward indeed. They are also very naive. Do they expect a government that periodically has exposures of its Falls, Denbys and Daughertys, to bless China with a pure, undefiled administration of law? As a matter of fact it is childish to expect enforcement of any law that inconveniences the plunderers. They themselves are the only law.

As a preliminary training course in the understanding of American politics and diplomacy we suggest that prospective Chinese diplomats be sent to some United States city, say Chicago, where they can observe the manner in which crooks, bootleggers, and other favored individuals regularly buy privileges from the upholders of law and order. This is a part and parcel of our glorious civilization, but it is too much to expect a heathen Chinaman to appreciate it without preliminary contact with our methods.

"Lenin once said that the scientists had tried 605 remedies before they found remedy 606 to destroy such a scourge as syphilis. But is not capitalism on the whole a greater scourge than syphilis? And is it not worth while for scientists and revolutionaries to have just as much patience and in the same way to try 606, and if necessary, 6006 remedies to liberate mankind from the yoke of capitalism?"

Demonstrate Against Barring of Communist from Ballot

workers, and Jack Stachel in the chair.

Workers Carry Banners.

Banners with powerful slogans were displayed, reading: The capitalist dictatorship or the dictatorship of the workers? Workers, demand that Gitlow be put back. The crime for which Gitlow was convicted is the crime of defending the workers. An attack on Gitlow is an attack on the workers of N. Y. Workers, protest the exclusion of their candidate. The friend of the workers is the enemy of the bosses.

Comrade Jack Stachel in opening the meeting, stated "That Gitlow's exclusion was an assault upon the workers of N. Y., that the crime for which Gitlow was convicted was the crime of defending the workers' interests. Therefore, it was the duty of the workers to come to his defense," and the best answer labor could give to the capitalist class was to organize a powerful labor party.

Comrade Markoff followed with the statement that Benjamin Gitlow went to prison for telling the truth about the war, about conditions in the shops and about the capitalist machinery of oppression—the government.

Capitalist Class Fears Gitlow.

William W. Weinstone, secretary of N. Y. section Workers (Communist) Party, told the workers that it was no surprise to him that Gitlow was barred. "The capitalist class," he stated, "recognized in Gitlow a powerful enemy. Every means at their command was used to keep his mouth shut." The jail sentence and now this exclusion prove their fear of the spread of Communism by Gitlow. The city, state and supreme court were all lined up with the capitalist class against Gitlow.

He cited the acttion of the government in the anthracite fields. When Gitlow went into the coal fields to help the miners in their struggle against the bosses and the reactionary labor leaders the whole machinery of government was thrown against the Communists and workers. Meetings were broken up, three of our comrades were thrown into jail, injunctions against the miners issued so that they could not picket. All this proves that the charge by the board of elections that Gitlow is a criminal is tommyrot, the real criminals are to be found among the capitalist class and their political henchmen.

Weinstone also showed the criminal character of past, present and probable future governments. He mentioned the oil scandal, the aircraft scandal where millions were stolen from the American people, and nothing done to these criminal representatives in both the republican and democratic parties. He also pointed out that our government was supporting all the murder governments of Europe. Horthy's Hungarian representatives who had murdered thousands of militant workers were given the keys of N. Y. C. by Mayor Hylan. Mussolini's murder regime was treated royally by our capitalist government.

"But when a true representative of the workers, Saklatvala, wished to enter this country, it becomes a place too sacred for a Communist to enter." He appealed to the workers to support the W. C. P., to become criminal with Gitlow in advocating world trade union unity, building up of a powerful labor party and for the recognition of Soviet Russia.

Comrade Zack, a member of the needle trades, stated "That the organized needle workers feel that a great wrong has been done. Their answer would be a united front with the W. P. against the capitalist class."

Comrade Cosgrove, organizer American Shoe Workers' Protective Union, made an appeal for a united labor front on the political field against the frame up of workers. "With a powerful labor party, the capitalist class would not dare to deny militant labor leaders the right to their citizenship," he stated.

Benjamin Gitlow, candidate for mayor stated, "He was arrested because he advocated that a change in American government was necessary." He pointed out that the government of the U. S. was a minority government serving the interests of the few and that the great mass of the people would have to change our system for workers' control and for a workers' and farmers' government, if they wished to get rid of injunctions, unemployment, child labor, poverty, etc., and eliminate the Morgans and Rockefellers. They must take a lesson from workers of Russia.

Build the Labor Party.

"The capitalist class," he continued, "with their injunctions, clubbing of workers, jailing of the leaders of the working class, long hours, starvation wages, and unemployment is creating the basis for a powerful revolutionary movement. The Workers (Communist) Party is determined to do everything in its power to build up a united labor movement that will come to grips with the capitalist class. We propose to build up this movement thru amalgamation of the small unions in the various trades into powerful unions representing the entire industry, i. e., the miners' unions into one union representing the entire mining industry, the needle trade unions, the railroad union, etc. He pledged war, in the name of the W. P. against the Greens, Lewises, Sigmans, Hillmans.

"We will never stop in showing the lessons to be drawn from the first workers' and farmers' republic in Russia, and we will continue to advocate following the Russian workers as the only way to get rid of the present slave system in America." He urged an intensification of the campaign for the defense and recognition of Soviet Russia.

Comrade Bentall, former editor of the Duluth Truth, made a rousing appeal to the workers to study Communism and join the Workers (Communist) Party.

The tremendous crowd which kept increasing in size and enthusiasm right to the very end of the meeting showed by applause and cheers that they considered an attack upon the Workers (Communist) Party an attack directed at them.

Try to Destroy the Roumanian Labor Movement

campaign of terror, in which new plots were to be discovered, and to organize new mass trials.

The official government and police press declared that an "illegal congress" had been discovered and handed to a court martial. This "illegal congress" of Communists had been discussing the organization of a "Communist revolution." According to the official government press, the members are agents of the Russian Soviet government.

The arrant shamelessness of the Roumanian government is collosal. It is an open secret to everyone in Roumania, that the United Confederation of Labor in Roumania organizes thousands of workers who never were in the Communist Party under its banner, and that many leaders of these trade unions are well known anti-Communists. In spite of all this the bloodthirsty police of Bratianu say that these participators are Communists and agents of the Russian Soviet government.

The workers of Bucharest, Jassy, Targul-Muresch, Ared, Sibin, and other villages protested against this imprisonment. Protest resolutions have been published many times by newspapers, and the government has received many telegrams of protest. The prisoners went on a hunger strike, and succeeded in attaining a temporary release.

It is now clear to everybody, that no "congress" was discovered, and that no "Communist revolution" was being discussed. It was a trade union session, which was most unpleasing, and never could be pleasing to the government and to the bourgeoisie as whole.

From the very first days of the "discovery of the plot," the government newspaper, Filtoru, noted that the "conspirators had gathered together under the auspices of the peasants' party." Herein lies the purpose of the government's action. The government wants to crush the peasants' party, and can only achieve this aim when it has to deal with a weak, tottering labor movement.

The government, the financial and industrial bourgeoisie, aims to hit at, and completely destroy the peasantry, which is becoming more and more revolutionary, and particularly the peasants' party, by first destroying the strike union movement.

The latest elections to the agricultural chambers were a defeat for the government. The restlessness of the peasant masses, who at all their meetings repeatedly discuss the question of agrarian reform are in themselves signs of the growth of the movement in the land of Boyars.

The government fears and dares not risk the step of declaring open war on the peasants' party and on the peasantry. Every day you can read in the newspapers, that the leaders of the peasants' party are Communists, or are in close contact with them, and that they have sold themselves to the Soviet government. It is most important for them that the peasants' party be considered Communistic so that public opinion would be against them.

On the agenda of the General Trade Union Commission was the general election and the question of the labor councils. Action on these points would have meant further defeats for the government in other provinces, and the strength of the peasants' party would have more clearly come into relief as the party of the opposition. The government knows very well what it has to expect, and has acted correspondingly.

Naturally, apart from the working classes, nobody protested against these lawless arrests.

The Roumania, organ of the national party, protested against the "illegal" and "lawless" arrests, but said that in this case it happened to be only a question of Communists.

The Aurora, the peasants' party newspaper, apart from the publication of the trade union protest resolutions, wrote that it daily received many similar protest resolutions. In spite of the fact that the Temescherare trade unions demanded that the peasants' party be defended, did not have the courage to do so.

The advocate and secretary of the league of defense of civil rights in Roumania, Costa-Foru, who bravely defended not only the Communists, but also the Tatarbounar peasants against every lawlessness of the government, took this opportunity of addressing the following open letter to the king:

"It is plain to you, that the prisoners are innocent, and that the police chiefs are lying, and that there is and can be no question whatsoever of any plot, and that the sigurantsi can in truth be called a Communist factory."

This assertion of Costa-Foru is true, inasmuch as most of the prisoners, in spite of all the tortures and inquisitions, are still unshaken and carry on revolutionary work within the trade unions.

Many trade organizations are attached to the persecuted trade unions among which are the reformist trade union commission and the social-democrat party, and betrayal once more came from this side.

The Tchernovitzer Vorwarts (always a Vorwarts) came out with the following remark:

"The unitarians are without a doubt the black sheep of the working class, and their activities must not only be condemned, but by all means fiercely combatted."

Emil Sokor, the social-democrat, goes further in his dirty and libelous denouncement in his newspaper, the Adevarul. "There is no doubt, whatsoever, that the Communists are at the head of the unitarian confederation of labor," he writes. "The Communists have organized trade unions of their own in order to carry out their policy. The 'unitarian syndicalism' is nothing more nor less than Communism."

"A political idea cannot be suppressed by force. Their followers are fanatics. The government has the right to openly declare: We imprison and condemn the Communists, because their method is nothing but the the method of a Bolshevik system. Our Communists, who accept the theses of the Third International, and who are animated with the spirit of the Soviet government could neither demand anything from nor be disatisfied with the conduct of the government."

The working class of Roumania, knew very well how to defend itself without the assistance of such defenders. In the protest resolution against the conduct of the government, it was once more emphasized: "This imprisonment is another attack against the life interests of the working class, and for this reason it is most important that all the workers close up their ranks in a single united organization."

The underground Communist Party has spread many leaflets, declaring its solidarity with the trade unions, and encouraging them in their struggle.

The workers seeing that the government answered this protest with still more imprisonments, with new closings of trade union branches, declared a protest strike.

This is not the first political strike declared by the Roumanian working class. Even before the outbreak of the world war as a protest against the jingoism of the bourgeoisie, two general mass strikes took place. Later, in 1918, when the bourgeoisie wished to revenge themselves on the revolutionary working class, another general political strike took place. In October, 1920, a general strike took place, in which 250,000 workers participated.

In spite of the illegality of the Communist Party, in spite of the industrial crisis, in spite of the continuous treachery on the part of the social-democrats, in spite of the police persecution, and in spite of the mass trials, the working class went on strike as a sign or protest against the terror. This is a proof of the class consciousness of the Roumanian proletariat. If we look behind and survey the political situation under which this political strike is taking place, we can see that it is not only directed against the terrorizing of the trade unions and of the proletarian movement, but also against the regime as a whole, against the present Tatarbounar trial, against the trial of the peasant leader, Luntschesky, against the persecution of the peasants' newspaper Aurora, and against the prohibition of the Hungarian newspaper A Villag (Targal Murasch) which has been suppressed in the past.

The Roumanian working class movement is unhesitatingly marching forward.

ABD-EL-KRIM, MOROCCAN HEAD, GREETS THE SPANISH-SPEAKING PEOPLES OF LATIN-AMERICA

Reminiscent of the numerous appeals sent broadcast by the continental congress during our own struggle for national independence, is the message of Abd-el-Krim, chieftain of the embattled Riffians, to the people of Latin-America, the full text of which is now made public in this country by the All-America Anti-Imperialist League, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., Chicago. Abd-El-Krim's letter, which is in reply to a communication sent him by the Grup Renovacion of Buenos Aires, glorifies the historic fight of the Spanish speaking peoples of America for liberation from the yoke of Spain, as exemplified in the exploits of Bolivar, Miranda, San Martin and Marti, and asks for sympathy and support in what he describes as the struggle in which "we, the peoples of the Arabic races, aspire to free ourselves from the yokes of England, France, Italy and Spain."

Fight Imperialism

"The first step," he declares, "has already been taken by our brothers of Egypt, and I hope that soon the world will see that the second step has been taken by Morocco. Then will come the hour for Algeria, Tunis and Tripoli, whose peoples also are preparing for the moment of their national liberation."

The following message in full signed by Abd-el-Krim, provisional regent of the republic of the Riff has received wide publicity thruout Latin-America.

"My Beloved Brethren:

"Acknowledging the amiable request of 'Grupo Renovacion,' of Buenos Aires, with a heart full of happiness, I address all Latin-Americans, in this glorious hour when they celebrate the centenary of that glorious battle which assured their independence from a foreign yoke.

Direct Own Destinies.

"There is nothing more sacred or to be respected than the right of all peoples to direct their own destinies, giving themselves the forms of government most suited to their national characters and aspirations. The feast of Ayacucho is for this reason the feast of all peoples who are struggling for their independence, and with true enthusiasm associate myself with it in my official capacity of provisional regent of the republic of the Riff.

"The heroic Moroccan people are struggling for the same ideals that inspired Miranda and Moreno, Bolivar and San Martin. We have always loved and admired these heroes of your peoples. Our racial, cultural and religious characteristics prevent us from any longer continuing as colonies of any European power. As you, a century ago struggled to establish a new nationality of your own, even so, we today are willing to sacrifice our lives and our treasures in order to establish ourselves as a free people.

Imperialist Domination.

"Europe, corrupted by the world war which was turned loose by the imperialism that is a part of its capitalistic system, has lost its right to impose its thots and its will on the peoples who in another continent want to inaugurate a new culture based on the ideals of human peace and social justice. We, the peoples of the Arabic race aspire to free ourselves from the yokes of England, France, Italy, and Spain. The first step has already been taken by our brothers of Egypt, and I hope that soon the world will see that the second step has been taken by Morocco. Then will come the hour for Algeria, Tunis and Tripoli, whose peoples are preparing for the moment of their national liberation.

"Our cause is as just as yours was. We are not moved by hatred of Spain. We are certain of this and millions of educated Spaniards know that among the centuries when Spanish art was at its height are counted those centuries during which the majority of the people of Spain were Arabs. And the fatal time when a religious war brot about our expulsion from the peninsula which we had beautified with our arts and enriched with our industries, was the beginning of the decay, now irreparable in which that beloved land has fallen.

Spain's Children Die.

"The unsound patriotism of the military and catholic castes of Spain has plunged the Spanish people into a useless and disastrous war which has made Morocco the cemetery of her sons and the bottomless well into which have been swallowed up her treasuries. Spain's poor children are sent here to die as a hundred years ago they were sent to die in the valleys of the Andes, and thirty years ago on the island of Cuba.

"Such killing is repulsive to us, and we want the Spaniards to desist from their useless 'heroism,' evacuating Morocco as they evacuated your America, in order to permit us to commence our labor, work and education in peace. This will permit us to form nations as firm and stable as those which you have formed.

"I speak to you as brothers because in your veins is in great part Arab blood, just as that of all the southern Spaniards who went forth from Palos, from Seville and from Cadiz, to sow in your America the soul of the Arab, which once more showed forth in the "gauchos" and "plainsmen" (llaneros) altho cloaked by the signs of another religion.

"My Beloved Brethren: Receive the prayers, that for your happiness are being raised to Allah, by all the citizens of this republic of the Riff, and at the same time we ask of you that you beseech your god and your saints, that in a no distant day will come our independence as yours has already come to you.

Day of Oppressed Peoples.

"The glorious day of Ayacucho exists for all oppressed peoples. We are certain of this and millions of our lives will be as nothing if their loss is necessary in order to pay the price of our liberty.

"We will fight without truce, until we finish the task of redeeming all of the Arab peoples of the Mediterranean littoral and western Asia. Free Morocco and free Egypt will be the two columns that will support the new resurrection of the race that has already honored humanity with three glorious civilizations.

"My Beloved Brethren: Receive with sympathy that which the Moroccan, thru me, sends to you from the bottom of his heart.

"Have no fear that your sympathy for us means lack of respect for Spain, with which country you have, since she decided to recognize your sacred right to independence, become reconciled.

"We, too, after our Ayacucho of which Allah and our own valor assure us, when Spain has recognized our right to independence will reconcile ourselves to her as to a well-beloved older sister.

Bitter War.

"We lament the facts that are being submerged in such a bitterly contested war, and our lack of recognition by the imperialistic states of Europe have prevented us from sending a special fraternal delegation to the feast of glorious Ayacucho. However, you may be sure that we shall not wait the next century before establishing with your peoples, firm relations founded in love and brotherhood instead of in the conventional hypocrisy of the present imperialistic capitalist diplomacy.

"My Beloved Brethren: In this manner, the people of Morocco, from the battlefields which the enemy is little abandoning, speak to you thru your friend.

"Abd-el Krim,
"Provisional Regent of the Republic of the Riff."

SWEDISH SOCIAL-DEMOCRAT CALLS ON CAPITALIST POLICE TO GUARD HIM AGAINST COMMUNIST LEAFLETS

Carl Lindhagen, the mayor of Stockholm, Sweden, a social-democrat, came here as a delegate to the interparliamentary union in Washington. He is considered one of the most "radical" social-democrats of Sweden. In fact, he for a while, belonged to the Communist International and made a trip to Soviet Russia, where he also met Lenin and in vain tried to win Lenin over for his scheme of an artificial world language. But when the 21 demands were published, he left the Communist movement and the C. I. and quickly found his way back to the social-democratic party.

Lindhagen is an intellectual anarchist, very popular among the petty bourgeois masses of Scandinavia. When he visited Chicago, he gave two lectures, last Friday and Sunday, attended by thousands of Swedish immigrants. Our Lakeview Scandinavian branch had its members posted at the entrances, distributing leaflets and selling our party paper, Ny Tid. About 2,000 leaflets were distributed and some 300 copies of Ny Tid sold.

The committee organizing the reception for Lindhagen very strongly objected to this Communist activity and demanded that our comrades immediately leave the place, which the comrades refused to do. The nervous committee then called the police by telephone and a few cops were sent. They soon left amused at a meeting of more than 1,000 Swedes scared out of their wits by some five or six Communists, who were giving away leaflets freely.

Lindhagen was escorted by two policemen, who followed this pacifist social-democrat everywhere as a guard against—whom? Maybe against the dangerous Communists?

That worker next door to you may not have anything to do tonight. Hand him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

5 [illegible]E AS GREEKS INVADE BULGARIA

BANK CLE[illegible] UNION EXPELS JOSEPH SHAFIR

Members in Fear of Losing Jobs

At a meeting at which less than half of the membership of the Bank Clerks' Union was present, Joseph Shafir, president of the Bank Clerks' Union and a clerk at the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, was expelled from the union thru the activities of the renegade Communist, Duane Swift, now publicity director and business getter of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank and Nat Tulshin.

Held in Amalgamated Bank.

This meeting which was called to expel Shafir for introducing a resolution for the recognition of Soviet Russia, world trade unity and against class collaboration at the American Federation of Labor convention at Atlantic City was held in the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, instead of the Federation Building where the meetings are regularly held, at 5 o'clock making it impossible for any of those who work in other institutions to attend. Members of the union that had never attended a meeting since they joined the union were on hand instructed to cast their vote against Shafir.

Many of the workers in the Amalgamated Bank who were with Shafir did not attend the meeting as rumors flew thick and fast that anyone voting with Shafir would find themselves out of a job.

The chief signers of the complaint against Shafir were Duane Swift, Nat Tulshin and Jacobson. Two others had signed the complaint one of them being the telephone operator, who upon being questioned why she signed the complaint answered: "Well, they gave it to me, told me to sign it and I did."

Didn't Know What He Signed.

The other signer did not know why Shafir was to be thrown out of the union and on the floor asked the chairman of the meeting, Duane Swift, what the resolutions were about.

The chairman of the meeting ran things to suit himself. When a question of violation of the American Federation of Labor constitution came up, an item that appeared in one of the local yellow sheets was read as conclusive evidence that Shafir had violated the constitution of the Bank Clerks' Union and the American Federation of Labor.

The charges calling for the expulsion of Shafir were not given Shafir before the meeting, at the meeting nor after the meeting. When the charges were read, the reader omitted the names of the complainants and upon Shafir's insistence the names were read very reluctantly.

Clerks Terrorized.

Duane Swift, who very willingly gave an interview to a so-called liberal working as a reporter for The Daily News, refused to say a word to the representative of The DAILY WORKER. In attempting to interview the clerks in the bank, the sterotyped answer was: "See Duane Swift or Nat Tulshin and they'll tell you about it." When asked whether they had any opinions of their own or must have all their thinking done for them by bank officials they would glance hastily to the other side of the room where the heads of the different departments sat and would then admit that it it were not for Shafir they would still be working 60 hours per week instead of the 39 hours they are working now and getting overtime pay for extra work. Most of them thot the punishment too severe, but when asked why they did not vote against the expulsion would shrug their shoulders as much as to say "We've got to live, so what could we do?"

Russian Workers and Peasants Greet Czech Delegation

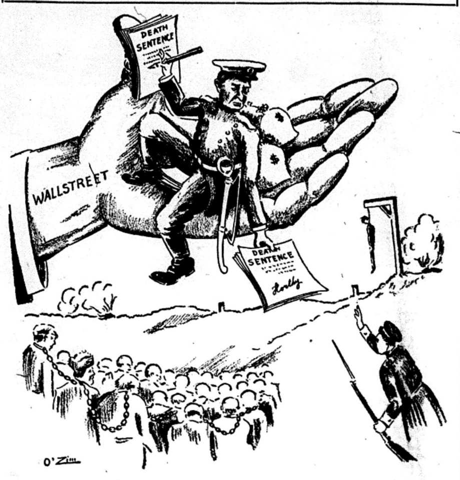
MOSCOW, Oct. 22.— The Czecho-Slovakian workers' delegation recently arrived to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics by way of Kolosova, where hundreds of workers and peasants greeted their entry.

The Real Seat of Power



DEBS PROTESTS AGAINST HORTHY REIGN OF TERROR

New York Police Arrest Five More Pickets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Eugene V. Debs publicly declared his protest against the threatened execution of Mathias Rakosi, and his comrades by the hangmen of Horthy, fascist dictator of Hungary. Five more workers were arrested while picketing the Hungarian consulate in this city. These are the latest outstanding developments in the campaign against the Hungarian white terror.

While picketing the Hungarian consulate five workers were arrested by the New York police who apparently are deeply concerned over the unenviable notoriety received by the murder government of Horthy, as a result of the agitation against his latest persecutions of the workers.

This is the second batch of arrests made by the police in this case, fifteen others having been taken to the police station last Saturday.

The five pickets were detained four hours and given a suspended sentence by the judge who read them a severe lecture on the impropriety of creating public turmoil over the trial of a few hundred workers in a "foreign country."

Rose Baron, secretary of the New York section of the I. L. D. commenting on the judge's statement declared,

REVOLUTIONARY LABOR MOVEMENT IN HUNGARY GOES FORWARD IN SPITE OF HORTHY PERSECUTION

By A HUNGARIAN COMMUNIST.

For weeks past the Hungarian social-democratic party has been using every endeavor to destroy any possibility of revolutionizing the working class. Right from the earliest days of the white terror it has employed for this purpose the method of shameless denunciation. But it must be said that in recent times it has surpassed itself in this respect. When the delegates of the independent socialist labor party appeared at the international socialist congress in Marseilles, they were openly denounced by Payer as "Bolsheviki." When the working masses attended a public meeting of the social-democrats and called their leaders to account for their treachery, these bureaucrats called in Horthy's police to deal with the revolutionary workers, described them as being hirelings of Moscow and called upon the police to

FRANCE LOSES 2,176 MEN AND $47,500,000 IN WAR ON RIFFIANS

PARIS, Oct. 22—The French losses in the war against the Riffians in Morocco have up to Oct. 1, amounted to 2,176 killed, including 37 officers and 8,297 wounded, according to the report made by Premier Painleve before the finance committee of the chamber of deputies in an appeal for more funds to carry on the war.

Russian Workers Call for World-Wide Protest Against Horthy Terror

MOSCOW, Oct. 22.—Protest meetings are being held all over the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics protesting the attempted legalized murder of Mathias Rakosi and the frame-up trial of the 100 Hungarian Communists.

The workers and peasants of the Soviet Union call upon the proletarians of all lands to join in the world-wide protest against the revival of the Horthy terror in Hungary, and save the best representatives and fighters of the Hungarian working class from the gallows and long prison terms which the American-made Horthy regime has in store for those that dare to oppose its ruthless persecution of the workers.

CHINESE WAR MAY INVOLVE WAR ON SOVIET

Japan Desperate, May Open Big Conflict

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, Oct. 22.—The entrance of General Wu Pei-fu into the arena as a challenger of Peking and its chief supporter, Chang Tso-lin, has filled the delegates to the tariff conference due to start here next Monday, with grave doubts that their decisions will give any "possible good" to China.

For exactly opposite reasons, Wu Pei-fu agrees with them, he having declared from Hankow that the customs conference would "do China no good" until the country has been unified and Chang Tso-lin, the "war lord of Manchuria," driven back to Manchuria. As Wu has now claimed that he has eighteen provinces behind him and 200,000 or more soldiers in front of him hot on the trial of Chang's fleeing troops, his guess is as good as the guess of the diplomats.

Japan May Declare War

But grave complications loom on the horizon if Chang is driven back. If Feng Yu-hsiang joins the revolt and the nationalist revolutionary forces unite all these elements in a drive against Peking, Chang and their intrigues with imperialists, Japan will prepare for to intervene in Manchuria to hold on to its big interests there, particularly the South Manchurian railway and Port Arthur.

Japan is fully anticipating that if she does invade Manchuria to aid Chang, she will be charged with "meddling in China." Therefore, Japan is going to give the best reason for the invasion that passes current in the capitalist press,—that is to declare that Bolshevism threatens to engulf China, and Japanese absolute monarchy must go to the rescue.

The Old Exense

Nor is Japan going to stop, even, if to justify her invasion she has to declare war on Soviet Russia, using as a pretext the excuse that Soviet Russia and the Chinese revolutionary nationalists have an alliance.

This possibility was pointed out as long ago as last May by Count Michimasa Soyeshima, who spoke at the International Round Table conference in Chicago, predicting a war with Soviet Russia. It is significant, too, that this comes at a time when France, England, Germany and other European nations, have joined in a so-called "security pact" aimed to bring peace among themselves, and a war on Soviet Russia.

Hard Problem for Japan

Japan is hard hit, even as it is, by the civil war now going on. Unless it is short-lived, it is certain to cost Japan many millions of yen in lost trade. With business already depressed, it would be a hard blow, and Japan is anxious lest she have to risk a war on Soviet Russia, which her interests might require in spite of the fact that it would not be a popular war.

End Martial Law.

SOFIA, Oct. 22.—The cabinet has decided to terminate the state of martial law which has been in force since the bomb explosion in the Sveti Kral Cathedral on April 16, in which more than 150 persons were killed.

Press Fanning the Flames of Hatred In Balkan Strife

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Austria, Oct. 22.—Official announcements from Sofia, Bulgar capitol, state that the Greek forces crossed the Bulgarian frontier this morning, bombarded the city of Petritzi, killing five, and occupied frontier posts Nos. 9, 10 and 11.

The Bulgarian soldiers resisted with all the power at their command, but were outnumbered and after the five soldiers were killed, retired.

At first, reports were to the effect that the origin of the trouble was the unprovoked slaying of two Greek soldiers on the frontier. The Sofia dispatch now charges the Greeks with expelling Bulgarians from Greek Macedonia and Thrace.

The usual propaganda of half-starved orphans being deported is exploited in the press in order to fan the war hatred into flame.

GREEK AND BULGARIAN RULERS ARRANGE WAR FEARING RISE OF WORKING CLASS TO POWER

By C. CHRISTIE.

According to dispatches from Athens, a war is being cooked now and will soon be ready to be served to the peoples of the two antagonistic Balkan states, Greece and Bulgaria. The politico-economic situation in those two countries has been such for the past three year, that only a war would prevent, or rather postpone for a time, the complete collapse of the various bourgeois-dictatorial regimes that follow one another with the rapidity of a moving picture film. Especially is this true of Greece, where since the world war has ended, we have had over a half a dozen changes of government, each of which tried to sink its claws more firmly into the necks of the working class.

Both governments feel their grasp upon the workers' weakening, notwithstanding the massacres in Bulgaria and the imprisoning and exiling of the Communists and militant workers

KU KLUX HEADQUARTERS ESTABLISHED NEAR THE HOME OF KAL KOOLIDGE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Grand headquarters for the ku klux klan have been finally established in the capital, a few blocks from the white house, it was learned today. The klan has leased the upper floors of the reconverted mansion at Seventeenth and I streets, formerly occupied by the late Senator Frank B. Brandagee of Connecticut, who committed suicide there.

HORTHY POLICE FAIL TO GAIN 'CONFESSION'

M. Rakosi Defies Third Degree Methods

The following description of the cross-examination of Comrade Rakosi is taken from the Pesti Naplo, a bitter anti-Bolshevist Budapest paper. The methods employed by the Budapest police presidium in obtaining evidence are sufficiently well known. The "delinquent" is tortured in the most cruel manner until he signs a previously prepared protocol, which, of course, contains all the usual bogey stories regarding plans for bomb outrages etc.

At the cross-examination of Rakosi the deputy police president, Hetanyi called upon him to give particulars regarding himself. Rakosi stated that he was born in Adony near Miskolcz and was 36 years of age. He had passed thru the Orient Academy. His mother tongue was Hungarian, and in addition he could write and speak six foreign languages.

He mentioned proudly that he had two brothers whom he had won for Communism.

"Are your parents alive?" asked Hetanyi.

"I do not know. It does not interest me greatly. I am only interested in

SOUTH-SLAVIC SECTION PLEDGES $1000 FOR THE DAILY WORKER

Bureau Prepares Big Drive to Save the DAILY WORKER.

On Monday October 19th the South Slavic bureau held a special meeting to consider the condition of The DAILY WORKER.

The appeal sent to the bureau by the organization department was acted on favorably and the plan proposed was fully endorsed.

The South Slavic comrades showed that they earnestly accepted the call for help issued by The DAILY WORKER, by immediately getting down to work to save the leading party organ.

First of all, each member of the bureau pledged himself to pay $5 to The DAILY WORKER campaign fund.

Secondly, the bureau pledged itself to raise a minimum of one thousand dollars, inside of the coming month. The Radnik, as the official organ of the Workers Party, printed in Croatian, as well as all other agencies of the South Slavic section will be mobilized for the fullest use to help save The DAILY WORKER.

The South Slavic comrades have been amongst the best elements in the party, responding most favorably to the appeal of The DAILY WORKER for funds which will enable it to live.

'MORE TROOPS' WAILS FRENCH HEAD IN SYRIA

Damascus Arabs Battle with French

DAMASCUS, Syria, Oct. 22—Gen. Serrail, the French high commissioner in Syria under the league of nations mandate, has sent an urgent appeal to Paris for 15,000 troops following the uprising of the natives in Damascus against the ruthless reprisals which the French carried on against the participants in the uprising of Hama. In the reprisals at Hama, 700 Arabs were killed to satisfy the French lust for Syrian blood.

Organize Protest Demonstration.

When the natives of Damascus heard of the reprisals they organized lareg protest demonstrations in the mosques and on the streets, which later resulted in armed fighting between the French soldiers and the natives in the Musselman quarter of the city.

For twenty-four hours the native held the French troops in a narrow strip separating the Musselman quarter from the "Christian" quarter despite the heavy bombardment from the surrounding hillsides by French artillery and the armored tanks, machine guns, and light cannon that were in action in the city reinforced by airplanes circling overhead dropping bombs on the rebellious Arabs.

The Musselman quarter of Damascus is a mass of ruins. Homes were destroyed by cannon and fire after the French had battered thru the Arab lines. When France talks of the atrocities committed in Belgium by Germany let her remember the atrocities she has committed in Syria and Morocco.

Gen. Sarrail in his desperate appeal for more troops points out that the forces commanded by General Gamelin will have to remain in Djebal as the mountaineers are looking for a weakening in French forces to go on the warpath again.

French Casualties High.

French casualties in Syria have totalled 6,626 killed, wounded and missing since France took over the mandate in 1920.

It has cost the French regime from 1920 to 1924 2,000,000,000 francs ($100,000,000) and up to the present month of October it has cost her 197,000,000 francs ($9,850,000) for 1925, reported Premier Painleve to the finance commission of the French chamber of deputies on the question of expenditure in the Syrian war.

French Gold Loan Fails to Reach Minimum Set After Intensive Drive

PARIS, France, Oct. 22.—The gold loan which France expected to raise has fallen far short of the quota. The French government launched the loan one month and a half ago with the intention of raising at least 22,000,000,000 francs ($1,100,000,000) and as high as 30,000,000,000 francs ($1,500,000,000).

The loan was floated on a four per cent gold basis, yet after its original period of one month to be raised passed, the time allotted to fill the quota was extended twice. In the entire period France was only able to raise 6,000,000,000 francs ($300,000,000) or just a little over one-fourth of the minimum quota which she had set.

The franc has dropped to the new low of 22.61 to the dollar, which is the lowest level since Morgan stepped in and saved France from bankruptcy with his $100,000,000.

The cabinet fearing a defeat in face of such a condition, has deferred the opening of parliament until October 29.

FEDERAL OFFICIALS ANNOUNCE U. S. MAY BREAK COAL STRIKE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 22.—That Washington anonymity "federal officials" in statements to the press, say that probably the government will have to intervene in the anthracite coal strike, after all, the cold weather having settled down early while the miners are still showing no signs of giving up their demands.

It is suspected that this significant observation of federal officials has added meaning in view of the announcement in recent issue in the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, in the special "Bankers' Issue," insisting that an attempt be made to open the mines with scabs, depending on hunger driving some men back, and on the ready swarms of gunmen and professional strikebreakers.

WOOLEN MILL WAGE CUTTING STARTS STRIKE

Passaic Mill Workers Begin Walkout

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 22.—The first resistance to a program of cutting wages in all the local mills was shown when 380 workers walked out of the Passaic Worsted Spinning company in strike against a ten per cent wage cut, which the company refused to rescind after protest.

Attack On Wages

The attack on wages has been made on the workers of four plants previously, including the Botany Worsted Mills, the Garfield Worsted Mills, the Pitkin Worsted company and the Gera Mills. Up to now the workers have made no strike movement. But when the Passaic Worsted Spinning company workers struck, the resistance began. In an interview the strike committee says:

"Last Monday our committee appeared before Mr. Holdsworth and told him that we were the poorest paid mill in the city and therefore it would work a hardship on us to accept a ten per cent decrease. He told us he would take it up at a meeting of the directors. At the time we went out, all but the third floor spinning department went back to work until this morning, to wait for an answer.

"This morning the answer came at 11 o'clock. It was to the effect that the mill owners would have to decrease our wages ten per cent. So we simply put on our hats and coats and walked out. The mill is closed down this afternoon as the result.

Some Bobbin Throwing.

"The third floor spinners refused to go out at first, but they finally agreed to after we had gone up there and there was some bobbin throwing. The foreman in that department was hit on the head after careful aim by one of the workers and he threatened to turn the fire extinguisher on us, but he finally agreed to go out with the rest of us. We are determined to stay out until we hear they will not cut us ten per cent."

FIFTEEN WORKERS WHO WERE ARRESTED IN N. Y. PROTEST ARE RELEASED

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 21.—The fifteen workers who were arrested in New York Saturday for picketing the Hungarian consulate in protest against the arrests and death sentences of workers in Hungary by the Horthy government, were arraigned Saturday afternoon and sent up for trial in the night court where they were released on parole for the night with order to appear for trial Sunday morning.

The fifteen prisoners, Samuel Levich, Max Rosenberg, Eugene Razler, Samuel Einwchner, Antonia Wechsler, Russel Blackwell, J. Miller, Lena Chernenko, Louis Schwartz, Joseph Nester, Lenora Diamond, Florence Rauh, Lena Starkman, and Julius Fischman took the opportunity of their temporary freedom to attend the ball of the International Labor Defense held Saturday evening at The Lyceum, 86th street and 3rd avenue.

The ball was attended by a large throng of workers and upon the arrival of the prisoners they were given a rousing ovation. Rose Baron, secretary of the International Labor Defense, explained the circumstances of the arrests and described the conditions of the white terror in Hungary and the threat of judicial murder hanging over the heads of Rakosi and other Hungarian workers. The pickets were greeted on their entrance by the enthusiastic singing of the International by all the workers present.

The prisoners were arraigned the following morning and received a suspended sentence with $20 fine.

Open Shop Taxi Boss Tries Wage Cut But Meets a Strike Call

By WORKER CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 22.—A strike to take effect at once was called Monday by a committee of drivers of the Guardian Taxi corporation The strike is the result of a notice to all drivers by the company that the company will pay a commission of 40 per cent to the drivers only if they should book $75 a week or better. Until last week the company has been paying 40 per cent to the drivers if they had worked six days per week. All those drivers that only worked five days received only 35 per cent.

The company is a new company in this city and has been advertising for drivers for the past three months. They never were able to hold the drivers because of the poor condition of the cars. The cars are supposed to be new, but many of the old timers in the hacking game know differently. The cabs are the rebuilt cabs that were seized from the independent owners who could not meet their notes.

The Guardian Taxi corporation is financed by some large corporation and one of its main bosses Jesse Donella. Donella has always been known as a open shop boss. He was president of the City Taxi Service in 1922, when that company refused the demands of the mogul checker drivers for an increase in commission of five per cent. The men went out on strike and in less than two weeks they won.

Donella also was one of the bosses of the Quaker Holding company. The men on that job early this year went out on strike for an increase in pay from 35 to 40 per cent. The strike lasted three hours and the men again won. Donella was at one time a garage superintendent of the open shop Yellow Taxi corporation.

If the company does not give the men the increase that the men demand a meeting will be called of all taxi chauffeurs in a day or two calling upon them to support the strikers. The Guardian company has three garages and employs about seven hundred drivers.

I. L. D. WIRES KELLOGG ON KAROLYI BAN

Fears Rakosi Charges, Is Accusation

The refusal of the state department to permit Countess Catherine Karolyi of Hungary to enter the United States is directly connected with the court-martial trials of Mathias Rakosi and more than a hundred members of the independent socialist party of Hungary, and the attempts of the Wall Street backers of the Horthy government to veil these procedures with secrecy, declares James P. Cannon, secretary of the International Labor Defense.

Countess Karolyi has been refused a vise for her passport by the United States consul of Paris by order of the state department. Countess Karolyi is in no way connected with the revolutionary or labor movements of Hungary, but is a representative of liberal bourgeois elements who have been opposed to the Horthy martial law regime.

The International Labor Defense has wired to Frank Kellogg, secretary of state, pointing out that the refusal to admit even the bourgeois opponents of the Horthy murder regime to enter America, is proof of the fact that the American backers of the Horthy regime are afraid to let the American people know even a slight inkling of the actual state of affairs in Hungary. The telegram signed by James P. Cannon, secretary of the International Labor Defense, is as follows:

"Frank Kellogg, Secretary of State,
"Washington, D. C.

"Today's issue Chicago Tribune states Countess Karolyi of Hungary has been refused permission to enter the United States by order state department. Why does the state department deny the American people the opportunity of hearing even the bourgeois political opponents of Horthy while the representatives of the bloodthirsty Horthy government which is financed and supported by Wall Street are received with open arms?

"The Horthy government maintains itself against the will of the Hungarian people by wholesale imprisonment, torture, and murder of workers and peasants. At this moment, Mathias Rakosi and more than one hundred members of the independent socialist party of Hungary are confined in Horthy's torture chambers and facing court-martial and execution.

"The American people would join this protest if they knew the facts. Are the American supporters of Horthy afraid that Countess Karolyi, who is in no way identified with the revolutionary and labor movement of Hungary, might nevertheless give some slight inkling of the actual state of affairs there?

"(Signed) J. P. Cannon, Sec'y,

Politicians Turn Cold Shoulder to Mellon Tax Proposal

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22. — Secy. Mellon's reception before the house ways and means committee, when he proposed that surtaxes on the biggest private incomes be cut in two—from 40% to 20%—and admitted that he would like to see them cut to a maximum of 15 per cent, was far from cordial. Even the republican majority of the big committee showed coolness toward some of his suggestions, as they contemplated the effect Mellon's proposals would have on the republican party vote. The democrats were evidently pleased that he had taken so reactionary a position.

Two days of hearings showed that the committee would accept only a modified form of the Mellon proposals and that the democrats would present a minority report which would force further concessions. Mellon's demand for repeal of the inheritance and gift taxes, and his further demand for the repeal of the publicity clause in the income tax law, were met with quiet smiles from the opposition to this mouthpiece of big business.

British Employers Try to Win the Youth for Role of Strikebreakers

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, meager news arrives of the opening in Great Britain of a series of so-called training centers for unemployed juveniles in the great industrial city of Birmingham. The announcement is made by "Labor Minister" Sir Arthur Steel-Maitland. Since his lordship is the labor minister of the Baldwin tory government, that would place him about on a par with Coolidge's secretary of labor, James J. Davis, the Pittsburgh millionaire.

• • • •

When the capitalist press in this country publishes this bit of news, it tries to leave the impression that this move of the Baldwin government is an altruistic effort to solve the unemployed problem. The boys are given thoro training as apprentices in the big Birmingham munition works, that has been transformed into a so-called training school. A start has been made with 400 jobless boys from 19 to 25 years of age. Another center will be organized at Newcastle, to train boys for work on the farms.

• • • •

As a matter of fact, even at this distance, it can readily be seen that these schools are but training centers for strikebreakers. The British army of jobless is rapidly approaching the two million mark. It is increasing in numbers, instead of decreasing.

A large percentage of the jobless belong to labor unions. And it is a different sort of unemployed army than one usually finds in the United States. It is an army of jobless that does not scab. Arthur A. Purcell, fraternal delegate of the British Trade Union Congress, to the recent American Federation of Labor, pointed out this fact with some pride. Few blacklegs come from the ranks of those who are out of work. Instead these jobless hold meetings declaring their solidarity with workers on strike, and join in the picket lines of the strikers.

• • • •

Under these conditions it is difficult for the bosses to organize an army of strikebreakers to take the places of those workers using the strike weapon to maintain their standard of living.

It is in this dilemma that the employers have evidently fallen back on their "training centers" for boys, unemployed boys, whose minds can be poisoned with jingoism, making them pliable material to be moulded into strikebreakers, just as fascism wins carefree youth, ignorant of its catspaw role in the hands of labor's enemy.

• • • •

It is inconceivable that the products of these "training centers" could be of much use in a national industrial upheaval, in the mines, on the railroads, or on the docks. But these strikebreakers could probably be useful in combatting the local struggles of workers where smaller numbers are engaged. They could thus be considered as auxiliaries for the infamous "O. M. S.", the organization for the maintenance of supplies, the fascist army with which British employers hope to resist successfully future onslaughts by Britain's organized workers.

Thus the British capitalists are not interested in solving the problem of unemployment. They can find no solution under capitalism, even if they had the slightest desire to look for it. Instead, they are trying to meet the conditions growing out of unemployment, an idle working class, hungry, discontented and, with winter coming on, desperate.

• • • •

The organization of these "training centers" is only another confession by British employers of their fears for the future. These "centers" must fail of their purpose because youth in Great Britain is being won, in increasing numbers, to the standards of labor's struggle for power. British labor will successfully meet and overcome even this maneuver of its capitalist enemy.

300 Taxi Drivers of New York on Strike

NEW YORK. Oct. 22—Over three hundred taxi drivers employed by the Guardian Taxi Corp. are out on strike. The vote to strike was taken Sunday night at a meeting of chauffeurs.

The demands of the drivers are as follows:

A flat rate commission of 40 per cent, regardless of the days on the job instead of the old system of working six days for 40 per cent. The drivers are against the new program of the bosses which would give the men 40 per cent only if they booked $75 a week or over.

A Mr. Smith representing the company offered the men 40 per cent provided they worked six days per week this offer was flatly turned down by the drivers. All the night men at the E. 18 St. garage are out and it is expected that in the morning the day men will follow them.

DEBS JOINS IN PROTEST UPON RAKOSI TORTURE

Condemns "Atrocious Outrage" of Horthy

that the workers acting under the direction of the International Labor Defense were fulfilling their international duty to their class brothers in Hungary in protesting against the threatened executions of a former peoples' commissar and hundreds of others who are members of the independent socialist party. The picketing of the consulate is entirely legal and constitutional and will be continued despite the illegal conduct of the police and the courts until there is definite assurance that the proposed judicial murder of Rakosi and his comrades is cancelled, said Comrade Baron.

The inscriptions on the banners carried by the pickets attracted much attention. Some of them read: "Demand the liberation of Horthy's victims"; "Rakosi shall not be murdered"; "The workers of America demand Rakosi's freedom"; and "Wall Street finances Horthy; on Wall Street lies the bloody guilt."

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 21.—Altho unable to join actively in the protest against the atrocious white terror raging in Hungary, Eugene V. Debs, socialist party head, has expressed himself unequivocally in opposition to the Horthy regime of torture and death being visited upon the Hungarian revolutionary workers, as may be seen by the following telegrams between the New York International Labor Defense and Debs:

Rose Baron, Secretary International Labor Defense, New York City.

Dear Comrade,—It is with regret that I find myself unable to attend the protest meeting to be held today in behalf of the Hungarian comrades to which you have kindly invited me. I fully share with you the indignation and resentment you feel at the atrocious outrage with which these Hungarian comrades are threatened and were it possible I should certainly attend today's protest demonstration in this behalf.

Hoping your meeting may be largely attended and have all hoped for results, I am (Signed) Eugene V. Debs.

At the meeting the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, The United States government has seen fit to admit within its borders Gustav Gratz, George Luckacs and other representatives of the government of Hungary to the conferences of the interparliamentary union, and

"Whereas, These delegates represent the Horthy regime now in control of Hungary which has been responsible for the slaughter of thousands of innocent workers and peasants since 1919, and

"Whereas, The Hungarian white terror instituted by the Horthy government has committed most barbarous and cruel atrocities against the workers, and

"Whereas, The Horthy government of Hungary has arrested Mathias Rakosi, and one hundred other workers whose sole crime was the protection of the interests of the workers and peasants of that country, and

"Whereas, This attack upon the workers and peasants of Hungary is but a part of a world-wide reign of terror which the capitalists of the world are seeking to put into effect.

"Therefore, Be It Resolved by this mass meeting of workers of the city of New York that we demand that the imprisoned workers and peasants of Hungary be immediately liberated, and that the present inhuman reign of terror be ended.

"And, be it further resolved that we demand the immediate liberation of Rakosi and the Hungarian workers. This meeting further demands that the imprisoned workers of all white terror countries—Poland, Bulgaria, Esthonia, Germany, Italy, be liberated.

"This resolution to be sent to the state department, the Hungarian consulate, the interparliamentary union and the press."

MITCHELL WILL GET NO CHANCE TO SPILL BEANS

Precautions Taken Against Expose

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 22—Secretary of War Davis has notified Col. Mitchell, critic of the war and navy departments' management of the air service, to appear on Oct. 28 before a military courtmartial for "conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline."

Col. Mitchell had charged the war department with criminal inefficiency in the management of the air service and had hoped that he would be cited for insubordination.

Fears Exposure.

The war department, fearing that Mitchell might prove something that would make some of the affairs in the war department take on the odor of Teapot Dome, has cited him with violation of the 96th article of war which is a blanket charge made to cover any incident such as the "disorderly conduct charge" used by the police to arrest any whom the policeman desires to without any real evidence against the arrested party.

Testimony "Irrelevant."

Any effort on the part of Mitchell to prove his charges will result in the testimony being called "irrelevant" and thus stricken from the record.

Court to Make Example.

The court is composed of 12 general officers and 1 colonel, whose duty is to make an example of Mitchell. The trial will occhpy bnt little time, as the charges are drawn, the personnel of the court picked and the attitude of the officers and the war department set. His "conduct" will undoubtedly be punished by a severe reprimand by the war secretary and dismissal from the service.

Scientist Claims Civilization Dates Back 25,000 Years

Man had a civilization some 25,000 years ago, according to Dr. George L. Colli, curator of the Logan Museum of Beloit College and professor of anthropology, who has returned from his study of the early Magdalenian peoples in southern France.

Early Civilization.

"Not only did the Magdalenians have a civilization, but there is every reason to believe that it came to them from the west—probably from the now submerged Atlantis," said Dr. Collie.

"The Magdalenians were highest of the Cro-Magnons, and they are one of the few peoples of whom we find traces in France," said Dr. Colli. "Their caves run back into the cliffs for more than a mile, and the walls are adorned with numerous paintings in colors, most of them depicting the wounding of a huge animal— cave bear, cave hyena, the mammoth, and the reindeer.

"We anthropologists now believe that man originated in Africa, the only continent on which are found the chimpanzee and the gorilla. We are intent on following down whatever clues are to be found there, and even now, the Logan expedition is on the way to Mount Tamarassent, loftiest mountain of the Sahara, where dwell the Toureg tribe. They have never been studied, and we hope for success this time because we have a friendly member of the tribe with the expedition."

Banker-General Sets Heart on Air Fleet for Illinois Bosses

Major General Milton J. Foreman, commander of the Illinois national guard and commander as well of the Foreman National Bank, has "set his heart"—if such an organ can be ascribed to either a banker and a major general, on an aerial squadron for the 33rd division, of which he is commander

At the summer camp of the guard held at Camp Grant, Foreman provided one of the finest demonstrations of airplane training in connection with infantry and artillery action ever given, so say the banker's admirers. Among these admirers was one William Randolph Hearst, who, tho a democrat (sometimes) and politically at sword's points with the banker general who is, of course, a republican, became so enthused that he gave $1,000 in prizes to the fliers.

This all comes out in connection with the convention of the national guard association, which meets today in the armory of the 122nd artillery at the foot of Chicago avenue, with almost every guard officer in the state attending. It is not stated in the announcement what an aerial squadron for the Illinois guard is going to do, or wheteher its planes are to protect the population of Illinois from some unknown invader who has not heard of the great Locarno "peace pact" or if they are to drop bombs on that section of the lower classes who dare disturb the order of capitalist society by striking against wage cuts and so on.

Mid-City I. L. D. Branch in First Meeting Gets Future Work Laid Out

The International Labor Defense is going to grow swiftly in Chicago, if indications of branch meetings already here are anything from which to judge. The Mid-City Branch held its first meeting Wednesday night at 741 Blue Island avenue. While for some reason many of the 40 members on the roll did not show up, the branch has ten new members or so and all present were active and interested in planning future work.

The branch elected two new members on its executive committee to fill vacancies. The executive committee now consists of Fellow Workers, Edenstrom and Henry, and Comrades Castrell and Greenwood, with Comrade Marguerite Browder as corresponding secretary and fellow worker, Gordon as chairman. Each member of the branch was instructed to do his or her best to bring in one new member for the November-December period, each to receive a contribution blank and application card.

Until the branch is more thoroly organized to put on its own entertainments, the members are to assist actively in city affairs. The next meeting will be the third Wednesday in November at 741 Blue Island Ave.

GREEK-BULGAR OUTBREAK IS A WAR THREAT

Balkans Again Flame with War Talk

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SOFIA, Bulgaria, October 22.—The bestial Zankov government, lackey of French imperialism, now has something else to do besides murdering in its foul dungeons the flower of the working class of this nation, with one of its border towns, Petrich, in the hands of one detachment of Greek troops and another line advancing on Poroy, for the purpose of occupying it.

This move on the part of Greece is in reprisal for the killing of two Greek soldiers, an officer and a sentinel, in an attack Monday night on a Greek frontier post near Demirhissar. An ultimatum from Greece to Bulgaria demanded the payment within 48 hours of 2,000,000 French gold francs ($400.000). The demand also include the punishment of those responsible for affair and an official apology.

Peace Hope a Miracle

The hope of world peace voiced after the Locarno conference thus goes a-glimmering. Scarcely had the echoes of the cheering over the "dawn of peace" died down, that the roar of the guns already sounding in the distance from the colonial wars of the French and Spanish, were drowned with the new outbreak in this part of world.

The sincerity of the French and British at Locarno is evidenced by the fact that two nations, one backed by Britain the other by France, are, less than a week after the conclusion of the Locarno conference, engaged in border warfare.

League Called Upon

Zankov has already called upon the league of nations council to act in the matter, protesting that the Greeks fired upon his troops first and that they returned the fire in self-defense.

Italy may become involved in the situation as there is widespread unrest in Albania, where the masses are seething with revolt against the bloody fist of Mussolini. Scutari is a hot bed of anti-fascism and Italian troops may insist upon passage thru both belligerent nations. This may cause serious complications in case Italian troops engage in conflicts within the borders of either nation. Britain is apprehensive and can be relied upon to come to the aid of Greece if necessary.

Such action would involve her with both Italy and France. Out of this struggle may start the next Europeon war, just as an upheaval in the Balkans heralded the last great war.

Woodlawn Property Owners' Head Quizzed on Church Bombing

Fred Helman, 6332 Green street, an organizer for the Woodlawn Property Owners' association, was quizzed for several hours last night by Assistant State's Attorney Joseph Savage in an effort to fix the blame for the bombing of the Bethesda (Colored) baptist church by some of the "protective" associations formed to terrorize the Negroes attempting to reside in this section of the south side.

Helman was allowed to go, but he may be questioned again as his testimony was by no means satisfactory as to his organization.

Russ Trade Mission Visits Agricultural College at Urbana

The Russian delegation which is in the United States buying livestock to be used for breeding purposes in Soviet Russia was at the Agricultural College at Urbana where they saw how the American colleges train students in agricultural science.

S. Perferkovitsh stated to a representative of The DAILY WORKER that the first boatload of sheep and hogs has just left New York City for Soviet Russia. The second ship leaves next week carrying the remainder of the 5,000 sheep purchased to Soviet Russia.

FRENCH BUDGET REACHES ASTRONOMICAL FIGURES IN BILLIONS OF FRANCS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 29—The French budget for 1926 will be 36,172,000,000 francs, an increase of 2,902,000,000 francs over the 1925 budget, according to Lucien Lamoureux, reported of the chamber of commerce committee. M. Lamoureaux said that the new budget will provide for receipts of 3,530,000,000 francs raised by new taxes.

UNION OFFICIAL SLASHED BY BOSS NOW IN HOSPITAL

Harry Winnick, business agent of Retail Clerks' Union Local No.195, is in the Cook county hospital following an attack with a razor upon him by Meyer Ossey, one of the owners of the Ossey Brothers' department store, while he was on the picket line in the struck Ossey Bros.' store, Maxwell and Halsted Sts. The union had Meyer Ossey arrested who was later released on $3,000 bail.

The employes of the Ossey Bros. store walked out ofter the union representatives failed to get the heads of the company to sign an agreement with the union. The Ossey Bros.' store was the only one of the Maxwell St. businessmen's association that refused to sign the old agreement with the union. All of the others signed the agreement granting a mimimum wage scale of $40 per week, and $25 minimum to the women for a 54-hour week.

Pickets have been placed at the store carrying banners telling prospective purchasers that the store is unfair to union labor and that a strike exists.

Meyer Ossey, one of the owners of the store, in his desperation seeing that no purchasers were entering his store attacked the business agent with a razor attempting to kill the business agent that notfied the clerks of the failure to make an agreement with the store and called the strike.

Rulers Plan War Fearing Rise of the Working Class of Greece.

These two peoples were considered the biggest patriotic dupes in the past, and it was easy to arouse their sentiments against each other, whenever it was felt necessary. Since than times have changed. Twice already has war been averted within the year thanks to the stand of the Communist Party of Greece. One of these, was a war against Turkey and the other a war with Bulgaria; one being urged under the pretext of the exile of the former Greek patriarch from Turkey, the other for the killing of a Greek merchant in Bulgaria.

For the determined stand of the Communist Party of Greece in these threatened wars, its members are being persecuted. Many of the comrades face execution, more will be jailed besides those that are in jail today and others exiled to small and deserted islands.

But a war there must be, and, no matter who will win it, both governments know that a war is to their best interests. It is the only means that will divert the attention of the workers from their grievances to the "interests of the fatherland" and thus avert the catastrophe which is hanging over the heads of both governments.

One cannot say to what extent the Greek Communist Party will resist the efforts of the Greek rulers to throw the workers into a war with Bulgaria. The Communist Party of Greece has been outlawed. After the trial of the entire central eexcutive committee that has just been postponed, and the suppression of all its newspapers, the Greek party is in the same position as its Bulgarian sister party.

But the workers and peasants of both countries have been well educated during the past years of activity of the Communists, and it is certain that the military laws and courtmartials will not prevent them taking a definite stand against this new plotting of the bourgeoisie.

The war is being cooked, but it is not certain that it will be served, eaten and digested by the Greek and Bulgarian workers. On the contrary, it may be rehashed and forced into the stomachs of the capitalist and landowing classes of those countries and thus give them the fatal indigestion which will mean their downfall.

ITALIAN DEBT MISSION SAILS FOR AMERICA

Fascist Braggart Gives Orders to Volpi

ROME, Oct. 22.—"Italy intends to face her obligations according to the strictest justice," declared Count Volpi, finance minister, as he left Rome today with the Italian debt mission to the United States.

Count Volpi and the Italian mission sail from Naples at two o'clock this afternoon, and all were in an optimistic mood as they departed from Rome.

"For reasons of propriety and convenience I cannot forecast the discussions at Washington," Count Volpi said."

"Italy adopts an unequivocal attitude—that of a debtor, who, though having become indebted for a great common cause, not only does not intend to refuse to own her obligations but on the contrary intends to face them according to the strictest justice."

Count Volpi's reference to negotiations "upon principles already accepted by the United States" was understood to refer to President Coolidge's promise that debts should be settled upon a basis of the capacity of the debtor to pay.

Capacity to pay and the right of each debtor nation to settle its debt to the United States upon an independent basis—these are the underlying principles of the Italian debt policy, Count Volpi, finance minister, said.

Count Volpi will sail tomorrow with the Italian debt mission for the United States to negotiate a settlement of Italy's debt.

"Italy, like the United States, entered the world war when the fight was at its climax and when the outcome of the war was most uncertain," said Count Volpi. "This established a sentimental bond between the two nations.

"In the settlement of debts the fundamental rule is absolute autonomy for each debtor nation and independent negotiations with each other.

"We have studied the general scheme of the previous settlements between the United States and England and France and Belgium. I can say that the Italian government won't deviate much from these lines, while keeping in mind the different position of each debtor and its capacity for payment."

Count Volpi has made his final appearance yesterday before the cabinet and the Italian debt policy was fully discussed.

Mussolini Gives Orders

The Italian mission will take with it statistics showing Italy's capacity for payment. It is also understood that Premier Mussolini also insists that Italy shall not pay more annually to the United States than she receives in reparations from Germany. While it is realized that this demand may cause a hitch, inasmuch as the United States debt funding mission has heretofore insisted upon keeping the question of debts and reparations separate, the Italian mission is under orders to stress its point.

Ida Rothstein Speaks in Cleveland for the Needle Trades T.U.E.L.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 22—A well attended meeting of needle workers, arranged by the Trade Union Educational League, was held here last night, where Ida Rothstein spoke on the present situation in the needle trades industry and particularly in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

The machine was well represented and many questions were asked, which developed a lively discussion and the meeting turned out with big enthusiasm for the left wing.

Hartung Is Suspended.

Samuel F. Hartung, instructor of English at the McKinley high school who eloped with his sixteen year old pupil was suspended from the teaching staff of Chicago schools after failure to appear for a hearing called by the superintendent of schools, William McAndrew.

CHICAGO Y.W.L. MEMBERS, ATTENTION

All members who are functionaries of the Chicago Young Workers League are once more urged to attend the special functionaries' meeting to be held tonight, Friday, Oct. 23, 1925. No regular branch meetings will be held on this night in order that the members of the branch executive committees, officers of the city executive committee, delegates to the city central committee and officers of the various branches may be able to attend the special meeting, which has been called by the district executive committee.

Very important problems will be reported on at this meeting and all comrades will undoubtedly participate. The problems involve the future and growth of the Chicago league, and the report will include the questions of the development of the political and organizational work of the league here. All comrades are instructed to be present tonight at the Workers' Hall, 1902 W. Division St., at 8 o'clock sharp. Be there on time!

Shop Nuclei Give Big Help in Campaign to Save THE DAILY WORKER

THIS issue of THE DAILY WORKER is dedicated to Shop Nucleus No. 1 of Detroit. This nucleus has always been foremost in the work for extending the influence of THE DAILY WORKER. It has made several previous donations to save THE DAILY WORKER fund. The last remittance of $51.00 pays for one roll of the paper on which this issue is printed.

MEMBERS of the Workers Party who have had the good fortune to be part of shop nuclei which have already been formed have no doubt noticed the effective work which can be done for THE DAILY WORKER under this form of organization. In many instances where shop nuclei have been formed the effectiveness of THE DAILY WORKER has been increased immediately.

In all shop nuclei members should consider THE DAILY WORKER, its preservation and extension as one of the most important tasks before it. Every nucleus should set an example to the other party units in this work to show what can be done by the Bolshevik forms of organization.

The Party's Finnish Section Reorganization Commission Is Planning Big Drive

THE executive sub-committee of the Finnish reorganization commission held its first session on October 19.

Detailed plans for fully acquainting the entire membership of the Finnish section with the problem of reorganization and hastening the reorganization of the Finnish units of our party, was agreed upon. Comrades Puro, Burman, Sulkanen and Lovestone were present at this meeting.

In essence, the plan is as follows:

1. Nearly one hundred of the most important Finnish branches in the party have been selected for being addressed by a representative of the Finnish reorganization commission. These branches are to call special meetings at fixed dates. At these meetings, the only order of business will be reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei.

2. Special articles on specific phases of the reorganization problems will be written in the Finnish press, by selected comrades.

3. A section of all our Finnish dailies will be set aside for discussion, and answers about organization problems. Comrade Puro, who is directing the agitation and propaganda work of reorganization, in the Finnish section, will take charge of this column.

Wherever possible, immediately, shop nuclei organization steps are to be taken in order to show organizational examples to the Finnish comrades. There are several industrial centers where many Finnish workers, members of the party, are found, and this can be applied.

5. The Finnish reorganization commission, in co-operation with the Finnish district executive committees, and the district executive commttees of the party, as well as the C. E. C. organization department, will keep the entire press fully informed of the progress of the work.

6. Speakers have been selected to address the branches of the federation on the question of shop nucleus.

7. Each of these speakers is being given special material in the Finnish language dealing with the problems of reorganization.

8. Representatives of the D. E. C.'s of the party and the reorganization commission of the Finnish section will be present at all district conferences of the Finnish section which are to be held soon in preparation for the national conference of the Finnish section.

Amongst the comrades who will write special articles on the reorganization of the Finnish federation, will be the following:

C. E. Ruthenberg, Jay Lovestone, J. P. Cannon, H. Puro, E. Sulkanen, Earl Heino, R. Pesola, Taavi Heino, Aaro Hyrske, Axel Ohrn, E. Parras, K. A. Suvanto, S. Kankaanpaa, K. E. Heikkinen, F. Burman.

Among the branches that will be visited by speakers of the Finnish reorganization commission ar ethe following:

Massachusetts: Abington, Ashburnham, Ashby, Boston, Chester, Clinton, Fitchburg, Gardner, Hingham, Lanesville, Maynard, Norwood, Peabody, Quincy, Townsend, Worcester, Keene, Lebanon, Milford, Newport, W. Concord, Wilton.

Speakers: Kalle Heino, on regular tour; D. Heino, R. Pesola, Olga Oikemus, Aaro Hyrske, Wm. Marttila.

HOW TO ORGANIZE A SHOP NUCLEUS

By T. G., Member Shop Nucleus No. 3, Detroit, Mich.

THIS is the problem which is now before every member of our party at the present time. Most every one of our comrades knows that this is the most important issue before our party. Therefore, I will try to give a little information how we organized a shop nucleus.

The first thing we did was that we called a meeting of some comrades we knew were working in one shop. We came together and the first order of business was how to come in contact with the workers working in the factory where we were employed. We did this because we very well knew that the shop nuclei are organized for the purpose of getting in close contact with the workers employed in the factories.

What did we discuss? We were discussing the working conditions in the factory, how the workers are working, what they are talking about, and what would interest them mostly. Finally we came to the conclusion that we will issue a shop newspaper in which we will line out the things the workers are confronted with.

SOME of the comrades may say that it was easy for us to issue a newspaper, because we know the language very well, but I wish to state that our nucleus is today still composed of comrades who have all been born in Europe and not one of them knows the language well. We simply elected a committee to make a draft of something like a leaflet and then gave it to a comrade "who knows how to do it" for correction. The party organization department helped us along on this, and today we have got out the first issue of our Workingmens' Shop News. (This is the name of our paper). The chief slogans in our paper are "Join the union," "United front for a labor party," "Let's better our working conditions." Those are the things every worker will understand and we are of the opinion that it will have a great effect on our fellow workers.

This is much better than the meetings of the territorial branches where most of the time is wasted in reading yard long communications, or how many "hot dogs" are we going to buy for our next entertainment, whether our singing choir shall be the first or second number on the program, etc.

THE long communications, entertainments, singing choirs, dramatic clubs, etc., will in the future be the work of the auxiliary and language clubs and not the work of the Communsit Party. The work of the Communist Party is to lead the workers in the everyday struggle against the capitalist system. With this I do not want to say that from now on we are going to have any entertainments or singing and dramatic clubs. We will have all this only on a more broad basis, with our sympathizers who are not yet ready to join the party, but who are willing to work for the party.

Springfield Comrades Determined to Make Good on Rescue Party

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 22—As soon as our Comrade Bloom received the telegram from the DAILY WORKER telling of the serious financial condition the paper is in, she called a meeting phoning the comrades and going out in a pourning rain to call on comrades to get them out that very same day.

In the same spirit at the meeting that night the assembled comrades immediately took up a collection which netted $40. After that discussion on what to do at once to help The DAILY WORKER followed and it was decided that we run our rescue party on Friday evening, Oct. 23. Ours will be a dance and package party and cost of admission will be 25 cents.

New York League Meet on Trade Union Activity

NEW YORK CITY—Comrade Sam Don, District Organizer of the Young Workers League in District 2 announces the calling of a Trade Union Conference of all members of the League for the purpose of discussing the tasks of the Communists in the unions. The conference will be held Monday evening, October 26th, at 5 p. m., at 105 Eldridge Street.

Comrade Benjamin Gitlow, member of the Central Committee of the Workers Party, will lead the discussion. All League members and particularly those who are members of the trade unions have been urged to come.

This conference will strike a blow at the journalistic conception of becoming a mass organization. It will point out that the Young Workers League must assume the leadership of the struggles of the young workers by actually participating in their daily struggles. In order to frustrate any tendency which may manifest itself to leave or refuse to join the reformist trade unions, it will point out that the trade unions are the mass organizations of the working class and it is essential to work within them and to revolutionize them.

The question of the greater exploitation of the young workers, the lack of attention on this score by the trade unions, the organization of the unorganized young workers into the trade unions with lower initiaton fees and dues will be discussed and acted upon. League will proceed with the further organization of Communist youth fractions, so that the struggle on behalf of the young workers in the unions and the Trade Union Educational League will be organized and effective.

Your neighbor will appreciate the favor—give him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

Jewish Bakers Strike in Springfield, Mass.; Union Scabs on Jobs

By B. LEVINE

SPRINGFIELD Mass., October 22—Eleven bakers in the employ of the Jacobs Baking Co. at Springfield, Mass., are out on strike.

The firm has broken its agreement with Local 404 I. B. & C. Workers' Union by hiring non-union labor and by forcing the union men to sign individual agreements with a security of five hundred dollars each.

Jobs Costs $500.00

The play of the firm was to fire a baker—let him go idle a few weeks and then forcing him to sign the agreement and put up the security in order to get back the job. It took the employes some time to get wise to the tricks of the firm, and now they are conducting a vigorous campaign to unionize the shop.

Co-operative Gets Trade

Springfield, Mass. has only two Jewish bakeries, the other one is the Jewish Women's Cooperative Bakery doing the largest amount of business of any cooperative bakery in the country, according to statistics furnished by the bureau of labor statics. The cooperative is lending all possible financial and moral aid to the strike.

A conference of eleven Jewish labor organizations endorsed the strike and pledged the support of all its 800 members to the strike.

The owner of the Jacobs Baking Co. is Mr. Magazine who is vice-president of the Specialty Retail Bakery Owners' Association, an association of Jewish bakers to help break strikes and fight the union. This association has supplied the firm with scabs from an independent union in New York.

Open air meetings are held daily and the Communists are taking active part in bringing the strike to a victorious end.

Williamsburg Branch Changes Its Former Hall for Big Affair

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 22.—The address of the "Rescue Party" which is being arranged by the Jewish Williamsburg Branch of New York for the benefit of the DAILY WORKER and the Freiheit was erroneously given as Barbers' Union Hall, 56 Manhattan Ave., Brooklyn. This has been changed to a larger hall.

This "Rescue Party" will be held at the Educational Alliance, 76 Throop avenue, Brooklyn, Saturday evening, October 31.

There will be splendid entertainment and dance. Admission is 50 cents. Tickets may be had at DAILY WORKER New York Office, 108 East 14th Street, New York.

Polish Police Rape 17-Year-Old Communist Suspect in Lemberg

LEMBERG, Poland, Oct. 22.—(Ira)—According to news received by the executive committee of the International Red Aid the Lemberg "Defensive" (political police) arrested a 17-year-old girl R. K.

The girl had been arrested because she was suspected of being a member of the Young Communist League. She was raped by the police agents. Her lawyer Doctor Stustinki made explanatory statements about this fact to the authorities. A medical examination verified the rape, yet the perpetrators are not punished.

Six Mills of Lumber Trust Closed by Big Strike for a Raise

ABERDEEN, Wash., Oct. 22.—Six Grays Harbor plants are now closed by the saw mill strike, which has been in progress three weeks for a 50-cent raise to $3.75 a day.

New Activity Under New Form

By WM. F. KRUSE.

MUCH has been written about the new forms under which our party will function after the reorganization, and the general acquiescence and agreement upon these new forms has made the task of reorganization much easier than was expected. Comrades from whom ideological if not organizational opposition might have been looked for have taken in the main a thoroly Bolshevik attitude, few and far between, and isolated almost entirely in the German and Finnish federations, are the voices that raise themselves against this far-reaching change in our basic organizational form.

But there is more than a change of form involved in our party reorganization. Form is of basic importance, but only as a means toward an end. This is no derogation, that the means be correct and adequate is the first requirement toward ever reaching the goal. But in providing the means we must not lose sight for a moment of the immediate end, in this case an energetic unending campaign of Bolshevik mass activity in which our party shall use the full ability and energy of every member in the penetration of the masses, and their mobilization for struggle under our leadership.

IT is clear that the old territorial form of organization is the heritage of the social-democracy, that its political basis is one of exclusive reliance upon the bourgeois democratic processes as the limit of working class activity. But we must also consider the direct result of this form of organization in the stultifying of the everyday activity of any working masses so organized—the tendency toward ingrown sectarianism, to concentration upon the most petty details of club activity as a substitute for revolutionary action among the masses.

The general agreement upon the need to change to the new forms should be utilized to lay out immediately some of the new tasks, new functions and new methods of the new basic organizational units. Unless this is done there is grave danger, especially among the more institutionalized elements of our party, that an attempt will be made to continue the sterile clubroom gymnastics that now take up so much of our time. Under menshevik control the Soviets and the duma remained dual debating societies while the tzarist state administrators, reinforced by their democratic prototypes, continued "business as usual." Such is not to be the role of the nucleus; we are changing our basic unit in order to effect a change in our work, our methods and our achievements. There will be, there must be, new activity under the new form, and we cannot allow it to develop entirely instinctively and unguided. Our organization corps must be ever alert to guide our firing line in the shop, mine, and mill in its everyday work in the everyday struggle. Particularly at the beginning must every experience be analyzed and its fruits made available to all, especially must the first faltering steps be set in the right direction so that our members will develop that confidence and enthusiasm for the new forms that are essential to our party's growth in numbers and influence.

TIME and space prevent any detailed consideration of new methods of work at this time, no doubt many articles will follow on this subject. Almost the only concrete instruction on work heretofore issued to our nuclei has been that regarding factory or shop newspapers—"wall papers" or bulletins. An excellent measure, but much less an activity in itself than an evidence of other activity on the part of the nucleus and its members. The participation in every current of labor unrest, the discovery of grievances and exploitation of them to sharpen the mettle of the workers and increase Communist prestige, the infiltration of every social grouping of the workers of the shop, not only the union but the social and benevolent clubs and in their absence even the ephermeral social, athletic and other "ganging" that expresses the workers' gregarious instinct despite the capitalists disorganizing efforts. Methods of getting out and distributing legal and illegal shop bulletins must be taught. There is great pessimism in many comrades' minds now on "getting caught." To brand this as cowardice is absolutely wrong, we don't want our members to get caught, we don't want them fired, because outside the shop they are as helpless as outside the union, therefore we must tell them in detail not only what to do but how to do it, and we must learn from their actual experiences the best ways and means for carrying on this work.

THIS pessimism expresses itself also in the form of the assumption that we must lose the major part of our membership in the process of reorganization. That we will lose some is undeniable, and also unavoidable. Elements, weak, unassimilated and unassimilable, will drop out. But by far the largest part of our proletarian elements will not only remain but will be heartened by the change to increase their strength. It would be a mistake to judge the problem of reorganization solely from the view point of Manhattan or Chicago. The metropolis is important, in times of stress, its control is vital, but American industry is not confined there, nor is the American proletariat. And precisely in the "sticks" where some prefess the greatest pessimism on reorganization, the change will come far less as a matter of form, and far more as the matter of activity.

Let us consider district nine, the stronghold of the very Finnish comrades among whom the most skepticism is expressed regarding reorganization. In that district of the sixty-odd towns in which we have any organization, in over fifty there are only a single branch (Finnish or South Slavic) — hence the immediate problem of reorganizing into an international branch does not exist. Furthermore, the overwhelming mass of these towns contain each but a single industry, chiefly mining or farming, and often but a single establishment, so that the problem of the shop nucleus reorganization is less one of new forms than of new activity. A capable reorganizer in this district should lose but few and materially increase the activity and improve the political consciousness of this membership.

At the last convention this discussion of "backward elements" was made a rather bitter jest, but that such elements do exist, and often through little fault of their own, is undeniable. It was brought out in the district nine convention that most of the small branches of the Iron Range had not seen an English speaking organizer, teacher or lecturer for a year, two years, or even three years. And the plea of the Finnish comrades that the district office, or at least an effective sub-district office be moved to the center of 90% of the district membership, rather than to that of 10% in the metropolis two hundred miles away, fell on deaf ears. If the reorganization brings into this district able, tactful, conscientious reorganizers it will do more to build our party in this vital section than years of vegetation under the old system. The reorganization will broaden these local units beyond language lines, the old form and its resultant activity would never have done. In a town with even a good Finnish local a fine lone rebel Slav or German or American remains unorganized—the new form will end this. Furthermore attention will finally be given to these units in farming sections and thus begin for the first time Communist agricultural activity by American Communist farmers.

A few months more will see our party re-formed. For these new forms, the fruit of world-wide revolutionary experience, we must immediately map out the new activities that will definitely line up our party with the other powerful Communist sections to whom this work is bread and blood of very existence. No pessimism on loss of old members should be tolerated. Whom will we lose? Those elements that would be Communists anywhere save at the place of industry? They are no material for our revolution which must come from the workshop. Those who "belong" for reasons of social or lingual gregariousness? Our "worker clubs" will give this, perhaps better than now, under Communist leadership, and no longer possible for non-Communists' decision of our party affairs. Party membership is no cheap thing, it is the accolade of the revolutionist. Ours shall be reorganized in new form, it shall fight with new weapons and go forward to new achievements.

Desire to Learn Is Only Requirement for Courses in English

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Inquiries have reached the office of the New York Workers' School requesting information with regard to the English courses to be given at the school beginning this week. It has been asked:

(1) What are the qualifications demanded from anyone wishing to take the courses?

(2) How many evenings a week will English be given?

(3) On what feature will the chief emphasis be laid?

These and other similar questions have been communicated by mail and telephone to the office of the Workers' School.

The Workers' School takes this opportunity to answer these and other questions that may arise later.

(1) In the first place, any comrade desiring English instruction is requested merely to register his name and pay the tuition fee $3.50 (or $2.50) for three months and he will be assigned to a suitable class in accordance with his relative command of English. The only qualification required is that he be serious in his efforts and willing to take the courses offered and that he should realize that the Workers Party will be a really powerful factor only when its membership will speak the language of this country.

(2) Elementary instruction will be given twice a week (four hours). Intermediate and advanced instruction will be given once a week (two hours).

(3) The chief stress will be laid on oral expression. At present the international branches and shop nuclei will be unable to function well, unless the comrades are able to express themselves in English. Consequently oral English will be given primary importance.

It should be understood that comrades who will register late or join the classes late will not be in the same favorable situation as those comrades who will start work at once. It is therefore urged that all registration be completed at the earliest possible time. Further details can be obtained at 108 E. 14th St., Room 34.

Russ Handicraft Wins Popularity in Paris

MOSCOW, Oct. 22.—(Tass.)—Mr. I. I. Potapov, the agent of the celebrated handicraft organizations of Sergiev in the province of Moscow, has returned from Paris, where he was in charge of the Russian handicraft section at the Paris exhibtiion of decoration arts. Mr. Potapov reported with satisfaction on the success of the Russian exhibits. Millions of visitors showed interest in the new products of Russian peasant handicraft displaying the new, Soviet life. There were large sales, and big orders were booked on these products.

CHICAGO POSTAL CLERKS DRIVEN LIKE PRISONERS

Government Gives No Cause for Patriotism

By CARL HAESSLER,
(Federated Press Service.)

Conditions in the prison shirt and pants shops exposed by Kate Richards O'Hare can be little worse in some respects than those prevailing in the mailing division of the Chicago postoffice. Other large cities are probably equal offenders, under the pressure of President Coolidge's economy administration.

Postal clerks speeded up beyond endurance in vile rooms under intolerable discipline may sometimes envy prisoners who at least cannot be dismissed when they fail to satisfy their exacting task masters.

Keep Tab on Toilet.

The Chicago mailing division, where all of Chicago's outgoing mail and some inbound mail is handled, approaches the old Prussian military severity in its discipline over the clerks working there. No clerk may leave his post even for a minute or two for any reason without special permission. An accurate detailed record is kept of the number of times he asks leave to go to the toilet or elsewhere.

After two months in the service clerks are regularly told, regardless of their output that they are not working efficiently enough. They are threatened with removal if they do not speed up in 60 days.

A host of efficiency experts, tabulators, inspectors, statisticians and foremen are dogging their heels, giving drastic demerits for any errors and sometimes depriving them in this way of their statutory $100 a year raise.

Snoopers Invade Homes.

The overcrowding of the large corps of workers into a badly ventilated room with insufficient air space forces the sickness rate high above normal. Heavy dirty mailbags are hurled into the room, raising a thick choking dust. Because of the many men and women suffering in consequence from colds and throat troubles the postoffice maintains another small army of inspectors to visit homes and make sure that the sick leaves are not fraudulent.

As usual, the postoffice instead of removing the cause of the trouble, piles on more inspectors to cope with the results. Negroes and Filipinos, discriminated against in other employments, will soon begin to outnumber the whites who cannot stand the strain in the mailing division and are dissatisfied with the low pay.

Chicago postal clerks are organized in Local 1, National Federation of Postoffice Clerks.

Make Progress in Face of Persecution

take a note of the names of the interrupters.

Every trade union drew up a "red list" containing the names of Communist disturbers of peace, and took care that these lists came into the hands of the Horthy police.

What was it caused the Hungarian social democratic party to expose itself to an extent unexampled even in Hungary? Why did the Horthy social democrats, even at the risk of exposing themselves in the eyes of the very small upper section of the labor aristocracy, carry out shameful and criminal denunciations?

The situation in Hungary has brought about a crisis such as has never been experienced before in the economic life of the country. Unemployment, the misery of the masses, discontent and desperation are growing from day to day. Neither the social democratic party leaders nor the trade union bureaucracy consider it necessary even to pretend to do anything in the interest of the working class. They declared quite openly that the present time is not suitable for even the smallest struggles. The trade union bureaucracy supported strike breakers against the fighting workers, and, in spite of the enormous profits of the employers, have acquiesced in wages being reduced month by month. The discontent of the working class against the lackeys of the bourgeoisie increased. Hundreds and hundreds tore up their party membership cards and thousands withdrew from the trade unions, in spite of the efforts of the revolutionary trade union opposition to prevent this.

There was a movement going on in Hungary which was bound to cause the creatures of Horthy to fear that the ground would give way under their feet. They also realized that this movement would obtain a lead from the growing Communist Party of Hungary, which is providing the movement with proper aims and giving it a definite direction.

About three months ago the congress of the Tailors' Union adopted by an overwhelming majority a resolution welcoming the alliance between the English and Russian trade unions, and calling upon the workers to fight for revolutionary trade union unity. After the Marseilles congress of the II International the Budapest Shoemakers' organization held a meeting which was attended by 2,000 members, and which in a most impressive manner demonstrated in favor of revolutionary trade union unity. The meeting expressed its disapproval of the counter-revolutionary attitude of the trade union council, and instructed the delegates of the Leather Workers' Union to vote at the international congress of the leather-workers in Paris for the admission of the Russian trade unions.

The Hungarian social democracy, which not only has a decisive influence in the trade unions, but is organizatorily connected with them, felt that all this meant the beginning of the end. They decided, as the trade union papers announced, to take "determined action." This "determined action" has now been carried out. Within the last few days the executive committee of the Shoemakers' Union has been dissolved and all prominent revolutionary members expelled, while the trade union council has arbitrarily set up a commission to take the place of the dissolved executive.

But this was not all. All the spies and detectives were set to work. The trade union bureaucracy and the social democracy worked quite openly hand in hand with the Horthy police. It has now come to light from official reports that the trade unions and social democrats employed dozens of people, who not only worked in the Hungarian socialist labor party, but who also managed to smuggle into the ranks of the Communists as spies.

In this manner they succeeded in getting on the track of our Comrade Rakosi, who led the Communist movement in Hungary, and in having him, as well as over a hundred other comrades, arrested. By means of fearful tortures the police succeeded in extorting "confessions" from some comrades. And by means of lying fabrications bourgeois society in Hungary was "rescued."

The "Nepszava, the organ of the Hungarian social democratic party, was overjoyed. It declared that the social democracy could itself have settled with the Communists, but every line betrayed its satisfaction. Its joy, however, was somewhat premature. Comrade Rakosi behaved heroically before the police. The police did not succeed, even by means of the most fearful tortures, in extracting a "confession" from him. He admitted that he had come to Hungary in order to carry on Communist propaganda and to organize a strong Communist Party. To this work he had devoted his life, and because he knew that he had contributed something to this work he considered that he had not lived in vain. In the face of his torturers he delivered an impassioned speech against capitalism and against the Horthy regime in a tone which even won the respect of the jailers.

The replies given by Rakosi to his questioners had such an effect that even the newspapers of the "race protectors" (fascists) reported his statements, which at once brought about a complete change in the pogrom mood. Only the Nepszava kept silence regarding them.

But this will not help the heroes of the pact with Horthy, the allies of the hangmen. The attitude of Comrade Rakosi has called forth a fighting mood among the working masses in Hungary, so that the social democracy and the Hungarian bourgeoisie will soon realize to their cost what a real Communist means even in prison. By his heroic bearing Comrade Rakosi had not only made a deep impression upon the working masses, but has rendered an indisputable service to Communism.

The working masses perceive not only the act of devotion, but also the direction in which they have to fight.

As a result the Hungarian revolutionary labor movement is entering on a new phase. The glorious memory of the Hungarian proletarian dictatorship is again revived, not only among the masses of the industrial proletariat, but also among the poor peasants, and this means an indestructable gain for the Communist Party. The road and the direction have now been indicated, not only by words but also by self-sacrificing acts, and this means a serious step forward for the victorious revolution.

Finn Head Refuses Visas to Workers' Mission to Russia

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 22.—The governor of the Finnish province of Hjuland has refused visas to the Finnish trade union delegation to the Soviet Union. The delegation has been ready to go to Russia for a month now, but it is hindered and sabotaged in every possible way by the Finnish authorities.

The delegation will protest to the ministry of the interior against the action of the governor.

The newspaper, Social Democrat, is carrying on a campaign against the journey of the trade union delegation to Soviet Russia but fears that the prohibition of the governor will be used for agitation purposes.

Journalist Impressed by U.S.S.R. Efficiency

MOSCOW, Oct. 22.—(By Tass.)—Mr. Victor Morleau, the very well-known French journalist who visited Nijny Novgorod fair lately, said to a Tass correspondent:

"I have found that all rumors spread abroad about Nijny Novgorod fair not being properly organized were void of any foundation. The fair was in a brilliant condition. I was delegated here by the National French Export Union in order to establish trade relations between French industry and U. S. S. R. I came to the conclusion that French industry could make very successful business in the Nijny Novgorod fair."

Negro Star Gets Good Hand.

NEW YORK—Paul Robeson, Negro star actor, touring England in the Emperor Jones of Eugene O'Neill, gets a hand from the London Daily Herald, organized labor's paper, saying: "And that Mr. Paul Robeson is an exceptionally powerful actor there is not the slightest doubt. His performance was tremendous."

Horthy Police Fail to Get "Confession"

our cause and I have devoted my whole life to the service of this cause. Nothing interests me which is not connected with this cause."

This answer of Rakosi surprised even the deputy police president. It had to be admitted that he had not spoken out of a lack of human feeling, but out of a fanatical love for his life's aim, which completely dominated his mind and thoughts.

"After all that has passed were you not afraid of returning to Hungary?" asked Hetenyi. "To mention nothing else you must have realised that there would be a warrant for your arrest on the charge of various serious crimes, ranging from high treason and murder to interference with personal freedom?"

Rakosi replied calmly and resignedly:

"I was quite clear about everything when I declared my readiness to fulfil my mission. I realized at the outset that, in the event of a failure, I had to reckon with consequences which would threaten my life. I also knew that I should not be sent back to the Soviet Union as an exchanged prisoner but I did not let this interfere with my decision. I much rather relied upon the Budapest police not being able to find me. As a matter of fact, this is not the first time I have been in Hungary since the overthrow of the Soviet republic. I have already been here five times; twice I was in Budapest, it is true only for a short time, and on the other occasions I was in the provinces. On the occasion of my first visit I felt sure that I should be able to return to Russia as an exchange prisoner. But I now believe that there will not be anybody for whom I could be exchanged. Without wishing to flatter you—I do not desire to create the impression that I wished threby to improve my position—I must declare that I did not think that the Budapest police had progressed so much in the last few years. At the most I feel certain stings of conscience that I have not worked better and more cautiously; and now I can say that I regret that I did not commence my work earlier as I have been arrested so soon."

After these declarations of Rakosi the court proceeded to deal with the actual matters in question. Rakosi declared that he was not prepared to submit any confession. He also refused all information. At the most he was only prepared to make some remarks regarding the evidence collected up to now by the police, if it was submitted to him.

When it came to questions as to the principles of Communism, Rakosi was quite willing to answer, in fact it even came to a social-political debate between him and the police officer. As he said, he was prepared to place his ideas in the necessary light. He declared as follows:

"The object of my journey was to set going Bolshevist propaganda and organization."

To the question what share he, that is to say the Communist Party, had in founding the Vagi Party, he made the following answer:

"The part played by the Communist Party in the formation of the Vagi Party was, that a section of the Communist Party allied themselves with the members from the social democracy and endeavored to influence the working class in a revolutionary direction. At that time I was, as a matter of fact, in Moscow; this may have happened just about April."

The official 8 Oraiujsag (Eight O'clock News) describes the cross-examination as follows:

"Rakosi's imprisonment seemed to have pulled him down considerably. His eyes were sunken and his face was pale when he entered the room of the deputy police president.

When Rakosi was asked with whom he had frequented when in Vienna, and who of these people were at present in the hands of the Budapest police, Rakosi did not reply at once, but declared after shortly considering the matter: "Pardon me, but I cannot remember anything more, but even if I could remember anything, I should not be prepared to betray my comrades to the police. . . ."

It was in vain that the deputy president addressed further questions to the former people's commissar regarding the names of those Communists with whom he was connected; Rakosi firmly stood by his refusal to give information and did not recognize anybody with whom he was confronted. Finally, when he was weary of the long cross-examination, he declared in a somewhat irritated tone:

"You can keep questioning me as long as you like. I can only say that I was quite clear regarding everything when I declared my readiness to carry out my mission. I also know that the Hungarian authorities will condemn me according to martial law, and that perhaps I shall not even escape the death penalty. But under no circumstances will I deliver my friends to any police in the world..... You sit now, gentlemen, and enjoy yourselves as if you were in a box at the theater, because you have in your hands a people's commissar of the Soviet republic, but I repeat, you are making a tremendous mistake if you believe that I will make any declarations to you which could facilitate the examination. You can do what you like with me: you can even hang me, gentlemen, but you will not get me to say anything."

This emphatic declaration of Rakosi was disregarded by the police officers and they asked him other questions. They wanted especially to get out of him what was the actual object of his journey to Budapest.

"The propagation of Bolshevist ideas and to set going the work of organization," replied the former people's commissar, "the work of organizing and of recruiting I took on myself." From his emphasis upon the word "I" it is to be seen that he wishes to take the whole responsibility for the organizing of the Communists upon himself.

FORD WORKER TELLS MATES HOW TO WORK

Only a Nucleus Can Beat Flivver King

(Worker Correspondent.)

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Oct. 22.—I have read an account in The DAILY WORKER of a shop nucleus in action in the Ford Detroit plant. As I am working in the Kearney plant, I can appreciate the difficulties experienced by a small number of comrades attempting to function.

What suprises me is that they have not been ferreted out on account of the large distribution of DAILY WORKERS. Every Ford plant has a private police system of guards, which report all occurences out of the ordinary, uses provocative methods and certain susceptible individuals as stool pigeons.

They are very careful in getting a worker just right as an account is sent to Detroit regarding every discharge. Petty officials are kept just as shaky regarding their jobs as the ordinary worker. This is a deliberate policy on the part of the company to keep every one on tip toe doing their "best" and more then their best with the threatening whip of discharge snapping all the time.

I have noticed during the war and after the armistice there was a certain independent spirit amongst the men in the department of the final assembly, who would not stand for abuse or too much overtime.

This, remarkable to say, was tolerated by the company and the best results were obtained by men who performed important operations which were key positions on the conveyor along which the cars were assembled.

These men would act together and in this way controlled production. The foreman and the superintendent were afraid to discharge them for fear of falling down on the production demanded by home office at Detroit.

Ford "Efficiency."

But when the labor market was being oversupplied by returned soldiers, they sent an "efficiency man" from Detroit, who went thru every department and discharged twenty and thirty men at a clip.

Taking this as a cue, I suggest that members and sympathisers should work themselves into key positions which can be done as those jobs are generally hard and taxing and are not desirable, but this can be overcome by acquiring skill. As the foreman will, when he finds a worker not pliable or undesirable, attempt to replace him with another. Don't teach anyone but comrades tricks of the trade.

The nucleus is the only way to secure some power and control in the Ford organization.

Now Comes the Italian Mission

Count Volpi, the Italian finance minister, and his entourage are on the high seas bound for America with the hope of settling their national debt to the United States. The use of the term "settlement of the debt" in this case, as in the case of the other nations sending missions to these shores, is ambiguous. What they really seek is some means of assuring the United States that they can adjust their internal economic condition so that loans may be granted them.

Italy, like France and the other debtor nations, needs loans. It dare not embark upon the perilous road of over-inflation of currency. In that direction lies disaster. Only thru securing loans can she hope to maintain a stable currency.

The United States is the sole source of loans in the world today. And while controlling the major portion of the world's gold supply, this country cannot transcend economic law. This enormous supply of gold cannot remain fallow. It must be used or the economy of the nation will stifle under its weight.

It was not because of any disinterested concern for the welfare of Europe that the government at Washington last May sent a note to all nations whose debts are not settled, demanding that they send delegations here for the purpose of making satisfactory arrangements to handle the debt. This note, containing belligrent implications, had the effect of shaking the already tottering currency of both Italy and France. It was precisely the result desired by Wall Street.

France came, the debt question was discussed. The French finance minister, Caillaux, with all his much vaunted wizardry had to face the alternative of accepting humilating terms that would place his government under the complete financial hegemony of the United States, and face personal political eclipse at home, or procrastinate with the hope of getting better terms. His failure caused the decline in the franc on the exchanges of the world. Now, in spite of his efforts, he faces a critical political situation. He is confronted with the imperative necessity of raising internal revenue sufficient to uphold the franc until he can again come to the United States with new proposals. His efforts in this direction may drive him from office. The right parties in France assail him for his proposal to raise taxes, while the left radical socialists denounce him for refusing to advocate a capital levy. When the next French mission arrives, Caillaux will probably have been retired to private life. Meanwhile the currency crises will become acute and an American fact finding commission will leave for France to take an invoice of the country preparatory to a Dawes plan for that nation.

Italy is in the same fix. Count Volpi will discover that Mussolini's plan to evade falling under the domination of America imperialism by insisting that Italy pay no more annually to the United States than she receives in reparation from Germany will not work. If American imperialism could be satisfied with such an arrangement it would be much simpler for all the allied nations to turn over their reparations claims to the United States and make her a collection agency for the world.

It is not merely collecting debts that concerns the United States, but means of disposing of the enormous gold influx. Just as the debtor nations must have money, so this country must dispose of money—not charitably, but profitably. She will be able to do that after she has bankrupted the debtor nations, just as one powerful group of private capitalists bankrupt others preparatory to gobbling them up. As we have said before, the native bourgeoisie of the debtor countries will resist this development for a time. Then, after the heads of a few political puppets have fallen, the native capitalists submit, and become faithful vassals of American imperialism, exploiting the working class for the glory of Morgan, and in return receiving a portion of the loot for acting as slave drivers and policemen.

It will be the working class that will bear the burden. The one alternative to a Dawes plan for France and Italy is the revolution. By rising and overthrowing their own capitalist class they will at the same time strike a blow at the imperialists of the United States.

American Destroyers in Egyptian Waters

Americans who believe in the legend that the government is a peace-loving, high-minded institution, the carrier of democracy and light to the world, have of late received some rude jolts.

Following the naval invasion of China, the shooting of workers in the trade halls of Panama City, we now have the spectacle of American destroyers "of the Asiatic squadron" traversing the Mediterranean Sea from Gibraltar to Damascus to aid the French in their colonial war against the Arabs in Syria.

This aid to the monsters of French imperialism who, within the week, have executed 700 Arabs, is concealed under the contemptible excuse that Americans and their property must be protected. Protected from what? The Arabs? Heaps of corpses, victims of French gallows and firing squads, brand the excuse of the American state department an infamous lie.

American destroyers are aiding the imperialist nations of Europe because this government is financially interested in those nations. Their power rests, in an enormous degree, upon their colonies. The destroyers are in the port of Alexandria to aid the French suppress their colonials, because a successful revolt in the colonies will cripple France and endanger the investments of the House of Morgan.

The American workers should as one man demand that the United States government keep its hands off Syria and every other nation where suppressed people are striving to overthrow a hideous and debasing thralldom.

The fiery cross of that moron aggregation, the ku klux klan is to flame forth from the highest tower in Chicago. That particular branch of protestantism founded by the maniac, John Wesley, known as the methodist episcopal church, has erected an office building 565 feet high on which it will place an illuminated cross which can be seen a distance of 15 miles. The reports do not state whether lighting rods are to be placed upon it to guard against an accidental thunderbolt that Jehovah might swing in that direction.

A number of socialists have received endorsements by the capitalist non-partisan political organization in New York known as the Citizen's Union. Is that not equivalent to being endorsed by capitalism?

The Industrialization of America -

By Earl R. Browder

While it is well-known that the United States has been undergoing a profound transformation for the past several generations, from an agricultural country to the position of foremost industrial and financial power in the world, yet the tremendously high speed with which this transformation has been proceeding is hardly realized. Study of statistics up to 1920, with allowance made for the geometrical increase in the years since that time, will bring a realization that the period 1920-1930 in the U. S. will mark a profound revolution, the world-results of which are hard to imagine.

Growth of Industrial Proletariat.

Following is a table of the number of wage-workers engaged in manufacturing and mechanical industries from 1849 to 1919:

Year	Number of Wage Workers
1849	957,059	Including hand and neighborhood industries.
1859	1,311,246
1869	2,053,996
1879	2,732,595
1889	4,251,535
1899	5,306,143
1904	5,468,383	Factories only.
1909	6,615,046
1914	7,036,247
1919	9,096,372
1921	6,946,570
1923	8,763,233

In the course of 70 years, the number of wage workers in industry was multiplied almost ten times. In the last five year period alone, the number increased by more than the total of the post-civil-war years. The increases in total population for the same period was from 23,191,876 to 105,710,620, a multiplication of less than five times.

Growth of Capital.

Capital of manufacturing establishments grew, during this period, at an astounding rate. A comparison of the census of capital for each census period is very instructive:

Year	Capital (In millions of dollars)
1849	$ 533
1859	1,009
1869	1,694
1879	2,790
1889	6,525
1899	9,813
1904	12,675
1909	18,428
1914	22,790
1919	44,466

Comment seems hardly necessary to emphasize this terrific growth. The capital of industry in the middle of the 19th century is multiplied by more than 80 times in the course of 70 years.

Production of Surplus Value.

Surplus values produced in the same period show the same phenomenal increases and reveal the dynamic center of the whole process which has produced the giant system of American industry.

Year	Wages	Values Added by Manufacture	Surplus Value
	(In thousands of dollars—000 omitted)
1849	236,755	463,982	227,227
1859	378,878	854,256	475,378
1869	620,467	1,395,118	774,651
1879	947,953	1,972,755	1,024,802
1889	1,891,219	4,210,364	2,319,145
1899	2,320,938	5,656,521	3,335,583
1904	2,610,444	6,293,694	3,683,250
1909	3,427,037	8,529,260	5,102,223
1914	4,078,332	9,878,345	5,800,013
1919	10,533,400	25,041,698	14,508,298
1921	8,200,324	18,316,666	10,116,342
1923	10,985,895	25,853,151	14,867,256

It would take almost 70 years like that of 1849 to produce as much surplus value as that of the single year of 1919 or of 1923. Of course some allowance must be made for the higher prices of the later years, but this is a very small factor indeed compared with the rate of increase of surplus values.

Production and Rate of Exploitation.

Extremely interesting also is the course of wages and production per worker, and the rate of exploitation which is shown in the ratio between these items. It is as follows:

Year	Average Annual Wage per Worker	Average Annual Product per Worker	Rate of Surplus Value
1849	$ 247.00	$ 485.00	96 Pct.
1859	288.00	651.00	126 "
1869	302.00	680.00	125 "
1879	348.00	722.00	107 "
1889	445.00	990.00	100 "
1899	437.00	1066.00	144 "
1904	477.00	1151.00	141 "
1909	518.00	1289.00	148 "
1914	579.00	1404.00	142 "
1919	1162.00	2750.00	136 "
1921	1180.00	2637.00	123 "
1923	1253.00	2950.00	136 "

It is unfortunate that the crucial years of the world war are not included in the census. The biennial census of manufactures was established only after the war. There can hardly fail to be a profound connection between the Spanish-American war of 1898, and the jump of the rate of surplus value from an even 100% in 1889 to 144% in 1899. This connection is in the nature of both cause and affect. The pressure of accumulating surplus values was the force that carried the U. S. into its first venture in world-imperialism, and the resulting war stimulated industry and the process of exploitation.

Growth in Size of Factories.

Comprehensive statistics on size groups of manufacturing establishments is very meagre. What there is available is only for the years 1909, 1914, and 1919. This is sufficient, however, to show the trend of development.

Classification by number of wage-workers per establishment is available only for the year 1919. This shows the following:

Establishments Employing—	Number of Establishments	Percent of Total	Number of Workers	Percent of Total
None	37,934	12.4
1 to 5 workers	141,742	48.8	311,576	3.4
6 to 20 workers	56,208	19.4	631,290	6.9
21 to 50 workers	25,379	8.7	829,301	9.1
51 to 100 workers	12,405	4.2	888,344	9.7
101 to 250 workers	10,068	3.4	1,581,763	17.4
251 to 500 workers	3,599	1.2	1,250,875	13.7
501 to 1000 workers	1,749	.6	1,205,627	13.2
Over 1000 workers	1,021	.3	2,397,596	26.3

More than one-fourth of all the workers are employed in factories of more than 1000 workers. Over 70% of all workers are in factories which employ more than 100 workers. Some 16,000 establishments concentrate within themselves the overwhelming bulk of manufacture.

Still more illuminating are the comparative figures of three periods, of establishments grouped according to value of product per year:

Producing	Number of Establishments 1919	1914	1909	Number of Wage Earners 1919	1914	1909
Less than $5,000	65,485	97,060	93,349	45,813	129,623	142,430
$5,000 to $20,000	87,440	87,931	86,988	249,722	429,037	470,006
$20,000 to $100,000	77,911	56,814	57,270	793,528	999,510	1,090,449
$100,000 to $500,000	39,647	25,847	27,824	1,719,982	3,002,071	2,896,532
$500,000 to $1,000,000	9,208	4,320		1,114,615
$1,000,000 and over	10,414	3,819	3,060	5,172,712	2,476,206	2,015,629
Total	290,105	275,791	268,491	9,096,372	7,036,247	6,615,046

The full significance of the above figures may not be apparent at first glance. A little analysis will make it clearer. The largest plants, in 1909, employed 305 out of every 1000 workers; in 1914, this had risen to 352 out of every 1000; in 1919, it had increased to 569 out of every 1000. On the other hand the smaller establishments all sharply decreased in relative importance; all plants producing less than $100,000 per year employed, in 1909, 258 out of every 1000; in 1914 only 221; in 1919 only 119. A study of this table reveals many more such interesting and instructive sidelights on the growth of large-scale production.

Within the same 10 year period we find that the group of large plants (million dollars and over per year) increased its proportion of all values produced from 43.8% to 67.8%; of the total values added in manufacture, it increased its proportion from 35.7% to 62.3%.

All of this great swing of the control of production to the great monopoly and semi-monopoly organizations, the trusts, syndicates, combines etc., was not brought about by the world war. The same process was clearly and rapidly going on in the entire 60 years since the Civil War. But the World War did tremendously accelerate the process, and caused a leap forward in a few years that would otherwise have required two decades or more.

Changing Composition of Population.

A comparison of the ratio of various occupations to the total population, in 1870 and 1920, has been made by the National Industrial Conference Board. Some of the facts brought out by this study are:

	Number per Million Population 1920	1870	Rate of Increase or Decrease
Workers in manufacturing	121,265	65,148	+86 Pct.
Farmers and planters	57,550	77,320	—25 "
Farm laborers*	27,544	74,848	—63 "
Railroad workers	12,818	3,995	+220 "
Sailors and deckhands	519	1,470	—65 "
Domestic servants	16,285	25,337	—36 "
Barbers and manicurists	2,045	621	+229 "
Office employes	26,691	1,926	+1286 "

* This figure exaggerates the actual decline of farm laborers because the 1920 census was taken in mid-winter, whereas previous enumerations were in the summer.

It is particularly in the spectacular increase of 1,286% in the clerical occupations that there is reflected the rise of great industry. A basic technical requirement for large-scale production is the establishment of complete and scientific methods of accounting and statistics. This feature is fundamental to ALL control of large-scale industry, not only to capitalist control, as Lenin well knew when he insisted so strongly in the earliest days of the Russian revolution upon the necessity of accounting and control, and as the experience of Russian industry has amply proved since that time.

The decrease in proportion of seafarers is a reflection of a now-passing phase of American development—the period of the conquest of the continent, when American energies were turned inward. The new position of the U. S. as dominant power in world imperialism is already beginning to change this, with the U. S. emerging as a challenger of British supremacy of the seas. But the modern ocean giants of steel and steam require relatively such smaller numbers of workers, that the seafarers will probably never be proportionally so many as they were in the early days of America.

Railroad workers, in the increased proportion amounting to 220%, reflect the growing importance of transportation as production becomes more integrated, more national (and even international) in its scope.

Summary.

From all of the foregoing, one point of supreme importance emerges: The forces of capitalism are hammering out, in the United States, the largest, the most strategically placed, and potentially most powerful proletariat in the world. The task of the revolutionary movement is to make this class conscious of itself, of its power, and of its historic mission to take over the control and direction of society.

10,000 French Casualties in the Riff

PARIS, Oct. 22.—The French war losses in Morocco up to Oct. 15 were 2,176 French soldeirs killed, including officers and men, and 8,297 wounded, Premier Painleve announced this evening. These figures include both native and French expeditionary troops.

Premier Painleve stated that the Moroccan war has now cost 950,000,000 paper francs.

Workers! Your Interests Demand Unity!

By CHAS. KRUMBEIN,
Workers (Communist) Party Candidate for President of Board of Alderman.

WORKERS of New York City you are again confronted with a municipal election. Those asking for your support represent either the bosses or the workers. The parties of big business, democratic or republican, representing the class interests of the bosses present you with a lot of phoney issues for the purpose of beclouding the real issues. The socialist party, claiming to represent you, refuses to fight for your most elementary needs. They would not even agree to a united labor ticket in this election which would unite labors' forces to offset the united power of the capitalists. The most outstanding need in the struggles of the workers at the present time is unity of action.

The best argument for the need of unity on the part of the workers is to point out how the bosses maintain power through their consolidations and how on the other hand the defeats of labor are due to its lack of unity. Big business is united in its manifacturers', employers', etc. organizations. Whenever they have a struggle on their hands with the workers they show this unity because the recognize their class interests. Let us use an illustration: the big railroad strike of 1922. Two large trunk lines, the New York Central and the Pennsylvania running from New York City to Chicago had a large number of their workers on strike. Both are continuously competing for business. One would think that one of them would come to an agreement with the striking workers, and the through resuming maximum operations take most of the business away from its competitor. But this was not done because they know that their interests differ from those of the workers and that they must act unitedly to defeat the workers, which they did. The unity of the railroad owners with the assistance of the government was responsible for the defeat of the workers. The government, be it national, state or city, being part of the capitalist system, comes to the aid of the bosses as was so clearly shown during the above mentioned railroad strike. Injunctions were issued and the armed forces of the government were used against the strikers. On the other hand the workers were split. Only part of the railroad workers, that is certain crafts, went out on strike while the rest remained at work.

THE above lesson should be enough to teach the workers that they must amalgamate their craft unions into powerful industrial unions and build a labor party so that they can fight more effectively on all fronts. A labor party for New York City would have been considerably furthered through a united labor ticket for this election. The socialist party and its henchmen in the unions are responsible for the disunity of the workers in this campaign. They refused to consider the proposal of the Workers (Communist) Party for a united labor ticket for this election.

If the organized workers and their sympathizers of New York City had a labor party to wage their fight on the political field they would be able to make themselves felt. Even if at present they were not successful in carrying the elections by a large vote for their class demands it would be considered as a protest that would get them more material gains than the class collaboration policy of the labor fakers of "rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies" would ever get them. Furthermore, labor, united politically could carry on a fight at all times for their interests. As for instance, if an injunction is issued, or the police are being used against strikers a real fight could be made be it election time or not.

Nothing is gained without a struggle. This was recently shown in New York City where tens of thousands of the members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union carried on a splendid fight which finally culminated in a victory for them and for trade union unity.

Supporting the Workers (Communist) Party ticket in the coming elections means to take the first step in uniting the workers thru amalgamation on the economic field and a labor party on the political field. The Communists and their sympathizers are the only ones, as has been shown in the past, that will make a militant fight for these elementary needs of the workers.

AS these arguments apply locally so do they apply nationally and internationally. Everything possible should be done by the American workers to bring to this country the spirit and the determination for world trade union unity which has received such a good start by the 11,000,000 workers of England and Russia thru their world trade union unity conference.

The workers in uniting and fighting for their most pressing needs will learn to fight for their complete emancipation from capitalism which is the cause of all their troubles. This must and will be done when the workers, united for action, will replace the capitalist system with a workers' and farmers' government.

Support the Workers (Communist) Party as the leader in your struggles for your immediate demands and as the leader for the final struggle for the solution of all your troubles thru supplanting the capitalist regime with a workers' and poor farmers' government.

Remember it is better to vote for what you want and not get it, rather than to vote for what you do not want and get it.

Agricultural News from Soviet Russia

Agricultural Machines and Implements for 1925-26.

MOSCOW, Oct. 22.—According to the department of internal commerce the U. S. S. R. will require in 1925-26 agricultural machines and implements valued at 120,000,000 rubles.

The English-Russian concern "Arcos" is commencing to erect dairy factories in Siberia. By the spring of 1926, 22 factories will have been built All of them will be equipped with up-to-date machinery.

* * *

New Agricultural Experiment Fields and Stations.

The following number of stations will be established in the coming agricultural year of 1925-26:

Four hundred and fifty experimental and 1,200 exhibition stations for flax and hemp; 250 fields and 675 stations for potatoes; 80 fields and 205 stations for sugar beets; 150 fields and 390 stations for oil-making plants; 135 fields and 390 stations for medical herbs; and six plantations for tobacco.

25,000,000 Rubles for Agricultural Machinery for the Central Region of the R. S. F. S. R.

The All-Russian executive committee of the people's commissariat of the R. S. F. S. R. has allotted 25,000,000 rubles to improve agricultural methods applied in the central region of the R. S. F. S. R. This money will be spent exclusively for agricultural machinery and development in this region of husbandry.

PHILADELPHIA WORKERS WILL PROTEST AGAINST RAKOSI MURDER SUNDAY

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 22.—Philadelphia Workers (Communist) Party will hold a protest mass meeting and demonstration on Sunday, Oct. 25, at 8 p. m. at the Mercantile Hall, 849 N. Franklin St., to demand the immediate reepal of the death sentence against our Comrade Mathias Rakosi by the murderous Horthy Hungarian government. The speakers to address the meeting will be Norman Tallentire, Alex Bail, Rudolph Baker and Eber.

Szechenyi White Guard Minister in U. S., Fears Publicity

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 22.—Count Laszlo Szechenyi, minister from Hungary, has received from the International Labor Defense in Chicago, a protest against the persecution of left wing socialists and the arrest and threatened execution of Rakosi, a former commissar under the Bela Kun government of 1919.

Clarence Darrow, Upton Sinclair, and leaders in the American Civil Liberties Union and other liberals thruout the United States are bombarding Szchenyi with telegrams to the same effect. They ask that the minister to Washington notify the dictator Horthy in Budapest that American liberals demand that the terror against Hungarian liberals shall cease, in the name of humanity.

Szechenyi is a white guard, and fully sympathetic with Horthy's methods. That is why he was sent to Washington. What he fears is not the telegrams that may be sent him, but what may be published here. He also fears the International Labor Defense will start picketing his office, as was the case with the Polish legation when Lanzutsky was threatened with death last spring.

To Popularize Classics.

MOSCOW, Oct. 22.—A special conference was held at the State Publishing House under the chairmanship of Mr. Lunatcharsky, the people's commissary of education, to work out plans for the publication of popular editions of classics of Russian and foreign literature.

There are to be published about 100 volumes in 1295-26. The Russian classics will include Andreyev, Veresayev, Gorky, Gogol, Morelenko, Leskov, Mamin-Sibiryak, Nekrasov, Reshatnikov, Saltykov, M. Trotsky and Nepansky. Among the foreign classics will be Byron, Beranger, Heine, Shalley and Aeschylus.

Independent Workmen's Circle of Buffalo, N.Y. for Rakosi Freedom

BUFFALO, Oct. 22.— At a mass meeting arranged by the Independent Workmen's Circle branches of Buffalo, Friday, Oct. 16, in the Labor Lyceum, a resolution demanding the release of the more than one hundred Hungarian working class fighters was adopted.

Comrade Nathan Bass spoke in the name of the International Labor Defense, telling about the Horthy terror government and its policy of extermination of all working class opposition.

At the conclusion of his speech the following resolution was unanimously adopted and telegraphed to Hungarian minister at Washington:

"Laszlo Szechnyi,
"Hungarian Embassy,
"Washington, D. C.,

"In mass meeting assembled under the auspices of the Independent Workmen Circle of Buffalo, we protest the imprisonment, torture and threatened execution of over 100 political prisoners including Mathias Rakosi, people's commissar in former Soviet government of Hungary.

"We demand no court martial, no executions, and immediate release of workers held by the Horthy regime.

"Signed: Dardick, Shalowitz, and Urman."

Bulgarian Toilers Get Stiff Sentences From Court-Martial

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 22. — The court-martial in Acushebouk recently concluded the case of an illegal Communist district organization. Four of the accused are sentenced to death and the rest to imprisonment from 8 to 15 years.

The Sofia court-martial judged the case of a group of students; one of the accused has been sentenced to death and 8 others to penal servitude for 10 years and more.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS TO ACT ON BALKAN WAR

CHINESE FASCISTS UNITED WITH IMPERIALISTS USE MURDERS AND JAILS AGAINST THE KUOMINTANG

By Li Ljui Chin.

(Correspondence from Peking.)

PEKING, Sept. 1.—(By Mail.)—We pointed out in our previous communications that fascism is seeking new forms of development in China, organizing terrorist acts against prominent revolutionaries, and inciting "attacks" of the "masses of people" against the revolutionary and labor movement.

The past week has shown that the fascists, not content with this, are seeking other "legal" methods of coming on to the political arena in China. In this connection a society for the "struggle against the reds" is being organized simultaneously in the South and in the North.

The British imperialist press gleefully communicates that to counterbalance the societies organized for struggling against imperialism and for conducting an anti-imperialist boycott, the "sound" elements in the country are beginning to raise their heads, and are courageously making a stand against the "real enemy" of China, against red Bolshevism.

British Organize Chinese Fascists.

One center for organizing these "societies" is in the stronghold of British domination in China in "his Britannic majesty's colony" Hong Kong, whole the other center is

ANTHRACITE MINERS HEAR COMMUNISTS

Mayor Breaks Up the Meeting with Police

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

SHENANDOAH, Pa., Oct. 23.—Two-hundred and fifty hard coal miners heard Norman H. Tallentire, district organizer of the Workers Party, and A. Zalpis, Lithuanian section organizer in the anthracite, demand a hundred per cent strike of the anthracite miners and a real fight to win the strike against the bosses.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Lituanian Literary Club which invited the miners of the neighborhood to come to the meeting to hear the issues of the strike presented from the standpoint of the progressive miners.

Capitalist Mayor Spies for Lewis

The meeting had scarcely opened when the mayor of Shenandoah appeared and warned the speakers that if anything was said "against the United Mine Workers of America," meaning the Lewis machine, that they would be run out of town.

Despite the warning, Comrade Zalpis spoke for an hour and a half on the issues of the strike, showing that the Lewis machine, by refusing to call out the maintenance men, refusing to mobilize all the miners for winning the strike. During Zalpis' speech, the mayor returned with about a dozen followers, consisting of state police, federal department of justice agents and local miners' spies.

Tallentire Urges Labor Party

Norman Tallentire was introduced to the meeting and urged the miners to fight for their full program and demand a general strike of all miners in support of their demands. He urged the need of a labor party as a means of ousting the agents of the mine bosses in control of the political power and to prevent them from using it against the miners.

During Tallentire's speech, one of the mine bosses' spies shouted, "How

DETROIT MEMBERSHIP MEETING SUNDAY TO HELP DAILY WORKER

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 23.— The Detroit district is planning a big drive to rally the workers to the rescue of the DAILY WORKER.

On Sunday, Oct. 25, a general membership meeting will be held at the House of the Masses to organize for the mobilization of all the workers possible to save the DAILY WORKER.

Every member must be present. This is the most important work that a comrade can do now for the party. The DAILY WORKER must be saved and the comrades of the Detroit district will do much more than their bit.

BRITISH RAIDS FOLLOW LABOR PARTY TREASON

Communists Foretold Present Attack

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Following the raids yesterday, in which four more Communists were seized by the police for "conspiring to print seditious matter," their hearing in Bow Street station this morning was enlivening by crowds of workers outside the small courtroom singing the Red Flag and the International.

Those arrested yesterday are J. T. Murphy, A. MacManus, R. Page Arnot and W. Hannington, all members of the executive committee of the Communist Party and all signers of the recent slashing attack on the treacherous leaders of the labor party for their blow at working class unity at the Liverpool convention.

This letter, printed on October 9, in the Workers' Weekly, the Communist organ, had the following to say, in part, about the Liverpool convention:

A Blow at Class Unity.

"The labor party conference was

The Way to End it Is to Grant Miners the Wage Increase

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—Immediate efforts to end the anthracite strike to prevent "untold misery and suffering" were urged upon President Coolidge, Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, by the Bronx county grand jury today. The jury has been investigating the [illegible] situation as it affects Bronx county.

COUNTESS KAROLYI CHARGES KELLOGG ACTED FOR HUNGARY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 23—"I harbor no ill feelings—it must be a mistake."

Countess Katinka Karolyi made this mild comment today on the action of the United States government in refusing her admittance.

The countess admitted that the refusal of a visa was a blow to her particularly to her financial position, as she has been forced to cancel her lecture tour in the United States.

The count and countess received the correspondent in their rooms in a modest Montparnasse boarding house and were quite ready to discuss the action of Secretary Kellogg.

"No reasons have been given for the refusal to grant me a visa," the countess said, "but I am sure that it was due to pressure from the Hungarian government. I feel certain that the state department appreciates my silence at the meetings last year when I might have pleaded my husband's cause, because I had their assurance when I left America on April 3 that they would allow me to return in October."

NEGRO LABOR MEET OPENS SUNDAY NIGHT

Many Delegates Arrive From South and East

Delegates are arriving from many of the large industrial centers of the south and east to attend the sessions of the American Negro Labor Congress which opens Sunday night, Oct. 25 with a grand celebration at the Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles Ave., corner East 31st St.

Delegates from the mining districts of West Virginia, the steel mills of Pennsylvania and the pottery works of Ohio have already arrived.

Telegrams from the union organizations in Louisiana, Texas and Florida have arrived notifying the congress arrangements committee that delegates are on the way.

All delegates to the congress are being registered at the American Negro Labor Congress headquarters, 3456 Indiana Ave. and then they are quartered in a nearby hotel.

"The workers and farmers of Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama are looking forward to the opening of the American Negro Labor Congress in Chicago as a new epoch in the life of the Negro in the South," declared Norval Allen, southern organizer for the American Negro Labor Congress, in an interview with the representative of The DAILY WORKER upon his arrival in Chicago. "The organized and unorganized workers and farmers of the South are sending delegates to this congress."

The sessions of the congress which will take place during the day will be open to the public and the representatives of all the newspapers. During the evening there will be large mass meetings at which speakers of the different races will talk on teh work before the Negro workers and farmers in America.

Bishop William Montgomery Brown, expelled by the house of bishops from the church for his labor views, has sent a telegram to the American Negro Labor Congress informing them he will be able to speak before the Tuesday evening mass meeting.

ITALY NOW HAS COLONIAL WAR IN SOMALILAND

Natives Rise Against Dictators

ROME, Oct. 23—The Italian fascist government is the third European power to be involved in a colonial war. France has her hands full in Syria and Morocco, Spain has all that she can handle in Morocco, and now Italy is being kept busy in Somaliland.

Italian troops have begun their advance on Obbia, where the natives have been preparing to throw off the iron heel that Italian fascist governors have had on their necks for a long time.

Gen. Di Vecchit, the Italian governor of Somaliland, has contemplated the possibilities of a military expedition a long time ago and the move of the infantry plus the bombarding of many of the coast towns by Italian battleships four of which are at Hatuned-Aluba is an attempt to crush the feeling of the natives for an independent Somaliland.

Very little news is forthcoming as to the progress of the battles as a strict military censorship prevails.

STRIKE BREAKING AID WITHDRAWN FROM CITY OF PANAMA YESTERDAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PANAMA, Oct. 23.—Now that General Lassiter, commanding the invading U. S. troops in Panama City have reported that "the saloons are open," Governor Burgess of the canal zone yesterday notified President Chiasi that the soldiers will leave Panama City at once. The decision followed a conference between Chiari, Lassiter and acting American Minister Munro.

WU PEI-FU GATHERING ARMIES AGAINST CHANG; PEKING COMPROMISES

SHANGHAI, Oct. 23—Wu Pie-fu, in arriving at Hankow, says the time has come to correct the "maladministration of the country by force and return to a legal basis." He adds that fourteen provinces have asked him to take the field against Chang-Tso-lin and that he hopes for the aid of Feng-Yu-hsiang. He warns the powers not to begin the tariff conferences, since its decisions might later be declared illegal.

The Peking government is trying to save itself and the imperialists with wholesale compromises and territorial division with the opposition, but the time for such is passed. Chang Chun-chang, commander of Shantung, has ordered mobilization of Fengtien troops to oppose the northward advance of the enemies of Peking and Chang Tso-lin.

GOVERNORS ASK REPEAL OF TAX ON RICH HEIRS

Congress May Probe New Scandal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Calvin Coolidge and his secretary of the treasury, Andrew D. Mellon, are exerting all their national political prestige in order to protect the spawn of the millionaires and billionaries of this country from paying heavy inheritance taxes.

Every available politician is being rushed to Washington in an effort to present an imposing array that will scare the ways and means committee into accepting the Coolidge-Mellon tax program.

Flocks of Governors.

A procession of state governors and their representatives filed by the ways and means committee, which is framing the new tax law, today and lent their support to the Coolidge-Mellon drive for abolition of federal inheritance taxes.

The magnitude and vigor of the drive for repeal of the death tax on big estates was distinctly surprising to the congressional framers of the new law—so much so, in fact, that several members of the committee suggested it might be well to "investigate" the interests behind it.

GARY SEES SILVER LININGS FOR U. S. IN CLOUDS OVER ENGLAND

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—"We are on the eve of great prosperity," declared Judge E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation and president of the American iron and steel institute, addressing that body at the convention here today.

Judge Gary referred to the many advantages this country enjoys and said that it had almost unlimited wealth and certainly unlimited prospects of wealth. There was no reason, he declared, why the steel industry in the United States should ever "be in the dumps."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Industry in Great Britain has reached a low ebb, according to cable reports, the European division of the department of commerce announced today.

Unemployment increased to 1,418,000 September 1, compared with 1,190,000 for the same date last year. Increased unemployment was noted in the coal mining, iron mining, tin plate, linen and wool textile industries. Only the building trades and some sections of cotton and machinery had improved slightly.

FRENCH RESPOND TO BULGARIA AS BRITISH INFLUENCE IS SEEN URGING AGGRESSION BY GREEKS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Oct. 23.—M. Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, and president of the council of the league of nations, has hurriedly called that body to meet Monday in this city and investigate the cause of the border warfare between Greece and Bulgaria.

French official opinion views the situation with alarm and no effort is made to conceal the fact that they consider the trouble in the Balkans as likely to flame into another European war.

France is not prepared for such a war. It is not thought that England, the backer of Greece, is desirous of a conflict. It is unquestionably the power of Britain behind Greece that has encouraged that nation to take such aggressive measures.

The French ruling class is sympathetic toward the Zankov terror that rules Bulgaria, because of heavy financial investments in this country.

LYNCHING WOMEN AND BURNING NEGROES A PRACTICE OF U. S. "CULTURE," WITH SOUTH LEADING

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Ninety women have been lynched in the United States since 1889, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People announces from its compilation of lynching statistics. Most of the women were colored women.

Except for one case in Nebraska, one in Wyoming and two in Missouri (only one of the Missouri women colored; three others white), all the cases are from southern states: Alabama, 9; Arkansas, 9; Florida, 3; Georgia, 8; Kentucky,5; Louisiana, 5; Mississippi, 16; North Carolina, 2; Oklahoma, 3; South Carolina, 6; Tennessee, 7; Texas, 11; Virginia and West Virginia, one each. A full list of names, dates and places is issued by the N. A. A. C. P. The last case occurred in 1923.

A folder entitled Burned Alive in Mississippi—Sunday Sept. 20, 1925, which reproduces the front page of the News Scimitar of Memphis, Tenn., showing the lynching of a Negro at Rocky Ford, Miss., in photos and giving first hand accounts is "submitted without comment to the President of the United States, the Congress, the American People" by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, New York City.

With the quotation "An Odor of Burning Flesh Reached my Nostrils" on the outside, the folder is an effective protest against lynch law in the United States.

PURCELL SPEAKS AT ST. LOUIS ON NOVEMBER FIFTH

Big Crowd of Unionists Is Expected

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 23—A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions and fraternal delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention will speak in St. Louis Nov. 5. He will speak at Sheldon Memorial Auditorium, 3648 Washington Blvd.

Purcell will arrive in St. Louis from Kansas City, where it is reported he is to speak Nov. 4, which will be his first speech of the tour.

A committee composed of delegates from a number of local unions is handling the local arrangements. Tickets are being sold to St. Louis trade union men and speakers are making union meetings, explaining the importance of Purcell's mission.

It is expected that the Sheldon Auditorium, which is one of the popular lecture halls of St. Louis, will be taxed to capacity to accommodate the crowd that will turn out, as most of the rank and file trade unionists are enthusiastic about Purcell's message.

Brother Chas. Blome, a prominent member of the Iron Molders' Union and president of the St. Louis Metal Trades Council, is secretary of the local arrangements committee.

Your neighbor will appreciate the favor—give him this copy of the DAILY WORKER.

"BOMB" HURLED AT SCABS ONLY WEAK LAXATIVE

Passerby Drops Bottle; Police Shoot Strikers

The much heralded acid bomb throwing on the part of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers pickets that have been stationed at the International Tailoring Co. plant on Jackson Blvd. for the past seventeen weeks, at the scabs belonging to the United Garment Workers union was nothing more than an ordinary bottle of magnesia accidentally dropped by a passer-by.

As the union business agents and a number of pickets were proceeding up Sangamon street, the cavalcade of 7 automobiles containing the United Garment Workers scabs passed. As the autos containing the scabs passed, a bottle of citrate of magnesia was accidentally dropped by a passerby who had purchased the bottle at one of the neighborhood drug-stores.

Shoot First, Look Later.

The police without waiting to investigate the cause or nature of the retort which the bottle made as it broke on the cement sidewalk, drew their guns and immediately began firing at the union business agents, pickets and passerby. The union members and passersby immediately began to scurry for shelter not realizing what the shooting was about. Some of the scabs jumped out of the automobiles and also began to run for shelter in the neighboring doorway.

In the shooting, Harry Bejnarowicz, business agent of Loc. 39, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was shot and the head of one of the scabs was undoubtedly struck by the "efficient" detectives and police that are guarding the "interests" of the International Tailoring Company.

Bejnarowicz was immediately arrested and later taken to the Bridewell hospital where the doctors found three bullets lodged in his body. Beulin Block, William Rocco, Mike Di Novi and Herbert Eisenhammer, business agents of the union were also arrested by the police for "bombing" the scabs. Casmice Bogalski, Harry Edelman and Sam Hartzen, three innocent passersby, who are neither on strike nor members of the union were seized by the police and held as participants in the "bombing", were taken to the Desplaines street police station and later released on $2,000 bail each furnished by the union.

After the shooting and arrests by the police an investigation disclosed that the "acid bomb" which was meant to maim and disfigure the scabs was nothing more than a bottle of citrate of magnesia, a laxative, purchased at a neighborhood drugstore.

The case against the arrested passerby and the union business agents which came up before the Desplains Street police court has been postponed until Dec. 3rd.

GREEK OCCUPATION OF BULGAR TERRITORY CONTINUES DESPITE ANNOUNCEMENT OF PEACE TERMS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 23.—Despite the pronunciamento by the Pangalos military dictatorship of Greece that all military movements against Bulgaria have ceased, since the Bulgarian representative at Athens has in behalf of the Zankov government promised to pay the 2,000,000 gold franc indemnity demanded for the killing of Greek soldiers near Demirhissar, occupation of Bulgarian territory continues.

The Sofia government has also agreed to make an apology for the raid in which Greek soldiers were killed by Bulgarian regulars.

Greece Refuses to Withdraw.

Greece still maintains its army in Bulgaria and insists she will keep her troops on Bulgarian soil until the final payment of the indemnity is made. She also demands that all Greek ports taken by Bulgarian troops be evacuated immediately.

Petrich in Flames

Information arriving from Petrich states that the Bulgarian town is in flames following the fierce bombardment by the Grecian artillery which has driven the Bulgars out of the town.

Jugoslav Troops Rush to Border

News arriving from Belgrade state that Jugoslav troops are being massed near the Bulgarian border. The Belgrade government will hold its troops in readiness to resist any attempt on the part of the Greek and Bulgar troops to fight out their battles on Jugoslav soil.

Casualties Unknown

All news as to the casualties in this Greco-Bulgar flareup is being strictly censored and it is impossible to estimate the number of lives lost to satiate the greed of the Pangalos and Zankov governments.

DEAD HAND OF LODGE SMITES DEAD WILSON

Stupid Book Shows Up Both Satesmen

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Woodrow Wilson had "only himself to blame" for the failure of the United States senate to ratify the treaty of Versailles and the league of nations covenant, according to the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge's version of the stirring events of 1919-20, published by Scribner's today, in the senator's book "The Senate and the League of Nations," which he completed only a month before his death.

Picturing the war president as a man consumed by personal ambition, and intolerant of any opinions other than his own, Senator Lodge's posthumous book foolishly declares that had Woodrow Wilson remained in Washington instead of going to Paris he would have changed the history of the world. But President Wilson, Lodge said, was intent more on the league than on the peace treaty, and he was intent upon the league because he believed he would head it.

"The key to all he did was that he thot of everything in terms of Wilson . . . The thot of self always overshadowed in the ultimate decision and effaced every other consideration."

Senator Lodge did not consider Woodrow Wilson an idealist, but thot himself an idealist. It is a dull book written by one old man calling another one names and has no historic or political value whatsoever.

Tammany Judge Denies Atheists the Right to Incorporate Society

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Incorporation of "The American Association for the Advancement of Atheism" was disapproved yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Mitchell, who ordered the petition held by the clerk of the court and not returned to Attorney Charles Smith, petitioner of record.

Mitchell, state supreme court justice, is a Roman catholic and a Tammanyite, who thinks that those who expose the fraud of religion should be silenced. Where is the so-called freedom of thought and speech guaranteed by the constitution? Now about separation of church and state?

Tammany judges never bother about a trifle of that sort, any more than capitalist judges in general bother constitutional provisions when it interferes with their business.

N, Y. CAMPAIGN TAKEN TO SHOPS IN NOON TALKS

Shoe and Cap Factory Workers Interested

NEW YORK CITY—Meetings at noon-hour in front of the shops are proving one of the most popular features of this campaign. Brownsville, Bronx and Lower New York are the principle districts in which this is being undertaken and especially in Brownsville, it is meeting with great success.

All of the Brownsville shoe factories elected delegates directly from the shops to the trade union ratification meeting held recently in Manhattan Lyceum.

Shoe Factories Take Poll

On Tuesday, Oct. 20, P. Cosgrove, organizer of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Protective Union, and Bert Wolfe, candidate for assembly in the district, spoke at the noon-hour before one of the largest shoe factories in Brownsville. After the meeting, a poll was taken of all those attending and Waterman, Walker and Thomas received no votes whatsoever.

Almost the entire audience signified their intention of voting the straight Communist ticket and writing in the name of Benjamin Gitlow for mayor. Those who did not so signify their intention, when questioned explained that they were not citizens and therefore had no vote. Thus, the vote was in reality unanimous.

Capmakers' Noon-Hour Meeting

On Wednesday, Oct. 21, a successful noon-hour open air meeting was held in the capmakers district, Lower New York. The workers were eager to listen to the speakers. They were particularly interested in the victories of the left wing of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union because the defeat of the Sigman machine signalizes also the defeat of Zaritzky and the advent to power of the left wing in the Cap Makers' Union.

The workers readily understood why Gitlow was taken off the ballot, particularly in connection with the strike that the Amalgamated is now conducting in this city in the International Tailoring Co. Literature and the special needle trades edition of The DAILY WORKER were distributed and the workers called upon to attend a ratification meeting called by the needle trades campaign committee at Hunts Point Palace. Regular noonday meeting will be held.

Simmons, Ku Klux Klan.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 23.—Alleging that the use of "fraudulent statements" by Amos W. Brazleton, local real estate man, deprived him of $55,000 rightfully due from the ku klux klan in return for the surrender of his contract with the klan, a petition of William Joseph Simmons, former imperial wizard of the klan, was on file in superior court here today. Simmons seeks to recover the $55,000 from Brazleton.

Brazleton, it is alleged, negotiated the deal between Simmons and the klan, whereby the former agreed to surrender a contract giving him $1,000 a month for life, for $145,000 cash. Simmons alleged that Brazleton told him the klan offered only $95,000, and that the real estate man retained the $55,000 difference actually paid by the klan as his commission for negotiating the deal.

$50,000 WORTH OF EMBALMED HORSE FLESH DESTINED FOR NEAR EAST CONSUMPTION DESTROYED BY FIRE

ROCKFORD, Ill., Oct. 23.—Canned horse meat destined for human consumption in the Near East and valued at $50,000 was destroyed by fire, which gutted one wing of the Chappell Brothers Horse Packing Co.

The fire is believed to have been kindled by persons incensed at the rumors of sickly and worn-out horses being used as food for human consumption.

Striking Anthracite Coal Miners Hear Communist Message

about Russia?" Tallentire replied that the workers had established a government which was on their side in the fights against the bosses and he was showing why the workers of Pennsylvania should do the same thing.

After Tallentire's speech in relation to the labor party, the need of ousting the agents of the bosses and police, the mayor, who was half-drunk, started a disturbance and demanded that the hall be cleared. He directed the state police to take charge of Tallentire and Zalpis. While they were being pushed toward the door of the hall they were separated from the police and stepped into a waiting automobile before the police had time enough to think and put them under arrest.

The interruption of the meeting by the mayor and his police has caused a considerable amount of unrest among the miners. It is the subject of general discussion, and the miners are demanding that the authorities do not disturb their gatherings.

Many Demand Strike Relief

With the anthracite strike running close to the end of the second month, there is a general demand for strike relief in the local unions. Many of the local unions have already paid out the money in their treasuries to their members and are asking that the national organization use the funds which are being collected from the maintenance men who are taxed $5 every two weeks for relief of the strikers.

Resolutions to this effect have been adopted in a number of local unions and the movement demanding that the Lewis machine use the funds of the unions to support the strike is growing in momentum.

At Throop, where the bosses endeavored to mine coal with scabs, 600 men stormed the strikebreakers and stopped the loading of coal. To all appearances, the strike which up to this time was considered as a sort of vacation and picnic by the miners, is entering into a stage were the miners have exhausted their funds and suffering is beginning to develop among them and with it a more militant fighting spirit to make the strike a real fight for the miners' demands.

Membership meetings of members of the Workers Party have been held in every strike center during the last week and the members mobilized for active struggle in the local unions to place them on record for a hundred per cent strike, no arbitration, and no settlement without a wage increase and demand that the nternational union furnish strike relief.

Progressive miners truout the district are also mobilizing for a struggle against the expulsion of Pat Toohey from his local union and similar efforts to throw out other progressive miners from the organization.

British Raids on Communists Follow Labor Party Treason

not a defeat for the Communists; it was a blow for the working class. The purely liberal resolutions adopted, the repudiation of the fight against imperialism and the Dawes' plan, which are degrading our fellow workers abroad, and thereby striking at British conditions, the failure to face the capitalist attack on wages and hours, were intended to please the capitalists. The Trade Union Congress has frightened them; the decisions at Liverpool have reassured them.

"The Trade Union Congress issued a magnificent call for unity against the bosses—in the factories, between the unions, internationally. The labor party conference, by repudiating unity and rejecting resolutions based on the class struggle, extended an open invitation to the bosses to attack the workers. That is why the capitalist press is so delighted with the results and is already demanding that the attack should start by an onslaught on the Communist Party.

Capitalists Prepare Violence.

"We are not afraid that the press campaign about Communists preaching violence, will prevent the workers from realizing that it is the capitalists who are preparing to use violence to crush labor.

"Fellow workers! Follow the lead of your Trade Union Congress. Form factory committees to secure unity at the bottom! Send delegates from the factories to the trade councils, and thus consolidate your forces locally! Insist on the formation of the workers' alliance under the supreme authority of the general council. Meet the threat of organized strike-breaking and capitalist violence by insisting on the right to tell your brothers in the army and navy that they must not scab on the workers, and by forming your own defense corps against the O. M. S. and the fascisti!

"The labor party conference has shown how useless it is to rely on those who only utter left wing phrases and will not organize an opposition to the present liberal leadership of the labor party. If you are sincere in your hatred of capitalism, and your scorn for its agents and puppets in labor's ranks, you must translate your anger into organized opposition.

"Organize yourselves! For our part, we Communists, without forcing our opinions on you, will be willing to fight side by side with you. But no worker will believe that you intend to fight unless you organize."

NUCLEI FORMED IN SECTION 1 CHICAGO W. P.

Reorganization Goes Over on South Side

By MARTIN ABERN

Three shop nuclei and two street nuclei were the result of the first section membership meeting, held Wednesday, October 21, at Community Center, 3201 South Wabash Ave.

Two of the shop nuclei, Nos. 2 and 3, are in the clothing industry and have been in existence hitherto. Shop Nucleus No. 2 has four members and Shop Necleus No. 3 also has four members. A comrade from outside the industry—a waiter—was attached to function with this shop and meanwhile to work to build a nucleus in his place of work, a restaurant.

Shop Nucleus No. 10, a machine shop nucleus, a new unit, was formed, consisting of three members. The members of Shop Nucleus No. 10 work in section three and will be transferred to that section.

Members in Various Industries.

The two street nuclei formed contain eleven and nine members, respectively, at this time. These street nuclei are made up of members working in various industries. Among the occupations listed in the street nuclei are painters, a chemist, a lawyers, student, housewives, bank clerk, office workers, party workers, artists, plumber, flour mill worker, and machinists.

Belong to Many Unions.

Union affiliations listed among the shop and street nuclei are seven members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, three of the Office Workers' Union, Bank Employes' Union, Cooks' and Waiters' Union, Painters' Union, and three in the Machinists' Union.

Forty-two comrades were present at this meeting, which included the members from the South Side English branch, which contained nearly all of the colored workers of the party, Englewood English, South Side Scandinavian, Shop Nucleus 2 and 3. The rain contributed to the absence of quite a few members, who will be attached as they are registered, to some shop nucleus or street nucleus.

Comrades at the meeting were assigned to reach the absent comrades that those may be registered and assigned.

Twelve of the comrades who attended this meeting were found to be either working or living in another section. These were instructed to attend another of the section meetings at which they will then be placed in their proper shop or street nucleus.

These twelve temporarily unassigned comrades were found to be employed as steel workers, butcher in the stockyards, printer, office workers, draftsman, party workers, milkman, cement worker, tuck pointer, carpenter, laborers, athletic instructor. Union affiliations were Office Workers' Union, Draftsmen's Union, Typographical Union, Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, Tuck Pointers' Union.

The meeting was conducted in simple fashion. A few opening words by Comrade Abern; then the comrades filled out the registration cards.

The C. E. C. commisison, consisting of Comrades Lovestone, Abern and Minor then classified the registration as to occupation, place of work and place of residence. The results were the formation of the three shop nuclei and two street nuclei.

Elect Nuclei Officials.

The shop and street nuclei formed, held meetings immediately and elected temporary officers and arranged for the next meeting. A provisional section executive committee was formed from temporary representatives from each shop and street nucleus. The section executive arranged to meet soon in order to take up the immediate party work.

As the section meetings in other sections are held, there is no doubt that many shop nuclei will be organized, and the others into street nuclei. The remaning sections contain the bulk of the membership. It will, however, be found that large numbers of the members who attend their assigned section meeting, live or work in other sections. The party will transfer these comrades where they belong. The membership in the various sections will equalize themselves, comparatively, which will admit of effective functioning.

The first section meeting is encouraging. Comrades should exert all efforts to get out the maximum attendance at the forthcoming section meetings. The next ones to be held are section 2, at Pullman, Stancik's Hall, 205 East 115th St., on Wednesday, October 28 and section 5, northside, on Thursday, October 29, at Imperial Hall, 2409 North Halsted St. Comrades should follow the columns of The DAILY WORKER for news on the meeting, time and place of the section membership meetings.

When all of the section meetings have been held, Local Chicago, Workers (Communist) Party will be entirely organized on the shop and street nuclei basis.

Petrich, Bulgaria, Gives Lie to Peace Promises of Locarno, Switzerland

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Petrich gives the lie to Locarno. The thunder of cannon and the shedding of blood on the Greco-Bulgarian frontier blot out the picture of the dove of peace so carefully sketched in the "peace" gathering of the profit diplomats in the Swiss village.

The present strife between Greece and Bulgaria may be patched up temporarily. Already the heads of the "terror" government at Sofia have appealed to the league of nations. But "the league" is impotent; shown on a multitude of occasions, and if the war dogs now loose, are leashed again in the Balkans, it will be because the anti-labor tyrants who rule thru violence over the people of Bulgaria and Greece fear most of all the vengeance of their own enraged workers and farmers.

• • • •

Imperialist France, following the world war, was given the protectorate of Morocco and assumed the league of nations' mandate over Syria. But that has not brot peace to North Africa or to the Near East. Instead, the French chamber of deputies receives the information that France has lost more than 17,000 men and has spent more than 3,000,000,000 francs in Morocco since assuming the "peace" duties of "the League." Premier Painleve told the story in figures to the parliamentary lackeys of French imperialism: 2,176 dead and 8,297 wounded in Morocco, and in Syria 6,626 killed, wounded or missing. Then the premier announces that he will ask additional credits of 300,000,000 francs for the six months' period of July-December, 1925, to be spent in Morocco alone.

• • • •

It is easier to write imperialist treaties in Paris, for the subjugation of colonial peoples, than it is to carry them into effect. France has been learning that very effectively during the last few months in North Africa and Abd-el-Krim says his people can keep up the war for six years if necessary If the protests among the discontented workers and peasants of France can be taken as a criterion, it looks as if that won't be necessary. The growing solidarity of the French proletariat with the battling Moroccans will attend to that.

• • • •

Aristide Briand, the French foreign minister, as presiding officer, has hurriedly called "the league" together for Monday to consider the matters at issue between Greece and Bulgaria. Balkan wars before 1914, were not considered as important by the so-called "great nations" of Europe as they are held to be at the present time. The Communist International has come into existence since the great war and points the way to real peace among these peoples of southern Europe, the peace that will rid the workers and farmers of their oppressors, and push the red frontier of the Soviet Union deeper into western Europe.

The celerity with which the Frenchman, Briand, responds to the call for help from the Bulgarian hangmen of workers, would indicate that Paris has ulterior motives; just as there is basis for the claim that Great Britain is egging on the aggressions of the Greek fascists. The British and the French face each other again as they did not long ago in the Turkish turnover that brot Mustapha Kemal Pasha into power.

• • • •

The lie is given to Locarno. It is not so easy to settle the contraditions within the capitalist system; to eliminate the basis of conflicts between competing imperialisms. That can only be achieved thru the triumph of the workers over the present ruling class and the development of a world economy. New war flames in the Balkans must light the way for greater solidarity between the workers and farmers of the many Balkan states in their struggle for an All-Balkan Soviet Federation.

Engdahl Pictures Reactionary Antics at Atlantic City

introduced. On the questions of amalgamation, trade union unity, class collaborattion and the labor party, he depicted the line-up against the propositions. His description of Green stating that the resolution on class collaboration, was a piece of impudence aroused laughter among the audience. Naturally Green would view with disfavor a resolution striking at his connections with the capitalist class of this country.

On the labor party question all the big guns of the convention—President Green, John P. Frey, of the molders, Jim Lynch of the printers—declared that some day a labor party would rise, but the time was not yet ripe for it. Aside from delegates supporting the left wing in all its demands, Max Hayes, of the International Typographical Union, was the only one who took the flor for a labor party.

Purcell's Reception.

The appearance of A. A. Purcell, of the British delegation, and his plea for world trade union unity and recognition of Soviet Russia, caused the machine to mobilize its batteries to defend its reactionary position. Particularly illuminating was the description of the fulsome praise given to the Coolidge administration in refusing to recognize Soviet Russia. Green enunciated a Monroe doctrine (?) of labor, to the effect that since the doctrine of the government was "protection" of both North and South America from European domination, so the A. F. of L. must regard labor in the same light; hence the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

The closing remarks of Comrade Engdahl were greeted with enthusiasm as he concluded with the prediction that the left wing forming in the labor movement in this country would eventually gain leadership of the labor movement and place it in line with the working class of the rest of the world, instead of playing the game of imperialist as it does today.

Gasoline Price War Continues in Attempt to Kill Independents

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Ill., Oct. 23—The gasoline price-cutting war in this section still continues in the effort to force independent dealers from the field.

In Paris dealers are holding out for the old rate while neighboring county towns are selling for 13 cents. Reports state that individual rural dealers have made a new low rate of 12 cents per gallon.

Union Bootblacks on Strike in New York's Upper West Section

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—About 800 bootblacks of upper westside New York shops are striking for $22 to $26 a week; one day's rest in seven; hours of 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. except Saturdays 8 a. m. to 10 p. m. and Sundays or holidays 8 a. m. to 3 p. m. The workers are members of the newly organized United Hat Cleaners', Shoemakers' and Bootblacks' Independent Local Union.

Judge to Hear Plea Against Higher Fares

This morning a hearing will be held in Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe's court. Attorneys for the Chicago and North Western railway company will plead for a temporary injunction to restrain the Illinois commerce commission from interfering with the collection of the increased suburban passenger fares which becomes effective Tuesday morning. Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom is expected to appear for the commission to oppose the railroad's plea.

CALLES EXHIBITS VERSATILITY IN MEXICAN AFFAIRS

Cute Senorita Was Only Aiding the Nation

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 23.—President Calles of Meico may be harsh and unbending towards the labor unions who do not want their wages cut and their unions destroyed or turned into aids to the bosses, but Senor Calles has a forgiving and kindly side to his nature.

Ths is shown by hs speech at San Luis Potosi, where he came to the defense of his finance minister, Pani, who, in an expedition into the United States on mission of state business, probably a call at Mr. Morgan's well known bank, was accompanied by a beautiful actress of old Spain, one Gloria Faure, who from all accounts endeavored to compensate Senor Pani in some measure for his enforced absence from home and fireside.

"Boys May Be Boys."

This became a public scandal in Mexico when in the house of parliament a rude representative of the oppressed peons, or speaking in their name at least, one Soto y Gama, said that Senor Pani—and other government leaders as well, ought while in office at least, act like respectable married men. Instead, Senor Pani, with the treasury of the Mexican republic in trust, was caverting off into the empire of the Yankee, disobeying the Mann "white slave act" with Senorita Gloria in the most brazen manner. "Boys may be boys," said Senor Soto y Gama, but they shouldn't be finance ministers.

Calles, in his speech settled the matter, as dictators are wont to do, by charging that the derelictions of Senor Pani had been raised by the "enemies of the government" and that too, for mere "political reasons." "Senor Pani," said Calles, "is doing splendid work to reeem the nation."

What Prise Gloria?

And he added that while some demagogic politicans were trying to find objects to throw in Senor Pani's way, he, Calles, would not. Thus, intimating that the Mexican republic should be grateful to Senorita Faure for her collaboration with Senor Pani in "redeeming the nation" by a visit with Wall Street.

This done, Senor Calles declared that any of the railroad unionists who tried to resist his orders to reduce the number of men employed and cut the wages of those at work, should be tried by courtmartial and executed; again proving the versatility of the president of Mexico, one Plutarco Calles.

State Governors Ask Repeal of Tax on the Rich

Illinois, one member of the committee, declared that "for months there has been an intensive and expensive educational campaign on in my district to repeal this law."

Arguments used against the estate tax are "economically unsound," said Rainey, "but they are widely disseminated. I, for one, would like to know where the money comes from to finance this campaign."

Both Chairman Green of Iowa, and Representative Garner democrat of Texas, expressed surprise at the growth of the "tax clubs" in their respective states. The Texas and Iowa tax clubs have had a field day before the committee, urging repeal of the estate tax.

A score of states were represented before the committee today, either by the governor or his representative, among which were Illinois, and Minnesota.

BOSSES DRIVE AGAINST NEGRO CONGRESS FAILS

Workers Send Delegate Despite Threats

WARREN, Ohio, Oct 23—When the Negro workers in the Trumbull steel plant circulated a leaflet in the shop telling about the American Negro Labor Congress that was to be held in Chicago, starting October 25, at the Metropolitan Unity House, 31st St. and Giles Ave., the bosses threatened any worker who dared to go the congress with immediate discharge. Nevertheless, the Negro workers in the shop got together, elected their delegate and have sent him to Chicago.

Clergy Tools of Steel Bosses

The minister of the Second (Colored) baptist church has in all his sermons attacked the American Negro Labor Congress and told the Negro workers to stay away from there. The steel company not trusting one sky-pilot to fool the Negro workers has had four others sent in. Every night meetings are held on High street near the Hippodrome Hall, where these ministers are doing their worst to poison the minds of the Negro against the idea of labor organizations.

Not only are the sky-pilots doing this work, but so are dentists and doctors of the city who are agitating among the workers to keep them from sending a delegate to the Chicago congress.

Try to Bull-doze Negroes

In order to keep the Negro bulldozed, attempts are being made to organize a chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which claims that it will abolish segregation, lynching, Jim Crowism and get the American Negro "a fair deal" from the bosses without any labor organizations.

The local American Negro Labor Council has a membership of 116 Negro workers.

Probe Freight Rates.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—The interstate commerce commission today ordered an investigation of the proposal of the railroads to revise the freight rates on fresh meats and packing house products from Omaha and South Omaha, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Sioux City, and other western producing points to southwestern distinations. The proposed revision would result in both increases and reductions in the freight rates.

ARRANGE TO PAY, THEN ASK LOANS SAYS WALL STREET

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—American bankers are in complete accord with the desire of the administration to deny loans to foreign governments which have not made final arrangements to fund war debts to the United States, Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank of New York, declared after a conference with President Coolidge today.

Mitchell directed his remarks particularly at France.

AMERICAN-MADE HORTHY REGIME AND HUNGARIAN SOCIAL DEMOCRATS IN NEW DRIVE AGAINST WORKERS

BUDAPEST, Hungary, (By Mail.)—The Horthy regime has started a new series of raids on the workers and has thrown hundreds of workers into jail. Not only are members of the Hungarian Communist Party being thrown into jail, but also some of the members of the Hungarian Workers' Socialist Party, whose only crime consists in splitting away from the social-democratic party and forming a new alliance.

Long Term Sentences.

Many Communists are in jail with prison sentences ranging from 10 to 15 years for their participation in the proletarian dictatorship which was overthrown by means of American money that was used by the Horthy gang. This American money was supposed to have been used by the present Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, in the Coolidge regime in America, who was in charge of relief work to aid the starving people of Hungary. Instead it was used to destroy the workers' dictatorship and place the Horthy terrorist regime in power.

Social-Democratic Stool Pigeons.

In the drives being made by the Horthy police on the villages and cities in Hungary, the social-democrat leaders, Peyer and Peidl, are assisting the police to destroy not only the Hungarian workers' socialist party, but also all other elements that may be opposed to it on the political field. The attitude taken by Horthy is that any working class movement in Hungary which opposes the social-democrats is a Communist movement.

The workers of Hungary driven to desperation by the continuous lowering of the standard of living and persecution of the Horthy regime are again following the leadership of the advance guard of the Hungarian workers, the Communists.

Over 350 workers have been arrested in the new outbreak of the terror regime.

Torture Rakosi.

Mathias Rakosi has had to suffer torture again at the hands of the police in their attempt to force a "confession" from him which could be used as an excuse to send him to the gallows to double-quick time.

A "confession" alleged to have been made by Mathias Rakosi has been printed and circulated quite widely in the Hungarian press. In this confession Rakosi is purported to have said that he was unwilling to leave Moscow for Budapest and that as he was sitting at a table discussing the matter with a number of leading Communists in Moscow, a number of soldiers belonging to the Cheka, entered the room, levelled their rifles with fixed bayonets at him and demanded that he immediately leave for Budapest. Under these circumstances he had allowed himself to be persuaded to leave for Hungary as it was a question of death either at the hands of Horthy or the Cheka and he had accepted the more "noble form."

The police added to this "confession" the following: "I must state before the public that the attitude of the police towards me was most polite and human."

The Horthy police have also invented the following tale as a basis for making new arrests: Rakosi and a number of those who had participated in the Hungarian Soviet government met at Vienna and there decided upon a "putsch." In order to make this a successful attempt to regain power, a death list was drawn up of the officials in power who were to be killed. The first name on this list was Horthy, then prime minister Bethlen, then the other officials of the government in order of succession. All officers and high judges who were strong Horthy adherents were to be killed. Vast stores of munitions were supposed to have been brot into the country in preparation for the "putsch."

The Budapest police claimed that the congress of these leaders of the Hungarian workers took place on August 24, 25, and 26, and that Bela Kun was the chairman of the congress and Rakosi had sat on the right hand side of Bela Kun thruout the entire meeting in the hall of a people's library. The congress also held classes for weeks teaching the future commissars their duties.

The Budapest police then began savage attacks on the organized workers of Hungary. The capitalist and social-democrat press carried long stories giving prominent display to this yarn. The Viennese police investigated the yarn and sent a letter to the Budapest police, saying their yarn had no foundation and that the Budapest police had manufactured this tale out of the hot air that is quite abundant around Budapest secret police offices.

Hundreds of workers have been arrested and thrown into jail and forced to sign "confessions" verifying the yarn. Medieval inquisition methods are used to force "confessions" from the victims in their attempt to murder leading working class leaders with some semblance of legality.

ANTI-IMPERIALIST LEAGUE ARRANGES PROTEST AGAINST U. S. AVIATORS IN MOROCCO

The All-American Anti-Imperialist League is sending out letters to all Negro, Chinese, Hindu and white working class organizations on the south side calling for a united front demonstration against the participation of American aviators in Morocco. This united front demonstration will take place at the Pythian Hall, 207 East 35th street, Thursday evening, Oct. 29.

The following letter is being sent to all organizations of a working class character:

"Dear Brothers:

"American aviators have crossed over to Africa and are fighting on the side of the French robbers in their war against the brave Riffian tribes struggling for independence.

"We of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League are appealing to all intelligent, liberty-loving, class-concious Negroes, Chinese, Hindus, and members of the white races to join in a gigantic protest demonstration against the participation of American aviators in the Riff war.

"Among the darker races all over the world, there has risen a new wave of the struggle for freedom. In the Riff country of northern Africa, in Mesopotamia and China, in Jamaica and other colonial possessions of the British empire, the people are demanding the right to conduct their own affairs free from the interference of imperialist powers.

"Why are France and Spain warring on the Riffs? Because they want to bring the rich natural resources of Morocco under the control of the French and Spanish bosses. The soil of Morocco is rich in tin, copper and zinc. Its northern shore makes the approach of ships easy. The natives of Morocco can be made to work in factories, on railroads and in mines for very little wages. And to force the natives to go to work for them, the foreign governments will seize their lands and drive the Riffians to the factories. It is for these things—tin, copper, zinc and cheap labor-power, that Abd-el Krim and his tribes are being slaughtered on the soil of northern Africa.

"While the American aviators now fighting Abd-el-Krim were still in America, preparing to go to Africa, and while the American government was still able to stop them, it made no effort to prevent their going. In fact, some of these aviators even received their passports from the government, after they had declared their intention of fighting the Riffian natives.

"The hall in which the All-America Anti-Imperialist League is planning to hold this demonstration is Pythian Hall, 207 East 35th street, the use of which has been extended to us for the evening of October 29, by courtesy of the American Negro Labor Congress. This hall seats over 2,000 people.

"We are asking you to take part in this demonstration. In a few days we shall be sending you a number of leaflets, to distribute among members of your organization.

"Hands Off Morocco!
"Hands Off Africa!"

Die in Collinsville Crash.

COLLINSVILLE, Ill., Oct. 23.—One man was killed and another was probably fatally injured shortly after midnight this morning, when the automobile in which the victims were riding, crashed into a milk truck on the National Trail Road here. The dead man was Sidney Prow, 56, of Collinsville. Rolla Harris, 40, the injured man, was brot to his home here, where it was believed he was suffering from a crushed skull and concussion of the brain.

Two Die in Fire.

ATHENS, Ohio, Oct. 23.—Mrs. John Dunfee, 47, and her daughter, Laura, five, were burned to death early today when fire destroyed their home three miles southeast of here.

Four other children of the family were saved when an older son awoke just as the roof was falling in.

WORKERS' SCHOOL OF CHICAGO OPEN FOR ENROLLMENT

Act Now If You Wish to Join Classes

CAPITAL CONCENTRATION SHOWN BY GOVERNMENT REPORT; 1,000 FIRMS CONTROL HALF OF PROFIT

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

If you pick the right ones, control of 1,000 corporations means control of just about half of the country's corporate profits. Yet these 1,000 are about ¼ of 1% of the total corporations reporting to the commissioner of internal revenue in 1923. This is the story of concentrated profiteering by the big trusts, told by figures in "Statistics of Income for 1923" issued by the commissioner. It shows how the big financiers are increasing their control of the surplus over a bare subsistence produced by the workers.

The figures show a group of 168 corporations with combined net income, after all possible deductions to escape the tax, of $2,294,954,330. The entire 398,933 corporations reporting showed a total of $8,321,529,134. Thus less than one-twentieth of 1% of all the corporations took 27½% of all the profits.

Concentrating Control.

The 1,026 largest corporations representing ¼ of 1% of the total number took $3,990,671,042 in profits or 48% of the total. And 2,115 corporations or just over ½ of 1% of the total number took $4,743,524,129 or over 57% of all the profits.

If we include the upper 1% of all the corporations we are dealing with about two-thirds of the total profits. With some 400,000 corporations the country is turning over the bulk of its profits to about 4,000 of the total number.

The table shows the corporations distributed according to the size of their 1923 net income, together with the combined income of each group:

1923 Corporation Income	No. of Corp.	Total Income
Under $2,000	99,240	$ 87,992,887
$2,000—$5,000	48,269	153,069,832
$5,000—$10,000	27,602	199,836,256
$10,000—$50,000	39,764	891,426,019
$50,000—$100,000	8,258	577,435,489
$100,000—$250,000	5,942	923,065,165
$250,000—$500,000	2,149	745,679,327
$500,000—$1,000,000	1,089	752,853,087
$1,000,000—$5,000,000	858	1,695,716,712
$5,000,000 and over	168	2,294,954,330
Reporting net income	233,339	$8,321,529,134
Reporting no net income	165,594	(Deficit) 2,013,554,987
Total corporations	398,933	$6,307,974,147

Industrial Variation.

The concentration of profits differs in the industries. In agriculture and related industries one out of the 9,360 corporations listed got $38,735,391 or 42% of the $92,201,206 profits reported and four corporations got $46,101,431 or an even half of the total. In mining and quarrying 199 out of 18,509 corporations got $197,296,828 or about 70% of the $283,565,648 combined profits. In the transportation and public utility group 45 out of 21,113 corporations got $706,835,314 or 56% of the total $1,257,409,896, while 177 or less than 1% got $978,687,276 or 78% of the total.

Among the 85,199 manufacturing corporations 98 received $1,354,733,166 or about 32% of the $4,271,899,449 total while 598 get $2,324,860,706 or about 55% of the total. In the manufacturing of food products less than 1% of the corporations got 66½% or two-thirds of all the profits. In textiles and their products 1.7% of all the corporations got 56% of the profits. In rubber products 2% of the corporations got 74% of the profits. In chemicals and oils 1% of the corporations got 67% of the profits.

That was in 1923. Since then the process of concentration thru giant mergers has been continuing rapidly.

Officers Deny All Rumors That Sailors Were Drunk on Ship

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. Oct. 23—Officers of the Comanche were angered over reports that members of the crew were intoxicated when fire broke out on the Clyde liner last Saturday night and burned to the water's edge. These reports were carried by a few passengers aboard the vessel.

Chief mate Wilson, the next in command to Captain Curry, said he was doing duty on the bridge when the fire broke out and that he did not see a drunken man, or smell liquor in any form.

Taxi Men Strike Again.

BOSTON—Checker Co. taxi drivers are again striking for the union shop. After a settlement of a recent strike 15 union drivers were discharged without hearings and some old men were taken off the 9-hour shift which pays $4 and put on the 7-hour shift which pays $3 per day.

Playing Horthy's Game

Secretary of State Kellogg is trying to outdo the performances of his predecessor, Charles Evans Hughes, in playing the dirty game of all European despots who ask American aid in stifling information regarding their terror. His barring of Countess Karolyi from the United States is the logical continuation of the Hughes policy when he barred her husband last year.

Both acts were dictated because the state department, under orders from Wall Street, does not want to permit the real facts regarding the loathsome Horthy regime in Hungary to become known.

The charge that Countess Karolyi is a Communist is the veriest rot. Both her and her husband are bourgeois democrats, and the theory of the American government is approved by them—tho not its present practice.

If Kellogg does not know this fact, his political bosses know it. But the delectable American government, as the agent of Wall Street, has an interest at stake in Horthy's Hungary, so in order to conceal the fraudulent nature of capitalist class democracy they must indulge in the absurd charge that the Karolyis are Communists.

We get a splendid example of the sort of freedom prevailing in this country when an ignorant shyster from the Minnesota hinterland who has spent his life as the lickspittle of the grain trust can bar people from these shores at his own discretion.

Whether they are Communists or not doesn't matter. If Secretary Kellogg says they are—upon information obtained from such an unprincipled liar, swindler and scoundrel as Szechenyi, the Hungarian ambassador, representing a murderous, thieving government—that settles the matter. Such irrelevant things as facts don't count with him.

For the workers of this country it reveals the fact that the same gang of international plunderers, directed from Wall Street who are preparing a new series of wholesale murders of the working class in Hungary cannot defend their regime and hence dare not permit the truth to become publicly known.

The Expulsion of Shafir

There is nothing particularly astonishing about the fact that federal unions of the American Federation of Labor expel members on any sort of frame-up that happens to prove convenient. But when the employes of a so-called labor institution, a labor bank, controlled by a union outside the A. F. of L. obviously with the consent of the bank officials, expel a member for introducing resolutions at a convention in favor of recognition of Soviet Russia and world trade union unity, then something is rotten in Denmark.

The case of Joseph Shafir, who was elected a delegate to the Atlantic City convention of the A. F. of L. and who was expelled from the union by a rump meeting called in the Amalgamated Bank headquarters, raises a number of questions.

First and foremost, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union professes to be a radical union. It pretends to favor recognition of Soviet Russia. By what tortuous reasoning does it tolerate the expulsion of Shafir by its employes, thereby depriving him of a means of livelihood because he also is in favor of recognition of Russia? Secondly: Is the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union in favor of trade union unity, or does it intend to say "Amen!" to the reactionary stand in this question taken by the Green regime in the A. F. of L.?

There is a great deal of explaining that will have to be done before Duane Swift, renegade radical, who acts in the bank as an informer for the capitalist press, and his employers, the directors of the bank, hear the last of this.

The membership of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union will also have something to say about such contemptible conduct.

Two European Labor Leaders

Last Sunday a certain Herr Franz J. Fertwangler, a yellow trade unionist and social-democrat from Germany, who was one of the fraternal delegates to the Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor, came to Chicago. No one knew of his arrival except the official machine of the Chicago Federation of Labor. He was welcomed by them and addressed the regular meeting of the federation. His reception was the usual polite one given such as he by his kind. The mass of the Chicago workers know nothing about him and care less.

In a short time another European labor leader is coming: He may or may not address the Chicago Federation of Labor. But his coming will be known and acclaimed by thousands upon thousands of Chicago workers who read of his determined stand in defense of world trade union unity before the agents of capitalism in convention assembled at Atlantic City. That labor leader is A. A. Purcell of England. And he will address thousands of workers at a public meeting—not an exclusive gathering of delegates.

Fertwangler will soon be forgotten even by those pie-card patriots who welcomed him, but Purcell will be remembered for a long time to come by the workers who will listen to his plea for unity of action on the part of the organized workers of the world and will struggle to put his demand, which is the demand of the advance guard of the working class, into effect.

Our prediction yesterday that Caillaux will probably be retired to private life before the next debt commission arrives in the United States, was vindicated sooner than anticipated. According to French dispatches the picturesque finance minister tendered his resignation yesterday evening as the franc hit a new low level, but it was not then accepted. European politicians tread on very uncertain ground, a soil quaking from economic collapse.

"Peace on earth, good will toward men," brayed the menagerie at Locarno. The echo was the rattle of infantry and artillery and the screech of shrapnel from the Greco-Bulgar border.

INVENTION MAY DOOM PRINTING TRADES UNIONS

Britisher Reveals New Typesetting Process

By H. M. WICKS

The employing printers in convention assembled at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in the city of Chicago listened yesterday to a remarkable address by A. E. Goodwin, London, England, director of the Federation of Master Printers of the United Kingdom and Ireland.

His analysis of British conditions re-echoed the analysis of A. A. Purcell before the labor convention at Atlantic City last week. And there was as much of a chasm seperating the mental processes of Goodwin from the American employing printers as was evidenced in the case of Purcell when he addressed the fossils of the American Federation of Labor.

Describes Unemployment.

In discussing the economic conditions in England, Goodwin hit the nail squarely on the head when he said that "the rise of industry among oriental people is cutting into British manufacture. Japan and India too, are becoming strong competitors of my country in eastern markets, thereby injuring industry in the England." He said this competition was responsible for the large unemployed army. Of course he did not propose any remedy, as did the noted British labor leader who addressed the convention of American labor leaders at Atlantic City.

Sees End of Typesetting

Goodwin, in dealing with the technical side of printing, revealed a new invention that, if put into effect, will mean the doom of typesetting as we know it today, and throw thousands of printers out of employment. In fact it will at once blow destroy the whole basis of both the International Typographical Union and the Photo-Engravers' Union in this and all other countries.

Goodwin described a new machine now being perfected which he declared reproduces any figure, letter, or photograph almost instantaneously by transfer to a sensitized film base.

"J. R. C. August and E. K. Hunter of London, have been working secretly on this machine for the last four years, and they are about ready to demonstrate it to the world," Goodwin said.

"The machine operates like a typewriter but the whole process is almost instantaneous. The film is wound on a spool two inches in diamter and three inches wide and one spool is equivalent to 2,700 founts of type.

"It is readily adaptable to radio control and with it a man in one city can set book pages or newspaper pages in another city."

Thus the invincible march of the machine threatens this, one of the most skilled trades, in modern industry.

Scab Herders Perform

Another speech before the sessions was that of E. E. Sheldon of the Lakeside Press, owned by the notorious scabherder and strikebreaker, Donnelly, of Chicago. Sheldon described a trade school conducted by the Lakeside Press wherein 500 apprentice boys and young men are taught printing and also citizenship, idealism, "Americanism" (the scab shop plan) and other illusions of the capitalist class. He described how this sort of "education" will make the slaves loyal to their masters and how it is profitable inasmuch as it reduces the labor turnover.

Berry in Evidence

George L. Berry, strikebreaking president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, was in evidence in the lobbies, where he was completely at home among the menagerie of employing printers from all over the country.

Probably he was striving to get an opportunity to speak before the convention and convince them that his system of strikebreaking was far superior to that of R. R. Donnelly, Rand McNally's, Poole Brothers and others of the big scab bosses in the city of Chicago.

Teach Industry in Colleges.

Max Mason, president of Chicago University in a speech before the Chicago bar association predicted that in the very near future leading universities would establich institutes of industry similar to the institute of meat packers of Chicago University.

400,000 Blows for the Soviet Union---Can We Strike More?

By C. E. RUTHENBERG, General Secretary,
Workers (Communist) Party

HALF of our party has responded to the appeal of the Central Executive Committee that we strike a million blows for the defense of the Soviet Union in celebrating the Eighth Anniversary of the proletarian revolution in Russia.

About half of the party units have sent in orders and are organizing the distribution of the leaflet, "Defend the Workers' Government of Russia." The half of the party which is making this fight for the Soviet Union has organized the distribution of four hundred thousand copies of the leaflet.

The question which naturally arises is whether only half of the party is sufficiently interested in the defense of the Soviet Union to do their party duty in helping to bring the cause of the Soviet Union before a million workers.

Every member of the party must know that capitalism is mobilizing for new attacks on the Soviet Union. Every news report of the maneuvers of the capitalist powers tell that story.

The answer to these maneuvers is the mobilization of the workers for the defense of the Soviet Union. Our party is beginning this campaign in relation to the celebration of the Eighth Anniversary of the Soviet Union. It has set as its aim to tell a million workers the truth about the Soviet Union thru the distribution of the party leaflet. Each leaflet is a blow for the workers' and peasants' republic and against capitalism.

The party organizations which have not responded to the call of the Central Executive Committee must do so at once. No unit of the party can be in the position of betraying the cause of the workers and peasants of Russia by failing to join the fight for the defense of the Soviet Union.

There is still time to act.

Mobilize the members of your branch. Organize for the distribution of the leaflet in the shops, trade unions, wherever the workers can be reached.

Send in your order immediately to the National Office. The leaflets are $2.00 per thousand, in lots of 10,000, $1.50 per thousand.

Let us strike a million blows for the Soviet Union.

SCAB BOATS, NOT SCAB COAL, IS HILLQUIT CHOICE

Denies Connection with Burns Bros.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 23—Morris Hillquit is indignant. And it all happened because The DAILY WORKER observed that Mawruss came home from the congress of the Second International on a ship manned by British scab seamen to look after his alleged interests in the Burns Brothers Coal company of New York which was importing coal from Germany and Wales to help break the anthracite strike.

But Mawruss would not write to The DAILY WORKER (vile sheet of the viler Communists) to express the pent-up indignation that had been smouldering in his bosom along with what was left of his "socialist" conscience after collaboration at Marseilles with Scheidemann, Abramovich and the other Barmat leaders. Mawruss is indignant because The DAILY WORKER had charged that he was interested in the Burns Brothers company, and he writes straight to the New York Times to answer The DAILY WORKER, speaking as follows:

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"It has come to my notice that my alleged association with the firm of Burns Brothers has been repeatedly commented on, privately and publicly, ni connection with the pending strike in the anthracite coal fields. Will you be kind enuf to grant me some of your valuable space for a categoric denial of this aleged association? I have not been counsel for Burns Brothers since 1917. I do not own a single share of stock in the coporation and have no connection with it, personal, financial or professional."

"MORRIS HILLQUIT.

"New York, Oct. 19, 1925."

It appearing that Mawruss has the alibi proven on connection with Burns Brothers, why does he rub it in by alluding to the "pending" strike of anthracite miners who, somehow, had it in their heads that they went on strike Sept. 1. But laying aside trivialities, Mawruss has proven that he isn't profiteer from Burns Brothers' scab coal, even if he is a member of the Second International and even if he did travel on a scab-manned ship. Moreover, Burns Brothers hasn't offered him a job as lawyer. So that's that.

That little matter of the trip on the Majestic from Southampton to New York with a crew aboard of blackleg scabs furnished by the British fascist elements can scarcely be dodged so readily; but then the socialist ethic does not require that such matters be explained. The only comment that the socialist New Leader would vouchsafe about the affair was a scornful—"Isn't it awful"—in reply to the criticism of the vile Communists.

Taxi Strikers Stand Firm; Organization Giving No Assistance

By Worker Correspondent

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 23.—The taxi drivers of the Guardian Taxi corporation are still out on strike. All cabs are tied up and the men are determined to hold out till the company comes across with the flat rate of 40 per cent on all money booked.

Officials of the Taxi Limousine Chauffers' Local 643 are dead so far as organization of the unorganized taxi drivers are concerned. No organizer as yet has been sent in to the garages.

CHINESE FASCISTS UNITED WITH IMPERIALISTS USE MURDERS AND JAILS AGAINST THE KUOMINTANG

apparently Shanghai. We say "is apparently" as the authors of the above-mentioned observations remain modestly silent as to the exact location of these societies and as to the nature of their participants.

We may clearly observe here a new tendency of the fascist movement, which is beginning to make its appearance under the guardianship of the charitable British colonies.

Native Merchants Hate Canton.

At the same time, a wild hue and cry is being raised against Canton, the stronghold of revolutionary China, and military action against the Kwantung province is being prepared. One hears of the millions of dollars that this expedition is to cost and that it is being conducted by the troops of Marshal Chang-Tso-lin.

It would seem that this expedition is a reply to the manifesto of the Chinese chamber of commerce in Hong Kong which, on August 29th in an appeal to all, both in China and abroad, mentioned that "the present movement in Canton is ruining the trade of Hong Kong and Canton, and that the Canton government is to blame for this, operating as it does on the basis of Russian Bolshevik principles."

"It is further indicated that the control of all military and able forces are in the hands of the Bolsheviks. As their program indicates, they intend introducing Communism, and at the same time taxation of all property and real estate. The latest measures of teh Canton government in addition to the introduction of Communism evidently still more threatening for the Hong Kong merchants (a one per cent tax on property introduced by the Canton government for the support of the striking workers was evidently too much for the patience of the good natured Chinese merchants of Hong Kong)."

If aid is not rendered in the near future, the ever-growing wave of Bolshevism "will continue to grow until it embraces the whole of China, and then all hopes of its restoration will be lost." Such is the warning issued by the merchants.

Not so Easy to Do.

The imperialists during the last week have been racking their brains to think how they can suppress the liberation movement of the Chinese people which has acquired such threatening forms. The most short-sighted of these, especially the British merchants and diplomats of Hong Kong and Shanghai have demanded the armed intervention of Great Britain in order to oust the Canton government and establish "law and order" in China.

Their slogan has been "no concessions" and "tranquility first and reforms afterwards." But according to even the modest calculations of the general staffs,such pacification would need an army of 200,000 men and from five to ten years military control over China to make the pacification at all hopeful.

In view of the present situation of the labor movement "at home," and in view of the enormous expenditure that such an expedition would entail, it is clear that it is impossible to organize such an undertaking now. The times of the "boxer rebellion" of 1901 have passed, humbly remarks the leading article of the capitalist press.

"Always Friends."

"We have always been the friends of the Chinese people, there has simply been a slight misunderstanding between us for which the Bolsheviks are to blame. This misunderstanding must be cleared up, and what is more together with the Chinese nation we must liberate China from the ruinous influence of the Bolsheviks. And primarily, we must put an end to the red government of Canton."

This is what underlies the intended attack of Chang-Tso-lin on Canton, the murder of leaders of the people's movement in Canton, the arrests of left leaders of the Kuomintang, and the suppression of the students' and radical press, etc.

Last week, the organ of the Trade Union Council in Shanghai, and that of the Shanghai students' union was suppressed, and what is more, an order has been given that no newspapers or publications sent to these addresses be delivered.

Chang Arrests Kuomintang Leader.

In Peking, Comrade Cheng, editor of Minbao, one of the most prominent leaders of the Kuomintang was arrested, and the journal has been closed down. An insignificant incident has been used as a pretext for this, namely, an unverified note appeared concerning the death of Chang-Tso-lin.

Comrade Cheng has been carried off by Chang-Tso-lin's gendarmerie either to Tian-Tain or to Mukden. These towns are under the domination of Chang-Tso-lin, who sets up courts and established justice according to his own whims and tentatively obeys the voice of the foreign imperialists.

The life of this comrade is in great danger, and the public opinion of our country is highly indignant at this new act of violence on the part of the imperialists.

It is interesting to note that this same Chang-Tso-lin, in order to emphasize his hate for the Bolsheviks has recently granted a large donation for the support of the Russian white guards in the Kharbin university.

Another Suppression.

Not content with arresting Cheng, Chang-Tso-lin's gendarmes on Aug. 30, arrested Comrade Yan-Gin-Khua, Peking correspeondentof the Hankow newspaper Shin-Ben-Baw for publishing in this newspaper certain articles against the militarists who are the enemies of the Chinese struggle for liberation.

In order to put a stop to the students' movement, the central government issued an order that students should only study, and not take part in matters "that do not concern them."

Fascist Murder.

Calculating on the magic effects of this order, and putting an end to the students' movement with one stroke of the pen, the ministry for home affairs prepares another order forbidding the spreading of Communist teachings in China.

To the long list of victims of fascism, one must add yet another. This is one of the most prominent of our leaders, Comrade Chen-Chu-Lin. Wounded at the same time as Liao-Jun-Ko, he died on Aug. 21st. He was a member of the committee of national censorship. He was a prominent literateur and at one time editor of our newspaper (in the Chinese language) in Hong Kong.

Home Brew Accessories Become as Staple as Nails in Hardware Line

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 23—Home brew accessories have become a staple item in the hardware trade, according to a statement made by one of the delegates to the American hardware manufacturers' association, in convention here.

"The home brew accessory has become as staple in our town as nails," stated Williams of Streator, Ill., "and it has replaced our saloon accessory trade."

STEEL WORKERS DEMAND HORTHY RELEASE RAKOSI

Send Protest Telegram to Szechenyi

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 23.—At a well-attended mass meeting of Pittsburgh workers arranged by the International Labor Defense branch, the following telegram of protest was sent to the Hungarian embassy at Washington, D. C., and Senator Borah, calling for the release of Mathias Rakosi, former people's commissar of the Hungarian Soviet government and cessation of the terrorist tactics employed by the Horthy government in Hungary:

Vigorous Protest.

"Several hundred workers in mass meeting assembled last night in Pittsburgh, Pa., resolve to wire you their vigorous protest and indignation against the attempt of the bloody Horthy government of Hungary to murder Mathias Rakosi, former people's commissar of Soviet Hungary without even a fair trial demand immediate release of Rakosi and others also demand white terror in Hungary be stopped immediately.

Ku Klux Trial May Not Be Held; Six Jurors Discharged

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Oct. 23.—Hope of securing a jury for the trial of D. C. Stephenson, Earl Gentry and Earl Klinck for the death of Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis last March, waned here today, as defense and state attorneys began questioning the third panel of one hundred men with only five tentatively accepted in the jury box. Six men who had been tentatively accepted were dismissed yesterday upon further examination, leaving the completion of a jury this week a matter of doubt.

Judge Will M. Sparks appeared considerably out of patience today as the ninth day of the trial found only five men tentatively chosen. He criticized both the state and defense on the long and entangling questions asked the prospective talesmen, and asked both sides to state their queries simply.

Illinois Federation of Labor Appoints an Education Committee

The Illinois State Federation of Labor appointed a committee on education headed by John English, member of the Chicago board of education. The committee is to start a survey of schools of the state particularly in reference to education of workers children.

This move is the outcome of the educational policy adopted by A. F. of L. convention to look into the new trend in public school education which is for changing our former public school system for the work-study-play plan, with special emphasis on the work part. The committee will study the platoon system, intelligence tests and junior high schools.

The A. F. of L. and International Relations

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

ARTICLE I.

WITH the decay of British industrial and financial supremacy accompanied by the rise of the revolutionary consciousness in the ranks of the working class and the stabilization of German economy under the Dawes' plan, the Second International, as Zinoviev remarks, moves its headquarters back to the German speaking country.

It is Wall Street and all the immense power which the name signifies that is forcing stabilization in western Europe.

It is not surprising therefore, to find that at Atlantic City the convention of the American Federation of Labor sought and found a new orientation to correspond with the new developments in the field of American imperialist enterprise in Europe.

FROM Portland to El Paso to Atlantic City the officialdom of the American trade union movement has been trying to follow a policy consistent with its position as the labor agents of Wall Street.

At Portland, after a year of preparation, it dramatized its opposition to Soviet Russia, the Communist International and the growing left wing by the unseating of William F. Dunne, Communist member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

At El Paso, the A. F. of L. extended its pro-imperialist front, procured the expulsion of Communists from the Mexican labor movement, debauched and betrayed that movement and turned it over to its Wall Street masters. At El Paso also was manifested the first sign of friendliness for the social-democratic trade union leaders of Germany.

BUT it was at Atlantic City that the A. F. of L. was able to grasp clearly the world policy of Wall Street and align itself definitely with it. It is for the German reformist unions whose leaders accept and enforce the Dawes' plan and wars on Soviet Russia that the A. F. of L. now feels a kinship. It is true that the relations are those of a stern father to an erring son, rather than that of brotherhood, but this is beautifully consistent with the role of the A. F. of L. as the labor outpost of American imperialism.

To understand the full significance of this new alignment we must recall some of the incidents which marked the winning of American labor for the Morgan-Wilson crusade to "make the world safe for democracy."

FOR year the Germans had been a powerful influence in the American trade unions and not only a powerful influence but, with their advocacy of labor in politics and with some of the traditions of '48 and '73 remaining, an influence for good. In many centers the German emigrants had been the organizers of the trade unions.

With the war all this was changed. Gompers' latent nationalism, always inclined more to the pure and simple trade unionism of Great Britain, fitted in well with the wave of hatred aroused against the "horrid Huns." Everything German, including German trade unionists and German trade unionism, was cast into the outer darkness.

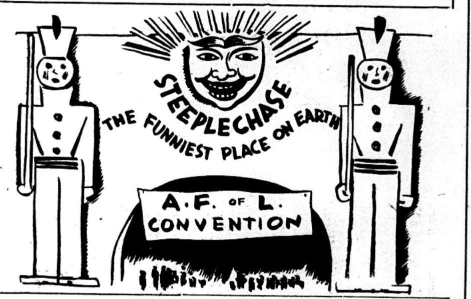
THERE were no more uncompromising haters of the German social-democrats and their unions that the bureaucrats of the A. F. of L. The whole machinery of the unions became a spy-hunting agency under the direction of the department of justice and the army intelligence service and woe unto any union man with a German name who even opined that wages were a little too low in comparison with the mounting living costs. He was very lucky if he escaped lynching.

THIS is the first of a series of articles on the proceedings of the A. F. of L. convention, which will deal with "The A. F. of L. and International Relations," "The A. F. of L. and the Unorganized Workers," "The A. F. of L. and the Class Struggle," "The A. F. of L. and the Left Wing," "The A. F. of L. and Militarism," etc.

Even after the Russian revolution and the organization of the Communist Party of America had created new menaces for the valiant social-patriots in the unions to fight, the British labor movement remained as the apotheosis of all that was safe, sane and Anglo-Saxon except for its aberration in the matter of a labor party. The charitable Gompers tried many times to remove this blemish by admonition and advice without heat or hatred.

BUT, largely because of the efforts of the British trade unions, Great Britain recognized Soviet Russia. Then came the Dawes' plan and duty called the A. F. of L. for labor among the hated Huns that the fruits of the war for democracy might not be lost to Wall Street thru social revolution.

The Entrance to the "Labor" Convention



The reformist leaders of Germany submitted to American imperialism but the British workers not only have spoken out against the Dawes' plan, but have entered into the drive for world trade union unity, side by side with the All-Russian trade unions, to smash this slave scheme.

ONCE more the duty of the A. F. of L. is plain. The proceedings of the Atlantic City convention leave no doubt that cost what it may, the A. F. of L. has made a united front against the British and Russian trade unions and world trade union unity with the right wing of the Amsterdam International, the reformist sections of the German trade unions.

The treatment accorded A. A. Purcell, fraternal delegate from the British Trades Union Congress and chairman of the Amsterdam International, and the German trade union fraternal delegates, during and after the convention, is proof of the above statement.

PURCELL made what is probably the most brilliant and closely reasoned speech on the need for world trade union solidarity ever delivered at an A. F. of L. convention. He pointed out the menace of the Dawes' plan and the danger of new imperialist wars and told the delegates plainly that world capitalism was bankrupt. He spoke warmly of the first workers' and peasants' government and stated that he was "proud of the achievements of his class in Russia."

Green's speech in reply was a deliberate insult to the British trade unions and a wholesale condemnation in the most bitter terms of the Russian revolution and the Soviet government.

The Federated Press correspondent, whose reports of the convention are marked by an effort to find something encouraging to the liberal elements while at the same time not antagonizing the blackest conservative, says:

RECOGNITION of Russia, the proposal of the Anglo-Russian Unity Committee for a world trade union congress to arrange a plan for international labor co-operation were. . . defeated . . . And it is doubtful if whether these left wing proposals have been assailed in harsher language at any previous convention . . . the report of the resolutions committee on the Russian recognition proposals, read by Matthew Woll and accepted by the convention, WAS A DECLARATION OF AGGRESSIVE ENMITY . . . "THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR DECLARES ITS HOSTILITY NOT MERELY IN A DEFENSIVE MANNER, BUT IN A VITAL AND AGGRESSIVE MANNER." The next paragraph goes so far as to commend for its courage in refusing recognition the American government whose administration chiefs (Coolidge and Dawes, W. F. D.) were opposed by labor in the 1924 campaign.

William Green . . . spoke as emphatically against a diplomatic rapprochement with Russia as had his predecessor, Samuel Gompers. He denounced Russian institutions as autocratic and praised American institutions as free . . . said he would fight attempts to change American institutions. (Emphasis mine, W. F. D.)

So much for the reception of Purcell's proposal for recognition of Soviet Russia.

BUT the final insult was reserved for his urgent plea for world trade union unity. The Federated Press reports as follows:

The proposal for world trade union unity was denounced in much the same terms as that for Russia recognition. The committees report, however, contained the interesting information that the "British workers have sent us a message urging our sympathetic consideration of the proposal contained in this resolution." Replying to this appeal, the committee ANNOUNCED A MONROE DOCTRINE FOR AMERICAN LABOR AGAINST "AGGRESSION BY PROPAGANDA."

The Pan-American Federation of Labor, continued the report, is the recognized international labor movement of the Americas. Thru it the American republics give expression to the aspirations and ideals of their wage earning masses and the American people are determined that it shall so continue. NEITHER THE RED INTERNATIONALE OF AUTOCRATIC MOSCOW NOR ANY OTHER INTERNATIONALE MAY IN COMPLACENCY IGNORE THIS DEFINITION OF AMERICAN LABOR POLICY. (Emphasis Mine, W. F. D.)

The gist of this is: "Let the British labor movement beware! The A. F. of L. will fight all attempts to make it part ofthe world trade union movement, but it reserves the right to follow the flag of American imperialism whenever it leads!

Brotherly resolutions on matters of vital interest to workers the world over are denounced as "aggression by propaganda."

One additional comment is needed: The Pan-American Federation of Labor includes the United States, Mexico and Porto Rico.

It is this imperialist tool that the A. F. of L. hails as the "recognized labor movement of the Americas."

LET us turn now to the speech of Fritz Tarnow, representing the German trade union delegation, and the reception accorded him.

One searches in vain in the remarks of this reformist bureaucrat whose party of the Second International pre-

How the French Proletariat Is Meeting the "Next War"

By AMY SCHECHTER

(Associate in Research Department)

HERE in the United States we realize the significance of the Riffian war and the Syrian campaign against the Druses as typical attempts on the part of French and Spanish imperialism to dominate and exploit colonial peoples, but the implications of the war in relation to the workers and peasants of the attacking countries have not been fully brought home to us. The fact is that the international nightmare of "the next war" has already become a hideous reality for the French proletariat, they are already reliving those days that we have allowed to become blurred to a merciful dimness in our minds because it is intolerable to remember them. Looking through the columns of the French Communist press we see the spectacle of the world war being reenacted—the colossal tragedy and stupidity of workers and peasants killing and being killed for the furtherance of their masters' imperialist aims to their own deeper enslavement; savage repression at home, graft and incompetence and brutality at the front—the dictatorship of the bourgeoisie in its war-time nakedness.

BUT between the way in which the French worker faced the situation in 1914-18, and the way in which he is facing it today, lies an immense and vital difference—a difference in which is summed up the progress of the workers' movement since the establishment of the Third International.

In 1914-18 the French worker went into the war a dupe to the patriotism the zeal for "La Gloire" that his masters, with the able assistance of his socialist betrayers, had used all the forces of press and propaganda to instill inti him; or at best, in dumb, vague protest against the forces that were engulfing him. Out of the travail of months and years upon the field of battle were born in him the beginnings of a revolutionary outlook and of internationalism—but instinctive, groping and unformulated. In Under Fire, Henry Barbusse, the Communist leader of the French organization of war veterans, has unforgettably portrayed these birth-pangs of internationalism on the battle fields of the world war. Today the French worker no longer faces war as an individual, doomed to the ignomy and loneliness of inarticulate and disregarded suffering. He faces it as a member, more or less conscious, of a class, with his own class parliamentary representatives, his own class press, his own class party and viewpoint and slogans.

In the chamber of deputies Doriot and the other members of the Communist parliamentary fraction have revealed the war game move by move, shown up the offensive against the Riffs as a Banque de France adventure, interpreted "La Gloire" in terms of cold cash. Now that Painleve refuses, because he is afraid, to reconvene parliament, the Communist press goes on with the fight against the campaign of French imperialism, carrying on, in addition, an unremitting struggle against the persecution of militant workers at home, and the abominable treatment of the soldiers at the front.

The anti-war propaganda of the Communist press is strenghtened by what constitutes perhaps one of the most significant signs of the orientation of the French proletariat in this "next war": the letters from soldier correspondents, who are the worker and peasant correspondents transferred from field and factory to the battle line. Nearly every issue of l'Humanitè carries one or more of these letters—conscious, definite in viewpoint, the expression not of men who have been disillusioned, like much of the correspondence published after the world war, but of men who have had no illusions from the start. There are also letters, bitter ones, from the wives and mothers of men at the front, written with the same unsentimental clearsightedness.

Soldier Correspondents

The following extracts are from the letter of a group of soldiers who are taking part in the campaign against the Druses in Syria.

"We, soldiers of the 4th esquadrille of the 39th aviation regiment at Damas (Syria), wish to give you a brief account of the abominations that we are being subjected to at the hands of the officers, who are making life hell for us here.

"In addition to having to work eighteen hours a day, we lack food, we get no rest, the sleep which is so necessary for us is refused us despite the regulations.

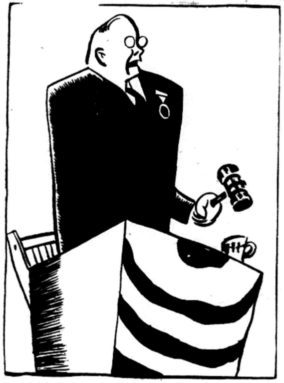
"We are commanded by a drunkard who is continually threatening us with all sorts of things. . .

At 3:30 a. m., we have reveille. From 3:30 on we have the job of breaking stones in order to level the ground, with a brute, Sergeant Meulin, in command.

"For punishment the thing here is flogging with sand-bags; after that we are locked up in stinking cells where we are devoured by mosquitoes and bugs.

"We do not know whether you are asquainted with the situation and with all the atrocities committed here. The boys are being massacred thru the stupidity of incompetent leaders.

The Head of the A. F. of L.



Green, the "greatest" president since the days of Samuel Gompers

"At the present moment we have 1,400 dead, 600 wounded, and in the course of the attack of August 2nd. 20,000 Druses captured, in a single day, 580 of our men, wounded 250, destroyed 4 aeroplanes, and took 19 guns together with their ammunition.

"It made us savage to see our total losses given as 5 wounded in the reports of this attack in the bourgeois press.

"The left bloc has promised us peace. We can see what it is doing towards it with the great democrat Sarrail.

"Well, rest assured that we are with you, against French imperialism and for fraternization.

"Vive the evacuation of Syria!

"Vive the return to France of the soldiers who are there!"

(Signed) A Group of Red Soldiers

Here are parts of a letter from a soldier fighting on the Riffian front:

"We are awaiting the order for departure . . . tomorrow evening we shall arrive at the firing line . . . You are in my thoughts . . . they are sad enough, I am homesick, and I'm not the only one. Some of the men are drunk, some of the officers as well . . .

"We have just passed three trains of wounded—the return from the front—and three munition trains going toward the lines.

"After today I can no longer keep you informed as to what is happening— or at best, very briefly, for the censorship is far-reaching, and many have already been arrested. However, one can sum up the whole business as follows: butchery, and an incoherent muddle of orders resulting from the lack of understanding and agreement among those who are in command.

Morocco, August, 1925

"We were in action on the 25th, 26th and 27th against F. . .el. . .B, and S. . ., with the object of getting in supplies, a business that goes under the name of 'policing' in the newspapers. We lost 12 men, one commissioned officer, and nine horses, mine among them. . . My friend V— is dead from a wound. . .

"Today the Riffs are making active preparations for the September offensive which was delayed on account of the unbearable heat. . .

'During the daytime there is a horrible spectacle here. Around the camp, at some 200 to 500 meters distance, men and horses are buried, but not deep enough. Well, from the effects of the heat and the emanations of decomposition the corpses become partly uncovered again; millions of flies settle on these flesh heaps; and in place of air we breathe the chloride of lime with which the whole camp is copiously sprinkled.

"The water is poisoned from the carcasses of animals which have putrified on the rocks above us. . .

"When you read the papers, always multiply our losses by 5, and you will have the exact reckoning for us. Divide by two, and you will have the total loss for the other side. . ."

And, finally, a soldier's mother writes:

"While the gentlemen of the government are at the seashore and the mountains to escape the heat, are we going to let our soldiers go on dying beneath the African sun? My son writes that even if he returns it will take a very long time for him to recover, because he is in such a terrible state. Is it for this that they are preaching repopulation?. . .

"Monsieur the Editor, I curse the war and those who unchained it. My husband in 1914-18, now my son, it never changes, it is always the same thing. I won't be able to stand this terrible anxiety much longer, and I think there are many other mothers in the same case. After killing the children do they want to kill the mothers of grief?

"Favoritism has again made its appearance. One has an arm that is too long, and he doesn't go. Others fix up some sort of graft. . . a place is found for them, and they don't go. It's the honest ones who are good to send out there, and to die there.

"We read l'Humanitè every day, and we thank you with all our hearts for struggling so bravely against this senseless war in Morocco. Let those who have interests out there go and defend themselves!"

The Workers' and Peasants' Congress

Individual protests of his nature, with their consciousness that French imperialism, and not the Riffs, is the enemy, are extremely significant as signs of the process of revolutionization that is going on among the proletariat of France, but it is in the great Workers' and Peasants' Congresses being held thruout France today that the true mass character of the resistance is revealed. These congresses are being organized by the central and regional committees of action, the united front committees formed to organize the united resistance of the proletariat to the steadily increasing taxation of workers and peasants, the capitalist onslaught upon the living standard of the French worker, to fascism, and above all, to the imperialist wars in Morocco and Syria.

The Workers' and Peasants' Congresses held, so far, in Paris, Lille, Beziers, Marseilles and Bordeaux, at which Communists, socialists, members of the the C. G. T. and the C. G. T. U., non-party workers and peasants were represented, have already rallied, in the face of the opposition of the government, police and yellow socialist leaders, some three million workers and peasants around the slogans of united proletarian resistance and defeatism in the war: an immediate peace, independence for the Riff, the evacuation of Morocco by means of fraternization at the front, by boycotting the transport of war material, and the preparation for the 24-hour general strike to consolidate and demonstrate the strength of the protest.

The initial congress, held in Paris in July, created a very deep impression thruout the country, and in addition to its success in rallying the non-party workers of the district around its slogans, was especially effective in arousing numbers of socialist workers to a consciously critical attitude toward their treacherous or cowardly leaders. Since the congress many letters have been sent in to the committee of action by socialist workers, in which the failure of the socialist chiefs to carry out the mandates of the congress—the demand for the immediate cessation of what amounts to military dictatorship and the reconvening of the chamber of deputies, etc.,—was bitterly criticized.

Alliance of Soldiers with Workers and Peasants.

The Bordeaux congress, which took place last month, and at which 718 delegates represented 278,000 workers and peasants, is noteworthy for the predominance of the peasant element. Side by side with the dockers and seamen of Bourdeaux, the metal workers and railroad workers, sat fishermen from Basses Pyrenees, vine-growers, and large delegations of workers and peasants from Lot-et-Garonne and Gers. In the course of the discussions the common interests of workers and peasants as against the exploiting class were brought out in unmistakable terms.

At this congress the third element necessary to complete the united proletarian front was added when a number of soldier and sailor delegates entered the hall. Behind locked doors (it is not healthy for soldiers or sailors to be found at such meetings in war-time) the whole audience rose to greet their comrades with the Inter-

A Short Presidential Excursion Into the Realms of Sociology and History

With a Few Observations Upon George Washington's Opinions of Down East Yankees

By H. M. WICKS.

WHEN President Coolidge publicly discusses political issues affecting the immediate interests of the ruling class of this country, he manages, in a dull sort of manner, to convey to his hearers some conception of governmental policy. It is possible, with some concentration, to determine what he, with his queer New England cacography, is driving at. For such occasions his utterances are carefully prepared, and unquestionably censored by his "political advisers."

But when, on occasion, he appears before conventions and indulges in the expression of his own opinions he becomes incoherent, if not positively silly.

Such an occasion was his recent appearance before the national council of the congregational churches, assembled in Washington. There, before a body of people whose bodies have been catapulted into the 20th century, tho their minds dwell in the fourteenth century, the president of the United States, asserted that religious influence over government was the proper agency to combat the ever recurring crime waves.

No one expects a chief executive of this country to understand the economic basis of crime and propose the only effective means of abolishing it—the revolution.

It is not too much, tho, to expect from a president a slight knowledge of the facts gleaned from governmental reports regarding crime. Are non-religious people criminal, while religious people observe the law? If one were to analyze crime statistics upon such a basis, but one conclusion could be reached: Religion, instead of preventing crime, is responsible for crime. The most powerful single religious body in the United States, claiming to have the support of less than 15 per cent of the population, furnishes more than 70 per cent of the criminals. On the basis of this fact alone one can make out a very good case against religion.

But just as we cannot accept the Coolidge analysis of the cure for crime, so we cannot accept the absurd contentions of certain freethinkers that religion breeds crime. The identical economic conditions that breed crime also breed ignorance, the basis of religion. Remove those conditions and both crime and religion will vanish.

A SECOND error revealed in his address was the statement:

> "It is my understanding that government rests upon religion. While in our own country we have wisely separated church and state in order to emancipate faith from all political interference, nevertheless the forms and theories of our government were laid in accordance with the prevailing religious conviction of the people."

Such a lack of understanding of the history of the United States is almost pathetic. It calls to mind that other genius, Mr. Henry Ford, the Detroit flivver magnate.

Does not Mr. Coolidge know that the American revolutionists, in their revolt against every form of feudalism, indelibly stamped upon the government they created the ultimatum that church and state must forever remain separated and that no man must be discriminated against because of his beliefs? If it is really Coolidge's understanding that government rests upon religion, his understanding is badly warped. Never at any time in the world's history did government rest upon religion. The close connection between church and state under feudalism sometimes created that illusion. It was because the feudal ruling class concealed its economic interests under the trappings of religion and because it used the church as an armed force against the rising bourgeoisie, that superficial observers imagined the feudal state was based upon religion.

The American and the French revolutionists at the close of the 18th century proclaimed the complete separation of the church from the state as a means of destroying this combination that under feudalism proved such a bulwark aganist them.

ALTHO Coolidge says in one breath that government rests upon religion, in the next he pays lip service to the separation of church and state, then immediately qualifies it with the assertion that "nevertheless the forms and theories of our government were laid in accordance with the prevailing religious convictions of the people." What people? Tom Payne, who wrote the first draft of the declaration of independence? Thomas Jefferson, who completed it? Neither of them were christians. And as for George Washington, the "father" of his country, no one would be so presumptuous as to acclaim him an orthodox christian. The fundamentalists of today would consign him to the lowest depths of their phantom hell.

IT was not the puritan founders of New England whose religious convictions formed the theories of the American government. Tho it was to their interest as a part of the rising bourgeoisie to fight against all the traditions of feudalism, they could not overcome the feudal conviction that government and religion must be inseparable. Karl Marx well said:

> "The traditions of all past generations weighs like an alp upon the brain of the living."

This applies with particular force today in New England and Calvin Coolidge seems to have gained his inspiration on the connection between church and state from the pre-capitalistic period.

It is an established fact, proved by reams of historical documents, that the relics of feudalism transplanted to the new world with the puritans persisted to such a degree that it is questionable whether their participation in the war of the revolution was not more helpful to the enemy than to the colonies. Being puritans they did not have the courage openly to oppose the war, so most of them stayed home. Those that did go were such a sneaking, thieving gang that, according to George Washington, they seriously endangered the revolution.

THESE people, who called themselves a superior race, with the most exalted ideals, proved to be the most treacherous, sordid, venal, grasping aggregation that the history of this country records. While a large part of the continental army, under command of Washington, was enduring indescribable hardships and while every effort was made to raise money to pay the soldiers in action, the New Englanders were having a pious time of it. Officers absented themselves from duty, took privates with them and worked them on their own farms while both drew pay from the continental army.

Washington, whose military achievements are equalled by his ability ar a caustic writer described these "superior people" in letters to some of his confidants who had been sent to New England thusly:

> "Notwithstanding all the public virtue which is ascribed to them (the New Englanders—H. M. W.) there is no nation under the sun—that I ever came across—pay greater adoration to money than they do. . . Such a dearth of public spirit and want of virtue, such stock-jobbing and fertility in all the low arts to obtain advantages of one kind and another. . . I never saw before, and pray God I never will be witness to again. Such a dirty, mercenary spirit pervades the whole that I should not be at all surprised at any disaster that may happen." (George Washington, Writings, Vol. III., pp. 264f, 413.)

Thus we have the first president's picture of the prototypes of the twenty-ninth president. We wonder what sort of pen picture Washington would draw of Coolidge after reading his latest utterances.

It was the Paynes, Jeffersons and Washingtons, not the religionists of New England that made the revolution possible.

AT this point some hundred per cent American is likely to arise and derisively ask: Why quote these historical figures against Coolidge? Are they not, like Coolidge, considered by you as representatives of the bourgeoisie? Our unequivocal reply would be: Yes! But the revolutionary founders of this country represented capitalism in its infancy. They had the courage to fight the revolutionary battles of their day against an ignorant and vicious tyranny. Today, however, that class whose supremacy they fought to establish has outlived its usefulness. From being a revolutionary class 150 years ago, it has now become a bulwark of reaction, a fetter upon production, and a new class created within the process of capitalist production itself has rose to challenge it.

There is a vast difference between being a representative of the revolutionary bourgeoisie at the close of the 18th century and a representative of the bourgeoisie in the year 1925 when it can only exist by the most frightful despotism known to the history of mankind. It is the difference between the determined revolutionist and the tool of reaction.

Coolidge by his utterances proves that he has no conception of the history of the government at the head of which he stands as a puppet. So long as he is simply a megaphone for the powers that direct the executive committee of the capitalist class at Washington, his pathetic lack of knowledge is not revealed. But on those occasions when he is not under the guidance of Wall Street we see the real Coolidge—a down east Yankee with all the amazing stupidity of that clan.

WORKER'S SCHOOL REVIEWS PARTY HISTORY IN TRAINING COMRADES FOR BIG TASK OF BOLSHEVIZATION

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Demand for the party training course at the New York Workers' School is proving to be much heavier than expected and at least two groups will have to be started. Even at that, all of those applying cannot be admitted as over fifty applications have been received and only twenty-five will be admitted to each of the two groups. Many more applications are expected. Admission will be made on the basis of activity and previous preparation.

One of the sections of the party training course is a course in "Party History and Problems," instructor, William W. Weinstone. The aim of this course is highly political: To orientate leading comrades for a solution of future problems thru a study of present and past ones.

This course will seek to familiarize the membership with the origins of the Communist movement; its socialist background; the left wing struggles in the socialist movement, which are the roots of the ideology prevailing in the American movement. It will deal with the various groupings which existed within the movement; their contributions toward the movement and how they affect party attitude today; the ideological struggles and the causes for them, such as the split in the left wing, the struggle between the C. P. and C. L. P., the C. P. and the U. C. P., the workers' council group and the Communist Party and struggles to date—treating these struggles from the Marxist-Leninist standpoint. The course will aim to show the development of the party toward a Bolshevist party and will treat of the obstacles leading toward it and how to overcome them.

In each period of the party history, the problems will be taken up and discussed from the viewpoint of the Communist International. Effort will be made to relate the C. I. viewpoint at the various congresses with the party attitude toward such problems as the party organizational structure and the federations, the legal and illegal organization; the united front and labor party; trade union work; agrarian and Negro work and imperialism. No one can understand the task of bolshevization of our party without a knowledge of the party history and problems.

Towards Party Reorganization - By Jay Lovestone

AT the Chicago conference of party functionaries there were asked many questions involving the problems of reorganization. Very likely these problems will be faced by the comrades in the other districts. Their solution is, therefore, the concern of the party membership thruout the country.

Some of these questions and answers follow:

QUESTION: What is to become of the branch property and the money which some of the branches have in their treasury?

Answer: Upon reorganization every branch secretary should bring all his or her records up to date and turn these over to the district organizer.

Every branch, before it disbands as a party unit, that is, before its members are organized into shop and street nuclei, should liquidate all its debts to such party institutions as The DAILY WORKER, the district and national offices, etc. If there are any funds after such debt settlements, the remaining money shall be divided as follows: Fifty per cent to The DAILY WORKER; twenty-five per cent to the district office and twenty-five per cent to the national office of the party.

In cases where branches own property, like buildings, the present party members of the particular branch in question shall constitute a body for taking over the property, into which body only party members shall enter as bona fide members, irrespective of their nationality. In cases where non-party members are co-owners of branch club rooms, etc., our party members should form a Communist fraction in the owning body and thus serve to control and own this property, under the instructions and as agents of the party.

QUESTION: Some of our members do not live in Chicago, altho they pay dues to our branch here. Where will they be attached to?

Answer: After our party is reorganized on the basis of shop nuclei, no one will be allowed to live and work in one city and be a party member in another city. Every comrade will hold his membership either in a shop nucleus, that is on the basis of being connected with a party unit in his place of employment, or in a street nucleus, that is, on the basis of his being connected with a party unit in the residential section where he happens to be living. No one will, after reorganization, be permitted to attach hmiself to the party on the mere basis of having friends in or fond recollections of a particular party unit.

If a member neither lives nor works in a city he will not be able to be a party member in that city. Everyone will have to be a member of a party unit located in the section where he works or lives in a particular city.

QUESTION: How will migratory workers hold their membership in the party?

Answer: The following shall be the rules for migratory workers who desire to belong to the party:

1. They shall be considered as national office members of the party, being connected with the party center and working under instructions of the C. E. C. thru one or several special departments.

2. These migratory worker-party members shall immediately notify the party district organizer of the territory in which they happen to find themselves at any time.

3. After such proper and prompt notification of the district organizer by the migratory worker-member, the latter shall fully exercise all his party membership rights in any unit of the district in question. Likewise, this migratory worker-party member shall then be prepared to discharge all duties and tasks which may be assigned to any party members of the districts at the time in which he finds himself there.

QUESTION: Will the international branch be based solely on residential or on shop location?

Answer: The international branch is simply another name for the street nucleus. The street nucleus is to be based solely on residential area. It is the shop nucleus which is to be based solely on the industrial area, the place of employment.

QUESTION: What about those who work in the transportation industry?

Answer: If a comrade works as a chauffeur or truck driver, he will become a member of a shop nucleus in his place of employment, provided that there are three or more party members employed there. Otherwise the comrade in question may be attached to another shop or to a street nucleus.

If a comrade works as a railway shop hand, maintenance of way man, locomotive fireman or locomotive engineer, etc., in the transportation industry, the procedure will be along the same general lines. The roundhouse, the railway or freight station is to be the point of organization for the party members employed in any capacity on a particular railway or system of railways.

QUESTION: In my particular place there are three party members. Are we to go into a shop nucleus or a street nucleus?

Answer: Of course, you are to go into a shop nucleus. Don't wait for anybody to come around and try to organize you. It is your job to take the initiative and proceed to organize yourself at once into a shop nucleus. Immediately get on the job and make your nucleus active. The first task is for each of you individually to get one or two new members into the nucleus. You will se how your shop nucleus will grow, how much new blood you will add to your group thru your being active, in accordance with the instructions given in the C. E. C. reorganization plan.

QUESTION: Is the present division of Chicago into six sections supposed to be permanent or temporary? Is this division on an industrial or on a parliamentary basis?

Answer: The present division is temporary. This does not necessarily mean that this division may not be permanent. Our analysis and classification of the information gathered from registering our membership will decide the final lines of sub-division in the city.

The present, or temporary, sub-division is based on the location of industry, on transportation facilities and on a recognition of the existing parliamentary sub-divisions in the city. In organizing our shop nuclei and in setting up new sections we must not totally disregard the need for our apparatus functioning in election campaigns. That is why we must in subdividing the city into certain industrial sections also take into account the parliamentary lines so that, as much as possible, our sub-divisions based on the industrial sections will enable our party to function effectively in election campaigns.

QUESTION: The prestige of our branch in the (name of nationality of language branch is omitted) colony is great. The disappearance of the branch as such will have a bad impression on the colony. May we not, then, after reorganization maintain the present branch and call it the (language) branch or fraction of the Workers Party?

Answer: Under no circumstances should any of the existing language branches maintain themselves as branches, in name or in fact, after party reorganization. The only party units, in name as well as in fact, after party reorganization are the shop and the street nuclei.

The present language branches are to become fractions of the party in the workingmen's clubs which they are to organize. These workingmen's clubs will consist of non-party proletarians as well as party members. These workingmen's clubs will not be units of the party. These workingmen's club will serve as rallying centers for our party, as recruiting fields where the members of our party speaking a particular language will have additional opportunities to win over for Communism, to draw into the party, workers of their own nationality.

If we were to call such workingmen's clubs branches of the Workers Party we would be wrong on two scores. First of all, we would be giving the impression that this club containing non-party members is a unit of the party. Secondly, we would be narrowing the basis of organization for these workingmen's clubs. These clubs are not to consist only of those proletarians who are Communists. The constitution of these clubs is to be much more inclusive, much broader. Any worker who accepts, in general, the idea of the class struggle, regardless of how little he knows about or how unready he happens to be at this time for party membership, is eligible for membership in these clubs. In fact we must strive to draw as many as possible such non-Communist workers into these clubs so that we may have the chance to propagate Comunism amongst them.

Obviously it is impossible to call publicly such workingmen's clubs party fractions of a particular nationality. Such methods will not draw to us the non-party elements we must have in these clubs. How can we ask a non-party member to join a party fraction? If a worker is not a member of the party he cannot be a member of the party fraction. The principle of Communist fraction work applied in the trade unions, in the benefit societies, in the co-operative societies, and in other working class organizations is to be strictly adhered to in the work of the Communist fractions in these workingmen's clubs. The party members of a particular language group in this country should win their prestige for Communism thru their work for the party, thru their activities for Communism.

QUESTION: Our branch is to register at a membership meeting of section so and so at this or that date. Will our branch have any more meetings at all after this registration date?

Answer: Upon classifying the information gathered at the registration meetings of a particular section the comrades of the branches in the section in question will be assigned as follows: 1. If possible, they will be immediately organized into shop nuclei and will start functioning immediately as such. 2. The comrades may be organized as street nuclei members. 3. Where it is impossible to assign the comrades to either a shop or a street nucleus in the section being registered, then they may be asked to appear again at the registration meetnig of the section where they work and there become members of a shop nucleus in the plant where they work or attached to some particular shop nucleus in the industrial section, in case less than three comrades work in their place of employment.

At most one branch meeting should be held after the section registration meeting has been held. This meeting should be given over completely to disposing of the affairs of the branch as a branch; for example, bringing up all accounts to date, settling debts with party institutions, putting the records in order for the district office, etc.

American Capital Abroad

By EARL R. BROWDER

TEN years ago the United States was a field for the investment of capital from abroad. British, Belgian, French and German capitalists owned securities from America amounting to over four billion dollars.

"Them days is gone forever," as Rube would say.

At the beginning of 1925, the international debit balance of the U. S. had changed to a credit balance, consisting of:

Government loans 12 billion dollars.

Government guaranteed loans to private investors, 9½ billion dollars, Which is not to mention the volume of private financial investments in Europe.

And in 1925, this movement of American capital abroad has gone on at an accelerated pace. In the first nine months of this year, over one billion dollars has gone abroad on bonds and notes. The report of the Wall Street Journal (October 17th) gives us the following figures:

Capital invested in—	Nine months of 1925	Nine months of 1924
Total foreign bonds and notes	$1,039,018,000	$760,652,000
Foreign governments	726,623,000	509,376,000
Foreign corporations	190,250,000	84,000,000

The governmental loans were distributed as follows:

European countries, $284,300,000; Canada, $212,972,000; Latin-American countries, $154,251,000; Australia, $75,000,000.

Decline of Great Britain

"GREAT BRITAIN is on the road to ruin." This is not a Communist prophecy. It is the statement of Sir George B. Hunter, a leading figure in British shipbuilding.

The outstanding symptom of the decline which brings forth such wails from British capitalists, is the inability of British finance to play the leading role in the export of capital. Formerly the greatest financiers thruout the world, holding the world's industry in pawn, today Britain cannot even meet the demands of her own colonies. Canada and Australia come to Wall Street, instead of going to "the City" for their loans.

During the nine months of 1925 while the U. S. was exporting capital of over a billion dollars, Great Britain showed the following:

Foreign governments, none.

Foreign corporations, $8,000,000.

British possessions, $177,500,000.

The United States is thus seen to be furnishing British possessions with more capital, by about 40 per cent, than Britain herself is doing.

New Capital in Britain and America.

VERY illuminating of the course of economic events in the two great centers of imperialism, is the comparison between the total volume of new capital flotations in the first nine months of 1925. They are:

Great Britain ....$ 800,000,000
United States 4,300,000,000

Of Great Britain's new capital flotations, only one per cent went to foreign countries. Of American, almost 25 per cent was foreign.

American capital is abroad, with a vengeance, and entering in one way or another, every field of exploitation in the world. And contrary to the traditions of the era of Mark Twain, this new American traveller is not "An Innocent Abroad." The world is now dealing with an America hard as nails, shrewd in business, filled with a sense of power and the arrogance of the noveau riche. And the American working class will before long be called upon to shed its blood to enforce the will and protect the property of this new world-traveller.

Detroit Women to Give Freiheit Benefit This Sunday Evening

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 23.—On Sunday evening, October 25th, the Women's Educational Circle of Detroit, which is affiliated with the Detroit federation of working class women's organizations, is giving a concert and package party for the benefit of the Freiheit. The affair will be held in Carpenters' Hall, 935 Alger Ave., near Oakland.

An exceptional concert program has been arranged and some of the best talent in Detroit will participate. The Women's Educational Circle is justly famous for the manner in which they attend to the hunger needs of their patrons and all who are fortunate enough to be present Sunday evening are assured an enjoyable time. Festivities will begin at 5:30 sharp. Admission is 25 cents.

With Arms in Hand - - - A STORY OF THE RED ARMY

(In Memory of Eva Voikhanskaya and Katya Antipova.)

By V. K.

It was autumn—autumn's golden glow pervaded—the Autumn leaves drifted down onto the corridor of pines, along these beautiful lines fantastically picturesque. A group was standing motionless and all the more restless and the life of our train seemed even the more noisy, deserted as we were here, remote from the village.

It was only yesterday that we emerged from the fight. Everyone is overjoyed at the temporary repose and tries to utilize it as fully as possible.

But there is no rest for the sisters. There are only two of them in our detachment. There is Evinka, as they call her here, so serious and with such wise eyes, and the lively, mannish Comrade Antipova.

There are ten men waiting to be bandaged in their wagon. But they also have a wagon with seriously wounded cases, with whom they must remain all the time.

"Evinka, come and drink some tea," came the cry from the campfire. But even while these words were being pronounced the others undrstood—she would not leave her work.

And so they went on working until the evening. And tomorrow, perhaps, there will be more fighting, and Evinka, without having had time to rest, will go out with the detachment right into the front line. She conquered this place from Antipova, and was always there. She is making herself manly.

Sister Antipova is there and we rarely allow her to enter the front line.

Around the campfire there is great noise and joviality. They are drinking tea and making jokes. They also fry potatoes. Many of them, idle by habit and simply through this monotonous hard life are swearing coarsely. That is, if Evinka is not too near. When she comes, woe betide he who forgets. She shames and scolds him like a child. And the guilty one remains silent.

She alone is able to reprimand in such a reasoning way, to explain the barbarity of coarse lack of self-restraint.

Many of us in this section are Tartars, among whom there seems to be some kind of special attitude towards Eva.

The simple tyeptyars from the Ufa Gubernia call her "Ivunka." And in this distorted name there was a kind of honorary admiration. Anyone of them who fell under Eva's eye while doing something silly, or swearing, would blush and feel ashamed, just like a child, and afterwards would apologize to her somewhere on the quiet.

In this respect, Comrade Antipova in no way resembled Eva. She was a heroine. There were few fighters like her, and many a time she bore the brunt of the front line fighting together with us fellows, but she was exactly like all of us, she was a comrade among us.

We loved her also, in heroism and self-restraint we did not distinguish between them.

Eva made all of us keep order, even including Antipova.

"How shameless you are," she would often say. "Instead of raising the peasantry up to your own level, you are descending to their level you are extinguishing any aspirations they have towards perfection."

The commander of the detachment, the worker Melnikov, energetic and fearles, was an example to us in everything. But Eva sometimes found it worth while arguing with him and we began to wonder whether we ought to imitate him in swearing.

Evinka was sleeping, lying against the wall of the wagon among the wounded when we woke her up.

We had to go to an attack on the line. Under shelter there was an armored wagon boarded up and reinforced with sand. Eva had to go with us.

The raw, dark night came on. Carefully spreading out along both sides of the line, we went down towards the village occupied by the Whites.

Eva went with her inseparable carbine, keeping to the left flank of the line. She always chose to place herself among the most indecisive men and those that were most susceptible to panic. I listened how her neighbors in the line, who were Tartars, whispered to each other about her in their own language, astonished at her manliness and at the same time infected by it.

We had already gone a few versts.

Suddenly a sharp noise, mingled with the cries of people, could be heard in front of the line. Rifle fire burst forth. Nobody fired. After a few seconds we heard the hoarse voice of Melnikov shouting away in front: "Quickly, sister, sister."

But Evinka was already there. We saw how her silhouette appeared suddenly against the embankment, and in a minute or two, with somebody's help, she drew Melnikov onto the bank.

Melnikov and a few others who had been in the forward line, had come up against the entrenchment of the Whites who had fired on them. Melnikov was wounded.

This thought deeply touched me.

I began searching in the dark for one of the platoon commanders quietly calling out, so that Melnikov could be quickly replaced.

Comrade Dmitriev took over command.

The cross-firing became yet more intense. But the night is not terrible. We only fear that the youth will not first time they have come under fire—these Bashkir volunteers.

The Whites have an armored car.

Eva returned to the firing lines. She conspires and consults with Dmitriev. She is as decisive as ever.

"I will go down to the station. I will bring along the armored train. Hold out."

The armored train, narrow and built of boards, with a double wall between which is a bank of sand, is at the station. I think to myself: Suppose it will be difficult for the engine to bring it along here. I don't know whether the crew is ready.

"You had better take Taroshin with you."

"No, it does not matter; I will be able to manage."

And she departed.

Groans can be heard in the firing line. Most of those operating in front are wounded.

The groans have a bad effect on many.

I send down to the line asking that the wounded be sent behind to Antipova, who has already come down and is working behind the sandbank.

The minutes go by slowly. No one can tell what will be ahead. Will there be strength to hold out? In the morning we still will be too weak. The Whites will be able to notice our lack of numbers.

Dmitriev sent the news down to the firing line that the armored train will soon be along.

On those rare occasions when between the volleys of rifle fire, when there came sharp minutes of pause, we tried to listen anxiously. From the Whites' side can be heard from afar the puffing of engines. Their train has arrived, but they are frightened to move away as they do not know the line.

Will we be able to give the warning in time? Our armored train is perhaps on the Sarapool branch line. These thoughts seemed to set the head afire. Everyone is thinking the same thing. I can hear them whispering about it on the right.

Slowly, from behind, indistinct sounds arise. The whisper runs along the sand bank: "The train is coming."

We feel in the dark that the armored train is drawn up behind the firing line. There is general liveliness. The line increases its fire.

Eva is in command. "Bravo!" they whisper in the front line.

Eva is on the engine. The commander of the armored train is shouting across to her.

When we crept out in front of the line, the machine guns from the train did their work.

In between the flashes in front, we see the thin line of the Whites. Their train is silent.

I send Eva along to Dmitriev. Dawn is approaching.

The morning started with a fight between our armored train and that of the Whites. We move forward.

I did not witness their death. But they fell beneath the hands of the White Guard beasts. This is what was communicated about them during the last days.

Antipova in the last fight for the occupation of Ijevsk was all the time in the firing line. She did not wish to leave it. There were not many men in the company, and the Whites were fighting stubbornly. When she was hit in the chest by a bullet she succeeded in crying out:

"I am only wounded, comrades, you go forward, don't waste time over me."

Eva arrived safely in Ufa.

In March, 1919, Kolchak, renewing his attack, threatened Ufa. Eva, who left town at the last minute, was caught by the Cossacks.

An exasperated Cossack officer dared to ask her:

"You are a Communist?"

"Yes, a Communist," firmly replied Eva.

These wild beasts fell upon her with coarse invective, and with blows of their swords they terminated Eva's life.

And thus they are no more.

A NEW LIFE - - -

By MARY FELDMAN

(Worker Correspondent)

Helen was a little excited when she went the first day to work at the trimming-shop. A new life to start, new habits to form, new ideals to come . . . Her heart throbbed while she was going up in the elevator.

A moment later she entered the workroom. Side by side in a long double row there were machines, and girls bending over them sewing endless yards of colorful laces. Her future companions! She greeted them all mentally and smiled indefinitely.

Her smile vanished with the appearance of the forelady, a thin little woman with a tired and angered expression on her face. She took Helen to an unoccupied machine and hurriedly showed her how to manage it. Her dry voice harmonized with the rythmical rattle of the machine, which she operated masterfully. To her Helen was one of many, whom during long years of experience, she taught the trade. Just an object, a human object.

Helen felt humiliated. Left alone with a piece of cloth to practice on she became wholly occupied with the problem how to master the machine. It was difficult, for the machine ran stubbornly and heedlessly its own way. It became a fight between human intelligence and thoughtless power. She had to move her fingers rapidly to follow the machine's lead. Only little by little the intelligence began to win.

In a moment of depression, unable to disentangle the thread and not seeing the forelady around, she was greatly comforted when a girl offered her assistance. It was May, who worked not far from her.

"It is only the beginning, that is hard," she said sympatetically. "In a few days you will be turning out piles of work and wondering when you did it."

It was encouraging and promising. Helen wanted to work like the others. She became conscious of the pleasure of producing.

The forelady approached them and May went away. The forelady looked scornfully at them and turning to a pair of laughing girls remarked angrily: "Don't fool around, girls, there is a lot of work to be done to-day."

Many times afterwards May came to see how Helen worked. Helen was eager to know about the factory and May was ready to relate details of factory life. Asked if she liked her work May answered negatively.

"I'd like it much better if they paid properly. I am disgusted." Seeing Helen's anxious look she continued. "I am one of the best workers here and they know it. Still I get only 18 dollars being here a year already. So I am taking it a little easier. They are mad, but I don't care."

"Why don't you ask for a raise?"

May's sarcastic laughter was the only answer.

"I keep kicking and kicking all the time. All I get is a dollar raise at the best."

"But they cheat you!" exclaimed Helen.

"Of course. That is what they are doing all the time. Just imagine: we get $12 in the beginning, they pay for the few days of learning too, then you be sure not to get any raise for a long time."

In their exitement they talked laudly. It attracted the attention of a passing girl, who ironically addressesd May.

"Again the same theme. You ought to realize at least that you can not fight the bosses."

"Why not?" said Helen. "We all"—her glance encircled all the girls—"we all can."

"Not all—I shall not be with you."

"These are the eternal dumbells," scoffed May after her.

The time passed quickly. Turning toward the window Helen could see the big hands of a huge clock, slowly nearing 12.

Then it struck, the factory-bell rang and the machines with a swishing noise stopped. The workers put away their work and hurried for lunch. Helen put her rag away too. Around her was noise, loud talk and laughter. It was the "new life" and she was part of it. She rose and her face bore a definite decision. She must be strong to fight for better . . . to fight, to fight . . .

Negro Labor Congress Asks for Artistic Talent

The American Negro Labor Congress, which will open at Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles avenue, Chicago, on Sunday, Oct. 25, has issued an appeal to all colored and white workers to participate in the evening programs which will occupy every evening during the week of October 25 to 31.

Every white and colored worker is called upon to aid in the arranging of the programs to be given at the large mass meetings to be held during the evening sessions of the congress. Recitations, monologues, classical dancing, singing, instrument playing—all these forms of talent will be welcomed by the arrangements committee.

Any worker desiring to assist in this work will please get in touch with A. Andrew Torrence, chairman of the arrangements committee, at the American Negro Labor Congress headquarters, 3456 S. Indiana Ave.

How the French Proletariat Is Meeting the "Next War"

national, and their message of solidarity was received with the greatest enthusiasm. "We are with you," they said, "The soldiers and sailors are suffering and dying. . . They are being crushed by repression. . . The sailors of the Courbet and of the Paris are paying dearly for their demand for better conditions. . . Whatever the cost, the sailors and soldiers will go on with the struggle against the war and against capitalism." France already has her soviets of workers, soldiers and peasants in embryo.

At the Marseilles congress delegates from the revolutionary sailors of the Mediterranean fleet, who mutinied in July of this year against the rotten conditions on shipboard, and against participation in the Riffian war, also participated. Despite the fact that of the 1,200 delegates several hundred were non-party, and about a hundred socialist, the congress organized a demonstration to be held before the Polish embassy in protest against the execution of our comrades in Poland. The police who had forbidden the demonstration met the procession with drawn swords and revolvers, and a number of the demonstrators and of the crowds of Marseilles workers who had joined the procession as it went along were beaten and wounded. The fact that the Marseilles municipal council which is socialist offered no opposition to this attack, made a deep and hostile impression on the delegates.

Workers' Commission of Enquiry at Front

Last month the central council of action, insisting upon the right of the workers to know the full truth in regard to the treatment of their comrades at the front, the details of the bombing expeditions against defenseless Riffian villages, and, in general, to get a faithful picture of French imperialism in action, sent a commission of enquiry direct to the theater of war in Morocco. The government, naturally made every effort to prevent the commission from leaving France, and is now putting all manner of obstacles in its path to stop it from performing its mission. On the other hand, the government has not only done everything in its power to facilitate the work of the deputation composed of bourgeois parliamentary deputies and journalists which is now in Morocco, and which it knows can be depended upon to see and to write only what ought to be seen and written, but has paid the expenses of the members, and placed both the civil and military authorities at their disposal.

When the commission of enquiry left Paris, the Paris Soir came out with the announcement "that the administrative authorities of Morocco have taken all measures to prevent the debarkation of these undesirables." At Bordeaux the steamship company, which had been tipped off by the police, refused to sell them tickets— "all the tickets were taken for the next two months." Then at Marseilles the police attempted to get hold of Doriot, perhaps the most hated and feared of the Communist deputies by the gentlemen whose game he has been showing up, and prevent him from proceeding with the commission, but he managed to evade them and the delegation embarked for Oran in Algeria. As soon as the identity of the members of the commission was recognized on shipboard, a wireless was sent to Oran, where the authorities hastily recruited a number of loafers and stoolpigeons and organized a "spontaneous" hostile demonstration which was duly broadcasted by the French bourgeois press.

All the capitalist newspapers in France are carrying savage attacks on the commission of enquiry, some, the Libertè and France Militaire for instance, openly appealing to violence in order to put a stop to its further activities. According to latest accounts however, our comrades are proceeding with their project, and the central and local committees of actions are calling for the workers and peasants to agitate for the widest support of the delegation in the shops and factories and villages.

The government, is of course, not depending on repressive measures alone— in order to fight the anti-war feeling among the masses. It is resorting to all sorts of counter-propaganda, that the Riffs are being financed by German gold, etc etc.,—and, with the aid of the socialist chiefs is seeking by every means to discredit the Communist Party and destroy its steadily growing influence. Despite its efforts, however, and despite the ancient habit of patriotism whose last traces among the masses cannot be wiped out in a day, the answer which the French proletariat is giving to the all-important question "What will the workers do in the next war?" is one thing that may well give us courage and hope for the future. More than a first step has been taken toward "turning the imperialist wars of nations into the civil war of classes."

Tendencies of the Italian Opposition

By EDMONDO PELUSO
(Rome)

THE disintegration of the opposition parties takes its course and is becoming more and more accelerated, and at the same time the fascist regime is strengthening and consolidating itself. The monarchy has now quite gone over to the side of fascism and has taken with it the general staff of the regular army and the high officials, and finally the various social strata of the bourgeoisie who vacillated a little after the murder of Matteotti, have at last recognized that at the present moment fascism alone can protect and defend their interests.

The anti-fascist movement has thus, under the lead of the "democracy" been completely defeated. The bloc compounded of very heterogeneous elements, which the opposition formed against Mussolini's regime, continues to crumble away gradually. The constitutionalists who paid homage to the king on the occasion of his jubilee in spite of the fact that he had left them in the lurch, called forth loud protests from the non-constitutional parties (republicans, social-democrats and Maximalists.) In order to satisfy the masses who followed in their train, these parties had to give expression to threats of separation. But these threats remained nothing but threats and at the last meeting of the Aventine bloc, they showed, by unanimously passing the resolution not to return to parliament, that their fate is linked for ever with that of the bourgeois "democracy."

It is, as a matter of fact, obvious that these three parties, who call themselves anti-constitutional, have completely lost their independence and that they only continue to exist as a fraction of the "democratic constitutional" bloc whose discipline and instructions they accept.

IF this however is true of the republican, social-democratic and maximalist leaders, it does not apply to the masses who follow them. Many proletarian elements of these parties come to us, take part in the formation of workers' and peasants' committees, and make proposals for common action, emphasizing that they agree with our slogans.

One of the reasons for the proposal made by the Communists to these anti-constitutional parties, in which they belong, want to act, and see that the Communists alone can now take the lead in the fight against fascism and carry it thru to a successful issue.

THE proposal for alliance which the Communists have made to the republicans, socialist (both the unitarians and the maximalists) and to the committee of action of Sardinia (autonomists) is the continuation of the strategic line which the party has pursued, since the events of last year endangered the existence of the fascist regime. When we remember that the Communists Party of Italy at that time proposed to the opposition parties to constitute themselves as an opposition parliament, which would have been the first step towards an open fight against the usurping and oppressive regime, but that the Aventine rejected it, is it not evident that this represents the last reserve of the bourgeosie against proletarian revolution? In view of this refusal, the Communist Party of Italy proposed to the so-called proletarian parties, a general strike, which was also rejected.

Today the development of events makes it possible to take up again the line sketched at that time, in order once more to set in motion the masses which are prevented from action by the parties to which they are attached. Since the tactics of the past year have made our party the third factor in the political life of Italy, this proposal of an alliance will doubtless serve to gather the active masses who are eager to defeat fascism, round the Communist Party of Italy.

THE open letter of the Communist Party to the republicans and socialists invites them to a meeting in order to discuss the general situation of the country and to decide on a line of action for the fight against fascism

It laid down the following fundamental conditions:

1. The control of the workers over industry as the only means of fighting against the plutocracy which finances fascism.
2. The land to the peasants.
3. A fight for the formation of a republican conference which should be formed on the basis of the workers' and peasants' committees and should organize all the anti-fascist forces of the people.

THIS proposal greatly embarassed the parties to whom it was made. At first they tried to suppress it and then hardly mentioned it. The government on its part immediately understood the significance of our strategy and immediately had all our newspapers confiscated, among them the daily paper which had published the news, and had the arrests and persecutions of the Communists increased. It is obvious that the political situation in Italy will be entirely changed if, as we believe, the opposition of the Aventine is replaced by the pressure of the proletarian opposition. Having been prevented from openly propagating our proposal, we printed it secretly and distributed it among the masses,

The answer of the Italian social-democrats who, at their last congress, made fundamental declarations which are not anti-monarchistic, was a firm and categorical refusal. The committee of action of Sardinia declares itself ready to accept the proposals and to stand up for them against the opposition parties. The republicans have not yet answered, but the party in the most embarassing situation is that of the maximalists who do not know what to answer: while the leaders will, in no way, work hand in hand with the Communists, the masses who are their followers, hold the opposite point of view.

There can be no doubt that this uow tactical line will serve to streng- new tactical line will serve to strengthen the prestige of the Communist the course of development in Italy.

NEAR THE END OF HIS ROPE

By ALEX REID.
(Secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee.)

THE writer of this article stood in Springfield one evening some time ago and witnessed a demonstration against Frank Farrington, the head of the Illinois mine workers' organization. It was a very significant occurrence, considering what is going on in the miners' union.

A large collection of miners were proceeding towards the district office of the union with a grim look of determination on their faces. Miners could be seen in front of the building, on each side of it, and in front of it, while many were seen to go up into the building, to the headquarters of the chief faker, Farrington. I looked along the block and noticed three policemen there, and realized the importance of their presence at that particular place at that particular time.

ORDINARILY, you cannot see any policemen around there, as the corner is not very busy, and their presence at this time showed that they were prepared for something special. Not knowing what the demonstration was about, I asked a miner if a meeting of unusual importance was taking place at the district office, and he informed me as follows:

"Brother, there is surely a meeting at this office this evening; we are going to finish our fight in this subdistrict one way or another right now. We are tired of this treason and we are not going to stand for it any more. Farrington has to undo some of his dirty work or he has to get out of the union."

I watched the crowd about an hour, and they finally left the building and returned to the miners' local building, as I afterward learned.

AFTER their meeting I found out that Farrington's tool, "Joker" Young, had been to their meeting attempting to explain away his treachery to the miners in that particular local, and justify his treason to Joe Loda, a deposed checkweighman, whom Young had betrayed. The meeting of the miners had resulted in determination to have the facts thrashed out, and as Farrington's tool, the drunken board member Young, had been unable to justify his position, the miners had taken up the question with Farrington.

I am informed that the miners were under great restraint to keep from pitching the drunken board member thru the window of the local union building. At this meeting the miners deputized about forty members to go to the district office and bring Farrington to the local willingly or otherwise, to explain his position and his actions to the outraged miners, relative to the Loda case and to other cases. Needless to say, Farrington refused to come at that time, and has not yet shown up before the betrayed miners.

THIS demonstration has shown that Farrington has about reached his limit in the miners' uinon. His treacherous reign is rapidly drawing to a close. On every hand in Illinois you hear mutterings against him. Nine out of every ten men are condemning him, accusing him of treachery to the coal miners.

A campaign for a special convention of the district is being carried on, to put Farrington on trial for his many violations of the miners' constitution and contract. All over the state of Illinois the miners are preparing petitions for this special convention to rid the state once and for all of the king of traitors, Frank Farrington.

Carrying the Education Into the Shops

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.

THE reorganization of our party implies the reorganization of all of its departments. The discussions in the agitprop committee of district 2 have revealed that even members of that committee do not understand this fundamental fact. The educational activity of our party must be thoroghly reorganized as to form and content if it is not to remain on the old-social-democratic and "narrow "monopolistic" basis on which it has hitherto stood.

The gulf between the leadership of our party and the membership must be bridged over. The theoretical fundaments of Communism must cease to be a monopoly of a little group. Every member of every shop nucleus must be educated stimultaneously in the fundamentals of Leninism. The political level of our whole party must be raised.

The Role of the Shop Nucleus.

If the reorganization is not to be a mere mechanical change in structure; if the shop nucleus is not to degenerate into a mere center for "shop talk" in which the level of the discussions will never rise above the discussion of the unsanitary condition of the toilets in the shops and the "toughness" of the foreman (important as these may be); if the shop nucleus is really to become a basic political unit of the party and the center of all discussions from the immediate problems of the shop to the fundamental political problems of the American and world working class;—then our educational activity must not stop at the central school, the library and the study class but must go further along with the rest of the party into the shops.

EVERY big crisis in the American party—and the history of our party has been a series of big crises—has demonstrated the unpleasant fact that great masses of our members, the majority of them, have little or no theoretical basis for their political thinking and do not know how to judge and execute a correct policy. To mention only two such crises—the "goose" crisis and the "labor party" crisis—is sufficient to demonstrate the fact that when a change in objective conditions motiates the adoption of a new policy by our leadership, it is soon face to face with the powerful passive opposition of a whole majority of our membership and that the party must in each case go thru severe crisis before the new policy is adopted. This can only mean that however low the theoretical level of our leadership may be, even so there is between it and the mass of the membership a considerable gulf in capacity for political thinking and analysis which gulf must be bridged over. I do not mean to say that we must neglect the necessity of further educating a leading group in our party, but of much more fundamental importance is the task of raising the theoretical level of the whole mass of our membership and this must be done, not in a few scattered classes in geographical areas, nor in a central school but precisely in the shops where the mass of our membership is to be found.

Every Member to Be Trained in Fundamentals of Leninism.

THE agitprop department of district 2, therefore, is reorganizing itself in line with the reorganization of the party; and the major emphasis in our educational work for this winter will be placed in the shop nucleus and not in the central school or sections. The plan of district 2 is that of simultaneously educating every member of every shop nucleus, right in his nucleus, in the fundamentals of Leninism.

"But where will you get so many teachers?"

"There will, no doubt, be a hundred or several hundred shop nuclei in the New York area; where has the party one hundred or several hundred directors for shop nucleus political education?" These were objections raised in the school committee to the plan of the reorganization of the educational work and a motion was made o delay the execution of this plan until the necessary corps of teachers had been trained. This, of course, is a proposal to delay the effective reorganization of the party for an indefinite period, and to continue the old system which has been in practice ever since we have had any educational work in the American movement and which, up till the present, has naturally failed utterly to produce the necessary corps of teachers to educate the entire mass of our party. It also implies, although it was not so intended, the continuance of our educational activity as a monopoly of a small group of leading comrades for an indefinite period. The comrade who made the objection failed to see that in opposing the reorganization of our educational activity of the shop nucleus basis, he was objectively opposing the reorganization of the party.

ABOUT the middle of November, the work of making every shop nucleus a center of political discussion and of preparing the corps of directors of that political discussion in the Central School will begin simultaneously. Every shop nucleus will select one member, preferably the shop nucleus organizer, to go to the Central School one night every other week and receive instruction in what is known as the "Shop Nucleus Training Course" under Comrade Jack Stachel. The shop nucleus will pay for the course (2.50 for three months) and exact the attendance of its designee.

What the Course Will Offer.

The one chosen by the shop nucleus to take the training course will receive:

1. An outline of each of the lessons that he is to give in his shop nucleus.
2. A lesson on the content of that outline.
3. The instructions on how to present it to his nucleus.
4. Advice on parallel reading.
5. Mimeographed copies of the outline for every member of the nucleus.

During the week succeeding the given lesson, he must give it in the nucleus or lead a discussion on it. Attendance at these discussion meetings will be obligatory and every member of the party shall attend one discussion meeting every second week, throughout the period of this course.

THE title of the course which will be thus given in all of the shop nuclei of the party in and around Greater New York will be "The Fundamentals of Leninism." It goes without saying that in Leninism there is no gulf between theory and practise but they are inextricably interwoven. Thus the course will at once be a study of the theoretical basis and the practical conclusions to be drawn from Leninism. The emphasis will be on the practical rather than the theoretical side of each subject studied so that the course will be a sort of guide for directing the political discussion of the nuclei and their practical activities. So much will the practical aspect be emphasized that the course may well be entitled "How to be a member of the Communist Party" for that is exactly what the "Fundamentals of Leninism" prepares for, for active conscious membership in the Communist Party, the vanguard of the proletariat. The course will include such fundamental topics as:

What is a party?

What is the role of a Communist Party?

The relation of the party to the masses of the proletariat and to other classes in society, with special reference to class divisions in the U. S.

The structure, organization and functioning of our party.

Communist work in the trade unions.

Participation in election campaigns.

Other major campaigns of the party.

Theory and practice of the united front with special reference to American conditions.

Bolshevization.

Loreism; and other pressing party problems which form the basic content of our political work at present.

IT was further objected against this plan that "It is dangerous to permit the discussion of the 'United Front' in the shop nuclei under the direction of untrained, or only partly trained, comrades."

Political Discussions Must Go On in the Nuclei.

This objection again reveals an unconscious objection to the reorganization of the party; the failure to understand that, well or ill, every shop nucleus must discuss the united front and other basic problems and determine its policy through their discussions and decisions and must also carry its policy into effect. Also, underlying this objection, there exists a vague, unconscious feeling that educational activity is the monopoly of that section of our party which gets to the class room and that the directing of such discussion is the monopoly of that small section of our party which is "versed in theory."

It is not a question of how well this discussion in the shop nuclei will be directed but it is, rather, a question of whether this discussion shall be directed at all. Discussion on the united front and other basic political problems of our party must take place in every shop nucleus if our reorganization is to be Bolshevization in its ideological content as well as in its mere form. The question is not between well-directed and ill-directed discussion but between directed discussion and discussion without any direction at all. The shop nucleus discussion leaders will not be encouraged to regard themselves as "last word authorities" on all of the problems raised during the discussion. On the contrary, they will be required to report on the discussion and the problems raised at the next session of their shop nucleus training course in the Central School and here the discussion of the group leaders and of the instructor will iron out differences, decide disputed points and furnish a sort of "court of appeal" for the decision of differences which arise in the nucleus discussions.

WITH the plan outlined above, the agitprop committee of District 2, hopes to be able, in some small measure, to contribute to "the combining of the propaganda for Leninism with the actual political questions, struggles and organization work of the party" and to contribute to the Bolshevization of our party in ideological political respects as well as in the structural reorganization.

MINNEAPOLIS WAGING AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN TO RAISE IMMEDIATE FUNDS FOR THE DAILY WORKER

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 23.—Minneapolis is the latest district organization of the party to go over the top and take its place on the fighting line to save The DAILY WORKER.

The national organization department has just received a report from the district office showing that the response to the call of The DAILY WORKER is certainly being met.

In reporting on the progress of the district to mobilize along the lines of the plans laid down by the organization department, Comrade Hathaway, the Minneapolis district organizer, says:

"Immediately upon the receipt of your letter on the needs of The DAILY WORKER, we intensified our drive to raise funds with which to save the paper.

"Minneapolis has just sent in approximately three hundred dollars ($300.00) the week before as the result of a campaign of visiting all the branches. Upon receipt of your letter, special delivery letters were sent out to all active members to intensify the campaign. This meeting was attended to by 25 members (every one who was notified was present). At this meeting $68.00 were raised and crews were organized to start out the next morning in a campaign to visit every subscriber to all party papers in the Twin Cities. It snowed all day Sunday, but in spite of that, six teams were out in autos and raised the amount to $130.00.

"The gang is going out this coming Saturday and Sunday and I think the amount will be raised to another two or three hundred dollars. The best of it is that a considerable portion of it is being raised from non-party members.

"St. Paul is carrying on a similar campaign. I have no definite report on the amount collected except that one comrade raised $45.00 last Sunday and several other teams worked all day."

3,000 Spanish Miners Live on Doles After Digging Too Much Coal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Oct. 23.—An oevr-production of coal has produced a serious unemployment crisis in the Asturias province, with 3,000 miners out of work.

The directory announced that it had decided on an unemployment dole to relieve the suffering, the amount to any miner not to exceed five pesetas a day.

"Krestianka" [Peasant Woman] in Soviet Russia

By MORRIS BACKALL.

"KRESTIANKA" (Peasant Woman) is a magazine issued monthly in Soviet Russia that represents and reflects the needs, problems, strivings of the woman in the villages of Soviet Russia. It is a magazine that contains articles, short stories, reports, and illustrations, also letters written by the women of the village that are scattered all over the big land that is now consisting of socialist Soviet republics, and forty nine languages are spoken in this land of Communist life and activity.

Who does not know the life of the Russian "Baba" in the former times in the Russian villages?

The peasant woman was a slave of slaves. She worked together with her husband the mujik in tilling the soil. She raised children, she cooked the meals, spun the cloth, kept the household and was the object of the anger and drunkenness, darkness and beastality of the mujik. The Russian peasant was illiterate, was kept in subjection, worked in a primitive surrounding, and the tragedy of his life was the double tragedy of his wife, who suffered equally as he and also because of her lower place in society. She was not considered an equal person, and therefore she felt the beating of her husband and the insult of life in a degree that is hard to imagine.

The Soviet government brought equality to the woman in the village, who is not only a worker, but also a mother to children. She keeps in her hands the future generation of the greatest part of the population.

"Krestianka," the magazine for the peasant woman, tells us the story of the new freedom, of the new place that the woman in the village occupies in the life of building up the workers' and peasants' republics of Soviet Russia.

We see in the magazine "Krestianka" a report and a photograph of a general convention that was held in Moscow in March of this year of workers among the peasant women. The delegates were simple women of the villages, among them we find Krupskaia and Kalinin. They deliberated about the problems of the woman in the village, not only how to get her interested in the Communist movement, but first of all, to get her to understand that her position in life is now based on equality in the economic, political, and cultural spheres. She is not any more the inferior slave of the husband, of the officer of the village, but she has the right and the privilege to participate in all Soviets and the elections, that she is equal before the law, that she has the right to stand up against the insults of her husband, of the kulak (rich peasant), or the factory owner.

In the report of this convention the active workers in the villages demonstrated the great spirit of awakening that goes on in those little huts among the poor peasant women in regard to education.

Peasant women go to the elections of the village Soviets, put up their candidates, are elected to these Soviets and spread propaganda for it. They are judges in courts of the village and village district, they take an interest in education, they feel that as mothers they must be in a position to be able to help their children in their work in schools.

The little school houses that are to be found now in a great deal of villages contain a "Lenin corner" decorated with red ribbons, with a little library. Who are the ones who organize those corners? The peasant women. They donate pounds of flour, bushels of wheat, sell it, and for this money they buy the necessary books, magazines for the Lenin corners in the schools of the villages. After a long day of hard toil on the field, after they put their little children to bed, the peasant women get together in these school houses and study with the teacher that was occupied all day with the children, or the teacher reads to them the news of the Soviet papers, especially the articles that are connected with their own life, and those that give information how to improve their agricultural activities and their house and home problems.

Celebrations are organized at the openings of these Lenin corners.

In "Krestianka" we find very many letters sent in by peasant women. They are coming from Ukrainian villages, from White-Russian villages, from Caucasia—Cossack women. These letters represent the "bit" (mode of life) of the present village. A revolution goes on in the village, the past did not disappear yet, the hundreds and hundreds of years of darkness, prejudices, illiteracy, domination of priests is yet felt very much. It could not disappear entirely yet. The mujik looks with suspicion when his wife goes to the election of the village or village district Soviets. Many quarrels occur on account of it. The women were ridiculed at the beginning and many peasants expressed their disapproval of the "baba" becoming an equal, but enlightenment changed the situation somehow, the women organized meetings at which speakers explained the new spirit and position of Soviet Russia. The meetings of women discussed the needs of the life and existence of the village community, so the men began to understand that the differentiation of sex is only artificial in regard to social and economic problems. The women of the Russian villages carries the burden of life as well as the men and in addition, they raise the young generation.

The great mystery of the existence of the Russian village was the peasant woman, her energy and her endurance was the great secret that could keep the village community alive. Now, with her awakening, development and enlightenment, the Soviet government brings into play an element that will astonish the world with its power and with its possibilities. We read letters how peasant women in Soviet Russia, on their dying bed, are asking their children not to call the "pop" (priest) but to make them a red funeral, or how a peasant woman, decides that she has to devote her life in working for her sisters and goes to a large town to study in a workers' school. The whole village goes out to give her a send off and everybody is expecting to receive letters of instruction of what to do in order to serve the community in its needs.

In "Krestianka" we find also letters that tell us of tragedies in the village of Soviet Russia. The husband comes home in some cases drunk, and still beats his wife. A kosac woman tells in detail that her whole body is covered with wounds and that she went to the court of the district and the judge issued a divorce immediately and divided the belongings in half so the Russian peasant woman of today has a protection against the brutality of those that are yet ignorant of the equal rights the Krestianka enjoys in Soviet republics.

The peasant women organizes assistance for the poor children of the village that have no clothes or shoes to go to school. They co-operate with the teacher of the village school, they help in the building up of the new educational system in their land. They organize nurseries for the summer when they are busy on the field, and the school teacher or the organization worker is left with the children.

It is remarkable to note the tune of the district and gubernaterial conferences that are held of the Russian peasant women. The frank statements of their situation demonstrates to us how in Soviet Russia out of the depths of the villages grows a woman that is looking realistically about her position in life. The reports of these conference are full of description how their husbands treat them, what they demand, what they do, and what they hope for their future.

There is also short stories in the "Krestianka magazine. They picture to us the yet poor conditions of the Russian villages, but, it is full of heroism and success how these simple people are ready to sacrifice their own personal well-being for the greater needs of their community. How they look with prejudice at the beginning, at every new person coming in their midst, and every new mode of life that is brought in the village, but after finding out the truth about it, they accept it with a religious fervor. The short stories picture to us the new relation to children; the child in the village is ceasing to be a private owned object as well as the woman used to be in these localities. The child is more a communal member. In one of the stories a peasant meets a little child, a girl, on the field in a cold, winter morning. He recognizes the child and is asking, "Why do you not go to your uncle?" The child does not answer but sheds tears, and the peasant understands why the child cannot go back to its uncle. He calls to his imagination the beatings the child received so he takes the child on his arms and carries her back to the village Soviet, peasants are present in the village Soviet, everybody looks at the child and when the commissar asked for bread, every peasant was stretching his hand with bread to the child. When the child satisfied its hunger the commissar was ordered to take the child back to its uncle, but the youngster cried again, and the commissar understood the reason and said, "We will drive over to the children's home in the district." The child smiled, and every peasant remarked in the years to come this girl may occupy a big position in a Soviet herself.

This position in regard to children in the Russian village is a great factor in relation to the future life of the Russian Soviet peasant population. The "Krestianka" contains questions by many village women, in regard to the education of the children, how to build community houses and even legal questions pertaining to the cruel attitude of some husbands towards them. The magazine answers all these questions and instructs the woman about the laws of the Socialist Soviet Republics.

Like in every other corner of life, this remarkable work among the women in the Russian Soviet villages proves that only a government of the working class and peasant population is able to deal with every problem of life in a realistic and concrete fashion. There is no hypocrisy, conventionality, prejudice, towards a problem that is surrounded with so much falsehood in our capitalistic states: The problem of equality of women in economic, and cultural sense.

The peasant woman of today visits the working women in cities, becomes familiar with the factory life, union conditions, problems of work, and brings it back to her sisters in the villages, and hammers out close relations between the city and the village.

The A. F. of L. and International Relations served German capitalism by supporting the Noske dictatorship, for any expression of the need for world trade union unity or of friendship for the Russian workers and peasants, or any acknowledgement of the incalculable services rendered the German working class by those workers who gave their lives for the German revolution. Quite the contrary:

> . . . Bolshevists caused a lot of trouble. Bolshevism is a good religion for starving and desperate men. In the trade unions we do not want to drive the workers to despair, but we mean to better their living conditions and in this useful work we have been disturbed many times by the Bolshevists, but we have repulsed this wave in Germany and today they are quite insignificant and play only a very funny role.

EIGHT thousand of the best fighters of the working class are in the dungeons of the German rulers, subsidized by American loans. They "play only a very funny role," these eight thousand tortured workers, according to Fritz Tarnow.

And what is the burning need of Europe in the view of this reformist leader? Here it is:

> The greatest problem which has to be solved in Europe is the restoration of a sound economy. . .

This is the same view that is held by Schwab, Morgan, Dawes and Mellon and they are busy restoring a "sound national economy" in Germany —for everybody but the workers.

THE German delegation came to study "economic and social conditions existing," in the words of Fritz Tarnow, and after his denunciation of the Bolshevists and his Dawes' plan estimate of the needs of the moment we need not be surprised to find President Green saying in reply:

> I want to call upon all our national unions, our state and central bodies, our local unions everywhere to meet these brothers as they travel from place to place and extend to them every facility for making the most comprehensive and all embracing study of the problems in which they are interested.

PURCELL also is to make a tour of the United States. But he speaks on world trade union unity. So when the Washington Post, organ of the Coolidge administration, demanded his deportation, President Green did not even protest.

Neither does he ask the co-operation of the affiliated labor bodies in arranging meetings for Purcell upon the most vital question confronting the working class.

Purcell, personifying the new spirit of British labor, must depend for his opportunity of meeting American workers upon the militant members of the unions whom Green and his cohorts cannot terrorize.

Fritz Tarnow and his reformist colleagues, vassals of American imperialism, are welcomed into the brotherhood of Wall Street's labor agents.

Here is the contrast and here is the symbolism and the proof that at Atlantic City the A. F. of L. chose its path—the path of American imperialism.

German reformism as against British revolution—the slave unionism as against the militant struggle for a workers' republic, the leadership of Wall Street as against that of the militant wing of the International Federation of Trade Unions.

Well may the New York Times gleefully acclaim the action of the Atlantic City convention in the field of international relations "a triumph for dynamic conservatism."

New York Museum's Asiatic Expedition Returns from Trip

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 23—James B. Shackelfrod, and Leo. B. Roberts, members of the Roy Chapman Andrews archaeological expedition into Mongolia were in San Francisco on their way to New York following their arrival from the Orient yesterday. Report that many interesting relics of prehistoric man were unearthed in the Gobi desert by the third Asiatic expedition sent by the New York museum of natural history.

Among the things the expedition is bringing with them is the only living specimen of the Asiatic black condor now in captivity. This bird measures ten feet from tip to tip.

AMERICAN [illegible]GRO LABOR MEET OPENS WITH GIGANTIC MASS DEMONSTRATION IN CHICAGO

The American Negro Labor Congress, the first of its kind to be held in the United States, opened its sessions yesterday at the Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles Avenue, with a gigantic mass meeting with workers of all races participating.

The persecution of the Negro in America has become one of the most paramount issues among Negro workers. In Detroit and Cleveland, attempts have been made to keep the Negroes in segregated districts. In Philadelphia and Cleveland Negro children are forced to attend Jim Crow schools. In Chicago a Negro church was bombed in an attempt to scare Negroes from residing in the district.

Discuss Race Bars.

The American Federation of Labor continues its passive opposition to the anti-Negro bars raised by our international unions. Negro workers are unable to join hands with the white workers in a common struggle against the class that exploits them both. The Negro in American industry is the most underpaid and overworked and is often used by the bosses in strikes to crush the struggle for better conditions.

These are some of the problems that face the first gathering of Negro workers and working farmers in America. Last year, the Sanhedrin met, but there the Negro worker received but little consideration. The Negro worker has now decided to act for himself.

Delegates Arrive.

All day long delegates that had been sent by the organized and unorganized longshoremen, cotton and sugar cane farmers, steel, pottery, and turpentine workers, kept arriving at the headquarters of the American Negro Labor Congress at 3456 Indiana Ave., where they registered, received their badges and were then taken to a nearby hotel where delegates are being quartered.

Real Work Starts Monday.

The real work of the congress will start today with a discussion on the American Negro and the trade unions. In the evening a mass meeting will be held at which speakers of both races will speak on the theme which occupied the day's session.

On Tuesday, racial persecution, Jim Crowism and racial segregation will be discussed and acted upon.

On Wednesday, the relation of the Negro to American political life will be discussed.

On Thursday, the task of the American Negro in the anti-imperialist movement taking place in Egypt, India, Morocco, Syria and other sections of the world will be discussed.

Abolish Peonage System.

On Friday, the task of organizing and educating the Negro farmer will be discussed. The peonage system which exists in the south is the important issue for the farmer delegates to the congress and its discussion, will result in strong action being taken by the congress to abolish this system.

International Ball Saturday.

Saturday, will be the day when workers of all races will mingle at the international ball arranged by the American Negro Labor Congress as the windup of the congress and as the means to raise funds to carry out the program adopted by the delegates at the congress.

The congress has also arranged for musical numbers and other artistic talent to participate at the open evening session meetings.

Plan Huge Astronomical Dome.

An astronomical hall three stories high and capped by a huge dome on which will be represented the constellations of the sky is planned by the American Museum of Natural History.

DEMAND ACTION IN DEFENSE OF COAL STRIKERS

New Haven Painters Support Miners

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 25—Painters' Local No. 4 at its regular meeting adopted resolutions pledging their support to the striking anthracite miners. The struggle of the anthracite miners to establish decent living conditions is being assailed by the press of this part of the country and organized labor so far has, as usual, made no move to counteract this vicious anti-labor propaganda. This resolution is the first indication that the labor movement is beginning to fight back and defend the workers wherever they are fighting against the common enemy—the exploiters of labor.

Campaign Is Launched.

In addition to pledging financial support, the Carpenters' Union proposes to utilize every possible means of placing the facts before the workers of this city and particularly to visit other unions with the idea of getting them to adopt similar action. The members of the union feel that if wage-reductions and a weakening of the miners in the anthracite region takes place it will be followed by an intensification of wage cuts all over the country so they pledg themselves to resist generally the attacks of the employers upon the workers. Following is the resolution adopted:

Resolution on Coal Strike.

"Whereas, more than one and fifty thousand members of the United Mine Workers of America are on strike in the anthracite coal field, and

"Whereas, these workers are demanding an increase in wages, full recongnition of their union and better working conditions against the efforts of the coal operators to reduce wages and enforce worse working conditions, and

"Whereas the struggle in the anthacite fields is the result of resistance by the coal miners to the general campaign of the capitalist employers to reduce wages and enforce worse working conditions, which has already resulted in wage reduction for millions of workers, and

"Whereas, the successful resistance to this campaign by the coal miners will stiffen the resistance of the workers in other industries to similar efforts and aid in creating a general fight of the workers against the attempt of the capitalists to reduce the standard of of living of the workers.

"Whereas, the federal and state governments have in the past strikes in the coal fields intervened to use the governmental power in the interest of the coal bosses, notably President Wilson thru securing an injunction against the Miners' Union in 1919, President Harding thru calling upon the governors to fill the mines with soldiers in 192, and both the federal and state government in the anthracite strike of 1923.

"Be It Resolved: that we pledge our support both morally and financially to the anthracite miners in their strike, and be it further

"Resolved, that we demand that both the federal and state government do not intervene in the anthracite strike, and that neither in any way use the governmental power against the struggling workers of the anthracite field, and be it further

"Resolved, that we pledge our support to a campaign of publicity thru public meetings, resolutions, etc., in support of the demands of the anthracite miners and to mobilize the workers generally for resistance against the attacks of the employers upon the workers."

GARIBALDI HAS VERY LITTLE CONFIDENCE IN LOCARNO PEACE PACT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 25.—Major General Peppine Garibaldi, grandson of the famous General Guiseppe Garibaldi, Italian liberator, and himself the veteran of 132 battleefields, has very little faith in peace pacts.

The decorated military leader, in Springfield for a series of addresses, declared the present trouble between Greece and Bulgaria to be ample proof no peace pact will endure.

"The Locarno pact will mean no more than the treaty of Brussels, or the pact of London," Garibaldi said.

An Open Letter to the Members, President and Locals of Amalgamated Clothing Workers

DEAR BROTHERS:—The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party is compelled to bring to your attention a situation which we feel certain the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers will not endorse or tolerate.

Joe S. Shafir was employed as a clerk in the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, an institution created by the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Believing in the principle of the workers organizing to protect and fight for their own interests, he was instrumental in organizing the Bank Clerks' Union and became the president of this organization. Thru the Bank Clerks' Union, he was able to win better conditions for the workers employed in this line of work in the city of Chicago.

Brother Shafir, having won the confidence and support of the members of his union, was elected their delegate to the convention of the American Federation of Labor. At the convention of the American Federation of Labor, he introduced for consideration by that body three resolutions expressing the interests of the workers. The first of these resolutions provided for the American Federation of Labor going on record for the recognition of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The second provided for the endorsement of the movement to unite all the labor unions of the world in one united trade union federation. The third resolution opposed the policy of class collaboration as expressed in the B. & O. plan, company unions, stock investments by workers, and labor banking, which was of a capitalist and not co-operative character.

BECAUSE Brother Shafir proposed those resolutions in the convention of the American Federation of Labor, charges were made against him and he was expelled from the Bank Clerks' Union and as a consequence was discharged from his work as a clerk in the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago.

All the evidence in relation to the charges filed against him and his expulsion go to show that the movement against him was initiated by the officials of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank. The meeting of the union at which he was tried and expelled was held in the banking room of the Amalgamated Trust & Savings Bank and the members of the union who were present were largely the employees of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank. Some of the employees of the bank who were favorable to Brother Shafir were intimidated by the officials of the bank.

We lay these facts before the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers because we feel certain that the members of your organization, which in the past has carried on a militant fight against the employing class, will not tolerate such actions, comparing to the worst form of oppression of workers by capitalist institutions, by an institution which you have created.

YOUR organization has, in its national convention, gone on record for the recognition of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. Your organization has even initiated the formation of the Russian-American Industrial corporation for aid to the Russian workers and peasants in the reconstruction of the economic system of Russia. Certainly you will not tolerate that an institution which you created shall aid and support the expulsion from his union and from his position in the bank of Brother Shafir because of his efforts to serve the workers' and peasants' republic of Russia.

We feel certain that your attitude on the question of world trade union unity is not that expressed in the expulsion and discharge of Brother Shafir. We believe that on the question of class collaboration you do not endorse the proposal that labor unions shall become adjuncts to the capitalist regime in place of militant, fighting organizations of the workers. We are even certain that on the question of labor banking, your position will be that labor banks must be truly co-operative organizations, controlled and directed by workers, and not become part of the capitalist financial machinery.

WE ask you to express your views on this question thru resolutions adopted in your local unions. If you are for your union which in the past has carried on many brilliant fights against the capitalists remaining a militant, fighting organization carrying on the struggles of the workers, you will agree that Brother Shafir has a right to express his views and you will condemn those who are responsible for his expulsion and discharge. We ask that every local union of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers show that it is truly a working class fighting organization by adopting a resolution condemning the expulsion and discharge of Brother Shafir and demanding that he be reinstated as a member of the Bank Clerks' Union and in his position in the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank.

Brothers of the Amalgamated, this is not the question of an individual. There is involved in this question the issue of what kind of organizations the labor unions are to be—organizations under the thumb of the bosses and carrying out their will, or militant, fighting organizations of the workers.

The Amalgamated must go on record for a militant, fighting organization in the interests of the workers.

Fraternally yours.

N. Y. TAXI DRIVERS WIN C-DAY STRIKE AGAINST WAGE CUTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—Three days' strike won for the Guardian Cab Co. taxi drivers restoration of 40 per cent of bookings for pay and the correction of other threatened abuses on the part of their employer, Jesse Donella, former open-shop Yellow Cab manager. The strike was spontaneous but tied up the company garages and affected 700 men.

Plan $50,00,000 Power Plant.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Completion of plans for a gigantic hydro-electric power development in the Ozark mountains in Missouri, involving $50,000,000 with an artificial lake has been announced by Guy Huston, president New York and Chicago joint stock land bank

GREAT BRTAIN ALSO PLANS TO TAKE BIG PART IN LEAGUE OF NATIONS PARLEY IN PARIS TODAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 25.—Twenty British warships are being concentrated in waters near the Greak coast in readiness for any action that may be necessary.

• • • •

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Great Britain will be represented in the conference which will take place in Paris Monday where the league of nations will discuss the Greco-Bulgar incident.

The British government is much peeved at the action of these two nations and considers this conference of the league of nations a test as to whether the league has any power to prevent aggressions on the part of any of its members.

Greek Troops Still Advance

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 25.—Greek troops continue to advance into Bulgarian territory despite the assurances of the Greek government that all hostilities will cease. Two battalions more are on the way to Petrich and one battalion is on the way to Petrovo.

The road running to Sveti Patch is congested with refugees that are fleeing before the Greek advance. Bulgarian troops are falling back, refusing to make a pitched battle, thus hoping to influence the decision of the league of nations which meets in Paris Monday against Greece and to the favor of Bulgaria.

Greek troops have now penetrated Bulgarian territory to a depth of seven miles on a 20-mile front.

According to the Bulgarian cabinet head, Bulgaria will resist any further invasion of her territory by Greek troops and arrangements are being made to call out all possible troops in case the league of nations will be unable to stop the Greek advance into Bulgarian territory.

Greece Goes to Paris

ATHENS, Oct. 25.—The Pangalos government in an official communication has notified the league of nations that she will not withdraw her troops from Bulgarian territory until after the decision of the league in Paris. The Greek military dictator insists that the terms of the ultimatum sent to Bulgaria must be complied with before Greece will give up any of the territory which she has taken in Bulgaria.

Orders have been sent to Greek troops to cease hostilities and to continue to remain on Bulgarian territory until further orders from the military staff at Athens.

M. Carapanos, Greek minister to France, will be the Greek delegate to the league of nations conference.

Rumors of a monarchist coup grow in Athens. The body of the late King Constantine is being brought back to Greece early next month, and a national holiday is to be proclaimed on that occasion. Fears continue to grow that the military dictator Pangalos will take advantage of the war with Bulgaria to restore former King George or establish Prince Alexander on the Greek throne.

France Steps In

PARIS, Oct. 25.—Minister Briand had a long conference with the Bulgarian and Greek ministers to France in which he spoke not only as the president of the league of nations' council but also as the head of the French government. Instructions were given to the warring nations to withdraw their troops to their own frontiers and to refrain from further activities until after the league of nations conference.

Messages arriving from Bulgaria state that Greece is not withdrawing her troops but is bringing up reinforcements to the frontier line.

Petrich in Ruins

PETRICH, Bulgaria, Oct. 25.—Petrich is a mass of ruins. The town being deserted except for the mayor and a few town officials.

Fifteen thousand men, women and children are homeless, wandering over the highways without adequate food, clothing or shelter. The Bulgarian Red Cross is unable to assist the starving refugees.

Everywhere the question along the highway is "has war come again?"

Airplanes Bomb Petrich

Greek troops bombarded Petrich with artillery supplemented by airplane bombing for over twenty-four hours.

Italy Sends Delegates.

ROME, Oct. 25.—The Italian fascist government is sending a delegation headed by Baron Sciajoli to Paris to attend the extraordinary sessions of the league of nations, called to discuss the Greco-Bulgar controversy.

CHINESE WAR UPSETS NINE-POWER MEET

Peking Government Adds Complexity

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, Oct. 25.—The diplomats gathered here to attend the tariff conference supposed to open tomorrow have decided to ignore the note sent them by Marshal Wu Pei-fu, leader of the alliance of central provinces, warning them that they should postpone the conference union "a more representative government functions in China."

In the meantime, Chang Tso-lin, the only strong military force upholding the Peking government, has sent south strong reinforcements to meet the advancing troops of Wu at [illegible]chow, the objective of Wu's soldiers that are going north from Nanking.

In the beclouded situation further confusion is thrown into the ranks of the imperialist powers by the dispatch from Tokio saying that Tuan Chi-jui of the Peking government, in an effort to allay the rising nationalist movement, has threatened that if full and complete tariff autonomy is not granted, Peking representatives will walk out of the conference.

That the imperialists are in perplexity is shown by reports of daily and extended conferences in which the American, British, Japanese and French embassies are engaged.

Ex-Governor Goodrich Urges Coolidge to Send Ambassador to Russia

WASHINGTON, Oct., Oct. 25.—Former Gov. Goodrich of Indiana, republican, back from his fourth trip to Russia since 1917, told President Coolidge that Russia today is showing every sign of economic recovery. He told Coolidge that if an American ambassador were located in Moscow his presence there would be of great benefit to American trade and to peace and a better understanding between the two nations.

AMALGAMATED LOCALS CARRY ON FIGHT ON OPEN SHOP COMPANY

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—Locals of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union are assessing themselves in accordance with the New York joint board decision in order to carry on the strike against the International Tailoring Co. which abrogated its agreement with the union. The assessment takes 3 per cent of workers' wages. Pickets are still being arrested and held on bail.

BORAH PREPARES BILL TO REPEAL EXCLUSION LAW

Congress to Act at Next Session

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25—The action of Secretary of State Kellogg in barring Countess Catherine Karolyi, wife of Count Michael Karolyi, who was president of the short-lived Hungarian republic in 1918-1919,. that gave way to Hungarian Soviet rule, may lead to the introduction of a bill into the next session of congress for the repeal of that section of the immigration act which Secretary of State Kellogg has used quite freely to bar those whose opinions were considered dangerous to the moneyed interests that use the White House as their branch office.

The section of the immigration act which the secretary of state has used in barirng persons he disliked is some of the legislation passed during the war-time hysteria. Senator Borah of Idaho is now preparing a bill to repeal that clause and take away this power from Kellogg.

The refusal to grant Countess Karolyi admittance to the United States came about when the countess, upon receiving an invitation from the wife of Ralph Beaver Strassburger, millionaire newspaper publisher of Norristown, Pa., applied for a visa.

Strassburger, who it is said, has contributed between one or two million dollars to the republican slush fund in Pennsylvania, protested to Secretary Kellogg that Countess Karolyi was not a Communist, but a liberal that opposed the Horthy regime for overthrowing the Hungarian republic. He made an attempt to convince the secretary that he should rescind his former action. The secretary refused. Strassburger then appealed to Coolidge, who upheld the action of the state secretary. Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee and opponent of the administration policy was then appealed to. Borah then threatened Coolidge that he would introduce a bill into the next congress for the repeal of this war-time measure if Kellogg and Coolidge continue to persist in barring the countess from the country.

The Countess Karolyi was in the United States last year and nothing was said about her political views. While in America she took sick, and then Count Karolyi made attempts to come to her sick-bed. He was allowed to enter the United States only after he promised the administration that he would not discuss political issues. After the countess had become well, the Count and Countess Karolyi left the country and went to Canada. In Canada a number of articles were written by the count and published in the American newspapers denouncing the attempts of the administration forces to gag all who were of different political leanings from those having the power of government in their hands.

A few months ago this very same clause was used by the state department to bar Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British house of commons, from entering the United States to attend the sessions of the interparliamentary union congress held at Washington, D. C. for a speech made in the British parliament for the independence of India. Protest meetings were arranged all over the nation demanding his admittance. Saklatavla had been granted a visa, but upon a protest of the British tories, the visa was revoked.

Countess Catherine Karolyi claims that the state secretary is barring her from making this visit to America at the request of the dictator Horthy's lackey, Szechenyi, who is married to one of the Vanderbilts.

Mary MacSwiney, sister of the late mayor of Cork, who died during a hunger strike protesting against his imprisonment by the British empire for his activities in behalf of the Irish republic, is in America without any passport or visa defying the United States government to deport her. Eamon De Valera also entered the United States without a passport and delivered a series of lectures against the British puppet, the Free State government in Ireland. Both had been refused visas by the state department at the insistence of the British empire.

Pope Lauds American Financial Assistance to Pay Rome's Payroll

ROME, Oct. 25—The pope received the Most Reverend James John Keane, archbishop of Dubuque, Iowa, in private audience, and presented him with a gold medal commemorating holy year.

The pope spoke affectionately of those Americans who have shown their generosity to Rome by sending money to aid his holiness in meeting his lavish payroll. It is expected that a few more promotions in the American Roman catholic church will be made.

GEN. FRIES DEFENDS TEAR GAS FOR ROUTING MOBS; SAYS THAT IT'S "HUMANE" FOR COMMUNISTS

By LAURENCE TODD,
(Federated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Let every police force and sheriff and national guard force adopt tear gas, as the chemical warfare service in the army has done, and mobs will no longer be a danger in this country. So says Gen. Amos Fries, chief of the chemical warfare service. Fries is much disturbed by a magazine article by W. G. Shepherd, dealing with a circular issued by the service under the name "Provisional Instructions for the Control of Mobs by Chemical Warfare."

This document was issued in 1921 and revised in 1922. It is now out of print, but the regulations it contained are found in the book of instructions for officers in the army.

Oh, So Humane!

"The chemical warfare service is proud of those regulations," says Fries. "It is proud of the fact that police departments of the cities are beginning to study them and put them into effect. Within ten years it will be considered a crime in this country for any policeman, sheriff, posse or armed troops of any sort to use on mobs or other unlawful gatherings anything but tear or irritating gases. They neither kill, blind, maim, nor disfigure, as do police clubs, pistols, machine guns or cannon."

Having thus shown that his gas is humane, Fries ridicules the idea that mobs will not continue to arise. Especially the Communists, he says, must be watched, since "if we can believe the Communists in our midst there will come a day when Communist mobs will rise up, and by fire and murder and pillage will attempt to destroy this government and establish the same murderous regime that Russia staggers under."

This, by the way, is one of the mildest of the many things Fries has said publicly about Communists and Russia.

He asks whether his critic would let the mobs have their way, or fight them with machine guns, or lay them out harmless for ten minutes with a bit of tear gas.

Recipe For Mobs.

"One hundred pounds of tear and irritating gases," he explains, "used as provided in the 'Provisional Instructions,' would have prevented entirely and without injury the murders, the tortures and the sufferings of the Herrin, Illinois, massacre—that blot on our modern civilization with its aftermath of intolerance; bitter hatred and still more murders." Whether tear gas should have been used on the mob that lynched the I. W. W., Frank Little, at Butte, and the mob that attacked the I. W. W. hall at Centralia, he does not say.

The general believes that Shepherd has been getting information from the Communists, since a Communist daily published the fact that tear gas was sent to the Mingo, W. Va., coal field during the strike some years ago.

We "Might Cause Trouble."

"The Communist is afraid of tear gas," he declares. "The man who preaches bloody revolution in this country to establish a Soviet as in Russia wants to do away with gas. . . . One wonders, finally, if Mr. Shepherd has been misled by sophistries of the Communists and radicals who want to establish some Communistic form of government. Lest we forget! I repeat, tear and irritating gases form the only decent, humane, honorable way today to break up gatherings of irresponsible people who might cause trouble if not broken up."

Fifty-Four Natives Killed When Mounted Police Create Panic

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Fifty-four persons were killed and forty-three injured at Tanta, Egypt, where a great religious fair was being held, attended by about 1,000,000 persons, when mounted police created a panic in their attempt to clear a passageway for the automobile of the minister of pious foundations.

The natives thinking that the mounted police had come to break up the religious demonstration as is often the case, were thrown into a panic. All ran for the bridge which was nearby in order to escape what they considered an attempt on the part of the police to take their lives.

The weight of the thousands that had rushed onto the bridge caused the bridge to snap, throwing hundreds into the water, where many were drowned. Some were trampled to death.

Scientist Perfects Instrument to Weigh Pulling Force of Moon

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Science now has perfected a device that can weigh the pull of the moon on minute objects on the earth.

An instrument made by Ralph C. Hartsough of Columbia University detects how much lighter an object weighing 1-29,000th of an ounce on the ground becomes when it is lifted a foot.

This difference in weight is due to the attraction the moon has for objects on the earth, as demonstrated in the tides.

The instrument will be used to weighing molecules and test the Einstein theory.

Roumanian Bratianu Government Arrests 82 More Peasants

KISHENEV, Bessarabia, Oct. 25.—The Bratianu government which is now in power in Roumania defending the interests of the Roumanian Boyars, not satisfied with the peasant victims that it has on trial at Kishenev, has now arrested 82 more peasants who are arrested on one of the most peculiar charges that has ever been used by any power to arrest individuals unfavorable to its viewpoint and methods.

The 82 peasants whom the court wanted to arrest yet did not have sufficient evidence to prove that they were in the country at the time of the Tatarbounar uprising have been arrested upon the following charges:

1. In Kishenev manifestoes had been distributed in which the population is asked to protect the accused on trial and this manifesto could only have been written by the 82 peasants who are now arrested.

2. The 82 accused did not have sufficient means to maintain themselves and had to depend upon others of doubtful reputations for maintenance.

3. The health of the accused is endangered by diseases which are spreading thru Kishenev. In the prison, the health of the prisoners will be well taken care of.

Dobrescu, chairman of the Roumanian lawyers objected to these arrests as also did the other lawyers present. The court immediately ordered the arrest of the accused 82 making no pretense of thoro deliberation.

MASS MEETINGS TO CLOSE NEW YORK ELECTION

Workers to Gather in Many Sections

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 23—In addition to the great Red Night drives in each district of the city and innumerable similar meetings, the following big meetings have been arranged for the rest of the campaign:

Tuesday, Oct. 27—Miller's Grand Assembly, 318 Grand St., near Havemeyer St., Brooklyn.

Wednesday, Oct. 28—Lower Bronx Workers' House, 535 East 146th St., Bronx.

Thursday, Oct. 29—West Side Workers' Hall, 301 West 29th St., New York City.

Friday, Oct. 30—Workers' House, 1373, 43rd St., Brooklyn.

Friday, Oct. 30—Claremont Casino, 3861 Third Ave., near Claremont Parkway, Bronx.

Sunday, Nov. 1, 2 p. m.—Hopkinson Mansion, 428 Hopkinson Ave., near Pitkin Ave., Brooklyn.

Workers will be admitted to any of the above meetings on payment of 10 cents admission fee.

Red Invasion.

On Friday, Oct. 23, the Brownsville district will be illuminated and invaded by "Red Propagandists" when fifty or sixty speakers will be thrown into that district, beginning at 7 p. m. at 1844 Pitkin Ave., the party headquarters, will distribute themselves on all important corners in the district and winding up at 10:30 by inviting all of their hearers to the central meeting at the corner of Stone and Pitkin Aves.

On Saturday, Oct. 24, Upper Bronx will be invaded in a similar manner in a culminating meeting at Longwood Ave., corner Prospect.

Many Organizations Send Delegates to the Negro Labor Congress

Typical of the organizations which have sent representatives to American Negro Labor Congress here are the Hod Carriers, Building and Common Labor Union, Local 1,143, of Topeka, Kansas, the Workingmen's Association of Cincinnati, and the Cigar Makers' Union of Philadelphia. There is a delegate representing the unorganized steel workers of Brownsville, Pennsylvania. The African Blood Brotherhood and the International Negro Alliance, have also sent delegates.

Many more labor organizations have sent telegrams to the national office of the congress, at 3456 Indiana Ave., saying that delegates are on the way. Over one hundred delegates are expected to arrive before Tuesday's session, according to Lovett Fort-Whiteman, national organizer of the congress.

The hall is decorated with large paintings representing leaders of the Negroes and other oppressed peoples in their many splendid revolts against their masters. Directly above the platform is a picture six feet wide, showing a Negro worker and a Negro farmer clasping hands. To the right is a picture of Saklatvala, Communist Hindu leader, Sun Yat Sen, leader of the Chinese workers in their revolt against foreign imperialism, and Abd-el-Krim, chief of the Moroccan tribes fighting for their independence from the robbers of France. To the left is a picture of Nat Turner and Denmark Vesey, each the leader of a slave uprising that took place in the United States before the Civil War, and Toussaint L'Ouverture, who led the revolt of the Haitians in 1871.

Darrow Will Defend Penniless Negro Lad Who Stabbed Taunter

Fred Curry, 14-year old Negro lad, will be well represented when he goes to trial before Judge William N. Gemmill of the criminal court, on October 28, for the fatal stabbing of Anthony Lacola, 15, with Clarence Darrow fighting to save him from the penalty the states attorney demands for manslaughter.

Curry stabbed Lacola in a fight after the latter had bullied and taunted him of his race and color in the yard of the Parkman School, Princeton Avenue and Fifty-first St., before a number of other boys of both races.

Judge Gemmill appointed Clarence Darrow, noted criminologist, to represent the penniless Curry boy in his fight against State's Attorney Crowe who is demanding that the young lad get the full extent of the law. Darrow has willingly accepted and will defend the accused Negro youth.

American Moving Pictures in Demand in Soviet Russia

NEW YORK, Oct. 25—A boom in the motion picture business in Russia, with a rapidly increasing demand for American films, especially films showing technical operations, was reported by Leon S. Zamkovoy, representative of the All-Russian Photo-Moving Picture corporation, who has just returned from a visit to Russia.

Imperialism Would Hide Its Bloody Crimes With Lurid Atrocity Stories

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, alleged atrocities, supposed to have been committed by Turks against christians in the Near East, are again featured on the first pages of the imperialist press.

The usual lurid tales, under the date line of Mosul, Mesopotamia, are put into print with an Archbishop Timothy, interviewed at an oasis in the Chaldean desert, asking, "Will the christian world believe that such things can happen now?"

• • • •

The christian world, of course, lifts its hands in pious horror, believing every word of this propaganda from the immediate neighborhood of one of the world's wildest scrambles for oil.

The feeling grows stronger that these atrocity tales against the Turks are mere smoke screens against new thieveries to be committed, especially in view of the fact that the Turks refuse to give up claims to Mosul, in spite of the fact that the league of nations is trying to hand it to Great Britain as part of its protectorate over Irak.

• • • •

The newspaper correspondents of the kept press who have been following the British and French butchers in the Near East, and over the rest of the world, can surely write about horrors first hand. The sword of imperialism always slays indiscriminately and wholesale in order to keep subject peoples in chains. That these horrors should be laid at the door of the helpless victims is only another version of the great American police frame-up game.

It was therefore, an unpardonable oversight, no doubt, that the same issue of The Chicago Tribune, for instance, that carried the carefully concocted "Eyewitness Story of Mosul Crimes," should also carry another account under the heading, "Damascus in Flames; 1,000 Die in Revolt." Here are a few extracts showing how christianity is bringing European civilization to Asia:

• • • •

> Systematically the French guns tear up the Mohammedan section from the Street Called Straight of Biblical fame.
> Tonight Damascus is a city of terrible silence. Every public building is a fortress. Tanks, armored cars and soldiers are everywhere.
>
> An air of stricken silence now reigns in this holy city of the Mohammedans.
> Flames and smoke are still rising, while debris chokes the main streets.
>
> Many houses, built of mud, collapsed, burying their inhabitants, and now thousands are digging in the ruins in the hopes of rescuing loved ones.

• • • •

Remember, those quotations are taken bodily out of the christian Chicago Tribune, that speaks for christian Wall Street rule, that bulwarks christian French imperialism, not only in its war against Syria, but also in North Africa against the Riffians. It can, therefore, be accepted as the truth very conservatively stated.

Men and women buried alive in their own homes in far-off Damascus, another echo of the murder of women and children in the Colorado coal fields, smothered by the smoke while seeking shelter in their burning tent homes from the machine gun fire of the state militia—the Ludlow massacre.

• • • •

In spite of imperialism's lurid propaganda, the common sufferings of the industrial workers of the great capitalist countries and the subject colonies will develop the solidarity that will result in united struggles for the defeat of their common oppressors. Workers' blood, spilled in Colorado and Damascus, will mix in time and fertilize the soil that will bear rich fruit—the common brotherhood of all mankind.

SMASH POLICEMEN WITH BASEBALL BAT IF THEY ENTER WITHOUT WARRANT

"If a uniformed policeman attempts a search without a warrant, use a baseball bat on him," admonished Judge Joseph B. David.

The judge became angry when he listened to the testimony of Walter Jusewicz, 2345 North Leavitt street, who told of two policemen searching his flat after buying a drink in his restaurant.

"Policemen have no right to search your flat. You should have taken a baseball bat on them or kicked them out," he declared. "Citizens have the right to resist under such circumstances even to the taking of life.

"Government officials would have to arrest themselves and then put 75 per cent of the population of Chicago behind the bars if they enforced the law properly."

Open College for Dry Law Enforcers

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 25—A school for dry agents, at which former Congressman Andrew J. Volstead, sponsor of the prohibition act, will be one of the instructors, is being formed by Gen. W. F. Rhinow, northwest prohibition administrator.

Huge Super-Power System.

Chicago will be linked with cities six other states by a huge super-power electric system, according to an announcement made today by the Midland Utilities company.

Work is to begin at once on the construction of a 132,000 volt electric transmission line between Michigan City and South Bend, Ind., which will connect the super-power system of the Calumet Gas and Electric company in northwestern Indiana with the system of the American Gas and Electric company, which operates from South Bend to the southeast, serving cities in Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky

Japanese Clericals Jump Into Politics

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKIO, Japan, Oct. 25—Formation of a strong clerical party that would participate in the coming elections at which more than 9,000,000 new voters will ballot, is reported to be supported by priests of the Nichiren sect, a millitant Buddhist group.

PURCELL TOUR ROUSES KANSAS CITY UNIONISTS

Sub-Committees Visit Local Unions

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 25—The rank and file trade unionists of Kansas City are showing an interest in the Purcell meeting that has been dormant since the active days ten years ago. A. A. Purcell, president of the International Federation of Trade Unions, member of the British parliament and fraternal delegate to the A. F. of L. convention of 1925 will speak on "World Trade Union Unity," at the Labor Temple Auditorium on Wednesday, Nov. 4.

Who's Doing It.

Representatives of ten local unions with Barney McCoy as the secretary, compose the arrangement committee. Barney McCoy is business agent for the Iron Workers. Other unions sending delegates are the Post Office Clerks, Tailors, Meat Cutters, Division of the Allied Trades, Cooks and Waitresses and others.

This is Real Work.

Five hundred large posters are being posted by the Bill Posters' Union thruout the city and at halls and gathering places of trade unionists. The committee has divided into subcommittees of twos and are calling on all unions that will meet before Nov. 4.

Crafts of suburban cities are being visited. Five minute talks and ticket sales are being made at all unions thruout greater Kansas City. Unionists and even farmers from nearby districts are coming to the city to hear Purcell speak.

You're Invited to Tuesday's Meeting of the N. W. Branch

The Northwest English Branch of the Workers Party invites all workers to attend its open-to-all educational meeting on Tuesday night at 8 o'clock,—October 27.

J. Louis Engdahl, editor of The DAILY WORKER and its correspondent at the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor, will speak upon the convention and its significant in the American labor movement. The meeting is to be held at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch boulevard. All welcome. No admission.

Soviet Agency Buys Mine Locomotives for Donetz District

The Westinghouse Electric International company has received an order from the Amtorg Trading corporation of New York City, commercial representatives in America of the Soviet government, for twenty-five mine locomotives to be used in connection with electrification of the coal mines in the Donetz district, near the Black sea.

Vilno Court Sentences Editor.

VILNO, Oct. 25.—In the Vilno district court the trial of the editor Antoni Votchik, of a suppressed White Russian paper, The Village Truth, has been concluded. He was charged with having published three articles against the government. Votchik has been sentenced to 1 year imprisonment.

INDIAN VILLAGERS RESENT ATTACK OF BRITISH POLICE ON RELIGIOUS PROCESSION

MADRAS, British India, Oct. 25.—Three persons have been killed and many injured, including seventeen policemen, in a riot after a religious procession in the village of Uttungi, near Bellary.

During the procession two different factions of Lingayats clashed, with British police intervening on behalf of the attackers. Some 1,000 villagers then attacked the police with stones, and other missiles for their brutal behavior. The police replied with buckshot.

PICKET HORTHY EMBASSY IN WASHINGTON

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25.—For the second time within a year Ambassadors' Row in the capitol was stunned by a Communist demonstration in a heavy rain a picket line was thrown around the Hungarian embassy at 16th and O Sts., protesting against the savagery of the Horthy regime that has let loose another blood bath upon the people of that unfortunate country.

Banners defying the Hungarian government and demanding freedom for Rakosi, former commissar of the short-lived Bolshevik government of Hungary, who is in momentary danger of execution at the hands of the white terror, were carried by the pickets.

The Hungarian ambassador in Washington is the notorious scoundrel, Szechenyi, who is influential at the state house, but during the picketing, which lasted from 12 to 1:30 p. m., he did not make his appearance.

NEWSPAPERS RAVE.

The Washington newspapers carried lurid stories of the picketing of the embassy, publishing photos of the Communists, led by Bernard Herman and Joseph Shatzky, and the banners carried in the picketing.

This is the second time within the past year that the Communists have invaded Amabassadors' Row. The first time was last spring when the Workers Party staged a gigantic protest before the Polish embassy against the sentence of death imposed upon Comrade Stanislav Lanzutsky by the Polish white terror. This, like the Lanzutsky demonstration is part of a world-wide movement to liberate the valiant fighters of the working class who have fallen into the bloody clutches of the white guard governments.

POLICE THINK IT OVER.

Near the close of the demonstration the District of Columbia police arrived and ordered the pickets to disperse. They refused and told the police they intended to continue to picket until 1:30, as planned. This determined stand was somewhat of a surprise to the police so they held a consultation among themselves and evidently decided to permit the picketing to continue until the time set by the Communists had expired, rather than make arrests.

U. S. SUPREME COURT REFUSES APPEAL OF ANITA WHITNEY ON SYNDICALISM LAW VIOLATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25.—The appeal before the United States supreme court of Anita Whitney, former member of the Communist Labor Party and the Industrial Workers of the World, for a review of her conviction in the California state courts, for violation of the state criminal syndicalism law, was denied. The United States supreme court claimed it had no jurisdiction over the case and refused to listen to the appeal.

Anita Whitney of Oakland, California, was convicted of violating the state criminal syndicalism act which forbids "membership or association in groups teaching the violent overthrow of the government or the unlawful destruction of property." She was charged with membership in the Communist Labor Party and also in assisting the I. W. W. to raise funds for the defense of many members who were arrested under the state criminal syndicalist act.

Court Refuses to Discuss Law

The United States supreme court refused to pass upon the constitutionality of the California criminal syndicalist law under which 100 members of the I. W. W. are now serving terms of 14 years or less for belonging to the I. W. W.

Frisco Workers Protest

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25.—The International Labor Defense is arranging a series of protest meetings in California protesting the refusal of the United States supreme court to review the appeal of Anita Whitney against her conviction in the California state courts for an alleged violation of the state syndicalism law.

Oakland Meeting Saturday

The first of these meetings will be held in Oakland, Anita Whitney's home town, at the Native Sons Hall, Saturday night, October 31.

Arrangements are being made for protest meetings in Berkeley, Los Angeles and other California cities.

United Front Demonstrations

All efforts are being made to get as many of the labor unions and organizations of California as possible behind this united front protest against the criminal syndicalism law of California and the refusal of the supreme court to act on the Anita Whitney appeal.

Anita Out on Bail

Anita Whitney is now out on $10,000 bail and had notified her lawyers that she will make no further legal fight against serving her sentence. It is expected to have her say a few words at the protest meetings arranged in her behalf.

NEW YORK, Oct 25—The American Civil Liberties Union has sent a telegram to Governor Friend W. Richardson of California, asking for a pardon for Anita Whitney, whose appeal for a review of her conviction by the state courts of California for violation of the state criminal syndicalism law was denied by the United States supreme court, on the grounds that the governors of Illinois and New York have pardoned members of organizations who were charged with violations of the criminal syndicalism law.

The Civil Liberties Union urges the governor to pardon Anita Whitnty as her conviction comes five years after the alleged offense of belonging to the then legal political organization the Communist Labor Party, which has long since been disbanded.

HORTHY TERROR CONDEMNED AT PITTSBURGH MEET

"Rakosi Must Not Die," Is Slogan

By M. RASNICK.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 25.—Several hundred workers gathered in mass meeting at 35 Miller St., to protest against the attempt of the bloody Horthy government to murder Comrade Mathias Rakosi, former peoples' commissar of Soviet Hungary. After a vigorous speech by Comrade Bloor in which she pointed out the horrors of the white terror existing in most of European countries as well as in America as resolution of protest was adopted unanimously.

The following telegrams were sent to senator Borah, head of the foreign relations committee and to the Hungarian embassy. "Several hundred workers assembled in mass meeting in Pittsburgh, Pa. resolved to wire you their vigorous protest and indignation against the attempt of the bloody Horthy government of Hungary to murder Mathias Rakosi, former peoples' commissar of Soviet Hungary, without even a fair trial. Demand immediate release of Rakosi and others, also demand white terror in Hungary be stopped immediately."

A collection to help in the defense of the ten comrades of Pittsburgh who are under charges since the raid of 1923 and who are threatened with long terms in prison if proven guilty was taken, and the workers responded generously.

Armed Soldiers and Pictures of Saints Mock Hunger-Strikers

MOSCOW, Oct. 25.—(I. R. A.)—A letter has been received from one of the imprisoned in the so-called section "H" of the Doftan penitentiary, giving details about the hunger strike of Max Goldstein who has since died and others. We publish the following quotation therefrom:

"They support their sufferings with courage and firmness. The corner of Doftan where the hunger strike is proceeding, is surrounded with a high enclosure, on which are suspended as a mockery pictures of two greatest saints of the holy church, and at the side of this picture stands a soldier with loaded rifle and bayonet, reminding us not only of heavenly but also of earthly rulers. There, behind this enclosure, the painful drama of our best comrades M. G. Bonkhor and Max Goldstein is going on."

Was Your Flivver There?

DETROIT, Oct. 25.—Use of the railroads by the automobile manufacturers totaled 734,730 carloads of cars and parts in 1924, was indicated in a compilation of James S. Marvin, chairman of the conference of the automobile traffic managers at their conference in Detroit.

Five More Pickets Arrested in Front of Horthy Embassy

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Five more workers, members of the International Labor Defense, who were picketing the Hungarian consulate on Morris St., near Broadway, not far from Wall St., the headquarters of American capitalism, were arrested.

The picketing is part of the worldwide protest against the fascist rule that is now in power in Hungary, and is at present attempting to send Mathias Rakosi to the gallows for being a fighter in the front ranks of the working class.

Those arrested were: Joseph Vadas, Aleander Kozma, Gertrude Tobinson, Joseph Nestor and Sylvan A. Pollack. When brought before Judge Brough, in the White St. court, they were found guilty and released on a suspended sentence. Joseph R. Brodsky, appeared as attorney for the defendants.

Fifteen workers who were arrested on the same grounds last Saturday, were also released.

Mitchell Court-Martial to Be Open to Public for "Good of Service"

WASHINGTN, D. C., Oct. 25.—The war department is contemplating having the court-martial sessions of Colonel William Mitchell's trial for "conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline" open to the public.

The charge and the mode of procedure in the trial will not in any way allow Mitchell to spill the beans on the army or navy departments' method of handling the air service.

Mitchell will merely state whether he is guilty or not of writing and stating certain facts as to the "criminal negligence" of the war and navy departments. It will resemble the evolution trial of Tennessee in many respects.

Court-martial trials as a rule are kept secret but the war department officials are making a deviation from ordinary procedure "for the betterment of the discipline within the army."

Rich Program Offered for Opening Week by Chicago Opera Co.

The fourth season of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, will open on Tuesday evening, (Nov. 3) with the Chicago premiere of Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier"—the first opera in the comic vein to be accorded such distinction in the Chicago annals of the lyric stage. In "Der Rosenkavalier" no less than twenty-three principals are named, necessitating the appearance of such a group as Raisa, Mason and Forrai on the feminine side, and Kipnis, Mojica, Cortis, Beck and others in the leading male roles.

Wednesday evening introduces "Manon Lescaut," with Ernesto Torti, baritone, making his American debut. The cast will include: Muzio, Beck, Cortis, Cotreuil, Mojica, Oliviero, Rimini, Trevisan.

"Carmen" on Thursday evening will introduce Marguerite D'Alvarez as a guest artist in the title role, and Serge Oukrainsky and the ballet for the first time of the season. The cast will include D'Hermanoy, Ansseau, Cotreuil, Kipnis, Mojica.

There will be no performance on Friday evening, Saturday being given over to "The Masked Ball" in the afternoon and "Rigoletto" at night.

The first Sunday afternoon performance brings the ever popular "La Traviata" with Claudia Muzio as Violetta, Antonio Cortis as Alfred, and a cast embracing D'Hermanoy, Beck, Nicolich, Oliviero, Torti. Richard Bonelli, an American baritone with an extensive European routining experience, will make his debut in the role of Germont senior.

Monday brings the close of the first week with von Flotow's tuneful "Martha" with Edith Mason in the title role and Tito Schipa as Lionel. The fifteen important parts will introduce the following, among the many singers: Anna Correnti, Irene Pavloska, Lazzari, Torti, Trevisan.

Anderson Fears Attack on Volsted Law

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25—A story that has been going around the capital for weeks, to the effect that unless the new prohibition regime is able to make some headway in enforcing the Volstead Act, administration officials; backed by Elbert H. Gary and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., will unite in asking congress to modify the law, found its way into print today in the Fellowship Forum, a weekly newspaper whose principal editor is Wm. H. Anderson, deposed head of the anti-saloon league in New York state.

Is Pious John D., Jr. a Wet?

Anderson challenges Mr. Rockefeller to deny the story that he has promised to support a modification of the law if Gen. Lincoln C. Andrews' new "military organization" is unable to enforce the dry laws any more adequately than they have been enforced. The story is headlined: "Have wets won support of Mr. Rockefeller?"

The Rockefellers, father and son, have long been numbered among the principal financial backers of the league, and Anderson resents the loss of their financial support.

The story on which Anderson's attack is based is that Rockefeller and other outstanding public men have become convinced that bad as beer and light wines might be, the present wave of "immorality" and disrespect for law, particularly on the part of the younger generation, is infinitely worse, and that in the interests of "national morality" a law should be framed that is possible of enforcement.

Minneapolis Liberal Club Condones Action of Secretary Kellogg

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 25.—At the last meeting of the Saturday Lunch Club, which poses as a "liberal" organization, a resolution protesting the barring of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of the British House of Commons, by Secretary of State Kellogg from the United States, for a speech made in the British parliament for Indian independence, was laid on the table after being presented by one of the members of the club.

Thru this action the Saturday Lunch Club has illustrated how the so-called "liberals" of Minneapolis and the Minneapolis chamber of commerce meet on the same political ground.

The motion to table was made by a blow-hard liberal who runs a small law-business.

He's Willing.

Mayor William E. Dever of Chicago has signified his willingness to run as United States senator from Illinois in the coming elections, to the democrat bosses, who are looking around for possible "strong" vote catchers. Mayor Dever's chances to be the democrat choice are very high as the republican camp is split on the question as to who will be their vote grabber.

McAndrew Gets Bosses' Organization to Pass Favorable on Schedule

The joint committee on school affairs, an organization comprizing delegates from 27 civic bodies in Chicago which does not include one labor union or one teacher organization went on record yesterday afternoon as favoring the proposed McAndrew teachers' salary schedule. In a resolution copies of which will be sent to Mayor Dever, the board of education and the superintendent of schools they recommend that definite action be taken upon the schedule at the earliest possible time.

To arguments advanced against the schedule by some of the delegates because of the financial burden on the already depleted treasury of the school board and the increased cost of education, the assurance was given that McAndrew's plan to cut the wages of teachers of service, comprising the large bulk of the staff, and his plan to increase the size of the classrooms for each teacher from 3 to 20 pupils would cut the cost of teachers salaries sufficiently to take care of the increase for the principals, etc. It was also argued that the referendum will have to be held in April for an increase in the education fund regardless of the schedule because of the present bankrupt status of the school treasury.

On Thursday, three weeks from yesterday a meeting will be held to take up the question of teachers' councils. Affiliated bodies to this committee are such organizations as the Chicago city club, the union league and the association of commerce.

Party Reorganization Brings Great Demand for English Classes

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The opening of the first English courses at the Workers School is showing surprising results. Altho only twenty-five will be admitted to a class, there were over 35 at the first meeting of the elementary English class, and applications have since been received that warrant the starting of at least two more elementary English classes at once. The Workers School will start as many classes as the registration warrants. The fee for each course is $2.50 for three months, once a week. The registration for the intermediate and advanced English is of similar magnitude and demands are coming from the federations for courses in their headquarters as well as in other sections of the city.

To the Finnish Federation, English teachers who speak Finnish are being supplied and the same plan will be pursued with the other federations where possible.

Those wishing to register for English can do so any day or evening in Room 34 of the Workers Scifool, 108 East 14th St.

Prison Doctor Tells of Filthy Condition of Holy Cross Jail

WARSAW, Oct. 25.—In connection with the hunger strike of political prisoners going on in the Prison of the Holy Cross, the Polish section International Red Aid communicates almost incredible particulars concerning the prison regime.

When questioned about conditions in the prison the prison physician, Doctor Bilnik, made the following statement:

"In the prison 60% of the prisoners are tuberculous, 30 of these are in dying condition. For all patients only 3 liters of milk are ordered. The prisoners are doomed to certain destruction."

The following description of the Prison of the Holy Cross was recently published by the bourgeois Warsaw Courier.

"Even birds do not stop there. One can see around the prison nothing but black crows."

A Correction.

GITLOW CALLS ON THOMAS FOR UNITY IN U. S.

Communist Issues Open Letter to Socialist

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Benjamin Gitlow, Communist candidate for mayor of New York City has called Norman Thomas, socialist candidate "bluff" in a letter replying to Thomas' assertions that he is for world trade union unity. The following is in part a letter sent by Gitlow to Thomas. What will the socialist candidate do about this letter? New York workers read this letter carefully.

Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for mayor,
7 East 15 St., New York City.
Dear Mr. Thomas:

The Headgear Worker, official organ of the millinery workers, in its issue of October 2nd, which has just come to hand, carries extracts from a letter, sent by you, to the effect that you favor trade union unity. You are quoted as saying, among other things, "I believe we must work for trade union unity because it is a necessity—and if I were an English worker, the naked necessity of making a united front against capitalist imperialism would force me to find a daily basis for an understanding for working jointly with the Communists."

The views you express in this quotation compel us to write and ask the blunt question: "If you are in favor of unity with the Communists in Great Britain to fight the Dawes plan, why do you not promote such unity in this country?"

Is not "our" vice-president, Mr. Dawes, spokesman of the House of Morgan, the author of this plan which enslaves German labor and breaks down the labor standards of all Europe? Does not this plan mean also reduction of the living standards of American labor? Is it not driving the American workers toward another world imperialist war? Are there no reasons for unity of working class forces in America for a mutual defense against the same powerful capitalist imperialism of Wall St. against which you propose that the British workers and the German workers and the Russian workers unite?

There is an old saying, Mr. Thomas, that "The grass is always greener farther off." Look about you and you will see that it is precisely here in America that world imperialism has its center of power and it is precisely here in America that the major battle on behalf of the world's workers must be fought.

Class War in America

What do we find in these United States? The use of the courts, the police, the army and the entire machinery of government to enforce the open shop, break up picket lines and defeat strikes. And against this, the most powerful capitalist class in the world, with a machinery of oppressive government unparalleled in history, is opposed a divided, disorganized and in large measure politically and economically unorganized working class.

The wage cuts in New England, in New Jersey, in the south and the west; the bombardment of the West Virginia miners with injunctions—in our own city of New York, the barbarous housing conditions, the rising living costs, such flagrant use of the injunction as has just been made in the case of the International Tailoring Co.—do these not require a united working class, Mr. Thomas?

Why then do you favor unity in Great Britain or in continental Europe and not in America? Already the question of trade union unity has become a living issue in the American working class and the presence of Mr. Purcell, representative of the British unions and champion of such unity, will intensify that demand on the part of the American workers. Why do you not join in that campaign?

And the question of political unity, Mr. Thomas—was there ever a working class that needed that issue raised more badly than the American workers divided as they are and still tied as a tail to the kite of the bosses' political parties? Yet, when we raised the issue of political unity in the city of New York, of a united labor ticket as a first step toward a labor party, your party ignored and rejected our proposal.

Communists Demand Action

We feel that your remarks on unity remain a pious formula if not translated into action, or an empty phrase as long as you limit yourself to England or Europe where you cannot actively work for unity and can have no influence on the course of labor affairs. It is in the very nature of your party, Mr. Thomas, that its standard bearer should talk of unity somewheres else while the party's machine officially unites itself with those fighting such unity in America and makes itself an instrument of disunion and confusion. Unity of labor's forces, Mr. Thomas, should begin at home. We, therefore, challenge the sincerity of your remarks by giving you and your party an opportunity to translate them into action. Once more, Mr. Thomas, we invite you and your party to join with us, even at this late hour, in the call for a united labor ticket which will be the first step toward unification of labor's political forces in a labor party.

We, further invite you and your party to join with us and other labor forces in issuing a joint call for a convention of all the unions and workers' organizations of this country to promote recognition of Soviet Russia, world trade union unity, independent working class political action and political unity. Any of these issues require united action. We stand for a united campaign on any of them or all of them together.

We await your answer, Mr. Thomas.

Very truly yours,

Benjamin Gitlow
Workers Party candidate for Mayor of the City of New York.

Aircraft Board to Investigate Airplane as Combat Weapon

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25.—The aircraft investigation board appointed by President Calvin Coolidge is discussing the feasibility of carrying on a series of new aviation tests with the intention of proving the efficiency of the airplane as a combat and defense weapon.

Up to the present the role of the airplane has been looked upon more as the spy of the army and navy. Its main purpose has been to observe movements of enemy troops, etc., but since the charges made by Colonel William Mitchell, the board is thinking seriously of the airplane as a combat weapon.

Instead of having stationary targets or the placing of black powder bombs side of a moving cruiser, the aviation board has decided to have the airplanes drop bombs onto swiftly moving targets. Steps are being worked out to test the efficiency of anti-aircraft guns during those bombings.

The American Negro Labor Congress

The Daily Worker hails the American Negro Labor Congress opening today in the city of Chicago. The convening of this congress is significant in the history of the labor movement. It is the first time that an effort has been made to bring together representatives of Negro workers from all parts of the country.

Like every other advance in the labor movement, this congress convenes after a hard struggle against great odds. When it became known that work toward such a congress was under way every agency of reaction began to assail it. The ku kluxers naturally viewed it as a diabolical attempt against white, protestant, nordic, native-born, 100 per cent, etc., etc. Those faithful scullions of the capitalist class, the officialdom of the American Federatiton of Labor, denounced it as a Bolshevik conspiracy. The campaign raged in order to terrorize the organizers and supporters of the congress. But the workers who did the organization work were made of sterner stuff than estimated by their craven enemies, and as a result the congress is here.

Great tasks lie before those colored workers striving to bring their race into the American labor movement. They not only have the same class problems of other workers, but they have a special struggle to resist the efforts of the capitalist enemies within as well as without their own ranks seeking to arouse antagonism between them and the white wage slaves.

The congress was made possible by the untiring efforts of its organizers and by the fact that during and since the war the industrial capitalists have encouraged a mass movement of Negro workers from the southern agricultural regions into the industrial centers.

As Comunists we hail this congress as the beginning of a movement with far-reaching implications. Not merely can it be the means of starting to mobilize the Negro workers for a struggle against the degrading restrictions imposed upon them as a race, but as American workers, speaking the common language of the country, they can become a power in the labor movement. Furthermore, by being brought into the struggle against imperialism in the United States, they will receive training that will enable them to play an effective part in the world mobilization of the oppressed colonial peoples against capitalism.

Tuesday Is Navy Day

Tomorrow is set aside in the calendar of the jingoes as navy day. It is supposed to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the birth of the United States navy.

Navy day this year recalls the grim and ghastly events of the past few months. The twenty-five corpses still held in the iron clutches of the submarine S-51, off Naragansett Bay; the crash of the dirigible Shenandoah; other disasters, one following close upon another, expose the growth of a militarism that menace the peace of the world.

No one except the imperialists in control of the naval policy of the government know the extent of war preparations, but we do know they must be enormous. The general public never hears of them until a catastrophe occurs. Then they only learn the details of the one boat or plane affected, never anything of the others.

These disasters alone prove conclusively that tremendous activity is taking place in the navy department in order that the armed forces on the sea may be able to defend the world-wide ramifications of American imperialism.

Navy day is an occasion for the war lords, the gunmen of imperialism, to glorify their cowardly business. They depict the glory of murdering defenseless people for the sake of "civilization." We revolutionists refuse to be deluded by the patriots. To us it means glorification of the murderers in the streets of Panama City, the gunboat creeping up the Yangtze in China, a squadron sailing the length of the Mediterranean Sea to Alexandria to aid the French in their heroic task of turning Damascus into a slaughter house. Seeing this we denounce navy day and call upon the workers to boycott the thing and expose the United States navy as a specialized instrument of murder in the hands of the imperialists.

The Disarmament Hoax

Mr. Coolidge, in his reaction to the Locarno compromise, joined in the disarmament cry. All this clamor about disarmament is especially ludicrous just at this time. Imperialism, the final stage of capitalism, can maintain itself only thru armed force. As the capitalism of the imperialist nations penetrates into every part of the world, and meets the challenge of the nationalist movements of the colonials it must develop every branch of its military power to the highest degree. To understand this fact, is to understand the impossibility of disarmament.

Disarmament means for Britain to abandon its far flung empire, for France and Italy to renounce their possessions and the United States theirs.

At a time when France and Spain are crushing the Moroccans by force of arms, when Somaliland is rising against Italy, when the Druses and Arabians are throttled by combined French and American forces, when China is a seething mass of anti-imperialist nationalism, to talk of disarmament is particularly imbecile. If Europe were to disarm the imperialist structure would totter and into the ruins would go the billions of Wall Street investments. And certainly Mr. Coolidge does not want that.

His masters may desire a conference, and it may even be called under the guise of contemplating disarmament. But it will in reality be only a maneuver to gain an advantage over other nations.

Disarmament can only come when the working class tire of playing the game of their masters and wipe from the earth the capitalist system that today can thrive only thru armed force and terror.

The Negroes in convention in Chicago do not call it the American Negro Racial Congress, but Labor Congress. They recognize that they belong first and foremost to the working class. The white workers would do well to recognize the same thing.

The Migratory's Revolutionary Role

THE role of the migratory proletariat in the revolutionary labor movement has often been discussed by everyone from college professors to migratories themselves. Often one is unable to tell the conclusions of one from the other. The professors look upon the migratory as upon a laboratory specimen, as a symptom of social maladjustment, or as an object of humanitarian solicitude. The migratory has either not thought at all, or has too frequently exalted himself when the tang of power was singing in his veins and he and a few fellow migratories had won a battle with some sheriff, shack or skinflint farmer, into a scornful superiority over all those who were not "stiffs".

It is the duty of the Communists not only to analyze the migratory working class, but to set it in motion, to point out as workers to workers, the path, rough though it be, of revolutionary struggle. The resolution of the Workers (Communist) Party, passed by the recent convention says:

"We must assist and co-operate with the I. W. W. and other working class organizations in the organization and strengthening of unions of agricultural workers.

"The Workers Party shall strive to develop united front action with the I. W. W. and other labor organizations. Being real proletarians these rural workers form the party's finest base in the ranks of the farming masses."

A few of the points for which the party pledged to struggle are—the right of the unions to maintain employment bureaus without interference in agricultural centers, the repeal of state vagrancy laws, prohibition of child labor of school age and the right of franchise and citizenship for migratory workers.

But the following letter of the Red International Affiliation Committee to the convention of the Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union 110 of the I. W. W., now in convention at Minneapolis, gives a clear view of the composition of the migratory working class, the theory upon which it must strive to organize itself, its practical application and the revolutionary goal that is the aspiration both of the I. W. W. and the Red International of Labor Unions:

FELLOW Workers: The Red International Affiliation Committee, credentialed by the Executive Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unions as its representative in relations to the Industrial Workers of the World, does not share the opinion of some fellow workers of the I. W. W. that the A. W. I. U. 110 is "hopeless"—that there is no use trying to organize in the agricultural industry because, according to this idea, the "hobo element" insists on running the union and shutting out all but migratory workers with no social aspirations above a cheap flop and a "coffee-and" existence.

We believe this idea is a slander against the A. W. I. U. and the migratory element from which it draws its strength, an element which has furnished the I. W. W. and other revolutionary organizations some of the best leaders. But granted that the I. W. W. draws its strength from the migratory element, it must be admitted that it has drawn its weakness also from the same element.

While it is wrong to condemn the whole for the fault of the part, and the A. W. I. U. has been for vigilant stock-taking of the theories which sway it, we are convinced that if traditional theories are examined objectively, and if the A. W. I. U. resolutely combats policies which ignore or are hostile to revolutionary industrial unionism, the condemnation now directed against the A. W. I. U. will vanish.

WHAT are these faults and where are their sources? Unquestionably, they do come from certain types of the weak side of the migratory working class. There are all kinds of migratories, and while the weaker element may not understand the stronger and healthier elements, the best type of migratory should recognize and analyze the types around him. He should make sure that—although all elements should and must remain within the union—the ideology of the slum proletarian and the jungle buzzard, however disguised and made into theories and programs by able demagogues who play to sentiment and prejudice of this backward element, will be fought persistently and conquered as a controlling force in the union.

If real analysis is made, it will be found that some of the theories which sway the union are easily traced back from the finespun and beautifully perfect utopias of the noisy but false leaders, to their source in the mentality of the most backward and unhealthy elements drawn into the union. These elements lack everything but words. They lack any desire to advance the collective interests of the union membership as a whole. They are unwilling to sacrifice for a movement. They are selfish; and they rally to support any glib misleader who can make their selfishness look like a philosophy.

This element is inherently individualistic, and when individualism, which is a social philosophy of the petty bourgeoisie, is painted over with revolutionary phrases, we have the sort of anarchism which is afflicting the I. W. W. The union which accepts this disguised individualism, is accepting a theory diametrically opposed to revolutionary industrial unionism, and which permeates an organization, however composed strictly of wage workers, with the paralyzing theory and disrsuptive action of the bourgeosie.

THE fellow worker among us who recognize these theories for what they are, yet who accepts them as his own, or has not the courage to stand up and fight against them, is no friend of the I. W. W. and is doing a service to the capitalist class.

With this brief outline of the character of forces within the A. W. I. U. and their potential qualities, we repeat that we are convinced that the A. W. I. U. contains a leadership drawn from migratories that can organize and keep organized an important percentage of the millions of agricultural workers of the United States. The migratory looks upon the home guard as inferior; and this is true so far as the home guard in the industry is typified by the "hired man" of the middle west, the ranch hands and the swarming masses of cotton and tobacco hands, the truck garden workers, the beet field slaves, the dairy hands, etc.

But it is precisely because the migratory is superior in mental outlook, in comprehension of class relations, of society as a whole—in short it is because the migratory is more politically advanced, it is he that can organize the home guard masses now terribly exploited and awaiting such relief. Who else but the revolutionary migratory, understanding the home guard better than he understands himself, can deal with these backward workers, persuade them and win them in large masses for organization?

TRUE, this will require a patience more than the A. W. I. U. has yet demonstrated. It requires policy which is different than the present, a policy which looks at the proletarian revolution realistically—and rejecting the idea that we can somehow ignore these backward masses and make the revolution without them—can plan for decades of the most patient and practical work. It requires a consecutive leadership, making a sincere and persistent struggle to unite the most backward workers in struggle for their immediate needs, their simpliest aspirations, and by winning their confidence in this work, awaken other aspirations—a desire for emancipation of their class and a readiness to throw their weight into the struggle for the overthrowal of capitalism.

The R. I. A. C. believes the A. W. I. U. contains members who have this patience and who believe in this policy, but they must first have the patience and the policy to win the A. W. I. U. definitely to such a program. We wish to make a few suggestions for your consideration:

1. A thoro discussion shall be opened upon the tasks of the A. W. I. U. with reference to building a large and permanent organization of residential and semi-residential agricultural and agrarian workers.

The R. I. A. C. believes that if the annual fishing expedition for initiations and dues on the freight trains during the wheat harvest is to remain as the biggest part of the A. W. I. U. actively, the A. W. I. U. is certain to be discredited in the labor movement, and deservedly so.

2. There must be conscious and relentless struggle against anarchist theories. This is to include determined strugggle against a) opposition to leadership as a principle; b) decentralization; c) lack of discipline; d) sectarianism; e) anti-politics.

The R. I. A. C. wants to say a few words on each of these.

a) The habit of belittling and decrying all leadership is worse than having to accept occasional bad leadership—it is suicide for any organization. Those who cry "No leadership!" are always bad leaders trying to whittel down better ones. Individual leaders may come and go, but leading groups with constructive policies are the brains of organization. But all must win leadership—not by intrigue and demagogy—but by standing openly for programs and being efficient in carrying them out. To try to organize masses of backward workers, and at the same time to undermine their simple faith in the union by constant invective against every sincere and capable member who gives his service to the organization is utterly insane, and only anarchists can accept such theory.

b) Decentralization is a dispersion of the forces of labor in the face of united attacks by the capitalist class. If any army were so "organized" it would be promptly massacred. The American workers are still fighting the class war and require perfect coordination and central direction. Local autonomy with no power and no funds for the center is an anarchist ideal. But its logical end is no union. Against such we propose democratic centralization, based upon job committees or sectional branches, each higher body elected by a lower body and subject to its recall, but the subordinate body to carry out orders without question so long as orders are issued by those whom it elects. This covers also the matter of discipline, which must be organizational, not ideological, as a union must admit workers of all opinions.

c) The A. W. I. U. has no monopoly on sectarianism, the whole I. W. W. being permeated with it. With the A. W. I. U. it takes the form of a utopian concept that we are so much better rebels than the scissor bills and home guards that we not only scorn their ideas, but we will not try to organize them for fear they would pollute the union with their numbers. If we do away with the crazy opposition to leadership, and keep an expersienced and worthy group, this so-called danger of dilution would not exist. Besides, what kind of a union is it that does not pretend to be based on skill, yet refuses to base its power on numbers? If you confine an organization to those of certain opinions, you are a political party, not a union.

THIS is the sectarian phase of the I. W. W. as a whole, particulafly the "small industrial unions", which are persisted in by mistaken fellow workers who think they can break up existing mass organizations by abstract educational propaganda about the future society, failing to recognize that the revolutionist must never destroy a mass organization, but enter it and remain in it to teach the backward workers by example and by practical leadership that after they win immediate demands they must go on to revolution.

This sectarian theory has led the I. W. W. to isolation from the other revolutionary elements in the trade unions and in the labor movement of the world. Nationally, the members of the I. W. W. in other unions, should co-operate with the left wing gathered around the Trade Union Educational League. Internationally, the I. W. W. should send a delegation representative of the large industrial unions at least, to Soviet Russia during the next congress of the R. I. L. U. and upon their report decide future international relations. We believe such action will prove to the I. W. W. that only by affiliation to the R. I. L. U. can the I. W. W. take the important place it deserves in the world labor movement.

d) The theory of anti-politics is a bourgeois theory to corrupt labor organizations. The class struggle is a fight to control society and every class struggle is a political struggle, as Marx says, because it is a struggle for power. Renounce politics and you renounce the goal of the class struggle. But in fact one cannot renounce, one can only choose which class to fight with. And to fail to fight for one is to fight for the other. We see an example in the "non-partisan" policy of the A. F. of L.

BUT some anarchists in the I. W. W. consciously misrepresent "politics" as meaning only a timid and servile parliamentarism, a reliance upon the ballot-box and trusting participation in capitalist parliaments. Such was and is the old socialist party. But when such an interpretation is put upon the "politics" of the Communist movement—which has done more than anything else to wipe yellow parliamentarism from the earth—and has succeeded in Soviet Russia—such anarchist confusionists are either too ignorant to deserve attention or too mendacious to be trusted.

The Communist parties which make up the Communist International use parliamentary methods, but they subordinate them to and make them only an auxiliary to the class war outside the parliaments. There is no excuse for lack of knowledge of this policy now, since it has turned European parliaments into Communist propaganda meetings, set whole nations agog with interest in the Communists and been the despair of capitalist rulers. Such Communist "politicians" have paid with their lives for such actions, and literally hundreds have been imprisoned and many are there now for such invasions of capitalist parliaments with the language and action of class war. No Communist pretends that by the ballot-box the workers can overthrow capitalism and attain Communism, the classless society of the future where all means of production will be owned in common and all difference between mental and manual labor will be wiped out.

THE R. I. A. C. believes that the A. W. I. U. will enter upon a new era of growth if it takes the steps we suggest as a basis for the future. We have gone fully into some major questions as there seems to be some doubt in the minds of many fellow workers as to whether the A. W. I. U. deserves to live at all. The Red International of Labor Unions says that, if it shapes a program which will really give revolutionary unionism to the agricultural workers of this country, the A. W. I. U. will not only deserve to live, but will be supported by every section of the world proletariat.

Yours for Unity and Revolution,
RED INTERNATIONAL AFFILIATION COMMITTEE,
Harrison George, Chairman.

SEGREGATION OF NEGRO WORKERS AN ISSUE IN MANY CITIES; RACE TERRORISM GROWING IN NORTH

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Whether Negroes have the right to defend their homes against white mob violence is involved in the case of Dr. O. H. Sweet and ten other Detroit Negroes whom Clarence Darrow has been engaged to defend by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Arthur Garfield Hays, American Civil Liberties counsel from New York, a white Detroit attorney and a colored lawyer who handled the case from the beginning constitute the full defense staff. The Negroes are charged with murder in connection with defending Dr. Sweet's home from white mob violence.

A Big Issue.

Negro segregation cases are in the courts in 17 cities of the United States at present, the N. A. A. C. P. announces. "The Detroit case involves the third and most dangerous phase of segregation," says James Weldon Johnson, N. A. A. C. P. secretary. "The N. A. A. C. P. has fought and won a victory in the United States supreme court, in the matter of segregation by ordinance or law.

"We shall very soon argue in the supreme court the question of segregation by private agreement among white property owners. We are now facing in Detroit, segregation by mob violence. If in the Detroit case the Negro is not upheld in the right to defend his home against eviction by a riotous mob, no decent Negro homes anywhere in the United States will be secure."

In Denver, Colo., three "improvement associations" are circulating petitions to have all property owners sign that they will not sell property to Negroes. Separate schools for Negroes and legal segregation are also proposed. On Staten Island, N. Y., Samuel Browne, a colored letter carrier, has been repeatedly threatened with death if he does not sell his house. Backed by the N. A. A. C. P. Browne is suing a white neighbor who has been indicted for participation in disorders at Browne's house. Browne's wife is a public school teacher.

Race Terrorism Grows.

Segregation by property owners' agreement is due before the U. S. supreme court from a Washington, D. C., case carried up by the N. A. A. C. P. New Orleans Negroes are fighting a local segregation ordinance passed contrary to sunpreme court decision. Norfolk, Va., has a similar ordinance. In Roanoke, Va., a colored man's home was bombed and the man sued for not completing the purchase of a home his white neighbors would not have permitted him to live in. St. Louis, Baltimore, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, Oakland, Calif., St. Paul, Falls Church, Va., Kansas City, Mo., Cleveland and Brooklyn, N. Y., all have Negro segregation cases.

Such cases are increasing, especially in northern cities where there has been a steady heavy influx of Negro workers. Living conditions of these Negro workers are often frightful in every way because of the extreme crowding. Attempts to carry segregation into the school system accompany residential segregation, as in Philadelphia, where segregation in both respects is a fact, tho not legalized.

Anglo-Turk Mosul Controversy Comes Before Hague Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

THE HAGUE, Oct. 25—The international court judges have decided to alter their original plans of hearing the Mosul case and to allow the two powers involved to state the preliminary case before the court, Monday. A statement will be made for the British by Sir Douglas Hogg. Accommodations are being provided for the Turkish representative. Great doubt exists as to whether Turkey will send a representative since she has declared she will refuse to abide by any decision of the international court of the league of nations which will favor England and harm the interests of the Angora government of Turkey in her struggle to regain the oil fields of Mosul, which were handed to England by the league of nations in a mandate for Iraq.

LIARS AND FOOLS ON CHICAGO BENCH, SAY TWO OF THEM

Chicago courts are models of decorum. Yesterday a venerable attorney for exclusive bootleggers, who occasionally bump off a competitor with their trusty Colts, Lugers and Mausers, was caught donating booze to the court attaches. The other attorneys for bootleggers and the prosecutors are shocked that after all these years he should be so careless as to be caught. An extenuating circumstance is that age sometimes dulls the wits.

This was followed by two of the most famed and learned jurists, Chief Justice Harry Olson and Municipal Judge John H. Lyle, exchanging professional amenities. Judge Lyle accused Judge Olson of being crazy. Judge Olsen's rejoinder was "You're a fool!" Lyle observed that Olsen ought to be in the psychopathic hospital, and boasted that he (Lyle) had 3,000,000 people back of him. "Look out they don't all kick you at once," was the warning of Judge Olsen, observing that Lyle was not the first fool that sat on the bench.

We believe they are both eminent and truthful gentlemen. We accept as true all that Lyle said about Olsen and all that Olsen said about Lyle.

Czech Workers' Mission in Soviet Russia to Force Recognition of Russia

MOSCOW, Oct. 25—The chairman of the Czecho-Slovakian workers' delegation to Soviet Russia, Gottlieb Kment, declared in an interview that the journey to the Soviet Union was undertaken with a view to bringing pressure to bear upon the Czech government to recognize the Soviet government de jure. A further object of the delegation is to establish a united front of all workers internationally.

After describing the unsuccessful attempts of the social democracy to prevent the journey of the delegation to the Soviet Union, Kment expressed his conviction that the return of the delegation to Czech-Slovakia would strengthen those in favor of de jure recognition of the Soviet Union.

Protestant Bishops Table Petition to Decry "Radicalism"

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 25.—Bishops of the general convention of the protestant episcopal church refused to consider a petition signed by 169 persons in 22 dioceses asking that the convention take action against the spreading of radicalism in the church. The petition called for specific action against the league for industrial democracy, formerly the intercollegiate socialist league, the American civil liberties union, the fellowship of reconciliation and the fellowship of youth for peace.

BANK OFFICIAL FORCED UNION TO OUST SHAFIR

Amalgamated Head Is Out to Crush Union

By JOSEPH SHAFIR.

In view of the news given to the capitalist press by Duane Swift, publicity director of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, I find it is my duty to the working class in general, and especially to the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America to state the real facts relating to my expulsion.

Expelled by Bank Officials.

I was expelled on the instructions of Mariempietri, vice-president of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, and member of the General Executive Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

On my return from Atlantic City, where I attended the American Federation of Labor Convention as delegate of the Bank Clerks' Union, I had a private talk with Mack Tulshin, acting cashier at the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank and Duane Swift, the Amalgamated Bank's business getter and it was understood that as far as the union was concerned no question would be raised about the resolutions introduced at the convention unless the American Federation of Labor makes an issue of it.

Swift Confers with Mariempietri.

Tuesday night, Oct. 13, just before the meeting of the executive committee of the Bank Clerks' Union took place Brothers Swift, Tulshin and Horween, assistant real estate manager of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, held a long conference with Mariempietri and I, as president of the union, had to wait fully 30 minutes before I could meet with the members of the executive committee of my union.

At the executive committee meeting that evening my report was rejected.

When I offered to submit the question as to the constitutionality of my actions at the American Federation of Labor convention to John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, they rejected it.

What's a Constitution?

Horween expressed the feeling of the group at this meeting when he said, "What difference does it make whether you have the constitutional right or not of introducing resolutions at the American Federation of Labor convention, the fact remains that you

COOLIDGE'S CONFIDENTIAL SECRETARY RESIGNS; GOES TO PETROLEUM INSTITUTE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 26.—Judson Welliver, confidential secretary to both President Harding and President Coolidge, has resigned to become publicity director for the petroleum institute of America at a large salary. Welliver has long been recognized as the agent in the White House of the oil interests and is credited with having written most of the speeches of Harding and Coolidge.

Welliver started his career as a magazine writer of the "muck-raker" type, made a special study of oil, and eventually became a confidential agent of the oil interests. When Harding entered the white house Welliver was sent in to formulate public utterances in the interest of the capitalist group behind the republican party.

Struggle for Advancement of Negro Labor Is Part of the Struggle for the Militant Labor Movement

Greetings to Negro Labor Congress

By the Trade Union Educational League.

EFFORTS to organize the Negro working masses for struggle against oppression, social and economic, are a vital and integral part of the whole movement of labor and the toiling masses of the world towards emancipation from the slavery of capitalist imperialism.

The American Negro Labor Congress now in session in Chicago represents the most promising, militant, and energetic effort to link up this neglected and important field of struggle with the world-wide battle front of labor.

Representing the progressive and revolutionary left-wing of the American trade unions, the Trade Union Educational League welcomes the American Negro Labor Congress, and pledges its support in the achievement of our common aims.

The Negroes have a vital part to play in the remolding of our labor movement into a fighting instrument for the emancipation of all labor. And the trade union left-wing has its necessary work to do in raising the status of the Negro masses to a complete equality, social and economic, to a full brotherhood of all labor, as the necessary precondition to emancipation.

Our slogan for "Amalgamation of the craft unions into industrial unions," is of vital importance to the Negro workers, pointing out the only form of unionism which can gather in all workers, white, yellow and black, into a powerful labor movement.

Our slogan of "Organize the Unorganized," applies especially to the neglected Negro masses, who must be brought into the labor unions.

Our demand for a Labor Party points to the absolutely essential extension of the struggle to the political field, to the complete conquest of social, economic, and governmental power by the forces of labor, white and black, to achieve our common emancipation.

In fraternal solidarity, united by our common needs and our common understanding, our movement will become invincible.

The barriers against the entrance of the Negro workers into the unions must be broken down. Our common efforts can achieve this.

The Trade Union Educational League, in greeting the American Negro Labor Congress, calls for a united front of all workers for:

Complete equality, fraternity, and solidarity of white and black workers, for removing all racial discriminations and for their common emancipation!

Amalgamation of the small divided craft unions into powerful industrial unions!

Organization of the unorganized, especially of the Negro workers!

For a Labor Party!

Abolition of all barriers against Negroes in the labor unions!

United struggle against our common oppressor, capitalist imperialism!

National Committee, Trade Union Educational League,
J. W. Johnstone, Acting Secretary.

GERMAN CRISIS LOOMS; CABINET IS IN DANGER

Hindenburg May Also Resign

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Oct. 26.—Threee nationalist members of the Luther cabinet presented their resignations to the German chancellor last night. They are Herren Schiel, Neuhaus and Schlieben. They declared they were unable to remain in their posts after their party had repudiated the Locarno pacts.

It is reported that President von Hindenburg is also prepared to present his own resignation, since he considers the nationalists' position an open attack on his policy.

Send for MacDonald.

It developed today that the element within the social-democratic party opposed to the Locarno pacts is growing stronger and will probably dominate the party. With the nationalist and social-democratic combination opposing the pacts, a cabinet crisis is imminent and the resignation of the Luther cabinet may be expected at any time.

Ramsey MacDonald, former socialist premier of Britain, has been sent for by the supporters of the Locarno pacts and is expected to respond favorably, come to Berlin and try to persuade the socialists to back the treaties. MacDonald is one of the bulwarks and reliable supporters of every imperialist design in Europe and is serving the interests of the enemies of the working class just as effectively as ex-premier as he did while he was in office.

Thought to be Gesture.

The whole upheaval in Berlin is believed to have been deliberately planned and staged for the purpose of feigning an imminent crisis in order to gain time, and by stalling force M. Briand, the French foreign minister, to fulfill his promises made at Locarno.

The French financial crisis is consuming the whole attention of the French statesmen so it looks as tho the optimistic reports about Locarno may in reality resolve themselves into deep gloom and endanger the ratification of the pacts.

ONE WEEK AFTER THE WORLD WAS SAVED AT LOCARNO

A week ago the conference at Locarno closed and the press of Europe and America hailed it as the dawn of peace for the whole world. Not since the hectic days preceding the outbreak of the world war have there been such great upheavals as during the first week after Locarno.

Today war clouds are lowering over the Balkans. The league of nations is powerless to do anything in the matter, its offer to intervene being openly defied by Greece.

In Germany three nationalist ministers of the Hindenburg cabinet have handed in their resignations and a cabinet crisis may be at hand that will even force the dissolution of the reichstag and mean new elections for Germany, thereby delaying or preventing that nation signing the pact.

In France there is a political crisis following the collapse of the franc which hit the toboggan last week and is still declining at an alarming rate. Caillaux, the finance minister, is dragging the cabinet down with him. This will probably complicate French endorsement of the Locarno pact. In addition to the home crisis, the French government has turned Damascus into a slaughter house in order to hold her Syrian possessions.

Italy is secretly backing Bulgaria in its struggle against Greece and is facing a colonial revolt in Somaliland.

So much for the peace of Europe, to say nothing of the vacuous boast of establishing peace thruout the world, while the capitalist system with its inherent antagonisms remain.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY ASSETS OVER BILLION

A. N. L. C. HITS AT JIM CROWISM IN TRADE UNIONS

Demands Immediate End of Restrictions

The first American Negro Labor Congress, at its opening business session yesterday, vote unanimously to endorse a resolution condemning the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor for refusing to organize the Negro workers into the existing unions, condemning the traitors to the Negro race who profit by attempting to recruit scabs from among the ranks of the colored workers, and demanding the immediate removal of all restrictions in all unions upon the membership of Negroes.

Race Hatred Must Be Abolished

The resolution was adopted after a discussion by the delegates, most of whom represent labor organizations, of the restrictions placed upon colored workers by the bureaucrats of the American Federation of Labor. The resolution reads in part:

"Trade unions are the organs devised by the working class as a result of its struggle with the capitalists . . . Trade unions which fail to unite all workers regardless of nationality, color or religion on the basis of the common necessity for resistance to the tyrannies of the bosses . . . likewise fail in their duty to the working class.

"The failure of the American Federation of Labor officialdom under pressure of race prejudice benefiting only the capitalists of the north and the south, to stamp out race hatred in the unions, to organize the Negro workers and to build a solid front of the workers of both races against American capitalism, is a crime against the whole working class.

"We condemn those who would fasten the stigma of 'strikebreaker' upon our race, and we likewise condemn those unscrupulous members of our race who, acting in behalf of capitalist agencies, attempt to recruit scabs, create suspicion and division in the ranks of the working class and bring discredit upon our race.

Prejudice Must Go.

"We demand the immediate removal of all restriction in all unions upon the membership of workers of our race in them, whether openly stated as in the constitution of the International Association of Machinists, or

PROGRESSIVE MINERS' COMMITTEE DEMANDS LEWIS ACT TO AID THE 158,000 ANTHRACITE STRIKERS

Reports from the anthracite strike region tell of increasing miseries among the striking miners, whose little savings are now exhausted, whose local treasuries also are drained, and no help in sight or even promised from the International. Meanwhile that the Lewis leadership makes no effort to bring the full strength of the United Mine Workers to the aid of the anthracite strikers, Lewis orders union members, as maintenance men, to remain at work, taking excellent care of the operators' property. The following open letter of the Progressive Miners' Committee is addressed to Lewis demanding a change of policy and other measures to aid the strikers:

John L. Lewis, President
United Mine Workers of America,
Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Sir: We anthracite miners have been on strike now for two months. We have been doing our part to make the bosses give in to our demands for a wage increase, better working conditions, and full recognition of the union. We do not think that you have done your part to help us in this strike.

What would you think, Mr. Lewis, of a man who was fighting three or four thugs who were trying to beat him into submission, voluntarily using only one arm in the fight. It would lock more as if he were playing rather than fighting. That's the kind of fighting we have been making against the coal operators.

We have come out of the mines, given up the work thru which we earn our living, in order to make the bosses pay us better, give us better working conditions, and full recognition to our organization. We know we are up against a hard fight and that the coal bosses will not give up part of their profits without fighting to the bitter end. They are not going to give us the means for a higher standard of life, thru increasing our wages, and better working conditions, without fighting to the last ditch.

Yet we have been careful to safeguard the interests of the bosses while we suffer the misery and privations which a strike means to us. We left part of the members of our unions in the mines in order to safeguard the interests of the bosses. We are protecting the bosses' property altho they are starving us in order to force us to submit to their terms.

That's like using one arm to fight three or four thugs who are attacking you, Mr. Lewis. It's playing at fighting in place of making a real fight to win.

We demand, Mr. Lewis, that you call out the maintenance men and make it a real strike to force the bosses to yield to our demands.

We are against helping the bosses while they starve us into submission.

No Settlement Without a Wage Increase.

We are in this fight, Mr. Lewis, because we want a higher standard of life. We want more of what we produce thru our work. We are for full recognition of our union, but we are against any settlement without making the bosses pay thru a wage increase.

We demand, Mr. Lewis, that no negotiations be entered into for a settlement which do not include the demand for a wage increase. We are against any compromise which doesn't give us the thing that is most important to us, better wages, so that we can give our families a better standard of life.

No Arbitration.

We believe, our demands are just. We don't want to be tricked out of what we have been fighting for by referring our demands to arbitration

The influence of the bosses is too big for us in arbitration proceedings We have always got the worst of it when we have on strike now for two months for the demands for which

NO CHANGE IN MINERS' DETERMINATION; SPREAD TALK OF COMPROMISE

By AUGUST VALENTINE

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Oct. 26.—The test of the anthracite miners came Saturday when rumors were spread that the operators offered a five percent increase in wages and some sort of a check-off.

Word spread like wild fire and was on the lips of all the miners. It is not known where the report originated, but both sides, the operators and the mine workers officials denied the report.

It is the opinion of some of the miners here, that the rumor was started to test the miners as to whether they will go back with a small compromise in wages or fight to a finish.

NEW FRAME-UP ATTEMPTED BY TAILORING CO.

Hirelings Place Bomb on Doorstep

In an attempt to frame-up the active union leaders in the International Tailoring company strike, some hirelings, doubtedly in the employ of the tailoring company, placed a bomb on the porch at the home of Raymond Reeder, one of the officials of the International Tailoring Co., 847 West Jackson Blvd.

The bomb wrecked the porch and caused part of the walls and the roof to give way. No one was injured as all of Ray Reeder family were "not at home" at the time. The company official immediately blamed the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union for the bombing.

As the strike enters the eighteenth week and has tied up the bosses in their busiest season making it impossible for them to meet their contracts despite the fact that members of the scab-herding United Garment Workers' Union, are in the shop strikebreaking, the bosses in their desperation are resorting to frame-up and persecution of active union leaders to break the strike.

A short time ago windows were being smashed at the homes of scabs and at the plant. The company officials blamed the union, which was then raided, and a number of active strike leaders arrested, but later released. Upon investigation those who were smashing the windows were discovered and affidavits are in the possession of Attorney Wm. Cunnea, testifying they were paid by the company to smash windows and terrorize the strikebreakers in an attempt to frame the union leaders.

Message for Navy Day - THE ALL-AMERICA ANTI-IMPERIALIST LEAGUE TO THE PEOPLES OF LATIN-AMERICA

ANOTHER demonstration of imperialistic might is to take place in the United States on October 27.

That day has been set aside for the glorification of the American navy. it has been baptized as "Navy Day." The most modern warships, bristling with guns, will pass in review before the highest government officials. Marines will parade the streets of all the important cities. Innocent school children will be whipped into a jingoistic frenzy in a thousand meetings, by the specially delegated speakers of the "navy league," "American defense society," and similar imperialistic organizations, which thoughtfully "co-operate" with the United tSates government on such occasions.

Navy day is a threat, which the peoples of Latin-America cannot afford to ignore—no more than can the working class in the United States itself.

The first "Navy Day" was celebrated last year, and the date selected was, fittingly enough, the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, whose name is cordially hated thruout Latin-America. It was Roosevelt who, in 1903, made use of the U. S. navy in the notorious outrage against the peoples of Colombia and Panama. This year, the approach of navy day finds the unfortunate "republic of Panama" once again under American military occupation!

The ships of the United States navy are no unfamiliar sight, in any Latin-American country. They have attacked Mexico, terrorized Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica, ruled Haiti and Santo Domingo, and broken strikes in Havana. For years they have cruised the Caribbean as the watchdogs of the lords of Wall Street.

The navy, more than any other branch of the military service as it is developed today, is the direct embodiment of imperialistic purpose. "Navy Day" celebrations are a mark of the maturity of the conscious imperialism of the United States.

It is characteristic of the two-faced method of American imperialism that glorification of navy day should come close on the heels of President Coolidge's proposals for an international disarmament conference. A leading French newspaper has pointed out that while on the one hand American diplomatists everywhere talk of peace and international concord, the United States government is the foremost exponent of militarism in the world today. "Navy Day" and "Defense Day," military instruction for schoolboys, citizens' military training camps naval demonstrations in the Pacific, widespread agitation for bigger air forces—these are the order of the day in the country of Wall Street.

Every such sign constitutes further proof that the standard bearers of national liberation in Latin-America must come together on a common basis to struggle against American imperialism. All the strength is not on the side of Wall Street. History teaches us that the strongest armies and navies in the world have never availed against a united, vigorous and resolute national liberation movement. Moreover, the great mass of exploited workers in the United States itself is on our side, at least objectively, in their class struggle against the capitalists. The most class-conscious section, led by the Workers' (Communist) Party, is lending the oppressed peoples of Latin-America open and consistent support.

Let us answer the proclamation of navy day in the United States by redoubling our fight against American imperialism!

The All-America Anti-Imperialist League calls upon all anti-imperialist elements in the western hemisphere to unite their forces and, together with the victims of American imperialism in Hawaii and the Philippine Islands, press forward to the overthrow of the domination of Wall Street. Build a powerful section of the All-America Anti-Imperialist League in your country! Down with American imperialism!

With fraternal greetings,
Manuel Gomez, Secretary,
All-America Anti-Imperialist League.

LEAGUE HEADS CONSIDER USE OF AN ECONOMIC BLOCKADE TO FORCE WITHDRAWAL OF GREECE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 26.—League of nation heads are considering the establishing of an economic blockade of Piraeus, the port of Athens, if Greece refuses to accede to the demands of the league to withdraw her troops from Bulgaria and refuses to co-operate toward the settlement of the Greco-Bulgar controversy.

The reply of the Greek government to the demand by Aristide Briand that both Greece and Bulgaria withdraw their troops to their respective countries, has created much disappointment in Paris.

Greece Insists on "Rights"

Greece insists upon her right to remain on Bulgarian territory until Bulgaria will settles the matter in the manner Greece has prescribed. She will withdraw her troops only when she is sure the terms will be fulfilled and that Bulgarian soldiers will not fire at the retreating Greek troops. This is looked upon by the league of nations conference as a direct threat on the part of Greece that she will not abide by the league orders to withdraw her troops into her own country.

Bulgaria Looks to Paris

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Oct. 26.—Bulgaria is looking hopefully towards the league of nations in Paris conference called after the request made by her for measures to be taken by the big powers against Greece.

Bulgaria sent two notes to Paris telling of the Greek invasion and denying the charges made that her soldiers started firing on the Greek army outposts.

Artillery Fire Continues

Artillery bombardment by Greek troops of Levunovo, Petrich, Petritzi and Petnovo still continue.

The invasion by Greece of Bulgarian soil is claimed to be intentional and part of the military dictator Pangalos' scheme to put the monarchy back in the saddle again.

More Solons Promise to Back Borah Bill to Curb State Dept.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 26.—A number of senators have sent a cablegram to the Countess Catherine Karolyi to make a new application for a passport to America, stating that her only purpose coming to America is to visit the Strassburgers at Norristown, Pa.

If the second application is refused these senators are going to assist Borah in drafting a repeal of the clause allowing Kellogg to bar anybody that may hold opinions different from the controllers of the moneybags in the United States.

POLICE ATTACK BRITISH WORKERS DEMONSTRATION

Protest Persecution of Communists

LONDON, Oct. 26.—As the trial of the twelve arrested British Communists opened in the Bow St. police court a large demonstration of workers took place outside the court room. Hundreds gathered before the police court carrying placards denouncing the British government for the arrests and demanding the immediate release af the arrested Communists. The workers sang the Red Flag and the International as they marched past the court house carrying the banners.

Police Attack Demonstrators.

The bobbies attacked the demonstrators in an attempt to break up the demonstration. Failing to intimidate the demonstrators they arrested one of the standard bearers and tore the the placards out of the hands of the pickets.

Inside the court room, the crown counsel. Sir Travers Humphrey, was delivering a tirade against the Communists. He sounded the keynote of the prosecution in its persecution of the workers movement in England in the following words:

"In the view of the prosecution all persons who disseminate by word of mouth or by published writing the doctrines of what the defendants call Communism are liable to prosecution for sedition.

"They are guilty of sedition because they involve the creation of antagonism between his majesty's subjects, called the class war, and they are also involved in sedrcing from allegiance the armed forces of the crown."

More Prosecution

He bluntly intimated that more persecution would follow if Communist doctrines continued to be preached. His blathering will not deter the British Communists from carrying on their activities among the British toilers.

Urge All Coal Miners Strike

we went out on strike and we are ready to stick longer for these demands.

We therefore put it up to you, Mr. Lewis, that we are against any reference of these demands to arbitration. We are for a settlement with our union on the basis of the demands made.

Strike Relief.

All signs point to the fact, Mr. Lewis, that this is going to be a long, bitter struggle. The bosses are out to break our organization. The Wall Street people who control these mines are talking of a six-months' strike if necessary to break our grip and force us back on the terms of the operators.

We ask you, Mr. Lewis, what are you doing to help us win such a long strike?

We believe it is your duty to take immediate steps to see that we secure the necessary support so that we can hang on and beat the bosses at their own game.

We ask you to take immediate steps for a strike relief fund. Many of us have already used up what little money we had and we are in desperate straits. As the strike goes on, others of us will be in the same position. We have organized our union to meet such a situation and give us the support necessary to enable us to win the fight.

We urge that you and the executive board take imemdiate steps to create a strike relief fund and pay strike relief. We have got to have this support in order to win this strike, and we are determined to win.

We feel sure that the workers of this country will contribute to a strike relief fund if it is necessary to appeal to them. If the union hasn't the money and can't raise the necessary funds thru contributions of its own members, we urge that a general appeal be made to the workers of the whole country to support our strike by contributing to the strike relief fund and help us win this struggle against the bosses.

We feel sure they will understand that our fight is their fight. The capitalist bosses have been cutting down wages in every industry all over the country. The workers will understand that if we stop this wage cutting compaign by our fight in the anthracite, it will help them to stop the bosses from forcing their standard of living still lower.

Ask the 25 million workers of this country to come to our aid, Mr. Lewis, by sending out a general appeal for strike relief funds. With the support of these workers behind us, we can hold out until the bosses will have to grant our demands.

A General Strike.

The operators are getting rid of their stock of anthracite at big prices Soon they won't have any more to put on the market. Then the pinch will come. There will be a demand for bituminous to replace anthracite to some extent. Already the bituminous is being used as a substitute.

We ask you to consider this situation, Mr. Lewis, and to meet it by calling a general strike of all coal miners.

We ask you to demand of the railroad unions that they refuse to haul coal while the strike lasts.

Then, Mr. Lewis, we would be using all of our strength and making a fight to win.

There are tens of thousands of miners who are thinking along the line of this open letter to you, Mr. Lewis. As the strike goes on, other tens of thousands will be thinking the same thoughts.

If you mean what you have said about this strike, Mr. Lewis, you'll take action along the lines we have suggested.

CALL OUT THE MAINTENANCE MEN IMMEDIATELY.

NO SETTLEMENT WITHOUT A WAGE INCREASE.

NO ARBITRATION.

BUILD A STRIKE RELIEF FUND AND FURNISH STRIKE RELIEF IMMEDIATELY.

CALL OUT ALL THE COAL MINERS.

We are going to win this strike, Mr. Lewis, and we've shown you the way it can be won.

We call upon you to help us win.

Progressive Miners' Committee,
Alex Reid, Secretary.

Mexican Government Demands $50,000 for Two Lynching Victims

PUEBLO, Col., Oct. 26.—Claim of $50,000 has been filed by Mexico against the United States government for the lives of two Mexican citizens lynched here on the charge of murdering a policeman six years ago.

CAILLAUX FALL MEANS CRASH OF FRENCH CABINET

Briand Stricken at Stormy Session

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 26—Demands for the resifnaiton of M. Joseph Caillaux, French finance minister, were made during a stormy session of the cabinet today.

Caillaux who steadfastly refuses to resign and who also refuses to accomodate his financial policy to the demands of the radicals, was under a heavy fire during the brief cabinet session.

"If you don't resign we will hand in the entire cabinet's resignation," M. Briand, foreign minister, declared to Caillaux.

Premier Pinleve is said to have also urged upon M. Caillaux that he resign in order that the remainder of the cabinet could carry on its work. His request was backed not only by M. Briand but also by Minister of Public Works Laval.

Whole Cabinet May Fall.

Caillaux stood pat, with his eyes flashing and his voice raised to a pitch which almost made it audible outside the cabinet chamber, he replied:

"I understand perfectly what you desire. You want me to resign so that you may form another cabinet without me.

"I refuse.

"I will go before the chamber with the entire cabinet and fall with it and not alone."

After this dramatic stand by Caillaux the cabinet adjourned until tomorrow, in an effort to patch up the situation.

Crisis Tomorrow.

It is doubtful if the present French ship of state will weather the storm at the cabinet meeting tomorrow. An official communique states that everything is all right; that Caillaux read his statement to the members present, but that he had only one copy which made discussion impossible, hence the members will be furnished with copies of the statement so that they may discuss it tomorrow, after pondering over it tonight.

Goes Down Fighting.

Caillaux, who since the outbreak of the world war has passed thru many crises affecting him personally, the most difficult of which was his banishment as a German agent by Clemenceau, is fighting to the last ditch for his policies.

Yesterday he spoke before the leaders of his senatorial district, pointing to the national internal debt of 300,000,000,000 francs ($15,000,000,000) and bitterly condemning the policies of his predecessors whom he accused of "strutting in the kingdom of illusions, borrowing and spending money like a prodigal counting on a fabulous inheritance."

He then assailed the propoal of the socialists for a capital levy.

This belligerent attitude of Caillaux will certainly force the resignation of the cabinet. But is is conceded that President Doumergue will ask Premier Painleve to again form a cabinet, and it will be formed without Caillaux. The result will be the same as tho Caillaux resigned, instead of forcing a fall of the cabinet.

Briand Suddenly Ill.

PARIS, Oct. 26—Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, suffered a hemorrhage of the nose, following a stormy session of the cabinet today.

After a heated verbal row, in which Briand is said to have played an important part, two doctors were hurriedly summoned and it was announced that M. Briand was suffering from a hemmorhage and was bleeding profusely from the nose.

GENERAL CALLS FOR AIRPLANES TO QUELL 'WARS FROM WITHIN'

Following a demand by General Carlos E. Black for the maintenance of a national guard system capable of meeting the demands of war from within or without at all times before 500 officers of the National Guard Association meeting at the 122nd armory, Major General Milton J. Foreman, commander of the thirty-third division and attached units, called upon the Illinois national guard to use "football tactics" in its fight for an airplane training field.

Both of these generals are known for their record in breaking miners' strikes in Illinois.

BANK OFFICIAL FORCED UNION TO OUST SHAFIR

Amalgamated Head Is Out to Crush Union

have hurt the bank and that the officials think so."

Next morning when I asked Mariempietri for an explanation, after much talk, he expressed himself as follows:

"I'd Expel Shafir."

"I gave no instructions to your union, but when Tulshin, Swift and Horween came over and asked my opinion about the resolution on class collaboration, I told them that as long as Shafir remains I will have no confidence in them. (By confidence in a banking institution is meant official position and they are all slated for officership next January.) When they further asked me as to what they should do, I told them I couldn't tell them what to do, but that if I were in their place I'd have Shafir expelled."

Furthermore, before the general membership meeting took place Mariempietri, thru one of his undercover men within the union, had rumors spread in the bank that anyone voting with Shafir would be discharged from the bank.

Threaten Clerks.

About eighteen clerks working for the Amalgamated failed to show up at the general membership meeting as a result of these threatening rumors.

The fake charge against me was written up by Mariempetri's stenographer during regular banking hours.

The workers at the bank were openly encouraged, requested or threatened to sign the charges against me.

When some of the workers came over to my desk and asked me what it was all about, Mariempetri, who happened to be around at that minute, in an excited manner, jumped at the clerk and threatened to fire him if he caught him discussing "union questions during business hours with Shafir."

Why I Was Expelled.

The reasons as to why Mariempetri wanted to have me expelled from the union and fired from the bank are as follows:

Organized Bank Clerks.

First, I was instrumental in organizing the Bank Clerks' Union. Mariempetri has no objection to those who carry union cards in their pockets, but he objects to them when those individuals, thru their organization, present demands as to better working conditions, better wages and more humane treatment on the part of the officials. Our union would not have succeeded had it not been for John Fitzpatrick who supported us in every fight with the bank officials and there were three or four fights in the past year.

Hates Left-Wingers.

The second reason for Mariepetri's demand for my expulsion is because I am a member of the left wing, which for reasons outside of the bank itself, is so detestable to the "gentleman" above referred to.

Mariempietri Fears Publicity.

Mariempietri told me that I had until January 1 to work in the bank, if I "acted decent." After he saw an item in The DAILY WORKER on the union meeting he brot it to me and told me that I could not expect to stay till January if publicity was given my case by The DAILY WORKER in spite of the fact that Duane Swift handed out news items to the Daily News reporter long before I was interviewed by The DAILY WORKER representative.

By having me expelled from the union and scaring the others who are sympathetic with the left wing movement, ariempietri as an official representative of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has dealt a death blow to the struggling Bank Clerks' Union.

Demand My Reinstatement.

I call upon all the workers of this country, and especially the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America to adopt resolutions of protest against the officials in the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, and demand my immediate reinstatement to the Bank Clerks' Union.

Haskell Disagrees With U. S. Policy Toward U. S. S. R.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW—Colonel Haskell, former chairman of the American Relief association, in an interview with a Tass correspondent said that American manufacturers connect questions of re-establishment of trade relations between the U. S. S. R. and America with the question of payment of debts. America is more interested in theoretical recognition of debts than in practical payment.

"Being an old friend of Russia," said Colonel Haskell." I hope that both both countries will, in the near future, come to an agreement. At present. America is over-flowed with free capital that cannot be applied within the country. Investments of capital in the U. S. S. R., however, is impeded owing to a wrong attitude."

Chicago Tribune's Riga Liar Invents Famine Stories About Russia

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Chicago Tribune's Riga liar gets on the cable again with another fake. His story gets the headline, "Soviets Fight Famine as Grain Myth Explodes."

It will be remembered that the Tribune withdrew its correspondent because it claimed he could get better "stories" about Soviet rule outside of rather than inside the workers' republic. This present piece of fiction is a sample.

* * * *

It isn't safe to talk about crop failures along toward the closing days of October, when the crops are all in and the snow is already on the ground. If the crops have failed that is known along toward the middle of the summer. But this doesn't trouble the Tribune's correspondent who makes his headquarters at Riga, Latvia. Two months of favorable reports as to the extent of the Soviet grain yield are dismissed with a few clicks of his portable typewriter as "a myth" and the Tribune publishes it as honest-to-goodness news for consumption by American Henry Dubbs.

American workers and farmers may quickly dismiss this latest burst of anti-Soviet propaganda by this red-baiting sheet.

* * * *

It is true that numerous efforts have been made by the capitalist press to discount the extent of the Soviet harvest. Thus the Wall Street Journal, in its issue of Oct. 14, less than two weeks ago, in reporting "an independent investigation" by the department of commerce, admitted that "the Russian wheat crop will probably yield an export surplus of from 40,000,000 to 75,000,000 bushels." It holds this up against the Soviet claim of an exportable surplus of 300,000,000 bushels.

Against these estimates, however, the Tribune expert in falsehood paints a picture of famine and desolation again sweeping Russia.

* * * *

It is significant that the same reports by the Wall Street Journal and Broomhall's (British) that give only 40,000,000 bushels of wheat export to Soviet Russia, at the same time only allot an export surplus of 80,000,000 bushels and probable shipments of only 64,000,000 bushels to the United States. In other words, even the British and American "experts" do not place the United States far ahead of Soviet Russia. Yet no "famine stories" are published about conditions in this country.

To be sure there may be no "bumper crops" in Tambov, Kazan, Tula, Simbrisk and Saratov. But these are only a few of the many grain producing provinces of the Union of Soviet Republics, and the smaller ones at that. In the United States crops may be bad in North Dakota and Montana, and excellent in the remainder of the country, or vice versa. But that proves nothing.

* * * *

The big fact, however, and this may even be gleaned from the Tribune report, is that the Soviet government's committee to fight famine, headed by the chairman of the people's commissars, Rykov, is meeting in Moscow, planning to loan seed and grain to those districts that have not been as fortunate as the remainder of the country.

Who ever heard of the officials of the United States capitalist government meeting in Washington and carefully going over the agricultural situation, at the close of the year's harvest, and making plans to aid the districts yielding poor crops to get a good start for better yields next year. The Tribune has its cards mixed. The committee to combat famine has no famine on its hands at the present time. Believing in preventive measures, however, it is taking steps now to forestall threatening crop shortages, with their consequent hunger and misery, at all times in the future.

In the United States a crop of mortgage foreclosures against or wholesale evictions of bankrupt farmers is just as welcome to the bankers and landlords, whose only thought is how to plunder the farmer to his last cent and then drive him penniless out on the highroad. Against that condition the American farmers have not yet rallied in sufficient numbers to make their united strength felt. But they will.

LEAGUE FAILS TO STOP WAR IN THE BALKANS

Workers May Get in Action

ence in the league of nations to rescue his government from the attacks of the Greek forces, have thus far gone unanswered. Meanwhile the capitalist press and the hysterical official reports emanating from the Zankov headquarters here contain nothing but atrocity stories of the Greek invasion.

But not even their ghastly stories can match the reality of the terror of the Bulgarian government against its own subjects, where the most furious butchery rages day and night in the Zankov dungeons.

The Zankov government is anxiously awaiting word of forthcoming aid from the league of nations and the league boosters are beginning to question its efficacy and wonder whether it is good for anything at all.

Greeks Also Complain

ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 26.—Atrocity tales from the Greco-Bulgarian border where occupational forces are stationed are being spread throut the country. Every capitalist paper is carrying weird stories of the innocent Greek soldiers being sniped at by Bulgarians. To counteract the dedemand that Greek troops leave Bulgarian territory the commander of the Greek forces in Macedonia advises that his army will leave whenever the Bulgarian troops now occupying Greek territory evacuate.

Workers in Action

Authoritative sources are responsible for the information that the Communists of both countries are endeavoring to arrange joint conferences for the purpose of arousing the workers and the soldiers of both Greece and Bulgaria to take a hand in the matter and settle it independently of either national group—and settle it in their own way with their own forces. Much unrest prevails in both countries and the league may hasten to patch up the differences in order to avoid proletarian outbreaks.

League Is Disappointed

GENEVA, Switzerland, Oct. 26.—Leaders of the league of nations here profess to be sorely disappointed over the refusal of Greece to summarily evacuate Bulgaria. The reply of Freece to M. Aristide Briand, French foreign minister and chairman of the league council, is resented. The Greek government asserts its occupation of Bulgarian soil was a legitimate measure of defense and denies that the covenant of the league of nations was violated. The league leaders here realize that this attitude makes the solution of the problem by the league members in Paris most difficult.

Like a group of pompous clowns the league leaders try to conceal the fact that the machine thru which they hope to work is in a state of decrepitude and will not work effectively at any time. The machinery may be useful only as a disguise to protect the interests of the imperialist nations of Europe in case the working class rises or threatens to rise against both Greece and Bulgaria.

League Meets in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 26.—Greece will probably be given forty-eight hours to prove to the league of nations council that she has not violated article X of the league of nations council.

Leaders in the council favored such action this evening when they met in a preliminary conference, before the council went into formal session.

It was the opinion of most of the delegates that Greece must prove that she has not violated the territorial integrity of Bulgaria, which is protected by the league of nations covenant.

M. Caparanos, Greek minister in Paris, will represent Greece and M. Marof, the Bulgarian minister, will represent Bulgaria.

The meeting of the league council was postponed until 6 this evening in order that M. Briand, who suffered a nasal hemorrhage during the morning, might be able to attend.

Later this afternoon it was stated that possibly M. Briand would not be able to preside at the league council. If he is unable his place will be taken by Premier Painleve.

Labor Congress Hits Jim Crowism

enforced by the so-called 'gentlemen's agreement' as in other unions.

"We instruct our members in all unions to wage an uncompromising fight for the removal of all such bars to Negro membership. We declare our readiness to engage in all struggles of the working class."

The resolution states further that should the A. F. of L. unions persist in their policy of discrimination, the Negro workers will organize themselves, and use their own unions as weapons in the fight to enter the general movement of the workers.

Opening Session a Success.

The opening mass meeting of the American Negro Labor Congress on Sunday night received with boundless enthusiasm the reports of Lovett Fort-Whiteman, national organizer of the congress, and H. V. Phillips, its national secretary. The keynote of the congress was struck by Whiteman when he said that "The aim of the American Negro Labor Congress is to gather, to mobilize, and to co-ordinate into a fighting machine the most enlightened and militant and class conscious workers of the race in the struggle for the abolition of lynching, jim-crowism, industrial discrimination, political disfranchisement, segregation, etc., of the race.

"The American Negro Labor Congress indeed marks the beginning of a new era in the history of American labor. A new day is dawning for the oppressed. Indeed the spirit is adrift that those who create the wealth of the earth should be permitted to enjoy it. The man who builds the palaces should live in them."

No Color Line There.

Over forty delegates participated in the opening sessions of the congress, together with an audience of colored and white workers who crowded the hall to its doors. The crowd met with applause and cheers the statement of Richard Moore, delegate from New York City, that "the American Negro Labor Congress repudiates forever the policy of slavish submission preached by such so-called leaders of the race as Booker T. Washington, who was perfectly willing to repudiate the demand of the race for social equality."

Neither the scurrilous attacks of William Green, who "warned" the colored workers to stay away from the congress, nor the vile and slanderous attacks of the capitalist press, seem to have dampened the enthusiasm of the colored workers for the congress. Indeed, these attacks have, if anything, made the Negro workers realize more strongly than ever the necessity of going ahead with their plans for organization. They have had too much experience with the activities of Green and his kind to expect any sincere utterance from that direction. And they have received too many slaps in the face from the capitalist press to imagine that this press could have their interests at heart. And concerning the lying promises of the A. F. of L. officialdom to organize Negro workers—a bribe to keep them away from this congress—the American Negro Labor Congress not only proposes to go ahead with its work, but to force the A. F. of L. officials to come thru with those promises and actually to organize the colored workers into their unions.

Telegrams of Greetings Read.

Telegrams of greeting have been received from labor organizations all over the world. Among others, the South African Industrial and Commercial Union of Negro Miners, the Peasants' International, and the Defense League of Italian Peasants have sent messages hailing the congress as a great step forward in the emancipation of the oppressed people.

The congress voted to send a telegram of sympathy and a pledge of co-operation to Dr. Ossian Sweet, a colored physician now in the county jail in Detroit, Michigan, for the crime of defending himself when his house was attacked a few weeks ago by a mob.

Mass Meetings Every Night.

The congress will continue its session all this week at its hall at the Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles avenue. The mornings and afternoons will be occupied with business sessions, at which plans for work will be laid out and committees selected. The evening sessions will be taken up with mass meetings, which will discuss the questions taken up by the delegates during the day. All sessions, both business and night sessions, are open to the public.

MERCILESS EXPLOITATION OF YOUNG WORKERS IN OPEN SHOP PARADISE OF WEST VIRGINIA

By REGINA MYROSKI.

(By Worker Correspondent)

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Oct. 26.—We hear much about the valiant struggles the young workers are making in the different parts of the country. We hear of their victories and also their defeats. But how many sections there are wherein the conditions of the young workers are almost unbearable, where they are not organized and cannot put up any fight at all against the bosses! It is an established fact that they are more exploited than the adult workers, and their youth, instead of an asset, proves a liability.

West Virginia has long been well towards the top of the list in leading the exploitation of the young workers. It is considered a wealthy state but that wealth, although created by the workers, is not enjoyed by them.

Take, for instance, the general conditions of the factory, shop, and office workers in this section. Hours are long, wages miserable, and in most cases working conditions almost unbearable.

Look Over This Dump

First, we might consider the Murphy Co. owing the 5 and 10c. store in this city. The girls employed are paid the grand total sum of $7.50 per week, hours from 8 till 5:30, and on Saturdays till 9 p. m. On that amount they are expected to meet their living expenses, dress well, look well, and their general appearance must denote prosperity.

Youth is used to good advantage (for the bosses) in this instance. During the holiday season and especially around Christmas an S. O. S. is sent by the management to the local high school, offering to help the students by giving them a chance to earn some extra money. How philanthropic! Wages are thus kept down. Most of the girls employed are of school age staying at home and depending on their parents for a living.

An Enamelled Hell

Then we have the young employes of the enamel works owned by the United States Stamping Co. Here the wages paid are something like ten dollars per week for the girls, hours from 7 to 5. The work is injurious to the health. The speed-up system also is used, enabling some of the workers to earn more money, but at what a loss to their health and vitality! The hours for the boys are of course longer, the night shift alone working twelve, from 6 p. m. to 6 a. m.

Here also the speed-up system is used and some of the workers, if unusually good slaves, sometimes earn the grand sum of $25 or $30 per week. The low wages paid force some of the workers to resort to what is commonly styled by the bosses as cheating. Of course such practice is punished as the bosses see fit.

Glass Company Exploitation

The speed-up system here is also used. Some of the expert workers manage to make around $20 or $25 per week if the season is good. But they complain of the low wages that are paid them for glassware that commands such exorbitant prices thruout the country. Only a few cents is paid them for plates that bring in around $20 for the company.

The Fostoria Glass Co. boasts of the fact that it gives its workers a one or two week vacation during the month of July each year. What a misrepresentation! Yes, a vacation, but without pay. But instead of being considered as a vacation by the workers it is rather a period of unemployment during which they must suffer.

Little Different Than Prisoners

Then we have the shirt factory owned by Gordon, the same man who contracts for prison labor at the state penitentiary here. He is well versed in the exploitation of the workers and certainly takes advantage of his youthful employes. Around ten dollars per week is paid them if they work unusually hard but even lower than that is offered to some of the workers.

Those who prove themselves good and faithful slaves are rewarded by working "piece work." They manage to make slightly more then, around fifteen dollars and less per week, but at what a cost to their general health! The work is sometimes dangerous and accidents occur.

In all of the above factories nothing is done for the comfort of the workers. In summer the heat is terrific, in winter the cold unbearable! The general conditions are detrimental to the welfare of the workers.

Then we have the office workers, whose conditions are more pleasant and work more congenial. But they, also, are exploited. Their youth and inexperience proves a liability and is taken advantage of by the bosses. Although it is generally thought that they command higher pay than the other workers they in reality are offered only around $40 and $50 per month to begin with.

The Old, Old Bunk

Of course a smooth, well oiled talk accompanies the offer in which pictures of future great salary, etc. are flashed before their minds, but many of them never rise above the fifteen dollar per week mark. On that they are expected to always be dressed well, have a large bank account, be able to afford all comforts, etc.

There is one thing that distinguishes all the workers here. They are not organized! Nothing has been done along that line for years. The bosses hate organized labor so much that the workers dare not even think of such an atrocity as a union. Thus they are exploited as much as the capitalists see fit and must bear any reduction in wages, longer hours, or anything else without a murmur.

Firms Always "Facing Ruin"

Of course, here as in every other part of the world, the firms are always on the verge of starvation when it comes to improving the conditions of the workers. They are always facing ruin and bankruptcy—only the dividends paid, instead of diminishing, are increasing and the satisfied grins on the faces of the stockholders grow wider year by year.

To add insult to injury the capitalists blame the workers for their living conditions and their lack of cash to the fact that they do not have a bank account. They should save and hoard the wonderful and enormous wages paid them and never be short of finances!

What a fertile field for organization here, but, oh, what a fight would have to be put up to accomplish such a thing!

N. Y. Bootblacks on Strike and Barbers Threatening Walkout

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 26.—800 bootblacks are out on strike and as a result the residents of the Washington Heights and Harlem section will have to get along with unpolished boots.

The strike was called by the union hat cleaners, shoemakers and bootblacks. The strikers are demanding an increase in wages and working conditions, and a minimum wage of $22 per week.

At the same time the barbers' union is planning to capture the white light district. According to James Peretti, organizer of the Journeymen Barbers' Union, five thousand razor wielders will be on strike at an early date if the boss barbers refuse the demands of the union barbers. Unionization of all beauty parlors will be followed and an attempt to organize all manicurists will be made in the metropolitan district.

Ford Speeds Up Labor to Highest Pitch and Increases Production

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 26. — The slaves of the Ford Motor company worked faster than ever last week, when a high peak of production, never before attained, was reached with a week's record of 49,004 cars and trucks.

The big day was last Tuesday, when 8,466 cars and trucks were turned out. On Saturday the first airplane transport direct from the Ford Motor company to dealers left Detroit and was delivered to a dealer at Kalamazoo only two hours later.

LEARN HOW TO CIRCULATE THE WORKERS' PRESS

Form Readers' Circles Right on the Job

By L. P. RINDAL,

(Worker Correspondent.)

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 26.—Among the workers on the building where the writer is working, two papers, The DAILY WORKER and El Machete, have been introduced. This again has led to exchange of opinions and the passing around of other papers, magazines, etc. containing "food for thought."

All the Mexicans on the job want the organ of the Communist Party of Mexico, and every time they see yours truly they like to talk about El Machete in one connection or other. On the other hand, some of the "whites" have learned to appreciate the true value of The DAILY WORKER as the foremost champion for the liberation of the working class from wage slavery into a more advanced form of social order.

Lawyers and Workers.

A carpenter on the job handed me a page from The Carpenter from which the following is taken: "Recently the M. K. & T. Railroad decided upon a reorganization program and employed two New York law firms to handle the legal detail required. For this service the lawyers charged $750,000.

"Upon being asked to itemize the bill they claimed that under the Esch-Cummins law, $65 an hour was a just and reasonable amount for the services rendered. Yet these same lawyers insisted that 30 cents an hour was a fair and living wage for other railroad employes. How was it these lawyers arrived at such a valuation of both their own services, and that rendered by the railroad employes we cannot say, yet any fair-minded man could hardly call it fair or just."

Down with Lawyers and the Wage System!

The arguments about what constitutes a living wage or a just wage have all ended in "meaningless phrases," The Carpenter states, and goes on to say: "While we all agree that a workman should receive a just wage, who is there to decide what this wage shall be?"

At this point the more advanced workers will take issue with the organ of the carpenters. There is no usch thing as a "just wage." As the workers are producing everything, there is nothing "just" about it—unless they get all they produce. And when the workers have reached their goal—there will be no master class left to hand out miserable wages—just or unjust. The bosses will then either be in overalls—working side by side with other useful workers—or find themselves on junk pile forever after.

When capitalism and the wage system are both gone, the 65 dollars an hour corporation lawyers will have to go also. The proletarians of the 30 cents an hour type will then rule the world.

The Sort of Disunity Which Ruins Unionism Shown at Passaic, N. J.

PASSAIC, N. J., Oct. 26.—Striking loomfixers of Gera Mills returned to work after their fight against a change in wage rates from weekly to hourly basis. Workers of the Passaic Worsted Spinning Co. continue out on strike against 10% wage cuts and the 7½% compromise offered by the company.

CASUALITY LIST OF LABOR PILES UP IN MARYLAND

Army of 38,972 Injured and 139 Killed

By PHILIP CHATZKY.

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 26.—From a report issued by the Baltimore safety council, industrial division, we learn of a few very important characteristics throwing a light on the anarchy existing in industry, and the cheapness of the lives of those who are engaged in producing the wealth of our nation.

During the fiscal year of 1923-24, 139 workers were killed and 38,972 injured, of that number 13,283 resulted in disability to some degree, of which 540 were disabled for long periods or permanently.

Classified List.

The classification of those injured is as follows: 520 machinists, 407 helpers, 208 shop foremen, 286 machine operators, 456 stevadores, 166 salesmen and women, 209 auto mechanics, 234 boilermakers, 173 butchers, 605 carpenters, 469 chauffers, 371 car men, 178 drivers, 121 conductors, 114 clerks, 108 firemen, 117 motormen, 125 painters, 107 packers, 148 molders and 92 pipefitters.

It will be noticed that out of the 407 helpers, and an almost equal number machine operators, most are young workers, employed in the Maryland industries, some of them under 16 years of age, employed to a great degree by the Federal Tin, and Balts Can Co. where not a day passes without an accident to workers.

Needs "Organization"—Of Labor.

George W. Knapp, jr., chairman of the safety council, states frankly, that more than 10% of injuries were followed by infections, and most of them could have been prevented by proper care and attention at the time the accidents occured.

"The record of accidents in industries clearly shows the need of safety devices and organizations in plants" Mr. Knapp comes to the conclusion.

The workers of Maryland should learn from those figures, that their lives, the lives of their wives and children, do not amount to anything under capitalism, where profits are above human life.

ARE ANY UNIONS PREPARING FOR COLLAPSE OF CREDIT BOOM WITH NEW ATTACK ON LABOR? NOT ONE!

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Will labor prepare to weather the storm which bankers foresee as a result of the stupendous inflation due to instalment buying? This question is suggested by reading the more far-seeing business reviews. They hold that the present half-way prosperity will crack as soon as the speculative building boom ceases producing the wages which carry the part-time payments along from month to month. The outlook beyond 1925 is not promising.

"Instalment buying," says the National City Bank, "is creating a great body of indebtedness which will have a first claim on earnings in the future, and while it stimulates business in the present there may be unpleasant after effects. While the proceeds of borrowing are being expended times are good; but expenditures cannot be maintained above the average production of new wealth for very long, and when maintained above the average for a time are certain to fall below the average a little later while the balance is being restored."

"The almost phenomenal growth of retail buying based on easy payments extending over long terms," says the Cleveland Trust Co., "has been promoted by a multitude of finance companies that have started up and continued in business because they found it easy to borrow the money with which to operate. This new extension of easy instalment purchasing has greatly aided in lifting auto sales to new high records and in bringing about a great increase in the sale of electrically driven household appliances."

Great Pyramid of Credit.

The Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Co. says: "The broad extension of the instalment method of paying which has made possible this huge volume of distribution is being introduced almost feverishly into many other lines of merchandise. It is difficult, if not impossible, to visualize the great pyramid of credit which has thus grown up through the instrumentality of various kinds of financing companies."

The National Bank of Commerce adds: "There is no doubt that an important proportion of the urban population of moderate means is already obligated heavily for instalments on homes, automobiles, radio outfits, furniture and even clothing."

Due for Collapse, says Annalist.

Commenting on these various reviews Benjamin Baker of The Annalist says: "This is the dominating feature in the business of today, and it is certainly in large part an unsound feature, both in its social results and purely as business. Too few business men, and certainly too few bankers, see in its right light this furious scramble of discounters to sell what a large part of their customers cannot afford to buy. A reasoning scrutiny of the current statistics of business shows pretty clearly that both hopes and prospects of heavy business for the rest of the year are founded mainly on the belief that the forced buying on an inflated credit basis will continue for at least that length of time, and without any shock severe enough to tip over the pyramid. That it will topple over, ultimately, is all but certain."

Baker quotes a banker in one of the western federal reserve cities who says: "There is at least $5,000,000,000 of part payment paper outstanding—about one-twelfth of our entire national income for a year. This situation cannot continue indefinitely; the first crack in the balloon will bring it down in a heap." (It is about ½ of the annual wages paid factory workers and ¼ of the total wages paid by mines, factories and land transportation).

Baker says: "It is probably not an overstatement to say that the most judicious bankers, all over the country, are making preparations to weather a storm of which there is yet no visible and material indication."

How about labor?

Bob Smillie at Scarborough Trade Union Congress Buying a Sunday Worker, Left Wing Paper of British Unionists, Which Featured the Slogan—"Don't Be a Scab on the Ocean Wave"—During the Seamen's Strike.

BRITISH SEAMEN'S STRIKE SHOWN JUSTIFIED BY WILSON SELL-OUT; AMALGAMATION THE FUTURE PLAN

What caused the great strike of British seamen, that brought into an international from the I. W. W. seamen who supported their British fellow workers with strike action, and what is to come out of it in the future are seen in the recent issue of the International Seafarer, organ of the seamen's section of the International Propaganda Committee of Revolutionary Transport Workers in England.

An article by George Hardy, one of the leaders of the unofficial strike committee, which was comprised largely of Havelock Wilson's National Sailors' and Firemen's Union, proves by stenographic report of the meeting of the maritime board, that Wilson gave the ship owners a reduction of seamen's wages without the owners even asking for it. Wilson, addressing the meeting, said:

> "Now we come, and having taken into consideration what you did last year. We have come to say to you this morning. We will give up that £1 at once—without any argument, without any alarming statements about what is going to happen, and so on. We do that, and I hope, Mr. Chairman, and you, gentlemen, will recognize that in doing that we are doing a manly thing, and certainly in the right spirit, too—quite the right spirit. You might have come here and talked about 30s., or some other figure, but it is better for us to suggest a reduction, and when I say that is what we suggest I want you to understand that this is our offer, and we advise you to understand that this is our offer, and we advise you strongly to accept it."

Wilson was conscious that he was conspiring with the shipowners in the robbery of British seamen, but the scoundrel that he is, hurled epithets at them in front of the shipowners, and the trade union officials who have openly condemned him and hundreds who are conscious of his treachery to the whole trade union movement are quite justified in their attitude, in the light of the latter statement. Again, he sates:

> "So we offer the £1," and then goes on to say: "Now I want to tell you this and I want the sympathy of your side in this. These are my colleagues; these are the men that have to face the ordinary sailors, firemen, cooks and stewards. I know what they have gone thru, what they have got to be subject to for at least the next month, or perhaps two months."

It is quite clear that he anticipated trouble for his officials and delegates but as far as he was concerned, he felt quite safe, for he again stated to the shipowners:

> "So far, as I am concerned there will be abuse heaped on me in tons. I DO NOT HEAR IT. I AM NOT THERE. I am safely fixed in a place called St. George's Hall. What does it matter to me if a fellow on a ship is cursing me and saying I ought to be shot. I do not hear it. . . . The abuse which these good gentlemen will be subject to will not come from the union men, but from a lot of dirty useless rubbish."

Thanks for the Scab.

The chairman then remarked: "Thank you, Mr. Wilson. I understand your offer, of course, includes the short sea trades?"

Wilson: "Everything."

The shipowners then retired for twnty minutes and returned, and the chairman informed the officials of the N. S. F. U. as follows:

> "Well, Mr. Wilson and gentlemen. You have been very straightforward and frank with us. We want to accept the proposal you have made from the point of view in which it has been made, and because we think that it may be of assistance to us in bringing about other reductions. . . . As I said before, it makes it much easier for us to accept what after all is, you will understand, only a drop in the bucket."

No wonder that, after being caught with the goods on like this, Wilson looked around for an issue to distract attention from his unspeakable betrayal of the members of his own union whom he did not consult at all in the matter, and decided to raise a big noise about George Hardy.

Wilson went to extraordinary lengths, issuing leaflets "exposing" Hardy as a "professional red agitator," a "Bolshie," a "desperado" and quite a lot of leaflets calling him a "German spy" because Hardy was imprisoned by Judge Landis along with a hundred more I. W. W. during the war because the lumber and copper miners of the I. W. W. struck for economic demands, at that time stated to be justified by commissions appointed by the president and Secretary of War Baker.

Poetized Over Hardy

Wilson's N. S. F. U. put out thousands of leaflets merely to attack Hardy, some on green paper, some in red print on white paper, all attractively sensational. They even wrote a parody on a classical old song about Hardy, or rather to threaten him, because he had been, so it alleged, a "German spy." This junk, in part said:

> "There's many a pal asleep in > the deep,
> So beware, Hardy, beware."

Whatever is the outcome of the British seamen's strike, the organizational side will be in the melting pot. Two points of view exist; one is to form a new union, another, to join the Amalgamated Marine Workers' Union and leave the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union, and to create a seamen's section of the Transport and General Workers' Union. The Seafarer has the following to say on these alternatives:

Our Advice: Stay in Your Unions.

"None of these points entirely meet the situation. To leave the N. S. F. U. in favor of joining the A. M. W. U. would mean little or nothing to British seamen, for it would leave the P C. 5. still existing. The shipowners would keep to this pernicious system for blacklisting seamen who were determined to fight their friend Wilson.

"By amalgamating the two unions the P. C. 5 can not only be rendered harmless, but could actually become useful in building up a strong, real seamen's union. We venture to say: the shipping federation would immediately disagree on the operation of the P. C. 5, for if it meant forcing every seaman into the union, which would be a good thing, then there is no doubt as to their answer.

No New Union.

"To build up a new union is too amateurish and would lead to the confusion already so dangerous to the seamen. It is true that a union could be organized, especially during this dispute.

"It is one thing to organize a union during the heat of a strike, and another to maintain it in the face of existing obstacles which will not disappear with the end of the strike.

Build Seamen's Section of T. and G. W. U.

"Probably the most effective way to end the P. C. 5 is by organizing a section for seamen within the T. and G. W. U. With the backing seamen could get from dockers, they would have power to stop it being used as a blacklist. But if such a section was formed, it should be with the object of taking in both the Amalgamated Marine Workers' Union, and the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union. With this end in view, a joint meeting of unofficial strike committees agreed to recommend to seamen the following decision:

"'That this joint meeting of strike committees agree to the formation of a seamen's section of the Minority Movement to operate within the A. M. W. U. and the N. S. F. U for the purpose of educating the rank and file towards forcing amalgamation of the two unions, and to urge the formation of a seamen's department within the T. and G. W. U. and thus bring about an industrial union of transport workers.'"

WHAT IT'S LIKE TO WORK IN ONE OF GARY'S MILLS

Handling Hot Steel No Soft Job

By Worker Correspondent

GARY, Ind.—Waiting in line for a job at the Gary works of the United States Steel corporation reminds one of the slave markets in the old days. The workers are lined up against the wall to wait for Mr. Egeberg, the employing agent for the U. S. Steel corporation here. A company thug with a mouth full of tobacco sees that they stand close to the wall.

Finally the agent comes out of the office and starts to walk around and look at the workers. After he has looked them over carefully he goes up to one of them and asks him where he worked last. If the worker gives him a satisfactory answer he is sent into the employment office where he again has to tell where he worked last and if he was ever employed for the U. S. Steel corporation before.

Blacklist Strikers.

If he answers that he has worked in the mills before, they look up his record where they have a card filed away telling everything that you did when you worked there before. If they have you down as one of those who went out on strike in 1919, they suddenly find out that they have no jobs open "just now."

There is always work for a "chipper" but when the agent calls out "chipper wanted" nobody answers. One worker told me that "it was a hell of a job" and that the chipper had to hold an air pressure hammer in his hands, bending down all the time, for ten hours a day. The "chipper" has to wear goggles all of the time if he doesn't want to lose an eye, and the strain of the work is so great that at the end of the ten hours the chippers can hardly stand up.

Not Exactly Soft Job.

Sometimes after waiting in line for a long time a worker will take this job, but the next day you see him back in line again. I waited for two weeks before I got a job, and finally was given one as a catcher in the billet mill. The shearman's job consists of standing by the big electric "shears" and cutting the 150 foot long steel bars into pieces while they are still red hot as they come out from under the rollers.

The bars are cut into pieces eight feet long, and then the shearman cuts a sample about one foot long which it is the job of the catcher to take out with a pair of tongs. The piece weighs about 100 pounds and is red hot when the catcher has to handle it, which makes the work very dangerous. If you should drop one of the sample peices once it would mean good-bye to your foot.

Judge Gary Don't Work at This.

After the catcher has taken this peace out he has to stand there with a handbar and watch that the bars don't get mixed up. Sometimes when they get mixed you have to climb the steel belt which takes the bars away and separates them. If you make a false step when doing this, down you go with the red hot bars on top of you.

After the last piece is cut there is sometimes a piece left three feet long, weighing more than 300 pounds which also has to be taken out with the tongs. When you stand there close to the red hot steel you sweat so much that there are no dry places left on your clothes. You have to work like this for eight hours with no time for luch, since you are supposed to eat your lunch while waiting for more bars to come.

Clanging Goes on All Night.

When I started to work here I was put on the shift from 4 o'clock in the afternoon straight thru until twelve at night. As soon as I got home I would eat my supper and try to go to sleep, but a fellow can't sleep well for the noise keeps on ringing in your ears no matter what you do, and you always hear the shears cutting and the rollers going.

I asked one of the fellows what to do to stop this, and he told me there's only one thing to do, and that was to go and get drunk, which I find is the thing lots of workers here do in order to try and forget the noise.

But the better thing would be to work only a six-hour day and have time to listen to some good music. Of course, the six-hour day will never be given—the workers will have to organize and fight for it, because as long as capitalism is allowed to exist, the management will wring the last ounce of energy out of the steel workers for the profits of stockholders.

NEW YORK PLANS RECOGNITION OF RUSSIA MEETING

To Distribute 100,000 Propaganda Leaflets

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—The defence of Soviet Russia from the new conspiracy of combined attack hatched by the British conservative government at Locarno, and a demand for the recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States will be combined with the celebration of the eight years of successful proletarian revolution accomplished by the Russian workers and peasants.

New York district is planning many meetings with this triple objective, the biggest of them being those to be held in the Central Opera House, 205 East 67 St., New York City, and in Grand Assembly Hall, 318 Grand St., Brooklyn, N. Y., both of them on Friday, Nov. 6, at 8 P. M.

The speakers at the New York meeting will be Ruthenberg, Gitlow, Krumbein, Manley, Olgin, Don and Weinstone, chairman. The speakers in Brooklyn will be Ruthenberg, Gitlow, Stachel, Lifschitz, Pruseika Wolfe and Rebecca Grecht, chairman. The meeting and celebration will be combined with Russian musical features. Admission to concert and meeting is 50c.

At least 100,000 leaflets will be distributed in the city of New York between Nov. 1. and 6, demanding recognition of Soviet Russia and announcing these meetings. Arrangements will be made at both meetings to handle over-flow audience by street meetings outside the halls.

Dist. No. 1 Announces November Celebrations of Russian Revolution

The agitprop department of the district executive committee of Dist. 1, has decided to supply speakers to fourteen cities in this district for November celebrations of the Russian revolution.

List of Meetings and Speakers.

Providence, R. I.—Saturday, Nov. 7th at 8 p. m. Speaker, Harry Canter.

Brockton, Mass.—Sun., Nov. 8th at 2.30 p. m. Speaker, Sidney Bloomfield.

Maynard, Mass.—Sun., Nov. 8th at 2:30 p. m. Speaker, Max Lerner.

Gardner, Mass.—Sun., Nov. 8th at 2.30 p. m. Speaker, John J. Ballam.

Lanesville, Mass.—Saturday, Nov. 7th at 8 p. m. Speaker, N. Kutisker.

Revere, Mass.—Nov. 14th at 8 p. m., Eagles Hall. Speaker, Max Lerner.

Norwood, Mass.—Sunday, Nov. 8th at 2.30 p. m. Speaker, Eva Hoffman.

Quincy, Mass.—Sunday, Nov. 8th at 2.30 p. m. Speaker, Allan Binch.

Fitchburg, Mass.—Saturday Nov. 7th at 8 p. m. Speaker, S. Bloomfield.

West Concord, N. H.—Sunday, Nov. 8th at 2.30 p. m. Speaker N. Kutisker.

Peabody, Mass.—Saturday, Nov. 7th at 8 p. m. Speakers, L. Marks and R. Zelms.

Lawrence, Mass.—Sunday, Nov. 8th at 2.30 p. m. Speaker, Jack Karas.

Worcester, Mass.—Sunday, Nov. 8th at 8 p. m. Speaker Alexander Trachtenburg.

Get every active comrade on the job! Make these meetings a success.

Self-Criticism---A Prerequisite to Bolshevism

By Henry Puro

THE biggest problem of reorganization and bolshevization of our party is the problem of the reorganization and bolshevization of the Finnish Federation. This is due to the fact that our federation is the largest of all the seventeen language sections of our party. The Finnish section constitutes about 40 per cent of our party members. Secondly, we must recognize the fact that our federation has entered the Communist movement as a big mass organization from the socialist party. It withdrew from the socialist party inspired by the great Russian revolution and the trend of revolution in Europe.

The great mass of our federation did not join the Communist movement because it was convinced that the socialist party was corrupt and could not lead the revolutionary movement of the workers in the United States. Neither were most of our comrades firmly convinced that the Communist movement is the only one that can take hold of the leadership of the revolutionary movement and lead the proletariat forward along the road of uncompromising class struggle.

THIRDLY, because our federation has not gone thru those vigorous attacks thru which our party and its other language sections had gone, during those infamous Parmer red raids. Our membership has not been tried by the class rule of capitalist persecution during which process their social-democratic ideology would have considerably vanished, and been transformed into a resolute Communist class ideology. Instead of that, our federation has been living in the comparatively peaceful conditions of its own quiet life, far away from the many of those vigorous trials thru which our party has been struggling, and in the midst of which struggles our party's leadership and members have been developed and hardened towards true Communist fighters.

In this peaceful condition, and thru being closely connected with our party, our federation has offered fertile soil for further development of social democratic ideology. We have not yet been able to leave it behind nor to uproot it.

We have been only nominally Communists and ideologically typical social-democrats. Many leading comrades in the Finnish Federation, in fact the greater part of them, do not want to admit this fact. Instead of that they have looked at ideological campaigns of our party as phenomena which are not in harmony with the "realistic" sociological conditions and with real conditions of the class struggle. They have been wholly unable to understand our united front maneuvers thru which our party has approached masses of the working class. They have looked upon these maneuvers from the viewpoint of typical social-democratic sectarianism and mechanical orthodoxy. The Marxian theory of the class struggle, as much as we have studied it, has been understood merely as phrases and not as a living theory of class struggle. And Leninism, as Lenin explained the theory of class struggle, has been understood very little.

IT IS therefore natural that the greater part of our federation has always sided in the American Communist movement with the right wing elements. Since our membership is very numerous, it has been able to make the right wing movement as strong as it is, and therefore it has been a hindrance to our party on the road to Bolshevization. Hitherto the greater part of the Finnish Federation has looked upon Lore as their ideological leader who has demanded that our party stand on a "realistic basis" and has been struggling against "adventurists" whose program and policy is not based on "real" conditions of the class struggle. The policies of the Communist International have been looked upon as dangerous adventurism. It has been regretted that the C. I. is trying to apply "Russian policies" to American conditions, which policies are not applicable to our "western" conditions. How typically social democratic! Is it not true?

And where has this led? It has led us to such ideological paralysis as has shown itself so deplorably during the last three years. All theoretical interest has been lacking. This has been followed by indifference and disinclination for even practical party work. Thus our party matters have finally become of fifth and sixth class interest in our branches. Instead, social life has become of predominant important.

But now comes the order for reorganization and bolshevization. It is before us and cannot be side tracked. The party will no longer permit nominal Communists to be members of our party. The Communist International has given orders which our party has to obey without question. Afterwards our party went thru many inner struggles which was a necessary prerequisite before our party could begin its reorganization and bolshevization. Our party now demands that all of its sections must become organizationally and ideologically unified. Loose and irresponsible language section autonomy must now cease. It is not permissable for any particular party section to do whatever it pleases in the name of Communism. All party members have to learn to be soldiers of the Communist International. Otherwise, they have no right to call themselves Communists.

THESE new facts have brot us to a realization that we are now learning how to criticise ourselves. The first prerequisite is that we examine ourselves in the light of Leninism and bolshevism. This criticism enlightens us to the fact that we are typical social democrats or that in the best cases, there is a great deal of it in our ideology. If we want to go forward along the road of Communism, we must rid ourselves of it. We must study Marxism and Leninism more diligently and learn to apply bolshevistic class struggle tactics in the daily struggles of the workers.

Those comrades who, after waking up from the social-democratic dreams, are able to take this point of view, have already overcome the first difficulties. Only in this way will we be able to understand the necessity of the reorganization and bolshevization of our party. Only in this light can we become inspired for it. But unfortunately, there are many leading comrades who still understand this from an entirely opposite point of view. They consider reorganization and bolshevization from the mere point of view that because the Communist International has made decisions, so we have to be "loyal" and submit. We will submit to reorganization, they say. They admit that we have been negligent and that we must improve our work. But they do not, however, part with their social-democratism. They hang on to it tooth and nail. They say, defending themselves, that the Finnish Federation has always tried to bolshevize itself. They consider the reorganization question as a mechanical process to which they have to submit under the discipline of the party, but which eventually will prove to be an impossible process and which the Communist International itself will realize to be an absurdity and will retreat in good order.

COMRADES, it is thus clear that in such a spirit, reorganization and bolshevization will not be successful. Those comrades who will work in this spirit will not be able to lead the bolshevization of our federation. These comrades represent Loreism in its typical form. We recall Askeli who took the task of defending the social-democratic viewpoint of the Finnish Federation and the Superior Finnish branch, which was then fighting for the "freedom of criticism," of opportunism; Onni Saari who represents ultra-Loreist and anti-Communist viewpoints, and who is fighting openly and arrogantly against the reorganization and bolshevization of our party; and John Hill, who even now does not understand the labor party tactics of our party. These comrades are not the only ones in the Finnish federation who are the spokesmen of social-democracy. They have only been more open and garrulous.

Those who understand reorganization in the sense of compulsory discipline and will submit to it only as a mechanical loyalty belong to the same camp as Askeli and Onni Saari and they will become a great hindrance in this crisis if they will not correct their viewpoint.

However, whatever we must now admit, in the light of this self-criticism, does not mean that we cannot become real Bolsheviks. If we examine the history of the Finnish workers' movement in this country we will find from its pages most famous deeds of Finnish workers. Already, when coming to America, the Finnish workers had fighting spirit which they inherited from their homeland workers' movement which had been engaged in battles against czarism and its henchmen Bobrikov and Seyen and the Finnish master class for many decades. In these struggles the Finnish workers have become eager to accept the theory of the class struggle. In America the Finnish workers have battled heroically against trustified capitalism in numerous big strikes, such as those in the Colorado, Idaho, Butte, Copper Island, and Mesaba Range miners' strikes and in the many lumber workers' strikes in the west.

When the socialist party of America was at its height, the Finnish workers were as numerous as thirteen thousand, constituting the most living and active part in it. In the I. W. W., when it was a real revolutionary fighting organization, the Finnish workers were playing the leading role. After these organizations, during the crisis of the Russian revolution and during the crisis of a reborn world labor movement, repudiated the role of the revolutionary class struggle, the thousands of Finnish workers withdrew from these organizations and joined the Communist movement. Many of our present members also were taking part in the revolutionary war in Finland in 1918, and after that went thru the prison hells of the Finnish butchers. The Finnish workers also have done glorious deeds in the red army of Soviet Russia.

THESE workers who have such a revolutionary past in the class struggle in Finland, and also in America, have a revolutionary spirit. They must be the material from which can be developed real Communist fighters after their revolutionary spirit and self consciousness in relation to reorganization and bolshevization of our party will be led thru the proper channels.

And our party does not mean to cast out these workers. It knows that the Finnish workers are the best fighters. It knows that they are good organizers. Thru this criticism our party does not mean to drive away the Finnish workers from the party. Quite the contrary. It means to detach them from social-democracy, organizationally as well as ideologically and to consolidate them in a united bloc in the revolutionary movement of American proletarian vanguard, with its flesh and blood.

This is what, in the ideological change, reorganization and bolshevization means. After this becomes clear to us, the difficulties in the practical work of the reorganization can easily be overcome.

WORKERS' SCHOOL OPENS ANOTHER ENGLISH CLASS

Enrollment Increases Rapidly

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—The overwhelming demand for English has caused an excess registration in all courses started the week of Oct. 19 at the Workers School, 108 East 14 St. Therefore, additional classes in English will be started next week. One of these new classes will be in elementary English for foreign-born workers. It will be given twice a week, Monday and Thursday evenings from 7—8, instructor Ella Wolfe, fee for three months, twice a week, $4.00.

Another class in intermediate English will begin next Tuesday at 8 p. m. It will be given once a week fee for three months $2.50, instructor, Pauline Rogers. As most of the students registering for this intermediate course are fairly advanced, it will probably take the form of a lower advanced English class.

Additional courses in English will be started the week following on other nights of the week. Already there are classes on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Those who require earlier or later hours or some other day, should register at once so that classes accommodating them can be formed. Registrations are taken every afternoon and evening at the Workers School.

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

Shop Nuclei Gets Out Factory Newspapers

The newly organized shop nuclei are on the job.

A short while ago there was organized a shop nucleus in the Fisher Body Plant No. 12, at Detroit. In this brief period of its existence the shop nucleus has already shown its superiority to the old branch unit.

On Oct. 19th the shop nucleus issued the first number of the "Workingmen's Shop News." This is a fighting little factory paper that has lots of punch in it and is extremely well edited.

The conditions in the shop and Purcell's speech before the convention of the American Federation of Labor are the main features of the first issue.

The main slogans are: "Let's better our working conditions. Let's join the automobile worker's union. Let's unite our ranks against the capitalist system of eploitation. Let's unite in a labor party."

The paper has met with a very warm response from the non-party workers. The shop nucleus is planning a membership drive soon.

Gary Also on the Job.

The Hot Ingot is the fighting name of a live shop nucleus paper just published by the party unit at the Gary works of the United States Steel corporation.

"The Hot Ingot won't spread a lot of bunk about welfare work, but will show up these fake schemes of the employers and will point out that what the workers need is organization and not more tricks to prevent this or to kid us along."

This the general line of approach of the comrades organize in this shop nucleus. Enthuasiasm for work is increasing among the members since the shop nucleus was organized.

$1,000 IS PACE SET BY SOUTH-SLAVIC SECTION IN IMMEDIATE CAMPAIGN TO SAVE DAILY WORKER

The bureau of the South Slavic section of the Workers (Communist) Party at its meeting of Oct. 19, discussed the question of our English party organ, the DAILY WORKER.

After a thoro discussion, in which we considered also the situation of our language organ, Radnik, the bureau unanimously adopted the following resolution:

Resolution On DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER is the only Communist paper in the English language. The DAILY WORKER as the central organ of the Workers (Communist) Party of America is waging an uncompromising fight against the capitalist system and points out to the American workers the path to freedom.

As the only daily Communist paper in the English langue, the DAILY WORKER finds itself in a very dangerous financial situation.

The duty of all men and women comrades and sympathizers is to save the DAILY WORKER from the danger in which it now finds itself. Every man and woman comrade must know that the DAILY WORKER is the only battle trumpet of the American proletariat. No man or woman comrade must forget that the American bourgeoisie, the social-patriots and other opponents are working with all their might to destroy the DAILY WORKER and thereby wrest from the hands of the English speaking American proletariat its best weapon and thereby to make easier the carrying out of the destructive policies of the American imperialists.

The South Slavic bureau, in view of all this, and knowing that our language paper, Radnik, is also in a difficult financial situation, has decided to mobilize every man and woman comrade for a campaign lasting one month, and having the following tasks:

$1,000 in One Month.

1. That we must in one month raise one thousand dollars for the DAILY WORKER.
2. That every man and woman comrade carry on a systematic campaign for the systematic distribution of the DAILY WORKER among the English-speaking workers, and raise subscriptions for our party organ.

Comrades, the DAILY WORKER finds itself in serious danger. Your support is urgently needed. A thousand dollar fund must be raised immediately.

The time is short. We have only one month's time. Show your Communist consciousness to the opponents of the working class. Help save the DAILY WORKER. You must not allow the DAILY WORKER to be in danger of losing its life. Work with all your energy in order that the fund of one thousand dollars may be raised within the specified time.

The bureau of the South Slavic section calls you to complete mobilization of your Communist strength, and demands of you that you do everything in order that the campaign fund may be raised as soon as possible.

Charles Novak,
Secretary of the South Slavic Section, Workers (Communist) Party of America.

Send all money, together with the names of the givers, to Charles Novak, 1113 West Washington Boulevard, Chicago, Ill. All names of contributors to the thousand dollar fund will be published in the DAILY WORKER and the Radnik, in a special column.

The DAILY WORKER subscription list is a Communist honor roll. Is your name on it?

Put a copy of the DAILY WORKER in your pocket when you go to your union meeting.

DETROIT DISTRICT ELECTS ITS REORGANIZATION COMMISSION

DETROIT, Oct. 26.—A district reorganization committee of six comrades has been established in the Detroit district to supervise the work of reorganizing the district on the basis of shop nuclei and international branches.

The composition of this commission promises quick and effective action in behalf of the rebuilding our party.

The commission consists of Comrades John Schmies, Albert Dinkfelt, Wm. Reynolds, Geo. Kristalsky, Tony Gerlach, and the District Organizer Edgar Owens.

The organize reports that a membership meeting was held in Grand Rapids and Muskegan which lays the foundation for the reorganization of these cities.

In the city of Detroit, the comrades are busy completing the preliminary steps of registration; the city is being laid out in industrial areas, and actual reorganization steps will be taken very soon.

IMPORTANT.

Chicago Members, Attention!

CANDELLA REINSTATED BY PARTY'S CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

THE Central Executive Committee has sent the following letter to the secretary of the Italian section regarding the membership of Candella, who was suspended from the party for a year in connection with the controversy in the Italian section.

October 16, 1925.

P. Angione, Secretary
Italian Section W. P.,
108 E. 14th St.,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Comrade:—Under the instructions of the National Convention in relation to the suspension from the party of Comrade L. Candella, the Central Eexecutive Committee of the party was empowered to reopen his case at any time it deemed necessary before the period of suspension was ended and to reconsider the matter.

The C. E. C. of the party, at its meeting on Thursday, Oct. 15, again took up the question of Comrade Candella's suspension from the party and decided that he should be immediately reinstated to full rights of party membership.

The Central Executive Committee is of the opinion that Comrade Candella is a Communist who is loyal to the Workers (Communist) Party and that his attitude during the period of suspension justifies the Central Executive Committee in reinstating him as a member of the party at this time. His experience in the organization work of the Italian section and knowledge of that section gained during the long period he held the position of secretary, should be of aid in carrying thru the task of reorganization which now confronts the Italian section, together with other units of the party.

This letter of the C. E. C. should be printed in the Il Lavoratore in order to inform the Italian comrades of the action and views of the C. E. C. on this question.

For your further information on this subject, I advise you that the above was the unanimous opinion of the committee.

Fraternally yours,
(Signed) C. E. Ruthenberg,
General Secretary,
Workers (Communist) Party.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

PHILADELPHIA IS ACTIVELY AT WORK REORGANIZING PARTY ON NEW SHOP NUCLEI BASIS

The latest reports received by the organization department indicate that Local Philadelphia is actively at work reorganizing the party branches on the basis of shop nuclei.

Comrade Alex Bail is directing the reorganization work. We quote from one of the reports received on the reorganization of Philadelphia:

"The situation in Chester is very promising for reorganization. There are about 25 members in that section. There is a possibility of organizing 15 in shop nuclei. 8 comrades in a large silk mill, 3 in a locomotive works, and 3 in an oil company. That would leave about ten comrades to be organized in an international branch.

"I have instructed Comrade X to proceed with the organization of a shop nucleus in the silk factory. If you approve the plan, I will proceed with the complete reorganization of Chester.

"In Philadelphia we are proceeding with the registration and will have things in shape in a short time. The organization of shop nuclei is on the order of the day. A nucleus of 6 members was organized yesterday in an automobile body works. Within the coming week I expect to have organized a nucleus in a large clothing factory and in another automobile factory. There are a number of other possibilities that are awaiting the completion of the registration. There are splendid opportunities for organization of a large nucleus in a Victrola factory in Camden.

"The reorganization process is interesting ever larger groups of comrades. Where there was some time ago, opposition to even putting the address of the comrades on a card, not to speak of his shop, the comrades are now receiving enthusiastically the representatives of the DEC carrying out the registration. These comrades come back enthusiastic and full of pep when they discover one more comrade working in this or that shop in which there is possibility for organizing a nucleus. I believe that the campaign being carried on in the whole party press is taking hold and the comrades are responding."

Wrap your lunch in a copy of the DAILY WORKER and give it (the DAILY WORKER, not the lunch) to your shop-mate.

Pittsburgh Is Making Big Arrangements for Anniversary Meeting

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 26.—The Workers Party and Young Workers League of this city are making special efforts to make the celebration of the 8th anniversary of the Russian revolution a big affair. The celebration will be held in the large hall at the Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller St., at 2 p. m., on Sunday, November 8th.

William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER and well known orator, A. Jakira, district organizer of the Workers Party, Tom Ray, of the United Mine Workers of America and a representative of the Young Workers' League are the speakers scheduled to address the meeting. The Hungarian Singing Society has agreed to sing at this affair and Comrade Freida Truhar of the Young Workers League will recite in German, Croatian and in English. In addition the Lithuanian Juniors will sing revolutionary songs.

20,000 anniversary leaflets will be distributed thruout the city. All sympathetic workers' organizations of Pittsburgh are requested to make no other arrangements for that date so that their members can come to the anniversary celebration. The proceeds of the affair will go to The DAILY WORKER.

Take this copy of the DAILY WORKER with you to the shop tomorrow.

Our Readers' Views

Editor, The DAILY WORKER—

Comrade!—When will we read Comrade O'Flaherty's "As We See It" column again? Each day I look for it. The life of the paper is in THAT column, without it there is something lacking. More articles by O'Flaherty Minor, Wicks, Olgin and Dunne is what the workers want—but by all means let us have O'Flaherty again.

STRIKE OF 150,000 TEXTILE WORKERS AGAINST WAGE CUTS SHUTS BIG MILLS AT BOMBAY

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—Bombay's cotton mills are completely closed by the strike of Indian workers, according to latest reports received in New York. The four out of 82 mills which were still trying to run when reports were sent are undoubtedly shut down. Thousands of the workers, recruited originally from agricultural districts, who return to their fields from March to June, are again going back to their homes inland or on the coast.

Fight Wage Cut.

The 150,000 strikers, organized in the Textile Workers' Union affiliated with the All-India Trade Union Congress, say that the 11½ per cent wage cut is really a 20 per cent cut; that living costs are still way out of proportion; and that the part time threatened would reduce wages 16 per cent further.

Wages of Bombay cotton textile workers average from $2.50 to $4.50 monthly for women; $10.50 for men on full time. There are some 30,000 women workers and 2,000 children, all supposed to be 12 or over and on half time until 15.

100 Per Cent Profit—Yet Complain "Competition"

Bombay cotton mills made 125% profit on $40,000,000 invested in 1922; 170% during the war. Most of the mills are Indian owned. The Bombay Mill Owners' Asociation flatly refused to consider the strikers' demands.

Some of the workers believe that the owners wanted the strike, hoping to force the government to remove the excise duty upon every yard of goods produced in India. The duty and Japanese competition were the mill owners' excuses for the wage cuts.

"Warehousing"

The workers live for the most part in wretched "chawls," or tenements where several families are crowded into each room and sanitary conditions are unspeakably vile. One English writer describes the situation as "warehousing" rather than housing the workers. The workers are kept constantly in debt, because they come to the city without money and are forced to bribe someone for a job and because they have to borrow at 30% to 150% a month interest in order to live until their first pay from the mill.

One of their chief grievances is that they are paid monthly and 15 days late! The strike did not become general until the middle of September, tho set for the first, because workers waited to get their August pay. Then many of them complained bitterly that their employers had put the wage cut into effect on August wages instead of beginning Sept. 1.

Usual Capitalist Kindness.

Sickness keeps the workers from their jobs so much that the mills employ about 16% extra substitutes. Foremen have to recruit their own workers and misrepresent mill conditions to hold their jobs. Forewomen may even force subordinate women workers into prostitution for their mill jobs. Unjust rules of all kinds exist in the mills and every advantage is taken of the workers' ignorance and illiteracy.

A month's notice is required of workers before leaving, in order for them to get paid in time. Many pay a clerk highly to write their notices. Many leave without claiming their wages. The notice is void if the worker is absent any time during the month before he quits, etc.

Russian Unions Give Aid.

Indian labor leaders asked the governments of Bombay and of India to appoint a committee to investtigate the textile industry. They asked the British government of India not to abolish the excise duty unless mill owners promise to restore wages.

However, unless the Indian textile strikers get outside aid they will probably lose their strike as the northwest railway strikers did a few months ago. The Russian Textile Workers' Union sent fraternal greetings and 10,000 rubles ($5,000) as a demonstration of working class solidarity, but this is all the help the Indian workers have received so far.

More Nations May Fund Debts.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Two additional nations, Greece and Jugo-Slavia, are preparing shortly to come to the treasury and fund their war debts to the United States, it was learned today.

Both countries have communicated their desire for early negotiations to the treasury.

Greece owes $17,625,000; Jugo-Slavia, $65,414,000.

Italy, which owes approximately $2,139,000,000, has a debt commission on its way to Washington.

Atlanta Realtor Held Back $55,000 in Klan Deal Accuses Simmons

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 26.—William Joseph Simmons, founder and former emperor of the knights of the ku klux klan, has filed suit in the superior court here against Amos W. Brazelton, Atlanta real estate man, for $55,000, charging that this sum had been withheld by Brazelton in the sale of the klan of Col. Simmons' klan contracts.

GARY NUCLEUS ISSUES "HOT INGOT" PAPER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GARY, Ind., Oct. 26.—Gary, Ind., which is organized on a shop nuclei basis, held a party membership meeting on Tuesday, October 21, at which Comrade Martin Abern, District No. 8 organizer reported on general party problems and campaigns. 45 members were present, a very good turnout.

Comrade Abern took up the functioning of the shop nuclei, especially dealing with The Hot Ingot, the shop bulletin of the Gary workers' nucleus, the first issue of which appeared yesterday and which is now being distributed among the Gary steel workers.

The Hot Ingot is the first shop bulletin issued in this district. The Gary comrades will issue it regularly and feel sure they can make things hot with it in Gary.

The Hot Ingot Is Hot Stuff

The first issue of The Hot Ingot contains a story on steel mill conditions in Gary, written by one of the workers; a story giving some facts and figures on the profits of exploitation by the Gary mills, etc. Short items are given explaining the purpose of the shop paper, the aims of the Workers (Communist) Party, a few lines on the International Labor Defense; quotations from the Communist Manifesto, and so on. The comrades are enthused with the prospects of The Hot Ingot.

In this connection, Comrade Abern dealt with the need of developing Workers Correspondents for the shop bulletin and for The DAILY WORKER. Other matters dealt with were the International Labor Defense, the intensified campaign for the recognition of and defense of Soviet Russia, development of trade union activity and the language workers' club organizations.

A collection of $11.65 was taken up for The DAILY WORKER.

Put Organizer in Field.

The Gary organization is on the job, and reorganization on the shop nuclei basis has helped greatly in the work. The comrades are now preparing for the Soviet anniversary celebration on November 8th, at which Comrade Jack W. Johnstone is scheduled to speak.

The Gary and Lake County comrades got together and decided to have an organizer on the job in that territory. They are both chipping in regularly to maintain a comrade as organizer permanently in the field. The results to date of that effort are very good. Gary is setting a pace for others to follow.

Goudy School Parents Protest Against Move; 140 Children on Strike

The school board is confronted with another strike involving 140 children of the W. G. Goudy School at Foster and Winthrop Aves. Due to changes to be made in the Goudy School the children were transferred to the Steward school which is a long distance away. The parents will appear before the next board of education meeting to register their protest. The children will not attend school in the meantime.

ST. JOHN'S N. F., Oct. 26—Many fishing vessels were sunk and lives lost by a terrific gale which swept the northeast coast of Newfoundland.

POLICE ATTACK PICKETS BEFORE POLISH MEETING

White Guard Poles Aid Slugging

CLEVELAND, Oct. 26.—Assisted by close to one hundred members of the Polish white guard, the Cleveland police dispersed a demonstration against the Polish white terror. Several workers were beaten and the banners carried by the workers who were peacefully picketing before the Masonic Temple, where ten Polish senators, delegates to the interparliamentary union, were addressing a mass meeting, were seized and destroyed.

The police made no effort to interfere with the pickets who were peacefully walking up and down the sidewalk in front of the hall, carrying banners, till they received orders from higher up. Even after they had been given orders to stop the demonstration they still showed little interest and readily conceded that the pickets were within their rights.

A "committee" of close to one hundred white guards was sent out of the hall to break up the demonstration. The police then changed their minds about the rights of the pickets and together with the members of the "committee" they proceeded to seize the banners and beat up those who resisted.

When reminded by one of the demonstrators of their previous statement that there is no law prohibiting peaceful picketing, one of the policemen shouted, "the hell with the ordinance, you're nothing but a bunch of Bolsheviks anyway."

Within the hall, City Manager Hopkins, Judge Sawki, and other local luminaries, greeted the representatives of the murderous government of Poland. The Polish representatives declared that "The Bolsheviks in Poland have no adherents. Poland is now so prosperous that Germans and others who were supposed to leave the country in accordance with the treaty between Germany and Poland refuse to leave . . ."

These great statesmen conveniently forgot about the severe unemployment which is resulting in an alarming number of suicides among the workers of Poland. While speaking of the joys of the Polish people under the "democratic government of Poland" they did not want to be reminded of the imprisonment and brutal torture of Polish working men, women and youths. This accounts for their resentment against the workers in the street who carrierd banners demanding, "Freedom for Lantsutsky," a "Stop to imprisonment and torture of Polish workers" and declared that "Poland's senators are the hangmen of Poland's workers." Other banners branded the Polish government as the lackey of French imperialism and hailed the courageous struggle of the Polish working class.

The police made no arrests. The names of several of the participants were taken in order to make a pretense of official formality.

Another Klansman Works His Way Into Senate from Indiana

WASHINGTON, —(FP)— Ku klux klan representation in the senate is increased by one, due to the selection of Arthur R. Robinson of Indianapolis by Gov. Jackson to succeed the late Sen. Ralston of Indiana. Sen. Jim Watson has for the past year been considered the klan spokesman on the floor of congress, and now he has an accredited associate from his own state, branded as an active adherent of the hooded order. There were already three democratic and three republican senators, beside Watson, who were counted as klan adherents.

Imperial Wizard Evans has established headquarters three blocks the White House, in the house where Sen. Brandegee of Connecticut commiteed suicide a year ago. Emphasis is placed by his followers on the fact that the order is now influential in strongly republican territory, such as Pennsylvania and New Jersey, rather than in the south.

NEGRO WOMAN IS BRUTALLY MURDERED WHEN SHE RESISTS ATTENTIONS OF WHITE MORONS

WINNSBORO, La., Oct. 26.—Driven in desperation to hide in the swamps near here by a band of white morons who had run her husband out of the county in order to make advances to her, pretty Mrs. Cora McNight was was hunted down by these morons and when she refused to accept their advances, they tore her clothes from her body, wired her to a pine log in the swamp, poured gasoline on her naked body and then set it afire.

Passing swamp dwellers heard her scream, but did not dare approach the scene of agony, not knowing what was going on and seeing a number of automobiles near there.

After the murderers had left the swamp, some of those who had heard the cries went to investigate. All they could find was the log with the charred bones. The only means of identity found was a ring and a small suit case of woman's clothing.

Rumors began to fly all over the county that a white woman had been outraged and brutally burned by Negroes. Posses were formed and plans laid to gather in any Negroes they might suspect and lynch them to the nearest tree.

After an investigation by Coroner J. D. Rogers, who by means of the peculiarly designed ring which was found near the charred body, was able to establish the identity of the murdered woman, all talk of posses and lynchings and "justice" ceased for they were no longer interested. It was not a white woman but a Negro woman that had been outraged.

Mrs. McNight and her husband were terrorized for months previous to the murder. Attempt to force her to submit to their attentions were tried. These morons, among which are many of the "best exclusive white" families of the south, drove her husband out of the county thinking then that they could make her accept their attentions. She then ran to hide in the swamps. But they tracked her to her hiding place and made advances to her.

Despite the fact that she was alone, she fought these morons. Unable to force her to accept their advances, they tore her clothes from her body and took the screaming Negro woman and wired her to a pine log. One of the morons then ran to the waiting automobiles and took some gasoline out of tanks of each of the three cars. The gasoline was then poured over her and a match applied. And as the blue flame crept over her body, they looked on in glee at the woman who had dared to resist their attentions. Before her screams had died down they sped away in their automobiles.

Tho the identity of most of those who were implicated in the murder is known, there will be neither arrests nor investigations in this klan-infested state.

BRITISH IMPERIALISM, AFTER OIL IN PERSIA, INCITES MOHAMMEDANS

LONDON, Oct. 26.—Reports from Persia indicate that the expected hostilities between government forces and Turkoman rebels has an "oil basis," tho on its surface it takes the form of a reactionary religious war. The fine hand of English imperialism, aiming for oil, is seen behind the rumors of war.

The reactionary Mohammedans are known to be allied by devious connections with British agents, who are trying to combat the sympathy of the masses for the Soviet Republics. Britain continually incites religious reactionaries against the "Russian menace" across the Turkestan border.

Cyclone in Persian Gulf

KARACHI, India, Oct. 26.—A terrific cyclone swept the Persian gulf bringing the worst disaster and chaos. Dispatches report over 1,000 deaths and forty vessels sunk.

TEAR GAS AND GUNS AGAINST TAXI DRIVERS

Boston Scabs Find a Rough Road

BOSTON, Oct. 26.—Strike breakers who attempted to take five Checker taxis out of the company garage to run them for business failed in their efforts and only succeeded in getting to court when the mix-up was over. The men claimed that they had been brot in from out of town, not told what the situation was, held in the company garage until directed to take the five vabs out on the streets.

Two alleged "loyal" drivers of the company pulled guns and one threw a tear-gas bomb at the crowds which collected when the first cab driven by a strikebreaker hit a private car parked on the street.

Striking taxi men succeeded in explaining the situation to the strikebreakers so that no one returned to work. The drivers are out against wage cuts and for several minor reforms in conditions. They are members of Taxicab Drivers' Union No. 126.

More Woolen Mill Wage Cuts Brings Pawcatuck Strike

ONECO, Conn., Oct. 26—Weavers of the Pawcatuck Woolen Co. at Potter Hill are striking because of wage reductions which bring their pay 25 per cent lower than that paid in other mills for similar work.

STANDARD UNDERGROUND CABLE COMPANY AT PERTH AMBOY WORKS ON PART-TIME BASIS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Oct. 26.—The Standard Underground Cable company of Perth Amboy, employs about 800 workers. At present the plant is working on a part time schedule of 5 days a week, 9 hours a day. When the plant is in full operation the workers put in 10 hours a day with the exception of Saturday, when they work but half a day.

The greater portion of the workers earn but 42 cents per hour. After they have been there a long time they are able to earn 45 cents an hour. All overtime is worked on the basis of straight time for overtime.

Has Wife But No Job

Samuel F. Hartung, English teacher who eloped with his 16-year old pupil Ruth Smith causing a great tumult on the first pages of Main Street's kept press and resulting in his losing his job, is not to be reinstated. The Bombardment Begins

Now that the rubber trust has discovered in the Philippine Islands vast potentialities for the raising of rubber the reptile press of this country is spewing forth a veritable bombardment of poison gas against the movement for independence of the islands. A splendid sample of this is revealed in the dispatches sent the Chicago Tribune, by one Walter Wilgus.

Defending the savagery of the regime of Major General Leonard Wood, the correspondent not only opposes freedom for the islands, but assails with vicious mendacity even the parliamentary bodies of the islands. Wood, who as the pliant tool of Elbert H. Gary, placed the iron heel of militarism upon the necks of the steel strikers at Gary, Ind., in 1919, and well known in the United States as a swaggering military despot, is depicted as a benefactor of humanity whose benevolent rule is challenged by a group of unscrupulous and unappreciative Filipinos in the senate, under the leadership of Manuel Queson. The Tribune correspondent urges the advisability of curtailing the powers of the senate in the matter of appointments.

Under a provision of the Jones act of 1916, the senate can reject appointments of the governor-general. So widespread has been this boycott of Wood appointees that hardly half a dozen American officers remain in the constabulary, all vacancies being filled by Filipinos. The implication is that there is ground for doubting the loyalty (?) of the organization and its efficiency in dealing with the non-christian elements in question. By loyalty, Mr. Wilgus means betraying the Philippines into the hands of American rubber interests.

The Tribune is the agent of industrial capital in the middle west. It is the voice of the Harvester trust, and hence is in favor of this government releasing the Philippines and devoting its conquests to the agricultural lands of South America. This policy, emphasized with vigor a few years ago, is reaffirmed in a somewhat modified tone at present. Tho carrying the poison propaganda of Wilgus, the Tribune editorially advocates freedom for the islands, so that "we will be out of responsibilities which may bring us anything from a native uprising to a foreign war."

Do not mistake the attitude of the Tribune as an anti-imperialist stand. What the McCormicks and Pattersons want is a governmental policy that will penetrate South America in the interest of the harvester and packing trusts and keep out of the imperialist ventures of finance-capital in Europe and in the Philippines. The same considerations impel them to support Borah in his attacks on the world court and the league of nations.

No one should be deluded into the belief that the Filipinos will attain their freedom because a powerful group of American industrialists favor it. This group is rapidly being brought under the domination of bank capital.

American revolutionists warn the natives of the islands not to be misled by the platonic sympathy of the spokesmen of the industrialist group, but to organize and rise in their might and scourge from the islands the abominable despotism of Wood and the journalistic scavengers of the Wilgus type.

Rewarding Friends

John Fitzpatrick and the rest of the reactionaries who used to masquerade as progressives in the Chicago Federation of Labor are again made ridiculous. Mr. Len Small, the spoils politician of Kankakee, Illinois, whom Fitzpatrick & Co. supported for governor last year, proved his great love for labor the other day.

He appeared before the convention of the Illinois National Guard Association and told Major General Milton J. Foreman, Brigadier General John J. Garrity (former Chicago police chief), and other heads of that strikebreaking outfit that they represent "100 per cent American patriotic blood and are a valuable asset to the state."

If a strike is called in Chicago and the bosses think it cannot be effectively suppressed with the armed forces at hand, Gov. Small will call out these incomparable patriots and smash the workers in typical cossack style.

This has happened before and will happen again. And Fitzpatrick, who once paid lip service to a labor party and then bolted when he saw one in the process of formation that would smash the alliance of the labor fakirs with the capitalist political machines, will try to save his face by saying Small betrayed the confidence of labor. It is not Small who is a traitor to his principles. A republican political crook for thirty years, he still remains true to his record. It is the craven Fitzpatrick who is guilty of treachery to the working class because of his support of an old party politician, regardless of who that politician happens to be.

Search Warrants and Defense

Efforts to enforce the prohibition law frequently serve to bring to the attention of the public the habitual police violation of certain fundamental principles upon which the government is presumed to rest. One of the traditions is that the habitation of a man is inviolate; that it cannot be entered against his will without a search warrant. The ex-convicts and gangsters who make up the prohibition enforcement agents frequently invade residences without warrant, as do the uniformed policemen of various cities.

In a recent case in Chicago Judge Joseph B. David recommended using the baseball bat on any policeman, uniformed or otherwise, who attempts to enter a house without a warrant.

This sort of unlawful invasion is not confined to those suspected of violation of the prohibition law, but for years has been used against revolutionists in this country. But when workingmen endeavor to defend themselves against atrocious assaults by gangsters cloaked with authority they are not regarded as upholders of American traditions, but lynched or sent to prison as was the case in Centralia, Washington, in 1919.

In spite of this, however, the publicity attendant [illegible] vandalism of the police will encourage workers to defend themselves [illegible] search of the premises in which they live, not merely with baseball bats, but with any weapons at hand.

The Defenders of Democracy, Reason and Justice

By H. M. WICKS.

EXPOSED as the tool of reaction because of a whole series of betrayals of the working class, extending over a period of years, the socialist party in New York City is now trying to conceal its treachery under the bourgeois watchwords of democracy, reason and justice. Like the socialist parties that have played such a vile role in Europe, the American socialist party tries to prove that it is a better defender of the interests of the capitalists than the avowedly capitalist class parties.

After aiding and abetting the Sigman machine in its drive to destroy the rank and file movement in New York, and indulging in every crusade against the left wing, the hypocritical socialists now come forth and denounce the capitalist state for doing on the political field precisely what they themselves tried to do in the trade union struggle. Sigman tried to disfranchise and crush the rank and file movement under left wing leadership. The socialist party aided him in his attacks. Now the election board of New York City throws the Communist, Comrade Ben Gitlow, off the election ballot—actually in politics doing what Sigman and the socialists tried to do in the union. To be consistent the socialist party should have praised the state of New York for achieving in one field what they failed to achieve in another.

BUT there are more ways than one of serving the capitalist class in a political struggle. One way is to try to perpetuate the illusion of capitalist democracy. The socialists did not dare permit the attack against Gitlow to be passed over in silence. They had to take a stand, and to openly praise the capitalist state would have exposed them to thousands of workers who still harbor the illusion that this is a working class party. So they issue a statement, under the name of their candidate for mayor of New York, the Rev. Dr. Norman Thomas. They state that Gitlow is no criminal in spite of the fact that he was convicted for holding certain beliefs:

> "When, on the basis of such a conviction, a man's name is barred forever from the ballot, it is not democracy but the denial of democracy which is furthered. If Gitlow represents the point of view the Communists believe in, to rule him off the ballot at this time is virtually to disfranchise them. It gives color to their charge that OUR democracy is organized hypocricy. .. The socialist party, which is in vigorous opposition to many Communist tactics, whole-heartedly demands that New York City and state atone for this offence against DEMOCRACY, REASON and JUSTICE by restoring Gitlow's name to the ballot." (Emphasis mine.—H. M. W.)

HERE is a classic example of crawling before the bourgeoisie. Mr. Thomas does not question capitalist democracy itself. In fact his argument is that "OUR" democracy would be all right if Gitlow's name were placed on the ballot. Just let people vote according to the established rules of the capitalist government and all hoped-for blessings will come in due time. The republicans, the democrats and socialists may all choose their candidates in conventions or caucuses and those American citizens permitted to vote by the capitalist state may then have the extreme pleasure of exercising their inalienable democratic prerogative by voting for any one of the three. If the Communist can get on the ballot under the LEGAL forms (determined by the capitalist state) of that democracy, then there is no violation of democracy, but deprive him of that right and democracy is dragged in the dust. Such is the logic of socialist party leaders.

DEMOCRACY, in the lexicon of the socialists, is one article in Mr. Thomas' holy trinity of capitalism; the other two are REASON and JUSTICE. Mr. Thomas appeals in behalf of this outraged trinity.

The ideology of the socialist party, as expressed in the appeal alleged to be in defense of Gitlow, but in reality a defense of capitalism, is a survival of the bourgeois illusions of the eighteenth century.

Justice, about which we hear so much from all utopians, cannot be defined. It is not a tangible thing. Let us take the foremost exponent of justice in the history of the international labor movement, Proudhon. This anarchist said of the god he worshipped:

> "Justice is the faculty of the soul. The foremost of all, that which constitutes the human being.
> "Justice is the inviolable yardstick of all human actions.
> "Justice is the central star which governs societies, the pole about which the political world revolves, the principal and the rule of all transactions. Nothing is done among men that is not done in the name of right; nothing without invoking justice."

ALL this twaddle about this abstract idea was discredited a century ago. Proudhon, like the Rev. Thomas, was an intellectual atavism, repeating the meaningless slogans of a dead past.

If justice is an eternal entity, or if it is the faculty of the soul, why has it not always been known to the human race? Does not Mr. Thomas know that in the millions of years history of the human race such abstractions as justice are only of comparatively recent origin?

Language is the key to the development of the idea from the simple to the complex. Savages have no abstract words, such as bravery, gallantry, beauty; if one is brave they say "like the lion," is keen of eye, "like the eagle."

The development of language proceeds slowly thru many ramifications and it is only after language is established on the basis of phonetics that abstract ideas develop. And the abstraction "justice" is a late development. It means everything and nothing. Chattel slavery, for instance, was right and just in Plato's time, but wrong and unjust in Lincoln's time. People unable to correctly formulate social demands resort to this abstraction. When they can formulate their demands, they do it concretely and such abstractions are eliminated.

Justice is a worn-out hag of a thousand debauches, and was frequently the butt of ridicule of Marx and Engels in their polemics against the utopians of their day.

REASON, the goddess of the revolutionary bourgeoisie in the days of the French revolution, cannot be resurrected today. Like "justice" it was an abstraction used to adorn the literature of the rising capitalist class as a substitute for their lack of knowledge of the interplay of social forces.

SO this outworn bourgeois trinity is hauled forth to adorn socialist party sophistry in its defense of the fraud of capitalist class democracy today.

Just as the religionist translates his ignorance into one word and calls it god, so the confused socialists translate their ignorance into the trinity: democracy, justice and reason.

AS for Mr. Rev. Thomas and his party, we conclude with this: In your trade union treachery you support the disfranchising and extermination of the Communists in the unions, proving that if you had the power of the state in your hands you would do precisely what the capitalist state is now doing. The reason you now urge the placing of Comrade Gitlow's name on the ballot is because you are better agents of the capitalist state than some of the old line politicians, as you know that Gitlow's removal from the ballot will expose to many thousands of workers the fraudulent character of YOUR democracy. In case this fact became generally recognized your game would be up. You could not then realize your ambition to play the role of the American Scheidemanns and MacDonalds and show the imperialists that you can defend capitalism better than the parties they have created for their own purposes.

If you were really sincere in your desire to challenge the capitalist class, to fight for the elementary demands of the working class, you would have responded favorably to our demand for a united labor ticket, preparatory to launching a labor party. But you do not want to put up a real fight. Like the other sections of the Second International, that aided the master class lead the working class into the shambles, you want to play your own dirty game in your own way.

And after your brazen treachery on every field you cannot expect us to take seriously your hypocritical pretenses of defending the one working class candidate in the mayorality campaign—Ben Gitlow.

Organizing the Proletarian Woman

By IDA DAILES

> "The proletarian revolution can only be victorious when millions and millions of working women take part in the struggle."—Lenin.

FROM 1880 to 1920, the number of women wage workers in the U. S. has increased from 14.7 of the total working population to 21.1, and makes up approximately one-fifth of the total working population. In 1920 there were over six million women wage earners and over 700,000 professional ("salaried") women. Over one million of the women wage earners were agrarian workers. In this same year, while the men engaged in industry were one-fifth organized (in unions), only one-fifteenth of the women workers were organized.

Besides this large body of women who come in direct daily contact with this glorious system of wage-slavery, there is the still larger body of working-class housewives, who must be won to active sympathy with and participation in the class struggle.

That women can become conscious and revolutionary fighters, even revolutionary leaders, has been demonstrated time and again. The heroic part that working women played in the French revolution, where they fought and died for the revolution, is well known to all of us. Our own great martyr, Rosa Luxemburg, and the many capable women leaders in the International Communist movement, make clear to us that not only can women share in the fruits of a victorious revolution, but they can take part in the work and struggle and sacrifice necessary to bring about the revolution.

Is There a Woman Question?

A decade or so ago, and even today to a lesser degree, we heard a great deal about the "woman question." All sorts of panaceas were offered and are still being offered for the solution of this question. Everything from woman suffrage to birth control was to cure all the ills that woman is heir to. Yet today working women are still exploited, still oppressed, and the working class housewife still struggles to make ends meet—and very often does not succeed. The working woman cannot be "uplifted" while capitalism holds the lid down.

It is clear to every class-conscious worker, and certainly to every Communist, that the problem of the working class woman is the problem of the working class man; her fate is bound up with the fate of her class. And she must share in fulfilling the historic mission of her class—the overthrow of capitalism.

But, while we do not see the "woman question" as the bourgeois uplifters see it, and we recognize that the work of organizing the proletarian woman does not, in general, differ from the work of organizing the whole proletariat, we do realize that there are special aspects of this work.

Women are on the whole more exploited than men, their economic organization is weaker, they are more limited by family ties. They very often hope to escape from the boss thru marriage, but sooner or later find that this merely means being transformed from a wage-slave into the slave of a wage-slave. There is no escape under capitalism, and it is the duty of our party to make them conscious of this and to enlist them in the ranks of the active fighters for the proletarian dictatorship.

The Attitude of Our Party.

OUR fundamental task is to establish close contact with the masses of working women. We must work within all working women's organizations. We must penetrate them and permeate them with our slogans and aims. In additional to our general campaigns, we must have special women's campaigns, as for instance campaigns for organizing women into trade unions, for equal wages for equal work, against high rents, for sanitary conditions in homes and shops, better conditions for the children in the schools, etc.

In general campaigns, the women's angle must be brot out, especially in such campaigns as anti-child labor, anti-militarism, anti-imperialism, etc. Special propaganda must be made among working class women during strikes, lockouts, unemployment, etc.

As soon as possible, we must establish a women's section in all of our party press. For a beginning, this could appear on a single page once a week in our daily papers, and occupy one or two columns in our weekly papers. As the work develops and grows, our aim should be to establish women's newspapers. These, of course, will not in any way resemble the "women's page" or "home page" of the capitalist and so-called socialist newspapers. They will not be concerned with the latest Parisian fashions, serial love stories, or inexpensive ways of feeding large families. They must deal with the economic and political problems of the working class women, with her struggles and victories and aspirations as a worker.

Due to conditions for which no individual can be blamed, the men in the party are far more capable and experienced in party work than the women comrades. It is the duty of the party to see to it that the women comrades participate more actively in our general political work. The women in the party must undertake more work and more responsibility. We must encourage and train those women comrades who show ability in party work. We must develop women functionaries,—speakers, writers and organizers. This is extremely important in connection with our work among women.

The First Step.

THE reorganization of the party on the shop and street nuclei basis will root us deeper among the masses. Bolshevizing the party means building a party that is capable, organizationally, ideologically and politically, of winning over and leading the wide masses of workers to the final victory of the proletariat. Not the least among the tasks of such a party is that of organizing the working women.

The resolutions of the fourth national convention of our party on "Communist Work Among Women in the United States," gives specific directions for the setting up of a party apparatus to carry on work among women. Every leading party committee and every shop and street nucleus is to appoint an individual member or sub-committee as its organ for conducting the work among women. All of this work is by no means the work exclusively of the women comrades. It is the work of the entire party and must be energetically taken up by the whole party.

Paragraph 4, section 5, of the resolution calls for the following immediate action:

> "The first step in putting this program into effect shall be the calling in each city of city conferences to consist of all the members of the branch and nuclei sub committee on women's work and also the women committees from the trade union fractions. These conferences shall be made thoroly familiar with the program and mobilized to carry it out in the following manner. Similar conferences shall be held from time to time and at a later stage of development of the work it may be possible to hold these conferences on a larger scale."

Our comrades should carefully study this resolution on work among women, and proceed vigorously to take up this important phase of party activity. We must realize our aim: To win the working women and working class housewives of this country for the revolutionary class struggle!

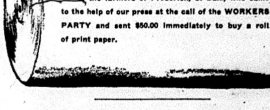
ONLY ONE-THIRD OF QUOTA RAISED FOR DAILY WORKER



THIS issue of the DAILY WORKER is dedicated to the farmers of Frederick, S. Dak., who came to the help of our press at the call of the WORKERS PARTY and sent $50.00 immediately to buy a roll of print paper.

Against South Dakota skies almost every night flames the fanatic's cross of the ku klux klan. Almost every night this season from South Dakota box cars I. W. W.'s are driven out at the points of guns held by masked members of the "Home Guards." And Frederick, So. Dak., itself produced that mouth-piece of white-terrorism who is secretary of the American legion national committee for the elimination of working class education in the United States, Frank L. Sieh.

But few of the South Dakota workers have become organized to fight this group of dangerous fascists, except in isolated instances. And one of the exceptions is Frederick, So. Dak., where loyal, intelligent comrades, most of them farmers, can always be found to support labor's cause in opposition to the morons from "Main Street." This small group in one day collected $50 to send to THE DAILY WORKER, with the promise of more later on.

From other distant points, too, comes aid to THE DAILY WORKER, —from Idaho, Vermont, Oklahoma and Canada; but the sum total is just a little over a third of what must be raised within the next two months. $40,000 is the needed amount, with $25,182.82 still forthcoming as shown by the following items:

Rothstein Meeting of Toronto Needle Trade Workers Enthusiastic

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 26.—A well attended meeting of needle trades workers was held Sunday, when Ida Rothstein of the I. L. G. W. spoke under the auspices of the Trade Union Educational League upon the crisis thru which the progressive movement in the needle trades has been passing particularly in the I. L. G. W.

Rothstein stirred the audience of needle workers to great enthusiasm with her account of the victory against the Sigman-Forward reactionary machine in New York.

It seems that the cutters' local in Toronto, without a regular election, has delegated Julius Hochman to represent them at the Philadelphia convention.

AMERICAN WORKERS CALLED TO CELEBRATE EIGHTH YEAR OF THE RUSSIAN PROLETARIAN REVOLUTION

Eight years have passed since the revolutionary workers of Russia victoriously raised the banner of their rule over their country after their decisive defeat of absolutism and capitalism in Russia. But with their victory their biggest problem was not yet solved.

It was the struggle against the counter-revolution and the task of reconstructing production under workers' rule which taxed the ability and capacity of the proletarian revolution to the limits. But in these battlefields also the revolution marched to victory.

Glory in Soviet Victory

Every new step forward meant a new inspiration for the proletariat of the world. Every new problem solved meant a new valuable experience for the proletariat of the world.

The workers of the word glory in the victory of their Russian brothers. The proletariat of the world thanks their Russian brothers for what they taught them.

The anniversary of the Russian revolution therefore is an event which is commemorated by the workers every where. The American workers, too, will gather in all the important centers for anniversary celebrations of the Russian revolution. Under the auspices of the Workers (Communist) Party such celebrations have been arranged thruout the country. The most important of these are being held in the following cities:

Plan Many Meetings

Boston, Mass.—At Scenic Auditorium, Berkeley & Tremont, Nov. 8, at 2:30 p. m. C. E. Ruthenberg.

'SUBSTITUTES' THE BUNK IN COAL STRIKE

Anthracite Operators Aid Use of Soft Coal

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 27.—How little the anthracite operators fear the stage thunder of threats by that mythical enity, "the public," to swear off on anthracite and use soft coal, oil and other substitutes from now on, henceforth and forever, is shown by the anthracite operators' actions when confronted with these threats. Also is shown that the anthracite strikers are being betrayed by Lewis not calling out the bituminous miners.

Last Wednseday the New York and Pennsylvania officials conferred with each other and with representatives of the anthracite operators. Major General Berry, chairman of the New York state coal commission, tells the following about the attitude of the anthracite operators:

Operators Don't Fear Substitutes.

"They came to New York to find out just what the situation was here, and they all were told that unless the strike ended soon and anthracite shipments were resumed, they were in danger of losing part of this great market as a customer of the anthracite industry." But General Berry had to admit that threat had failed to move the anthracite operators, whose hearts seem as hard as their coal. "My impression from talking with them," he said, "is that they mean to fight it out if it takes all winter."

Not only are the anthracite operators unmoved by the buncombe propaganda spread far and wide about substitutes for anthracite, but they are taking advantage of the continued working of bituminous mines by the union to urge even that soft coal be used.

Anthracite Operators Aid Soft Coal Use.

George J. Eltz, director of the Coal Merchants' Association in New York, says that the anthracite operators are actually sending out engineers and fuel experts to serve to popularize the use of soft coal in New York and show consumers how to use soft coal instead of their own anthracite.

Health Officer J. J. Hagan of Jersey City has another bright idea for settling the dispute. He is going to get a representative conference of health officers in New Jersey, then he figures that this body will recommend to Coolidge that an ultimatum be sent to both miners and operators to "reach an agreement by a certain date, or have the soldiers and militia go to work digging coal." Who is going to clean all the dead soldiers out of the pits after they have killed themselves with accidents due to their ignorance of the dangers of coal mining, Hagan fails to state.

FORCED TO STEAL COAL TO KEEP FROM KEEPING TOO COOL WITH CALVIN

PARIS, Ill., Oct. 27—Thefts of coal from trains is giving dealers and officials of the Big Four railroad a great deal of trouble. It is said that bands of women climb on cars when the trains stop on side tracks or in the yards and throw off and carry away tons of fuel, in some cases losses to dealers amount to several tons per car. It is said the "bandits" declare their families are suffering from cold and that owing to lack of employment their husbands have no money to purchase fuel

N. Y. UNIONS TO CONFER SUNDAY ON PURCELL MEET

Delegate Conference to Arrange Meeting

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The preliminary conference for the organization of the mass meeting to welcome A. A. Purcell, who will bring the message of world trade union unity to the thousands of workers in this city, has set the date of the first regular meeting of the conference for Sunday afternoon, Nov. 1, at 3 p. m., at Beethoven Hall, 210 E. 5th St., New York City.

Hoover Harangues Y. M. C. A. About Illusions of Peace

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27—The Locarno treaty, the Washington armament conference, and other international agreements aimed at curbing war, were described by Secretary of Commerce Hoover today as the "most important milestones of peace in the history of the world."

Addressing the International Y. M. C. A. conference Hoover said that "should a world referendum be taken, an overwhelming sentiment for the abolition of wars would be reflected.

"The Locarno treaty is a start on the right track. It removes one more barrier against peace."

FEARS FOR FUTURE OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS AND LOCARNO PACT VOICED DURING BALKAN DISPUTE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Oct. 27.—Fears for the future of the league of nations and the Locarno peace pact were expressed in the secret session of the league of nations conference now being held in Paris to decide tha Greco-Bulgar controversy, following which the league handed the representatives of Greece and Bulgaria, the league's decision that Greece and Bulgaria issue orders within twenty-four hours to their respective commanders to immediately begin the evacuation of occupied territory, and that all troops must have left occupied territory within 60 hours.

Aristide Briand reminded the representatives of the two contending parties that if they did not follow out the decision of the league of nations, an economic blockade would result.

Go Into Closed Session.

Following the reading of telegrams and communications between the two contending nations, at the open session of the conference, the two representatives of the contending nations were called to the council table to participate in the deliberations.

When asked whether the two governments would accept the league decisions, both delegates showed reluctance in replying. Both recited tales of atrocities and blamed each other as the aggressors.

Following the arguments of the Greek and Bulgarian representatives, the league of nations commission held a private session. During the private session Hyman of Belgium expressed the fear that not only was the future of the league of nations at stake but also that of the Locarno pact.

Hand Decision to Delegates.

After the private session was over, the representatives of the two powers fighting each other were handed copies of the league's decision demanding that orders be issued for withdrawal of troops within 24 hours to their frontiers and that at the end of 60 hours all troops must be in their respective countries.

The league showed its distrust of the pledges made by the two powers by appointing a commission of British, French and Italian officers who are to proceed immediately to the Greco-Bulgar frontier and see to it that the league's orders are carried out.

Plan Blockade.

Plans are now being laid to blockade Greek ports in which England, France and Italy will participate, in case the league decision is not carried out. England has 20 battleships in the Mediterranean waters waiting orders to be put in action against Greece.

LOCAL 5 OF THE I. L. G. W. ELECTS LEFT WING SLATE

Operators Local Third Left Victory

Another local of the I. L. G. W., this time Local 5, the third one in Chicago to elect delegates to the Philadelphia convention, has followed the popular note set in the first two, Locals 104 and 59, and at the meeting Monday night overwhelmingly elected a left wing slate of delegates and as completely defeated the aspiring reactionaries.

The left wingers elected as delegates to Philadelphia from Local 5, which comprise some 700 operators, are B. Soll, E. Navle, H. Metrick and R. Sigle. The four candidates put up by the machine of the decadent Sigman regime were totally whipped.

MASS MEETING AGAINST HORTHY TERROR FOLLOWS PICKETING OF WASHINGTON HUNGARIAN EMBASSY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—(By Mail.)—The picketing of the Hungarian embassy yesterday by the International Labor Defense, was followed by a mass meeting held in the Playhouse on N street last night, where the audience that crowded the auditorium listened to speakers relate the reason for the picketing.

In spite of the presence of uniformed policemen and a large squad of detectives the speakers hurled defiance at the Wall Street tools of capitalism

A. N. L. C. GIVES ENTIRE SESSION TO TRADE UNIONS

Recognize Only Division of Classes

The American Negro Labor Congress, the first mass organization of class-conscious Negro labor, which is meeting this week at the Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles avenue, completed a discussion of the Negro worker and the trade unions with a mass meeting on Monday night. The subject of the mass meeting was the bar of color prejudice raised by the officialdom of the trade unions, with the result that very few Negro workers can gain admittance to the unions. The speakers discussed ways and means of organizing the colored workers to fight their way into the unions, and stressed the necessity of a united front of labor, black and white, against the agressions of the bosses.

Again and again the speakers pointed out to the audience the slogan which was stretched across the front of the hall: "Organization is the first step to freedom."

Otto Huiswood, a colored worker from New York and a delegate to the congress, urged the congress to take concrete steps toward the organization of the Negroes into labor unions. He pointed out that when color prejudice works in such a way as to keep Negroes out of various other organizations, they do not for this reason remain on the outside of these activities, but organize their own. The Negro workers must take the same stand with regard to the trade union question, Huiswood pointed out. If they cannot force the A. F. of L. officialdom to admit the Negro workers, then these workers must organize their own unions and use these organizations not to fight the white workers, but to get into the movement of the whole working class and fight with it in its struggles against the owners.

C. W. Fulp, president of the local union of the United Mine Workers of America in Primrose, Pennsylvania, and Norval Allen, southern organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress, told of fights waged by Negro workers to enter the trade unions, and urged the delegates to adopt concrete measures of organization.

Negro Kept Press Is Silent.

The entire capitalist press, including the race press owned and controlled by a few wealthy Negroes, has been carrying out what Lovett Fort-Whiteman, national organizer of the congress, characterized before the congress as a "conspiracy of silence," Months before the congress opened, the capitalist newspapers were carrying "exposes" of this gathering of Negro labor, branding it as "a tool of Moscow, which will only fool and betray the colored workers." One and all, they "warned" the colored workers to keep away from this congress—to boycott it. And now that their efforts have resulted in complete failure—now that these servants of the bosses realize that in spite of their lying attacks, the American Negro Labor Congress is successfully working out plans for the solution of the problems of the race; now that they see the Negro thinking of himself as a worker, with aims and interests like the aims and interests of the white workers of the United States—now these papers have resorted to the expedient of ignoring the congress. Since the congress opened, only one or two of the capitalist papers have mentioned the gathering. The others have dismissed it with a notice, and a lying sentence or two.

Of the two large Negro papers in Chicago, neither has up to the present moment said a word about the congress. The Chicago Defender—

Rail Head to Appear Before Commerce Body on Freight Increase

President Fred Sargent of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad was summoned before an interstate commerce commission hearing here to tell who was the author of the petition asking a 5 per cent increase in freight rates for all western railroads which now is being argued.

The summons was issued at the demand of M. R. Shaunnessey, railroad commissioner for the state of Nevada, who was conducting the cross-examination, when witnesses had confessed they did not know the author of the petition.

REID-TOOHEY FREED FROM PA. PRISON

Progressives Out After Month in Workhouse

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 27.—Alex Reid, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee and Pat Toohey, progressive leader of the miners in the anthracite region, were released today after a month's imprisonment following their arrest on September 26th by local police while attempting to address a meeting of miners in Washington Hall, West Scranton.

The arrests followed a declaration by Rinaldo Cappellini, U. M. W. of A. official in the anthracite district, that all Communist meetings should be broken up.

In Jail for a Month

On Monday, September 28, Reid and Toohey, appearing before Police Magistrate P. J. McNamara, were ordered "held to await the action of federal authorities." The judge added that, "If the federal authorities will not take care of them, I will decide later what is to done with them."

Evidently the federal authorities decided to let the police magistrate do the dirty work, which he was not at all averse to do, as on September 30, Reid and Toohey were sentenced by McNamara to serve six months in the workhouse on a framed-up charge of "vagrancy." This was done while their attorney, Isaac Shoor of New York, was not notified of the hearing in court, although he had visited the prisoners early that day and had conferred with the U. S. district attorney who was "holding" them as MacNamara had prescribed.

August Valentine and Alex Vareck, two other progressive miners arrested with Reid and Toohey, were released, Valentine proving that he had a bank account and could not very well be a vagrant. Reid, however, was sentenced to the workhouse in a vagrancy charge, in spite of the $30 he had in his possession.

Were Serving Workhouse Sentence

Every since then the two progressive leaders have been serving their sentence in the Scranton workhouse. Only yesterday did the machinery of

CAILLAUX GOES TOO AS MONEY CRISIS GROWS

Promise of Dawes Plan for France Looms

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Oct. 27.—Less than one week after Caillaux, finance minister of France, submitted without recommendation the proposals of the United States on the settlement of debts to the cabinet, he went down to ignominous defeat, dragging with him the cabinet itself.

Paul Painleve, premier of France, presented the resignation of his cabinet today and it was accepted by President Doumergue. The crisis was provoked by Caillaux, whose efforts to stabilize the French currency, miserably failed.

As a reaction to the failure of the American debt negotiations the franc since the return from Washington of Caillaux, has been steadily declining. In the chamber of deputies the socialist bloc, under former premier Herriot, was prepared to insist upon a capital levy. Caillaux rejected this proposal but proposed heavy taxes on luxuries. Thus he lost the support of both socialists and conservatives.

Facing certain defeat in parliament, Painleve requested Caillaux to resign from the cabinet. Caillaux refused, stating that the cabinet would either stand or fall with him. It fell.

Assail United States

The United States government is held to blame for the crisis in currency today, the charge being based upon the refusal to reach a satisfactory debt settlement. Instead of a settlement that would stabilise French currency for a time, the American government proposed a five-year period in which no principal on the debt of $4,200,000,000 be paid, but that interest at the rate of $40,000,000 per year be paid.

This is recognized as a move to bankrupt France so that a plan for the complete domination of France by American imperialism on the general lines of the Dawes plan for Germany, may be imposed, thereby reducing France to the position of a semi-colony.

"I decided to resign last Friday, conforming to the views of my colleagues" said Painleve, "nevertheless we wished to see Briand, armed with official authority in attempting to prevent war by pacification in the Greco-Bulgarian incident."

The resignation may seriously af-

Unemployment in England Increases

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 27—Unemployment was still on the increase in Great Britain at the end of August, reports to the commerce department showed, and was especially marked in coal mining, textile manufacturing and tinplate milling. On Sept. 12 the official figures showed 1,418,000 persons out of work, as compared with 1,191,000 on the same date a year ago.

The figures are taken from the English unemployment insurance department, which now calculates that 12.5 per cent of the regular working population of the country is out of employment.

NEW YORK POLICE ARREST LABOR DEFENSE PICKETS BEFORE THE HORTHY EMBASSY THIRD TIME

By ROSE BARON.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—While picketing the Hungarian consulate, carrying signs protesting against the threatened execution of Mathias Rakosi and over one hundred independent socialist party workers, 38 members of the International Labor Defense were arrested, held in jail for a few hours and then released on a suspended sentence.

This is the third time the New York police force under the leadership of the finger printing advocate Commissioner Enright, have stepped in to save the face of Horthy, the hangman of Hungary.

While picketing is perfectly legal the police and courts are endeavoring to intimidate the workers from continuing their protests. The demonstrations will be continued however, until there is definite assurance that the gallows erected to kill the flower of Hungary's working class will not be glutted with the blood of Mathias Rakosi and his comrades.

The men and women arrested today carried sandwich signs which read: "Labor demands the freedom of Rakosi, Hungarian labor leader and 105 Hungarian workers about to be rail-

Shots were fired at the carriage in which Farinacci was believed to be travelling. Farinacci, however, had missed the train and was not a passenger on it.

STRIKE TIES UP CHILE AS MASS PROTEST

Fraudulent Election Angers Workers

BUENOS AIRES, Argentine, Oct. 27.—A general strike for 24 hours as a protest against the fraudulent election engineered by the military dictatorship which acts as a tool of Wall Street imperialism, yesterday tied up the city of Santiago in Chile, while 20,000 wrokers in mass a mass meeting demonstrated their refusal to recognize the election as valid and demanded an annullment. Censorship in Chile prevents truthful details from being sent by usual telegrams.

The military dictatorship, the like of which it is hard to conceive, brazenly sets aside the popular will of the people, and every effort to express mass discontent is suppressed with martial law, which not long ago sent a dozen loyal and fine working class leaders of the Nitrate Miners' Union to the horrible prison exile on the bleak, rocky and storm-swept islands of Terra del Fuego at the southernmost extremity of the continent.

Union Leaders Imprisoned.

This military dictatorship ignored the civil government to such an extent that its functioning was impossible, the case of the Nitrate Miners' Union leaders being an example, in which, tho acquitted of charges brought against them in the civil courts by the imperialist nitrate mine owners, they were seized by the military, given a farcial "trial" by court martial, and sent to the island prison.

It is understood here that this affair had considerable to do with the resignation from office of the president of the "Republic" of Chile, Arturo Alessandri, who would no longer share responsibility for the conduct of affairs.

A Queer 'Election.

This resignation naturally resulted in a call for an election, but the military dictators conspired to defeat any choice by the people, among whom the organized unionists are a decisive factor. Under the astounding excuse that "disorder" might result if elections were held in the usual manner sanctified by all the normal rules of "democracy," they decreed that altho there should be an election, all parties must agree on one candidate, and they obligingly furnished one of their choice, Emiliano Figueroa-Larraine.

Soldiery Prevents Fair Voting.

As the election day neared, the military dictators called out troops and declared martial law, which remained until they had Salas out and they thought, counted Salas out and Larraine in, as president of the "republic."

The Chilean labor unions demanded that the obviously fraudulent election be annulled, and to demonstrate their hostility to the regime of imperialist puppets, they called a 24-hour strike yesterday.

General Strike.

It intensified as the day advanced, all ordinary manual labor refusing to begin their day's labor, Shortly past noon the hotel servants, the much despised "criados," "mosos" and all, walked out, leaving the tourists, North American imperialist business agents and all else to shift for themselves, while the street cars and buses were suddenly stopped and shops and stores closed their doors at the orders of the unions, who made known the penalty for non-observance. Street clashes with the military have brought numerous casualties. But no accurate reports of the number wounded or killed have come thru.

A great crowd of 20,000 or more gathered in the public square, where speakers voiced the pent-up discontent of the masses with demands for annullment of the election, "vivas" for Salas and denunciation of the military for "delivering the country into the hands of the money kings of Wall Street." Great excitement exists, which the military, as usual, announces it will meet with martial law.

Britain is Enlarging Singapore Naval Base

SINGAPORE, Straits Settlement, Oct. 27—The legislative assembly has authorized the dredging of 513 acres along the shore in furtherance of the plan for enlargement of the British naval base here. This is part of the gigantic naval plans of Britain that are being carried on and is considered significant of the realization in London of the struggle that is bound to ensue in Indo-China in the not distant future.

Mrs. Rhinelander Wins Fees.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 27.—Supreme Court Justice Morschauser allowed $3.500 extra counsel fees to lawyers for Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander, of New Rochelle, wife of Leonard Kip Rhinelander, scion of a wealthy family, in her fight against her husband's suit for annulment.

Justice Morschauser stipulated that application for additional fees would be entertained at the close of the trial.

New York Police Arrest Pickets of the Labor Defense

roaded to death by the fascist Horthy regime," and "International Labor Defense defends all victims of capitalist oppression."

Washington Demonstration.

Washington papers carried lengthy reports of the demonstration in front of the Hungarian legation in the capitol last Saturday when scores of workers marched up and down in front of the building carrying signs protesting against the Horthy court martal trials.

The demonstration was staged by the International Labor Defense. Despite a heavy downpour of rain and police interference the pickets stayed with their signs until the time allotted by the committee had expired. They refused to quit on demand of the police, insisting they had a perfect right to picket.

The demonstration created a sensation in Washington and the most uncomfortable flunkey in the Teapot Dome balliwick was the Hungarian count who married the Vanderbilt millions, the influence of which counts heavily with "Nervous Nell" Kellogg, the secretary of state.

After the picketing a mass meeting was held which was addressed by Norman Tallentire, who took a prominent part in the defense of Tom Mooney and J. O. Bentall, a graduate of Leavenworth, where he served a term as a class war prisoner.

Silence Is Broken.

Some of the newspapers carried pictures of the pickets which brot out the slogans on the placards very clearly. If the Horthy dictatorship expected to railroad Rakosi and his comrades to the gallows behind a veil of silence, they reckoned without the workers of the world who have brot the story of the white terror to the masses in all lands.

The campaign led by the International Labor Defense to save Rakosi, has resulted in mass meetings and demonstrations in Boston, New York, Chicago, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Buffalo, Minneapolis and Philadelphia. Telegrams still continue to pour into the Hungarian legation in Washington and several cables have been forwarded to the Hungarian Foreign Minister Bethlen, demanding an end to the white terror.

The Labor Defender.

The first issue of The Labor Defender, official magazine of the International Labor Defense will make its appearance on next December 1. It will be an illustrated monthly devoted to the interests of class war prisoners containing articles by men and women prominent in the labor movement and particularly those who have been engaged in the work of defending class war prisoners.

The first number will contain articles by Ralph Chaplin, James P. Cannon, and letters from prisoners, well-known as victims of capitalist persecution.

Pictures of the past and the present depicting the class war in the United States and all over the world will be a big feature of The Labor Defender.

The magazine will sell for ten cents a copy and the subscription price is one dollar a year. The publishing address is 23 South Lincoln St., Chicago. Illinois.

GARY'S STEEL TRUST PLES UP WEALTH AS WORKERS STARVE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 27—The United States Steel corporation earned $42,400,412 in the quarterly period ended Sept. 30, according to the statement submitted by E. H. Gary, chairman of the corporation to the board of directors. The directors declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share.

During this same period many of Gary's workers were walking the streets looking for a chance to earn enough to feed their families.

legal humbuggery get to moving with a hearing on a writ for habeas corpus before Judge Newcomb. As a result the leaders of the progressive miners were released "on their own recognizance" but were ordered to leave town.

Reports from all sections of the anthracite show that the period of crisis in the strike is just beginning, with savings exhausted, local treasuries drained, reserve coal of poor quality sold at exorbitant prices and the operators determined to fight against any wage increase to the strikers, whose leading demands of a ten per cent raise and the check off brought on the struggle.

It is expected that the bidding of Wall Street, a leading journal of which advised the anthracite operators to open up the mines with scab labor will meet the angry resistance of the starving miners, who are already discussing the withdrawal of maintenance men, and who are becoming increasingly dissatisfied with the leadership of Lewis and Cappellini, whom they suspect of selling out their demand for wage increase for the questionable benefit of the check-off.

Negro Labor Congress Gives Session to the Trade Unions

popularly known among the militant colored workers as the Chicago "Surrender,"—because it refuses to put up a real fight for the colored workers—ran its usual large edition on the day before the congress opened, and that edition carried not one word about this nation-wide gathering of workers of the colored race. In this connection, Whiteman pointed out to the congress that just because a paper is edited by colored people does not necessarily mean that that paper has the interests of the race at heart. Their interests are as often as not centered in their pocketbooks, for, like the white bosses, their only thot is the thot of profit.

FRENCH TROOPS MASSACRE 25,000 ARABS IN SYRIA

Palestine Arabs Expose French

LONDON, Oct. 7—According to a telegram sent by the secretary of the Arab Congress in Palestine more than 25,000 men, women and children were brutally murdered by the ruthless French imperialist troops in Syria.

After the French had burned a number of native villages a little to the southeast of Damascus, and murdered 700 Arabs at Hama, 24 of the murdered Arabs were strapped to the backs of camels and brought into Damascus to the Musselman quarter as an example to the natives.

The sight of the dead bodies on swaying camels and news of the reprisals disgusted the Arabs and immediately demonstrations against the French began. The French then attacked the Arabs. In defending themselves from the brutal French attacks, the Arabs killed some of the attackers and this was followed by the horrible reprisals described by the secretary of the Palestine Arab Congress in the following telegram:

"The French have continued the bombardment of Damascus for fifty hours.

"The greater part of the city is demolished, thousands are homeless and thousands of innocent persons have perished. The French armed Armenian immigrants, who committed fearful depradations.

"The French are suppressing reliable news. The fugitives say that more than 25,000, including many women and children, perished in the ruins."

The British press is aghast at this action of the French and many of the newspapers are attacking the French imperialist policy and the methods used by General Sarril in the Syrian campaign to defeat the yearning for independence among the natives of Syria.

AMERICANS AID REVOLT AGAINST NICARAGUA HEAD

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANGUA, Nicaragua, Oct. 27.—The agents of Wall Street with the active aid of the American minister here, has succeeded in placing the tool of Wall Street at the head of the government here, practically deposing President Solorzano, and putting in his place Gen. Emiliano Chamarro, former president and for two decades or more, one of the most brutal dictators in Central America.

At four o'clock on Sunday morning armed forces under the command of Chamarro entered and took charge of LaLoma, the fortress commanding this city, without opposition and the garrison joined in the movement. Large reinforcements of conservatives supporting the venture were admitted to the fortress and equipped with arms, and a message sent to President Solorzano demanding that he dismiss the liberal members of his cabinet and restore the conservatives to power. They base their demands on the claim that at the election a year ago the liberals won thru fraudulent methods.

American Minister Acts.

President Solorzano, thinking that the American minister would use his influence to aid the cause of "democracy" received a rude lesson in the mysteries of the imperialist diplomacy of the United States, when he tried to enlist the aid of that worthy.

At a conference with the American minister, the supporters of the government insisted they did not intend to retire.

This was followed by violent street fighting in which a number on both sides were killed. Soon after this event information was conveyed to the president of the republic that American troops defending his premises would no longer do so, unless he yielded to the demands of Chamarro, to which he acceded.

It seems that President Solorzano was suspected of favoring groups opposed to American imperialism, so the agents of Wall Street contrived to arrange a coup d'etat for the adventurer and despot, Chamarro.

Painleve's Fall Is New Symptom Showing Rule of Capitalism Is Dying

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Painleve government at Paris has fallen to its doom, drowned in the blood of its own spilling.

In the hour that Painleve quit, taking with him his whole cabinet, including the much advertised "financial wizard," Caillaux, the charge comes from the Palestina Arab Congress that 25,000 men, women and children were slaughtered in the recent bombardment of the native quarter of Damasmus.

War against the Syrians in Asia, was against the Riffians in North Africa, war against the workers and farmers at home, to maintain capitalism in France and spread the empire, proved too great a burden even for this government by violence, blessed and supported by the international financiers of Wall Street after the fall of the "radical socialist," Herriot.

* * * *

In spite of the credits extended by the House of Morgan, the franc continued to fall in price the past week until it hit the low figure of 25 for the American dollar, with the Belgian franc not far behind. Hundreds of millions loaned in the United States have not been able to stabilize the French franc, no more than great sums borrowed have been able to bulwark the Belgian franc. French and Belgian money are going down the same chute that saw the decline of the German mark, with a Dawes plan waiting at the bottom. The Painleve-Caillaux government didn't harmonize sufficiently toward the end with Wall Street's ambitions for France; so it had to go.

* * * *

France will no doubt get an even more reactionary government that must continue to accept the slave role imposed by American finance capital.

That does not mean that socialists cannot be in the government, or very closely sympathetic to it. Socialists have proved the best allies of reaction, in Great Britain, in Germany and in France. MacDonald had an imperialist policy more to the right than that of Baldwin. Von Hindenburg, deserted by the nationalists on the Locarno "security pact," looks to the democrats and socialists for support.

President Domergue may select a new premier who will call socialists to his side to wage war against the Syrians and the Riffians and send more Communists to French bastilles.

But it will not help. The colonial peoples will continue to struggle for their liberation. Industrial workers in the great French cities will carry on their fight for emancipation.

* * * *

The repeated and rapid changes in governments, in Germany, in France and elsewhere, attest the fact that capitalism merely jumps from one crisis to another. Already new masses of workers in Germany, given jobs temporarily under the Dawes plan, are being recruited for an increasing army of unemployed.

* * * *

The overturn of the Painleve government comes on the heels of the Locarno conference with its "peace" promises, and it postponed its fall a few hours so that its foreign minister, Aristide Briand, could preside over the council of the league of nations in an effort to restore a makeshift peace in the Balkans between Greece and Bulgaria. Capitalism, in the hour that it tries to tell the world that it is strong and whole, breaks forth with another multitude of symptoms proclaiming the fatal disease that is rushing it toward the grave.

TURKEY REFUSES TO ATTEND HAGUE COURT ON MOSUL

Will Not Submit to Court Arbitration

THE HAGUE, Oct. 27—Turkey has refused to participate in the extraordinary sessions of the permanent court of international justice.

In a telegram to the court, whose sessions have just been opened, Turkey takes the stand that she will not submit the Mosul boundary dispute to arbitration before the league of nations. She also tells the court that it has no business to pass upon whether the league of nations have a right to arbitrate or not, as the boundary dispute is a political issue.

Court Hears English.

Despite the absence of Turkey, the court began to hear the evidence which Sir Douglas Hogg, the British delegate who is living up to his name, is presenting to show why the court should allow the league of nations to arbitrate the issue.

Turkey refuses to abide by any decision to arbitrate the Mosul issue before the league of nations, as it was the league of nations that handed Mosul and its oil fields to Great Britain in the league mandate for Iraq.

ment when the council went into session under the presidency of M. Briand, French foreign minister.

"My government is ready to withdraw all troops as soon as the frontier guards have been re-established," M. Caparanos said. "We are willing that the movement shall be carried out by a Greek and a Bulgarian officer, provided that the Bulgarians do not advance until the Greek troops have entirely withdrawn."

Fighting Continues.

VIENNA, Oct 27.—The Greek forces have extended their fighting front. They have occupied Novrikop and have started to bombard Novishovo. Two regiments of infantry and one of cavalry and half a regiment of artillery have been received as reinforcements frmo Saloniki.

The Bulgarian troops are concentrating for an offensive at Melnik, which is about 55 miles northeast of Saloniki.

Forty Lives Lost.

SOFIA. Oct. 27.—Fifty dead and wounded is the total cost of life in Bulgaria as the result of the clash with Greece and the Greek bombardments of Bulgarian territory.

Twenty-six of the casualties were soldiers and the remainder civilians. Eleven Bulgarian soldiers are missing.

Painleve Cabinet Falls as French Money Crisis Grows

fect the Locarno pacts, and its effect upon the American debt settlement is quite probable.

Inflation seems to be certain under any new cabinet and it is most probable that concessions will have to be made to the large group in the chamber demanding a capital levy. Caillaux's flat refusal to treat with the demands for a capital levy has been largely responsible for the present situation.

Painleve said he had no idea who would succeed him.

"I haven't any idea who President Doumergue will select as my successor," said the former premier. "Whoever succeeds me can count upon my entire support."

Herriot Refuses Call

Pres. Doumergue has already requested former Premier Herriot, the hero of the social-pacifist era in France, to attempt to form a cabinet, but Herriot refused. There is considerable of a movement under way from his supporters, the left bloc, to persuade him to accept the post of premier again.

Aristide Briand, foreign minister in the Painleve cabinet and himself premier of France more times than any other living man, may be called upon to form a cabinet, but it is believed here that he will refuse.

The impression prevails that Painleve will be called upon to form another cabinet, in which case he will leave Caillaux out and give strong representation to the Herriot group, preliminary to endeavoring to stabilize the franc thru a capital levy.

Immediate inflation is necessary to save the currency from complete collapse, which will unquestionably be followed by further depreciation. A capital levy, as proposed by the radical socialists around Herriot will have the effect of weakening the French bourgeoisie so that they may be forced to yield in the near future to a Dawes plan.

Storm Conference to Ask Autonomy

dents and workers who blockaded the conference delegates with masses of demonstrators waving flags and banners demanding a China free from imperialist domination.

Students Demonstrate.

So dense were the crowds that many were injured when police tried to block their way from bringing to the attention of the imperialist delegates the sense of what they were dealing with in revolutionary nationalism.

The Chinese foreign minister, Shen Jui-lin will act as chairman of the conference, while the decrepit old provisional president, Tuan Chi-jui came to the conference thru the streets heavily guarded and with troops lining both sides of the roadway. Neither Shen nor Tuan, however, had much to say aside from voicing welcome to the delegates and expressing the expected aspirations that China be given equality with other nations. It was Ching Ting-wang who spoke the line of policy.

No Haggling Says Ching.

Ching added to his demand for autonomy the following: "China asks only what she expects to receive. She does not believe in asking for excessive concessions and then whittling them down. China does not wish to bargain."

The diplomats of the imperialist powers conferred privately on the substance of China's demands as voiced by Ching. Then Ambassador MacMurray, of the U. S., the first foreign delegate to speak, tried to remind everyone that the conference must keep within the limits of the Washington agreements, by saying that he was glad to attend a conference called for carrying out the Washington "treaty." He added, by way of room to escape into larger fields, that he was prepared to consider carefully, open-mindedly and generously, any reasonable plan for realizing China's hopes.

"Unified" China Very Popular.

Sir Ronald MacLeay, British ambassador, asserted that a united China was as much in the interest of Great Britain as of China herself, without adding the further fact that of course China must be unified only by consent of the British foreign office and under the control of imperialist tools.

The Japanese delegate, Eki Kioki, who in 1915, tred to put over the infamous 21 demands upon China, showed that he had had a change of tactic if not of principle by suggesting that steps be taken to attain Chinese autonomy. But he added that of course, "that goal is attainable only thru successive stages and we believe that the powers' unconditional surrender of their treaty rights is not contemplated by China herself."

Japan Suggests.

Japan suggests, therefore, that two alternatives be considered, first a statutory tariff on a "fair" basis for general application subject to provisions of a special tariff on specified articles to be agreed on between China and separate powers, or, second, a graduated tariff averaging no more than 12½ per cent.

Hioki added that "autonomy implies the existence of a strong unified government and presupposes the complete removal of all restrictions upon freedom of trade between China and other powers."

Big Mass Meeting Against the Horthy Terror in Capital in Washington who support the excesses of the Horthy government.

Save Rakosi Is Demand.

Following up the demands on the banners carried before the Hungarian embassy that afternoon, the speakers at the meeting exposed the connection between Wall Street, the government at Washington, and the white terror in Hungary where Matthias Rakosi is in momentary danger of being executed, having fallen into the clutches of the Horthy government while on a political visit to that country, from which he was driven after the fall of the Bela Kun Soviet regime.

Norman Tallentire, of Philadelphia, was the principal speaker and his speech was received with enthusiasm, at the conclusion of which a resolution was unanimously adopted protesting against the Hungarian terror and against the threatened murder of the leaders of the proletariat who have not already been exiled or executed.

J. O. Bentall of New York, long a speaker in the radical wing of the labor movement, also addressed the audience, assailing Morgan, DuPont and other capitalists for the part they play in European politics and against the American working class.

It was announced at the conclusion of the meeting that demonstrations would occur in all parts of the world until the working class was rallied in defense of the prisoners of the Horthy terror.

REACTION IN CHINA NEEDS ONLY MONEY

Its Leader Boasts of Secret Arms Supply

SHANGHAI, China, Oct. 27.—That imperialist agencies are working secretly in aid to the counter-revolutionary fascists in trying to overthrow the Kuomintang republic is proven by the interview given out by the reactionary Chinese leader, General Chen-Chiung-min, who has found fitting shelter in the British port of Hong Kong.

The interview given to the British Daily Express reveals by way of inference where Chen draws his pay check from. It says:

Secret Source of Arms.

"I have 7,000 troops which, altho less well armed than the Reds, outnumber them. I have the moral support of the national assembly, together with a warship from the north and secret sources of arms and ammunition supplies, and only lack funds to prevent the early accomplishment of my task.

"When the Reds are driven out I will not establish a southern government, but will strive to join the north and south for a unified China. I would welcome the assistance of a foreign legion, but lack of funds prevents this."

But Wants More Money.

Very clearly General Chen is bidding for more money from Great Britain, in order that he may enlist the large number of Russian white guard monarchist mercenaries to his standard for attacking the Canton government.

That Canton is not wholly tranquil yet, or at pains to conceal its dislike of foreign plotters within its gates, is seen by the anti-British strike which not only continues, but which has laid down a boycott against the whole of the foreign settlement on Shameen Island, refusing to permit the entry of food stuffs to the island.

Hsuchow Fallen to Wu.

News from the north indicates that Chang Tsi-lin has thrown four divisions southward to Tsinan-fu, capital of Shantung province, to save it from the northern advance of troops of Wu Pei-fu who are reported to have taken Hsuchow.

Wu, so it is reported from Hankow, has declared that he is not connected with Communists and Bolshevists, but wants General Feng, whose rather radical, recent utternaces are well-known, to join him against Chang and the Peking traitors.

Cleveland Wade Park Residents Tax Selves in Move to Bar Negro

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 27.—A number of white landowners in the Wade Park district have joined an association and are "taxing" themselves to raise a fund to be used to fight Negroes attempting to buy property and reside in the district.

To Buy Up Property.

At a recent meeting the white people assessed a tax of one-half of one per cent of the value of their property, the fund to be used to buy lots that might otherwise go to Negroes. At the meeting, the white property owners fromed a permanent organization.

Try to Cut Off Charities.

The whites also attempted to put pressure on Negro charities, asking the community fund to withdraw its contributions to Negro charities if Dr. C. H. Garvin, a colored yhysician, did not agree to sell his newly built house "at a reasonable figure."

This proposition was defeated, it being shown that Negroes contributed more money to the Cleveland community fund than was received by Negro charities.

The A. F. of L. and the Unorganized -

By William F. Dunne

THIS is the second of a series of articles on the proceedings of the A. F. of L. convention, which will deal with "The A. F. of L. and International Relations," "The A. F. of L. and the Unorganized Workers," "The A. F. of L. and the Class Struggle," "The A. F. of L. and the Left Wing," "The A. F. of L. and Militarism," etc. The present article will appear in two instalments.

TWO ARTICLES—ARTICLE I.

NO better test can be had of a labor movement than its attitude toward the workers outside its ranks. If it strives to organize them, even in unions that are structurally out of date and without any social outlook other than that of the middle class, it is at least trying to strengthen itself for its daily struggles, is taking its duties as the organizer of the economic power of the workers seriously.

The Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor did not even measure up to this low standard of trade unionism. Its record on the elementary matter of organization of the unorganized is enuf to make every honest trade unionist weep.

BEFORE we take a look at the records of the convention on this matter it will be of value to examine the numerical strength of the American Federation of Labor and its progress in the matter of organization, or lack of it, during the years 1923-25 for the reason that this period was one of great activity in industry many times approaching and once or twice exceeding the boom days of the war era.

From the peak of its numerical strength of 1920, when the report of Secretary Morrison showed a membership of 4,075,000, the A. F. of L. dropped to 3,200,000 in 1922 as a result of the industrial depression followed by the open shop drive.

A REVIVAL of industry began in the latter part of 1922 and by the time the 1923 convention rolled around no trace of the depression remained—except in the A. F. of L. membership rolls.

The report of Secretary Morrison to the 1923 convention showed that, not only had the A. F. of L. failed, during a year of widespread employment, to recover its previous losses but that the losses had continued to the extent of 300,000 members, the report showing a total enrollment of but 2,900,000. (No allowances are made in this article for the padding of membership figures by the affiliated unions in order to retain their voting strength in A. F. of L. conventions—the official figures serve our purposes splendidly.—W. F. D.)

THE industrial revival continued with the exception of short slumps in isolated industries. Economists have been amazed by the vitality shown by American industry and the consumption power of the population but the official membership chart issued by the A. F. of L. shows that in 1924, a further loss of 100,000 members occurred, the enrollment being 2,800,000.

1925 finds American industry still following an upward course. A number of basic industries have exceeded the 1923 figures and in the building and automobile industry there is a real boom. Railroad car loadings have passed all previous figures and altho an immense credit structure has been erected which is making the bankers uneasy and whose toppling will bring disaster, employment is still plentiful. 1925 takes its place with the boom years of 1923, and 1924.

SEC. MORRISON'S report to the Atlantic City convention shows a total membership of 2,878,297, an increase of 78,297, over 1924. But the membership total is still, in round numbers, 322,000 below the 3,200,000 total of 1922.

These are startling facts and sharply visualize the effect upon the labor movement of the lack of a militant organization policy. Additionally significant is the fact that an examination of the membership figures by unions shows that the increase has taken place principally in the building trade unions, unions which work under the closed shop for the most part, in whose industry there is and has been abnormal activity and where the influx of membership is almost automatic with the increase in the number of jobs.

TO put it concisely:

The American Federation of Labor, in three years of great industrial activity, has, according to its own figures, suffered a loss of some 322,000 members besides failing to regain what might be called its normal strength in 1922.

Nothing but sabotage of the ordinary routine of organization can account for such a miserable showing. Labor officialdom is interested far more in "labor" banking, "labor" insurance companies and in war on the left wing than in organization.

THE proceedings of the Atlantic City convention contain a wealth of concrete information revealing the mechanical processes by which organization is hampered or made impossible. It is true that much lip-service is given to questions of organization and an impressive staff of "organizers" is maintained by the A. F. of L. itself and the affiliated national and international unions. In practise, however, these organizers are merely administration boosters who conduct continuous campaigns for the machine in power. Under this system organization has come to mean everything but organization of the unorganized. By its craft divisions the A. F. of L. fosters a situation in which the unions supporting the machine are allowed to prey on its enemies, resulting in perpetual internecine strife that makes any bona fide organization campaign impossible.

SO complicated is the A. F. of L. machine that any resolution on organization can be referred to any one of a dozen committees or lower units and its purpose smothered. This is the constant practice. So well understood is this procedure that any union desiring organizational assistance must ask for the absolute minimum in order to get its resolution concurred in and the minimum is generally meaningless.

A typical example of this is a resolution introduced by the Laundry Workers' International Union at Atlantic City:

That the executive council of the American Federation of Labor be requested to have a letter written to all city central labor unions requesting them to bring to the attention of their organizing committee the possibility of establishing a local unon of laundry workers in their city.

This resolution was concurred in unanimously. The delegate who introduced it can report back to his union that their resolution was adopted. This will be all that will happen because the central bodies know that laundry wagon drivers are claimed by the teamsters and that, altho they are key workers, the moment they are organized in a laundry workers' union, the Teamsters' International Union will put in a jurisdictional demand for them in spite of the fact that the Laundry Workers' Union charter is industrial.

THE office workers resolution is another example of the readiness with which the A. F. of L. grants "organizing" assistance when a pious wish will satisfy the petitioners:

RESOLVED, by this 45th annual convention of the A. F. of L. at Atlantic City, that the affiliated unions render all moral assistance in our organizing campaign.

This resolution was likewise concurred in but nothing was done about the complaint contained in a "whereas" that the international union offices did not make their employes join the office workers union. "Moral assistance," however, costs nothing.

THE Bank Clerks' Union offered a resolution that required a little different treatment. It contained a specific request that might have resulted, if concurred in, in some of the "organizers" having to do a little real organizing:

RESOLVED, That the A. F. of L. appoint special organizers for the year 1926 in the cities of New York, Chicago, Cleveland and Philadelphia to give their full time to organizing the bank clerks and that organization committees be organized of delegates representing the more influential unions in those cities to help in the organizing campaign.

Now watch what happens to this resolution in the resolution committee and the convention. The commitee reports:

Your committee recommends that the resolve be changed to read that organizers be directed to give special attention to the organizing of bank clerks WHEREVER POSSIBLE and that city central bodies be requested to aid in this work.

With this change your committee refers the RESOLUTION TO THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL. (Emphasis Mine—W. F. D.)

The report of the committee was adopted unanimously.

THE machine wielded the club on the organizational aspirations of the Bank Clerks' Union when it eliminated the compulsory features of the resolution, when it gave the "organizers" an alibi by stating "whenever possible," by substituting a request to central bodies instead of the special organizing committee "of the most influential unions," and finally when it referred the whole matter to the executive council.

The banks clerks were lucky to be allowed to keep what little organization they have.

IT is very significant that even the few proposals for organization that are made come from federal labor unions, state federations and city central bodies—the only rank and file representation at A. F. of L. conventions. Such a resolution is the one introduced by the delegate from the North Carolina State Federation of Labor. The wages, living and working conditions of workers, particularly in the textile industry of this state are miserably low. Child labor is prevalent and thousands of women are also employed. The resolution pointed out that "tens of thousands of workers in all lines of industry are unorganized, particularly textile workers," and then resolved:

That the officers and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor use every influence and means possible to bring about the organization of these thousands of industrial workers of North Carolina.

HERE is a resolution that any labor organization could adopt without hesitation; at least so it seems to those unitiated in the mysterious ways of A. F. of L. conventions. But the officials do not want organizing instructions from conventions. If they allowed this resolution to pass some honest delegate might arise at the next convention and inquire why they had done nothing to organize these textile slaves. So the committee reports:

Your committee refers this resolution to the executive council.

The textile workers of North Carolina will remain unorganized and if the delegate from its state federation protests—well, he has only one vote.

So far we have seen glaring instances of sabotage of organizational resolutions coming from small unions and state bodies and dealing with specific details of organization for these unions and localities.

In the next article we shall see to what extent the A. F. of L. convention was interested in national organizing campaigns and also how it treats even large international unions which have incurred the displeasure of the officialdom or which the bosses want to put out of business.

Guardian Taxi-Cab Co. Drivers Win 5 Pct. Raise in Four-Day Strike

A Worker Correspondent

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—All the drivers of the Guardian Taxi corporation have returned to work following an increase in their commission. The men will receive 40% on the dollar instead of 35%.

The strike lasted four days and until this morning not a wheel moved in any of the two garages. On the first day of the strike only 300 drivers walked out. These men were from the East 18th St. garage. When the other drivers at the 122nd street garage heard the news of their fellow workers on strike they also walked out Tuesday morning. 700 men were on strike.

Official of the Taxi Limousine Chauffers' Union Local 643 did nothing to help organize these workers. They were asked three different times, to aid in organizing the workers.

Professor Says Idea U.S.S.R. Is Backward Country Is Erroneous

MOSCOW, Oct. 27.—Professor Kruger, while on a visit in Moscow, said to a correspondent of Pravda:

"People in Europe have a wrong conception of the U. S. S. R. as a backward country: On the contrary, the Soviet government does not spare efforts to raise the level of education and culture in the republic. This is easily seen when on visits to schools, clubs, children's houses and libraries.

"We must note especially the collective education of the younger generation. The rapid growth of education in such a short time is unheard of. The U. S. S. R. is more advanced in this respect than even Germany."

Prof. Kruger also mentioned the especially friendly relations existing between children and teaching staff all over the Soviet Union.

CHICAGO MACHINIST LODGE SENDS PROTEST RESOLUTION TO HORTHY EMBASSY AGAINST WHITE TERROR

At the last meeting of the Freiheit Lodge No. 337, International Association of Machinists of Chicago, the following resolution condemning the Horthy persecution of the Hungarian workers and the attempt to railroad Rakosi to the gallows was adopted:

"Whereas, Mathias Rakosi and over one hundred other workers in Hungary, mostly members of the socialist labor party, have been arrested and submitted to the most terrible forms of torture in prison, and

"Whereas, This new regin of terror in the country which has in recent years ruthlessly suppressed the workers and murdered thousands under Horthy's bloody dictatorship has been accompanied by the usual police-agent 'frame-up' of exposing a 'Bolshevik plot,' in another attempt to crush out the trade unions and other militant workers' organizations; and,

"Whereas, Rakosi and his brother workers are being railroaded thru a court martial and face death sentence and execution any day now, and are denied ordinary civil court procedure, and

"Whereas, The workers of the entire world must show their solidarity against such an outrage and answer the Horthy dictatorship which is kept in power by foreign capitalists, and which tries to suppress and distort the facts,

"Therefore, be it resolved, That Local No. 337 of Machinists' Union vigorously condemns the torture and imprisonment of these Hungarian workers and demands that the court martial, further torture, and prison or death sentences be stopped, and

"Be it further resolved, That we rush this resolution to the Hungarian legation in Washington and the Hungarian consul in Chicago with the request that it be sent to their government; and to the labor press."

SEEK TO WIDEN PASSAIC STRIKE TO MORE MILLS

Young Workers Strike Like Veterans

By ALBERT WEISBORD

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 27.—The three hundred and eighty strikers of the Passaic Worsted Spinning Co. are conducting a heroic struggle to wipe off the wage cuts that the company has forced upon them. Most of the strikers are young boys and girls, some in their teens and some just out of their teens. Their fight has completely taken the company by surprise. The company did not expect that they would show such fine spirit and fight.

The Second Wage Cut

The workers of the Passaic Worsted Spinning Co., are the most poorly paid woolen workers in Passaic. Only last year their wage was cut to $16.80 per week for forty-eight hours and now that is cut to $15.10.

How the company can expect people to live on that wage, nobody knows, and in sheer desperation the workers have struck. The strikers are fighting not only for themselves but they are really fighting for all of the textile workers of Passaic.

The Botany Mills Consolidated Co., employing about 6,400 workers have just cut wages, the Pitkin Spinning Co. has just cut wages, the large Forstmann and Hoffman Co. plants and the New Jersey Spinning Co. employing about 5,000 more workers are planning to cut wages. In such a situation the fight of the small Passaic Worsted Spinning Co. strikes is a fight of all of the workers in Passaic.

Weisbord On the Ground

Albert Weisbord, secretary of the central bureau, United Front Committees of Tetxile Workers has taken charge of the strike. Under his direction order and discipline was established among the strikers, the lies of the bosses were exposed and some organization started. Thirty of the strikers were sent to picket the Pitkin Co. plant and get the workers out there if possible.

Weisbord has stated that the United Front Committees of Textile Workers will strive to broaden and deepen this strike as much as possible. All the workers of Passaic, in the Garfield Mills, in the Botany Mills, in the Spinning Mills, all must support this strike and walk out.

Workers, fight against the fifty-four hour week, fight against wage cuts, fight against the fake mill unions, fight for real mill committees and a real union in the textile industry.

Mass meetings will soon be called to get all the workers in Passaic out.

COOLIDGE WILL MAKE THIRD TRY TO NAME WARREN

Sargent to Resign and Take Senatorship

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Rumors circulating thru the capitol at Washington have it that President Calvin Coolidge will make another attempt to name Charles Beecher Warren as member of his cabinet.

The present Attorney General Sargent is to retire and accept the vacancy to be made by Senator Green who is recuperating from injuries received in a fight with some bootleggers and is expected to resign as senator from Vermont.

Expect to Pass Him Now

The president feels that Warren's nomination will be accepted this time by the senate as two of those who opposed the administration, Ralston of Indiana and Ladd of North Dakota have died. In place of the democrat Ralston, a regular republican machine man has been appointed. No one will be appointed to succeed Ladd of North Dakota.

The first time that Warren's nomination was defeated was a tie vote. General Dawes, organizer of the "Minute Men of the Constitution," slept a little too long that morning, and after further discussion the vote was against Warren.

Whitewash Beet Sugar Trust

The second time the nomination appeared Warren was defeated. Attempts will now be made to renominate him.

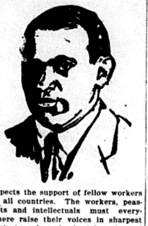
The International Red Aid Calls for Protest Against the Horthy White Terror

THE International Red Aid has issued the following appeal to the peasants, workers and intellectuals:

From the walls of the Budapest police prison there resounds the cries of pain and agony of the tortured Hungarian workers and peasants. The worst terror of Horthy of the years 1919 and 1920 has returned. Hundreds of workers and peasants who were condemned six years ago for participation in the Hungarian Soviet republic are still pining in Hungarian prisons, and Horthy and his government are again seeking for fresh victims from the ranks of the Hungarian proletariat for the dungeon and the gallows. The counter-revolution in Hungary has not slaked its thirst for revenge. Workers and peasants are to be thrown into prison on account of their opinions, and on account of their having participated six years ago in the Soviet republic.

WORKING men and women! You must not tolerate the employment again of the bloody methods of Horthy. The Hungarian working and peasant proletariat expects your help.

Mathias Rakosi



expects the support of fellow workers in all countries. The workers, peasants and intellectuals must everywhere raise their voices in sharpest protest against the brutal regime of violence and torture in Hungary. The Hungarian government must be made to realize that the times are past in which it could exercise undisturbed its reign of terror with the aid of bestial officers' bands and police.

WORKERS, peasants and intellectuals in all countries!

Raise your voice in protest against the brutal persecution and the suppression of the workers' and peasants' movement in Hungary!

Raise your voice in protest against the arrest of workers and peasants and honest and brave labor leaders!

Protest against the special courts and the new blood justice which is being prepared!

Demand at protest meetings and resolutions, which should be sent to the Hungarian government and comrades:

The immediate release of the arrested-

The immediate abandonment of all trials.

The punishment of those responsible for the mishandlings and tortures.

The unrestricted right of combination for the Hungarian workers and peasants*

ROUMANIAN FEDERATION MEET BACKS PARTY REORGANIZATION

At a conference held on Sunday, October 11, of a group of leading comrades of the Roumanian section of the Workers (Communist) Party, special steps were taken regarding reorganization.

We herewith reprint the resolution which was adopted by the Roumanian comrades endorsing reorganization:

"Due to the composition of the working class of America, wherein a great number of workers are foreign-born and divided in different nationalities, the Workers Party of America is of necessity composed of different federations.

Federation Outworn Form

"The federation form of organization, having served the purpose of uniting the class conscious elements, cannot function properly in participating in the politcal struggles.

"Based on this experience, the Workers Party of America has decided on its reorganization on the basis of shop nuclei, and has adopted a centralized form of organization, instead of the present form of federations. Realizing however the necessity for propaganda and education being carried on among the foreign-born workers, provisions are made for the formation of workmen's clubs, in place of the present language branches.

"The representatives of the Roumanian Federation of the Workers Party of America, meeting in special conference, Sunday, October 11, 1925, approved the program for reorganization, and decided that:

Join Shop of Street Nucleus

"1. The members of the federation are to be immediately attached to a shop or street nucleus. The federation shall be considered as attached to the party, and workmen's clubs shall be organized in place of branches.

"2. These clubs are to be connected with the administration of the paper Desteptarea for the purpose of supervising their activities.

"3. The purpose of these clubs is to promote the interests of the Roumanian workers of America, to carry on educational work on the basis of the class struggle, amongst the Roumanian workers.

"4. Way and means of carrying out the education among the Roumanian workers is by supporting and widely circulating the official organ of the Roumanian section, the Desteptarea and by distributing educational literature among the Roumanian workers.

Carry On All Activities

"General activities, such as public meetings, educational lectures, conferences, etc., and social gatherings, the arranging of theater plays, singing groups, sports, etc., as a means of recreation, and broadening the general knowledge of the Roumanian workers, are to be employed also.

"The activities of the clubs will be carried on independent of any political party, and therefore any worker can become a member of the club, regardless of his or her political opinion, so long as he or she supports and adheres to the class struggle, and is for the emancipation of the working class."

FORDS SEEK PERMISSION OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE BODY TO ACQUIRE RAILROAD

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Henry Ford applied to the interstate commerce commission for permission to acquire the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railway, the estimated value of which was $13,022,837 on March 31 last.

Control would be acquired by the purchase by Ford of 63,763 shares of common and 59,326 shares of preferred stock in the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton railway.

At the same time, the auto king asked the commission for authority to issue 123,088 shares of common stock, par value $100, and $10,[illegible],500 worth of first mortgage, 5 per cent bonds, on the Detroit & Ironton railway, which he has owned for several years.

The proposed bond issue will be absorbed entirely by the Ford family—Henry, Edsel and Mrs. Clara J. Ford—at par, and would be exchanged for securities of equal value in the new road, the Detroit, Toledo & Ironton.

PITTSBURGH WORKERS PARTY TAKES UP REORGANIZATION TASKS AT MEMBERSHIP MEET

PITTSBURGH, Oct., 26.—On October 18, a city membership meeting for the purpose of taking up concretely the question of reorganization of the party was held in Pittsburgh.

More than one hundred comrades were present and were registered, in accordance with the provisions of the national organization department. A special committee was chosen to follow up and secure the registration of all those party members who happened to be absent from this meeting.

There were some members who failed to come to this meeting, due to the fact that they had been previously excused for other special party work.

The meeting was considered an all round success and a good beginning for the reorganization of the party in this city. The intention is to complete the reorganization within two weeks time.

A committee is also at work classifying the registration blanks and preparing for the organization of shop nuclei. Comrades who cannot be attached to shop nuclei will be organized into various street nuclei. Definite meeting dates will be arranged for each of the new party units. No difficulty is expected in the process of reorganization.

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—The coast guard cutter Acushnet, a seaplane and two patrol boats were searching the waters off the Maine coast near Rockland, for trace of three men in a dory, while their disabled three masted schooner, the J. D. Webster was being towed into Rockland by the coast guard cutter Red Wing, according to an announcement at the coast guard headquarters here.

RUSSIAN SECTION IS MOBILIZING UNITS TO SAVE DAILY WORKER

The central bureau of the Russian section of the Workers (Communist) Party of America has unanimously adopted the following resolution, as an appeal to its branches to come to the aid of The DAILY WORKER:

"The Communit press is a powerful means of reaching thousands and thousands of workers, with the real news from the trenches of the class struggle, and with the message of Leninism.

"In this country we have about 26 such Communist papers. But the most important of all these papers is our DAILY WORKER—the only Communist daily in the English language in the world.

"Comrades, The DAILY WORKER must be supported not only by our English speaking membership. Our Russian comrades, as well as all other language sections comrades, together with the English speaking comrades, must take the responsibility for the maintenance of our chief organ. The DAILY WORKER which is the main source of Communist propaganda in this country.

"Comrades, our DAILY WORKER—the weapon that protects the working class against the bosses, is in danger!

"Thru our great efforts and sacrifices, we established The DAILY WORKER. We received with joy the first issue of our daily. It is up to us now to keep the daily going. We must enlist not only the entire party membership, but also workers who are not yet members of the party to help The DAILY WORKER as the organ of their class. The DAILY WORKER belongs to those who toil. It is they, the workers, who will sacrifice their hard earned pennies to keep it alive!

"Comrades! Are you ready? The DAILY WORKER depends on you!

"The Russian section has designated November as the Red Month of agitation and propaganda for the purpose of getting new members into the ranks of the party, for the purpose of rallying the Russian workers around the Novy Mir and The DAILY WORKER.

"The bureau calls upon its branches not to wait until November to get financial support for The DAILY WORKER. Do it now. Our daily needs funds now.

"During the coming week, our slogan must me:

"Every member of the Russian section to the support of The DAILY WORKER! Long Live the only English daily of the Comintern!"

KANSAS CITY, MO., UNIONS WELCOME PURCELL MESSAGE

Realize Need of Unity Among Labor Unions

KANSAS CITY, Mo. Oct. 27—Marked interest has been shown by Locals when the committees told them who Purcell was and that his subject was 'World Trade Union Unity.' Barney McCoy and R. Eastwood, business representative of the Meat Cutters' Local, have been canvassing the unions that have met at the Labor Temple and have had commendable success.

A big turn out is expected for the meeting November 4th, when Bill Green, president of the A. F. of L. spoke here some months ago at a well advertised meeting among unionist he had an overflowing crowd of some two hundred people. Response in this city must be gauged from a relative standpoint. The local interest is keeping pace with the nearness of the date and workers are looking forth to a threat of their lives.

Some trade unionists do not know what it is all about from a world standpoint but they realize the necessity of unity from a local standpoint, for the craft disputes are breaking the solidarity that must exist for workers to maintain and advance their position. They see it from a local standpoint in spite of the false leadership and they will understand it from a world standpoint when they have it presented to them by A. A. Purcell, next Wednesdy at the Labor Temple.

The committees first choice for the chairman is Frank P. Walsh national prominent lawyer.

JUDGES ASSIST RAIL COMPANY TO BOOST FARES

An injunction was granted to the Chicago & Northwestern railway restraining the Illinois commerce commission or any other state body from interfering with the collection of the increased suburban passenger fares now effective on the roads.

Judges James H. Wilkerson, A. B. Anderson and Adam C. Cliffe granted the company a temporary injunction upholding the fare increase which the company had been granted by the interstate commerce commission.

When the company appealed to the Illinois commerce commission for a ware increase last year, claiming that the road would have a deficit of $12,000,000 if an increase in rates was not granted, the Illinois commission after investigating the company's demand decided that the fare increase was uncalled for and refused to grant it. The company then went before the interstate commerce commission, where they received an order allowing them to boost fares.

The state attorney contended that the judge could not issue the order as the fare increase was not an interstate problem but an intrastate. The judge waved aside all objections and a temporary injunction was granted. The date for arguing the permanent injunction has not been set.

Saw Light on S-51.

BOSTON, Oct. 27.—Twenty minutes before the steamship City of Rome rammed and sank the submarine S-51, with a loss of 33 lives, the captain of the liner and his first officer at the wheel observed the lights of the undersea boat.

This was the gist of the testimony given at the naval inquiry into the disaster by Timothy L. Drier, third officer of the City of Rome, a resident of Savannah, Ga.

NEW YORK HAS NINETY PER CENT ATTENDANCE AT FUNCTIONARIES' MEET ON PARTY REORGANIZATION

The organization department has received a very encouraging report from the New York city reorganization commission.

We quote in part:

"Held four out of six functionaries' conferences and our percentage of attendance was 70. The Finnish branch functionaries, as well as the functionaries from the main branches attended. The 10% which did not attend are the tiny brancehs and we will take care of them. Last night two more sections met and I believe the same attendance occured.

"We gave them the enclosed material and a copy of the registration card. The committee decided to begin registration in branches during the week October 25th to November 8th and to complete registration at the section meetings. We feel that this gives us better success in registration without interfering in any arrangement; especially is this so, for if we were to get mobilization of the membership for the meetings, the comrades who visit them at the homes can at the same time get their registration. To facilitate registration, we asked the financial secretaries to fill out the names and addresses of the comrades. This will give us clearly the names and addresses. We also asked them to fill out, first of all, the place of employment, as this is the most essential bit of information.

"We divided the city into eleven sections. This is an industrial division of the city and insures as nearly as possible good working areas. To these sections we have the comrades assigned according to the directions contained on form 4. This form is given to functionaries, but we are going to print it and send it to every individual member. We are arranging to have section meetings during the one week of November 16 to 23rd, excluding the 17th which is the date of the big mass meeting. We will begin a big bombardement in our press to make these meetings successful.

"We believe the sections are so divided as to give us about 200 members per section. We are organizing forty comrades, training them in shop nuclei work so that at the section meetings they can at the same time form shop nuclei. We have also asked the financial secretaries to give us a certified list of members which will be a control sheet and in the remarks column we have asked that they give us the standing of the members. Thus we will be able to push dues at the same time."

Stage Has Been Set for Mitchell's Trial by U. S. Army Heads

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27—The stage for the court martial of Col. William Mitchell, on charges of conduct "prejudicial to good order and military discipline," has been set.

Eight of the twelve ranking army generals who will hold the military future of the "flying colonel" in their hands arrived in Washington.

The four other members of the court, including Major General Chas. P. Summerall, its president, are expected here.

THERE'S ABOUT A MILLION EAT HOUSES LIKE IT

But It's Time to Get 'Em Organized

By JOHN PERRIDES,
Worker Correspondent.

In one of the west side restaurants we Greek workers work long hours for scant wages. Almost all of us have to put in a full day's work and a hard one, but above all the porter and the dish washers get the most enslaving work I ever saw.

The dish washers get sixteen dollars per week, and specially the day shift is the hardest of all. These poor slaves have to wash all the dishes, and when through with that, they have to peel on the average of a bushel and a quarter of potatoes every day.

Pile on the Misery.

That is a day's work itself and then a quarter bushel of onions, carrots, celery, then extra pots and cans to be washed yet.

Sometimes they are so tired that when the chef calls them to eat they are too exhausted, but have to stuff food down or else go without, because, after dinner (which is only 15 minutes to rest while eating, too) most of these poor devils get some more dishes, pots and so on to wash, some more potatoes to peel, to sweep the kitchen, scrub the floor—this last with all their strength.

When they get through with this they can start with the busy supper period until they get off at 6:30 or 8 p. m. according to shift.

This place does good business, but the bosses are still kicking because they are dreaming of the time during the war when they rolled in money.

The Boss Should Worry!

Pay day is Tuesday, but last week we had to wait till Thursday night to get our miserable wages, because the boss was out for a good time with a girl. When he came back to the place he didn't excuse himself for the delay, although one of the workers was in bad need of money and had to walk home because he didn't have carfare.

Such are the conditions in the Greek restaurants. Why? Because of lack of organization and understanding among Greek workers. I wish once more to see a mighty union in the Greek restaurants, so we can breathe liberty and see better conditions and live as human beings—not like slaves.

Still Seek K. K. K. Jury.

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Oct. 27.—The third week of the trial of D. C. Stephenson, former K. K. K. dragon, Earl Gentry and Earl Klinck, accused of murder in connection with the death of Miss Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis, last March, opened here today with both defense and state attorneys trying in vain to agree on the last two jurors.

Ten veniremen had been tentatively selected when court convened this morning, with the third hundred prospective jurymen rapidly being excused. Judge Will M. Sparks, presiding as special magistrate, ordered a fourth venire of 100 today, the first of whom will be summoned into court tomorrow, should the attorneys fail to select the final two during the day.

INTERNATIONAL TAILORING COMPANY STRIKERS RECEIVE FINANCIAL AID FROM AMALGAMATED UNION MEMBERS

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—The entire membership of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union thruout the country is mobilizing against the twin International Tailoring Co. and J. L. Tailoring Co. of New York, Chicago, Moline and Rock Island, says a statement from union headquarters here. This national support has already evidenced itself in a $10,000 check from Rochester, an advance of the $2 per member assessment there; in a $500 advance from Cleveland, where the union members assessed themselves $1 each and in the $2 assessment of the New York cutters.

The strikes, now in their fifth month, have been featured by an injuction writ in New York that outdid all but a few previous injunctions in their severity; by scores of arrests by raids in Chicago where police broke into union headquarters dragging out officials and by the moral support of many American Federation of Labor unions. This support, however, has been in part set off by the course taken by the United Garment Workers' Union, the original men's clothing union from which the Amalgamated sprung, in making an agreement in Chicago with the struck firm and attempting to have the work done by the members of its own union.

Strassburger Threatens Coolidge He Will Be Pennsylvania Senator

NORRISTOWN, Pa. Oct. 27.—Ralph Beaver Strassburger, who married the Singer sewing machine millions, is threatening the Coolidge administration that he will run for senator with the intention of making things unpleasant for Kool Kautious Kal because of the latter's indorsement of the Secretary of State Kellogg's barring the Countess Catherine Karolyi from the United States. Strassburger had invited the countess to come to his palatial residence in Norristown for a visit, but the state secretary refused to allow her to enter.

"I will teach these frightened old chumps a lesson, I will run for senator next year," declared Strassburger. "Pepper wants to be re-elected. Pinchot will run against him as a dry. I will run against him as a wet and a regular. When I ran for delegate at large last year, the Vare organization got behind me and I beat Pinchot hands down."

Boss Vare at present is on the outs with the Pepper-Mellon crowd and is looking around for someone to be candidate who will be able to spend a goodly sum of money. The efficiency of the Vare machine has just been disclosed in the opening of ballot boxes in 51 Philadelphia districts, where in a three-cornered fight these districts reported an identical number of votes for the Vare candidate, identical totals in all districts for the democratic candidates and zeros for the independent candidates.

Strassburger contributed between one and two million dollars to the republican party slush fund in Pennsylvania during the last presidential elections.

SPANISH TROOPS FLEE ADJIR AS RIFFS ATTACK

Invaders Retreat as City Burns

PARIS, Oct. 27.—Spain's much heralded victory at Alhucemas Bay and the capture of the Riffian stronghold of Adjir have faded. The occupation of Adjir was over almost as soon as it was started.

The Spanish troops in that sector are in desperate straits. This was the information reaching Paris today from Melilla, Spanish Morocco.

Military circles admit that the Spanish troops no longer occupy Ajdir. The only territory which Spain has been able to hold after her domination of the whole Alhucemas Bay section is a strip five kilometers long and three kilometers wide, where 16,000 troops are cut off from any provisions and water except those brought them by boat.

The Spanish evacuation of Ajdir started the day after the sacking and the burning of the town, which was deserted by the Riffians before the Spanish entered. The Spanish then retired to the heights dominating Ajdir from the northwest, while the Riffs have retaken the town from the south and east.

French Lose Artillery.

GIBRALTAR, Oct. 27.—The French lost four complete batteries thru a determined Riffian attack near the junction of the Spanish-French forces on the eastern front. The Riffs would have completely defeated the French in this sector if it had not been for the arrival of bombing planes. With the aid of the bombing planes, the French were able to regain three cannon. Before the Riffs retreated leaving the cannon, they were put out of operation.

Take Spanish Post.

On the same night a Spanish outpost in the Alhucemas sector was attacked by Riffians dressed in the uniform of the Spanish native troops. The occupants of the post, belonging to the foreign legion, were holding a concert and were completely surprised.

The whole garrison of forty-six men were killed, with the exception of the lieutenant in command. The Spanish losses around Alhucemas are officially reported as 1,000.

The Riffians are waiting windstorms which will prevent support from the sea, before launching an attack on the Alhucemas.

Violent Storms Sweep Spain.

MADRID, Oct. 27. — All of west Spain was swept by violent storms over the week-end, according to reports reaching the capital today. Property loss was enormous, but no casulaties were reported.

'LABOR' BANKS GET THE BOOT IN HODCARRIERS

Local 113, Milwaukee, Rejects the Plan

By GREGORY PRODANICH
Worker Correspondent.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 27.—The report of delegates from the Federated Trades Council to Local 113, Hod Carriers, Building and Common Laborers, gave an impetus to hot discussion on the question of a "labor banking system" which is to be organized in Madison, Wis.

The minute the delegates reported, one of the militants got the floor and explained to the rest of the rank and file the real meaning of the so-called "labor" banking system. The militant, in his short talk gave a very clear explanation of relations between the West Virginia mines, which are owned by B. of L. E. members, and the U. M. W. of A.

The mines that are owned by the Brotherhood are scab mines bought with money from the B. of L. E. Bank, and there is constant friction and struggle with the U. M. W. of A. The U. M. W. tried to organize these mines but without any success. This example showed that the money which is invested in production from these banks do not help the workers a single iota, quite the contrary.

The labor fakers that are supposed to represent the workers are drawing 10, 15 and 20 thousand dollars a year. These "fat boys" do not represent the interest of rank and file because they are simply parasites on the hides of the workers who are paying their fat salaries.

Local Votes Against Labor Banking.

After a discussion on labor banking, a motion was made by one of the left wingers to repudiate the labor banking system in toto thruout the country.

The motion was carried without any opposition, which proves that the membership is growing tired of class collaboration of various kinds, "labor banking systems," etc.

Plain rank and filers are beginning to see that the only solution from wage slavery lies, not in "labor banking," but in abolition of private property in the means of production upon which the wage slavery is based.

Elect New Chairman.

On new business a motion was made to declare the president's chair vacant and elect a new chairman. The faker that was defeated tried to prove that he is also in favor of progress by making the following declaration to one of the militant members of the union: "Amalgamation would be all right, but the leaders of the trade union movement—Green, Lewis, etc.—are smart people and as long as they are not in favor of amalgamation we can't do anything."

The militant member asked him in reply: "But suppose the rank and file demands the amalgamation, what would the 'smart' leaders do?"

Right after the election of a new local president, the militant was on the job and sold the new chairman a pamphlet "Struggle of the Trade Unions Against Fascism." At the meeting there was sold $1.20 worth of various kinds of pamphlets issued by the Trade Union Educational League.

The field for revolutionary activity is very broad and fertile. Only patience and constant activity will bring results. Get on the job, comrades!

PERSECUTION OF WORKING CLASS ARTISTS AND WRITERS CONTINUES UNABATED IN GERMAN REPUBLIC

BERLIN, Oct. 27.—The German democratic justice apparently strives to bring about again times like those of Metternich, the times of the most ruthless censorship and absolutism, and to suppress every free move in art and literature. The only modernization of the persecutions is the purely external alteration of the proceedings. Censorship is replaced by the guillotine of justice which is even more deadly. The confiscations of radical literature and works of art, the persecution and arrest of revolutionary artists and writers becomes more and more the daily method of suppression in Germany.

The most extraordinary case in this respect is that of the actor Rolf Gaertner. He had recited in a celebration of the Russian Revolution in November, 1924, poetry of Mackay, Muehsam, Kanehl and others, which one can buy in every bookstore legally. Despite this, he was accused before the state supreme court for violation of the law for the protection of the republic and was sentenced to one year and three months imprisonment. As this action had been committed after October, 1923, his case was not included in the amnesty and the actor, who has fallen ill during his imprisonment, has to serve his sentence.

This particularly shocking case does not stand alone. The writer Raichle was arrested together with all the actors because he had written and produced a play "The Red Smiths," and the whole furniture was confiscated in Uroch. Raichle remained some months in prison and was later released on bail. He is being accused of incitement against and violation of the law for the protection of the republic.

The poets Johannes R. Becher and Erich Muehsam are also accused of high treason and violation of the law for the protection of the republic; the first because of his book "The Corpse on the Throne" and the latter because of his collection of poems "Revolution—Songs of Struggle, Mockery and Marching." Becher was arrested during his vacation in Urach in Wuertemberg and released only after large bourgeois circles joined the protest of the workers.

The managers of the bookstores "Viva" and "Junge Garde," boht in Berlin, were accused of high treason because they had exhibited in their bookstores books which were alleged to incite to high treason, but which, up to the present, are neither confiscated nor prohibited.

This shameful persecution of art and literature in Germany, shows how far the white terror dares already to go. The workers of Germany and their revolutionary organizations are fighting energetically against these persecutions in order to prevent the most reactionary period in the history of the German empire to repeat itself in the so-called democratic German republic.

AMALGAMATED MEMBERS! HAVE YOU BEEN "READJUSTED" YET?

(By Worker Correspondent)

I was talking to a worker from the Alfred Decker and Cohen company of Chicago today, he was very peeved. The shop chairman had been removed, the crimes committed by the chairman he did not exactly know, as no one from the shop had been called in as witness by the so-called impartial chairman, all he knew was that he had been canned as chairman.

However, on questioning this rather angry rank and filer many interesting points were uncovered. It seems that some three weeks ago under the pretext of a re-adjustment a section of the workers in this firm had received a very decided wage cut. This so incensed the workers of which there are nearly 200, that in a shop meeting they passed a resolution protesting against the wage cut. This resolution was passed over the decision of the business agent who declared it out of order.

Shop Chairman Forbidden to Aid Workers.

The chairman of the shop remained neutral in the matter. The question arises was his neutrality the cause of his removal. He has been three years chairman, was never considered a progressive, but the state of affairs in the Amalgamated at present is that chairmen, although elected by the workers in the shop, must enter into the class collaboration (co-operation with the employer) or lose his job as chairman.

The present wage cut now taking place in Chicago, under the pretense of a re-adjustment, is a well planned out affair. It is a continuous process. This season one section of the trade receives a wage cut, the other section either received it last season or will the next.

This keeps the workers divided. The section whose wages have not been cut does not feel the same degree of interest as the one who have. It is a merry bosses' game.

The members of the union are, however, beginning to wake up to what is being put over on them. It is hoped that the resolution passed by the workers of the Alfred Decker & Cohen company will be taken up by the local union and a real fight made against the wage cuts that is now being put into effect by the employers and with the approval of the Amalgamated officials.

Federal Employes Ask Congress to Raise the Old Age Pension Sums

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Demands by all unions of federal employes for an old age retirement pension of $1,200 a year in place of the $720 now permitted by law, are embodied in a bill approved by a legislative conference of officials of these unions at A. F. of L. headquarters.

SILK WORKERS' UNIONS SET UP UNITED FRONT

But Officials Ignore Need of Militancy

By ALBERT WEISBORD.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 27.—Some time ago the Associated Silk Workers' Union of Paterson established a temporary united front with the United Textile Workers' Union for the purpose of maintaining the forty-four hour week which is now being threatened by the bosses.

Blames the Unorganized.

The joint conference set up by the two unions called a mass meeting Thursday, October 15th, where several speakers talked on the maintenance of the forty-four hour week. The first speaker was that cheap labor skate, MacMahon, president of the A. F. of L. union the United Textile Workers. He talked not like a fellow worker but like a banker or cheap politician to his "friends."

Instead of analyzing the true situation in the textile industry, MacMahon confined himself almost solely to a tirade against the unorganized worker. He said that it is not the capitalist class that is the parasite but the unorganized workers. Nothing was said as to a class struggle against the bosses. All he did was to heap abuse on those who had not come into the organizations of silk workers, calling them simps and parasites.

No Fighting Message.

The other speakers, both of the Associated Silk Workers, the independent union, and of the United Textile Workers, also failed to give the workers present a true picture of the state of affairs. None of them spoke in a militant vein, none of them carried home the message of fight to the workers.

One gave a lecture on why people should be in the union for it means, if all stick together, that they are stronger than if they act individually. Another spoke that the forty-four hour week was "the greatest dream" "the pinnacle" of the workers thoughts and that it would be too bad if it were lost.

Not one of the speakers of the unions seemed to realize that the workers in the audience did not have to be "educated" that the eight-hour day is better than the ten-hour day, that they had come to hear speeches denouncing the bosses and pledging an active militant campaign against those bloodsuckers, the mill owners. The speakers actually insulted the intelligence of the audience.

The only speaker that showed in his talk the spirit of class struggle was the speech of the Communist, Salzman. He pointed out that it was very clear that the eight-hour day is better than the ten-hour day and that long and dull speeches on this question was foolish. What was necessary was for the worker to understand that this fight against the boss for the maintenance of the forty-four hour week was only the first step in the fight to crush the bosses entirely.

Salzman showed that in the needle trades a new left wing spirit had come into being and it was this spirit that was forcing the leaders of unions, A. F. of L. and independent to show more fight against the bosses. It was this way that the unorganised would rally to the ranks of the organised. Salzman called for an end of petty fights between small unions and for one united union in the textile industry.

Build the DAILY WORKER

Letters from Our Readers

To The DAILY WORKER:—To read The DAILY WORKER every day, to see the struggle that it is carrying every day for the workers and against the capitalists, to see the spirit which it is holding up, to know the reason and the idea for which it stands, and with this all, to know the bitterness and the difficulties which it has to pass in order to reach the purpose for which it exists, i. e., to know that in order to help us, fight for us, it needs our help, our support, to know all of these and yet to not respond to its call, to not take part in its rescue from dangerous crises, seems to be impossible for me.

I see the danger right ahead of me that might come out as the result of the crises that The DAILY WORKER might not be able to overcome unless we believers in it help it to. I see the danger and therefore, I feel too, that I have to do my very best to take part in the action necessary to save The DAILY WORKER.

Here I enclose a money order of 3.15. It is my one successful week's arning, very little for the purpose, ut that is all what I could do for the resent. This is my response to one of the three slogans raised by The DAILY WORKER and that one is "Buy a book." So please, send me he books listed below. I believe that hese books will be a great help to me in the fight that I have to carry. They will be a great pleasure and satisfaction for me until the time when again will be able to send for more books.

In connection with this I call to all our comrades, worker brothers and sympathizers to devote at least one day's earning for The DAILY WORKER, no matter how much it is, taking one of the slogans that they may please.

I am making this call with the hope that all those who have been intolerably suffering and still suffer under the yoke of the capitalist system, those who like to see The DAILY WORKER in its full strength to fight for the workers and against the capitalists, who have been living and still are living and enjoying the life on account of the toilers' blood, will respond to it.

Comrades, this is a moment that our party press, which has done and is doing its best to fight for us, really needs our help, and that is to continue the fight more intensively, more energetically until the capitalist system exists no longer and a workers' government takes the place.

Long live the fighting spirit of the workers.

Down with capitalism.

Long live the workers' and peasants' government.

Fraternally yours, V. S. D.

WILLIMANTIC STRIKERS, EVICTED, VAINLY WAIT FOR AID OF A. F. OF L.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILLIMANTIC, Conn., Oct. 27.—The strikers against the American Thread Co. who are in the 34th week of their fight are feeling the cold and wondering where they will live during the winter. About 2,500 workers struck and those who were evicted from company houses went into a tent colony erected by the United Textile Workers.

The tents are too cold for further occupancy and the strikers are waiting for aid to get warmer winter quarters. Some of them have been provided for in houses but many are in need. They had expected the American Federation of Labor to assist them in building temporary houses. But nothing has been done at Atlantic City, however, but pass motions to "investigate" and extend "sympathy" to these heroic strikers.

Polluted at the Source

That exceedingly modest journal, the Chicago Tribune, that carries on its first page the legend "The World's Greatest Newspaper," proves its greatness and accuracy by obtaining its information regarding the American Negro Labor Congress, now in session, from a Negro stoolpigeon factory, the Bruseaux concern, known as the Keystone Detective Agency.

With this reliable gentleman and scholar as its authority the paranoic editors depict the congress as manipulated from Moscow.

Tho representatives of the Negro workers from all parts of the United States participate in the congress, the Tribune says "the better classes of Negroes are spurning the advances of the red agents."

Unquestionably the "better classes," the ward heeling politicians, the skypilots, the voodoo doctors, fortune tellers and the vendors of black magic that prey upon the backward elements among the Negroes spurn this assemblage, for the simple reason that among other tasks the congress, by bringing the Negro workers to a realization of their position as workers, will raise their intellectual level so they will no longer be victimized by these "best people" of their own race. This eventuality would not only eliminate these parasites, but with them those who prey as parasites upon them, the private detective agencies.

If the Tribune hopes to attain even a moderate degree of greatness as a newspaper, its first task is to learn how to gather news from reliable sources, instead of cheap hirelings of the type of Bruseaux, who would not be tolerated even in an Ananias club. Such "news" as he furnishes is polluted at its source.

As for the congress, tho a first step toward bringing the Negro masses into the American labor struggle, it is a landmark in the development of the labor movement and of the Negro race.

Labor Bankers and Trade Unions

When the late Warren S. Stone, head of the Engineers' Union and one of the first champions of labor banking in this country, was fighting the United Mine Workers of America in order to operate scab mines in which he was interested, the officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union joined the general denunciation of such tactics.

Now we have the spectacle of a vice-president of the Amalgamated Bank of Chicago and a member of the general executive board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union instructing a group of bank clerks, members of the executive committee of the Bank Clerks' Union, to expel Joseph Shafir for the "crime" of presenting progressive resolutions at the Atlantic City convention of the American Federation of Labor.

Intimidation of other clerks in the bank was resorted to in order to get rid of Shafir.

The expulsion of Joseph Shafir, who was president of the union, and the intimidation of others, is equivalent to wrecking the organization. Vice-President Mariempetri resents the institution of which he is one of the heads being forced to recognize union conditions. Like the late Mr. Stone, he is an enemy of labor organizations that interfere with the conduct of his business.

Perhaps the most contemptible incident in connection with the attack on Shafir was the effort to hush up the matter after we had started to arouse the membership of the Amalgamated against this outrage, by the vice-president informing Shafir that if he kept quiet he might remain in the bank until January 1.

One question inevitably arises: Is the Amalgamated Bank so closely tied up with big banking houses that it must follow the union smashing policy of capitalism? And, if so, how long will it be before it will be used against the interests of the very union that created it?

The membership would do well to start an investigation of the motive behind this anti-union drive.

Make the Coal Strike Effective

The Progressive Miners' Committee has issued an open letter to John L. Lewis that, if adopted, will make the strike in the anthracite effective and bring the mine barons to their knees. One of the outstanding demands is to make the strike effective by bringing out the maintenance men, whom Lewis now permits to stay in the mines and keep them in condition so the owners' sacred property will not be damaged thru neglect. Lewis, who in reality plays the operators' game, places their property above the interest and even the very lives of the men in the union he is supposed to defend. In a demagogic appearance before a miners' convention he sheds tears over the slaughter of men in the mines, but when it comes to putting up a real fight for the miners, he proves in action that his sympathy is with the bosses.

Another demand of first importance is that Lewis appeal to the railroad workers to refuse to haul coal while the strike lasts.

Putting forth these demands and the other progressive planks has the advantage, not of convincing Lewis, but of proving to the membership of the United Mine Workers' Union that the official machine is a tool of the employers and bringing out in bold relief the difference between the tactics of a leadership representing the interests of the rank and file and the reactionary lackeys of the capitalists.

The coal strike can be made effective by the rank and file forcing the maintenance men out. If Lewis will not call them out, they should be treated as scabs by the membership and forced out, against the mine owners' pleas and in spite of Lewis.

The president of the United States is very liberal with his speeches. His latest was before the international convention of the Y. M. C. A. in Washington. He told that eminently patriotic organization, that sold for cold cash goods contributed free to boys at the front during the war, that the youth of the country needs more control at home thru parental action. From the antics of these christians during the war their parents must have all been pickpockets and porch climbers, fit candidates for cabinet posts in the Coolidge government.

Senator Borah and the World Court - -

By H. M. Wicks

THE line-up in the senate and house of congress against the foreign policy of the Coolidge administration reveals a sharp crisis in the republican party. This crisis is due to the fact that the republican party itself is in a period of transition. Certainly the fact that Senator Borah, chairman of the foreign relations committee, assails the foreign policies of the administration, and the fact that he has behind him a formidable group of republicans in both houses of congress is evidence of a serious conflict within that party.

The political basis of the struggle is the question of the United States entering the world court. Coolidge and the stalwarts of the party in the east support the proposition of the entrance of this country into the court. In this stand they are supported by most of the democrats in both houses.

What does this alignment of forces imply? Does it mean that Coolidge, thru his superior political leadership, has caused the majority of the democratic statesmen to flock to the support of his foreign policy? It means nothing of the sort. Quite the contrary. The republican party has, in its foreign policy, gone very far on the road toward the democratic party. And it is not Coolidge and Dawes and Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania who uphold the traditions of the republican party, but the so-called insurgents, under the leadership of Sen. Borah.

BEFORE it is possible to understand the present alignment it is necessary to look back to the aftermath of the world war. When Woodrow Wilson returned from the peace table in Europe he brought with him for ratification the covenant of the league of nations and the treaty of Versailles. These two documents contained the hopes and aspirations of the House of Morgan. They represented the ambitious dream of world imperialism whereby a group of powerful bankers would systematize their predatory expeditions and eventually bring the earth under their domination. Morgan had invested heavily in the war on the side of the entente and had won. The league covenant furnished the theoretical basis for consolidation of the victory. Henceforth the foreign policy of the United States was to be the defender of Wall Street as it extended its tenacles to all parts of the world.

Versailles was the goal toward which the democratic party had been striving since 1910 when the House of Morgan rescued it from the stagnant swamp in which it was vegetating as the party of the small business class. Every act of the leaders of the democratic party since that time was in the interest of Morgan. The journeys of Woodrow Wilson to Versailles as the representative of the banking combines symbolized the triumph of Morgan. Everywhere thruout Europe Wilson, concealing his aggressive imperialism under the cloak of pacifist phrases, was hailed as the savior of the world. No one ever stopped to consider the possibility of a struggle against ratification of the "triumph of the ages"—the league and the treaty.

BUT no sooner had the documents been adopted than a storm broke in the United States. In the senate the first gun was fired by a republican, Medill McCormick. It was the first salute of the battle that ripped the halo off the war president and sent into the discard the treaty and the league. It was the challenge of industrial capital to finance-capital—and industrial capital won the battle in 1919 and 1920. But its victory was evanescent.

McCormick, the representative of the harvester trust of which his family is the head, insisted that the government refrain from further participation in European affairs and that the development of the western hemisphere be the objective of American policy. He pointed to the Argentine and the South American republics as the logical spheres of penetration for American capital. Senator Borah threw his support to McCormick and waged such a spectacular struggle that he soon became the outstanding champion of the anti-Wilson forces. Henry Cabot Lodge, representing the New England textile industries, presented legal arguments against further participation in European affairs. As the fight became acute, the entire republican party was mobilized on the one issue: "Smash the league and the treaty!"

INDUSTRIAL capital saw a menace in the schemes of finance-capital to involve this country into the affairs of Europe. If European industry were revived so that the terms of the treaty could be carried out it meant serious competition for American industrial products. The ideological cloak was a harking back to the famous dictum of George Washington: No entangling alliances.

Defeated in the senate, Wilson carried the issue into the presidential elections of 1920. The candidate of the republican party was Warren G. Harding, whose "concourse of best minds" assailed the league in the famous front porch campaign in Marion, Ohio. The candidate of Morgan was James M. Cox, an obscure newspaper publisher of Dayton, Ohio, who upheld the Versailles pacts.

Harding was nominated by Elbert H. Gary and the Standard Oil interests who controlled the republican convention. The outcome of the election was a landslide in repudiation of the league and the treaty. Industrial capital had won.

AT that time the present writer, reviewing the results of the election, analyzed the defeat of finance-capital, but added the prediction that the rapid ascendency of finance-capital over industrial America would eventually force the republican party into a crisis wherein it would have to yield to the demands of the Wall Street banking houses. And that prediction proved to be correct, because it was based upon a correct estimation of the economic trend in this country.

The United States Steel corporation, altho its board of directors under Gary were closely linked with the House of Morgan, defended the stand of the industrialist group against the league. The railroad magnates, the automobile interests, the packers, the textiles, in fact most of the industrialists backed the republicans in their stand.

AS is always the case, economic forces proved more powerful than political forces. The victory that was denied the league advocates on the political field is now being realized because of profound economic changes that have taken place and are taking place today. For years mergers of industries had been going on. But they were few and far between compared to the tremendous impetus given this movement after the war.

The years 1922-3-4-5 have been years of most astounding mergers in every branch of industry. Rails, copper, steel, oil, motors, packers, silks, cotton, tobacco, bakers, public service, electrical, and importers, all were involved in tremendous mergers. And every merger means a reorganization of every unit involved under the domination of bank capital of Wall Street. This movement destroyed the old economic base of the republican party, and as the industries that backed the great campaign against Wall Street's league of nations proposition in 1920 fell under the control of Wall Street the leading group of the republican party changed from the agents of industrial capital to the agents of finance-capital.

THE first result of the pressure of finance-capital upon the republican administration was the Washington limitation of arms conference, called by President Harding in November, 1921. The next the unofficial sponsoring of the Dawes plan in January, 1924. In neither of these moves was the republican administration challenged by the democrats. The only opposition came from those within the republican party itself.

At the republican nominating convention in 1924 when the question of a running mate for Coolidge came up, the president himself personally requested Borah to run for vice-president. A request for Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Ilinois, and one of the industrial group, to run also met with refusal. Every effort was made to palliate the opposition group. It is plain that Borah refused because he could not agree with the policy being pursued. Charles G. Dawes, a representative of banking capital, was chosen as vice-president. Tho still opposing the league because to support it would split the republican party and because it was not possible within so short a time to swing public sentiment back of it, Coolidge and the official machine of the party accepted only the world court which, however, is an adjunct of the league, and which as Borah correctly charges, is the "means of entering the league thru the back door."

Borah, who, in his Chicago speech, scored the administration's proposal to enter the world court, is still upholding the historic past of the republican party. He speaks for the industrialists who still resist the domination of finance-capital.

THAT the United States is deeply involved in European affairs is emphasized by the fact that every event in Europe has its reflex, in one form or another, in American politics.

Both republicans and democrats saw in the outcome of the Locarno conference, vindication of their stand.

Senator Borah, the most able debater on the floor of the senate and occupying the strategic position of chairman of the foreign relations committee views Locarno as a blow at the world court. Says Borah:

> "If the court is so good, why did not the nations signing the Locarno agreements agree to submit disputes arising under them to this same world court? Did they? They did not. They agreed in matters of dispute to select their own arbitral commissions.
> "They set up a permanent conciliation council at Locarno. It shows, to my mind, that the faith of members of the court in their own creature is not so great."

Senator Morris Sheppard, of Oklahoma, one of the spokesmen for the pro-court group, composed of administration republicans and the democratic party, who is himself a democrat, sees Locarno thru different spectacles:

> "The Locarno agreements confirm and strengthen the leadership of the league and show it more than ever to be a permanent institution. Arguments against the world court, based on its alleged weaknesses and ineffectiveness, are shattered by this latest development. I feel certain we will enter the court, and it will be only a matter of time before we enter the league."

IN an effort to counteract Borah's appearance in Chicago where he fired the opening gun in his campaign against the administration's world court plan, Senator Geroge Wharton Pepper, of Pennsylvania, in two speeches in that city, upheld the proposition to enter the court, while still insisting that it is not the back door to the league.

It looks as tho at the coming sessions of congress we will have the spectacle of the democrats supporting Coolidge against the opposition within his own party.

For the revolutionist it also bears out another of our contentions: That the time is fast approaching when we will have one reactionary party, representing finance-capital in the United States. From present indications the republican party will fulfill that function. Its victory over the democrats in 1920 on the league of nations question has placed it in a strategic position so that it can offer more to Wall Street than its competitor which was revived in 1910-12 for the specific purpose of serving the interests of the House of Morgan.

For the Communist it will be illuminating to watch the antics of the agents of imperialism in the official machine of the American Federation of Labor as they swing from their traditional support of the democratic party to supporting the republican party. Already, in the last election, we saw tendencies in that direction, with John L. Lewis of the miners and even Mother Jones, former socialist, coming out in support of Coolidge, while the balance of the officialdom were reluctantly paying lip service to the LaFollette movement.

The new political developments in relation to the world court issue lend emphasis to the Communist demand for the creation of a labor party that will break away the masses from the old parties and mobilize them on a class basis. When they learn that they can expect nothing from the Coolidges except the most vicious stifling of every effort to improve their condition and when they realize that Borah, altho he opposes Coolidge on foreign affairs, is the representative of industrial capital and is just as determined to crush labor in industry as is Coolidge, they will flock in millions to the standard of the labor party, which is even now being advocated by thousands of trade unionists in this country today. Within a labor party, striving for parliamentary success they will soon learn the fraudulent nature of capitalist democracy and, as the class struggle intensifies, as it must intensify, be swept toward the leadership of the Communists, preparatory to storming the final citadels of capitalism.

A Christian Scientist Looks at Labor

"The Present Economic Revolution in the United States," by Thomas Nixon Carver, Boston, Little, Brown & Co., 1925, $2.50.

Professor Carver is a christian as well as a professor of political economy at Harvard University. It is in this sense that the title of this review should be read, for it has no direct reference to the church founded by Mary Baker Eddy. In a larger sense, of course, every one who tries to combine christianity with science becomes what is generally known as a "christian scientist"—that is, one who believes that the material world is merely the expression of mind or "spirit," and changes to conform with the changing thots of the professors. So it is not too much to say this is a book on "Christian Science."

But even more than christianity, and more than science, Professor Carver believes in capitalism. For this book is a defense of the latter, while it only in passing pays its respects to religion or science. So profound is the author's faith in capitalism, that he gives us a picture of it, not as a mere "system," but as some immutable divine law. Thus he says (page 5):

"In the absence of force, capitalism automatically exists."

This is said in the year 1925, while the capitalist statesmen of the world are frantically rushing from conference to conference, trying to patch up the damage of the world war fought between capitalist nations; when 90 per cent of all governmental revenue is expended on past wars and preparation for future wars; when force and terrorism, legal and extra-legal, against the workers and to uphold capitalism, has become the order of the day in every capitalist country. It is said by a "professor" of political economy, who should at least know that the historical basis of capitalism is the forcible expropriation of the land and natural resources by a small class, and the creation of a landless, propertyless, helpless proletariat. Every page of history and every daily newspaper shrieks aloud that, "in the absence of force, capitalism automatically collapses." But what are facts to a Harvard professor?

Carver shudders at the thot of Bolshevism. He polemizes at great length against it. The keynote of his argument lies in the final words of this paragraph (page 18):

"When Marx's materialistic interpretation of history is combined with the doctrine of evolution thru class struggle, it becomes even more strange to christian ears."

No doubt, no doubt!

But these christian ears find a "beautiful ideal" guiding the actions of Judge Gary, J. P. Morgan, John D. Rockefeller, Andrew Mellon, and the rest of the goodly crew of the pirate ship "American Capitalism." As a result of this "beautiful ideal," says Carver, "wealth is not only increasing at a rapid rate, but the wages of those we formerly pitied are rising, laborers are becoming capitalists, and prosperity is being more and more widely diffused." The oustanding signs of this are; increased savings deposits, insurance and labor banks These are the signs that capitalism is diffusing wealth and well-being to all, wiping out the antiquated class struggle and composing society into complete harmony.

It is too bad this book can't be furnished to the West Virginia miners, to the child laborers in the cotton mills of the South, to the 200,000 "superfluous" coal miners, to the textile workers of New England, and to all those masses of workers who are as yet ignorant of the wonderful things capitalism is doing for them!

It is also too bad that Professor Paul H. Douglas, of the University of Chicago, should not have read Prof. Carver's book, before he so perversely and Bolshevistically spent several years investigating the course of real wages, in the past 25 years. Doubtless it was by pre-arrangement with Lenin that Douglas disclosed that real wages are four points lower today than in the years 1890-1899.

Carver's book would make a good text for a comprehensive exposure of what is really occurring under capitalism in America. Someone must find time to do this work. In the meantime it is interesting as an example of the obcurantism that passes for learning, and culture in the seats of education in America.

The "christian ears" are the ears of a jackass.—Earl Browder.

LABOR DEFENSE WILL PROTEST COURT DECISION

California Workers For Anita Whitney

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 27.—The International Labor Defense has arranged in California protest meetings in California protesting against the refusal of the United States supreme court to review the appeal of Anita Whitney, convicted under the state syndicalism law by the California state courts.

Frisco Meeting.

In San Francisco, the protest meeting will be held in the Native Sons Hall, 11th and Clay Sts., Saturday, Oct. 31, at 8 p. m., with Atty. Austin Lewis, representing the International Labor Defense; Prof. A. E. Anderson of California University; Anita Whitney; John D. Barry, editor of the San Francisco Call and William Short, editor of a local labor paper, as speakers. Tom Lewis will act as chairman. No admission will be charged.

Berkeley Meeting.

In Berkeley, there will be a protest meeting at the Berkeley High School Auditorium, on Wednesday, Nov. 11th with the same list of speakers as is used in San Francisco.

Arrangements are being made for a protest meeting in Oakland.

Unions Protest.

Many of the labor unions in Oakland and Berkeley have passed resolutions demanding that Anita Whitney be pardoned and condemning the state criminal syndicalism law.

Cable Breaks at Baker River Dam Killing 2 Workers

(By Worker Correspondent)

MT. VERNON, Wash., Oct. 27—Two workers, Irvin H. Jones, and Earl Gelker, were killed and Ernest Lundquist and Howard Williams were injured yesterday at the Baker River power dam when they were spilled into the canyon, 110 feet below, by the breaking of a cable from which the bucket in which they were riding was suspended. Many fatal accidents have occured on this project. It will be remembered that this is the place where the I. W. W. conducted a strike and were later forcibly deported by the sheriff and gunmen.

ABD-EL-KRIM RIDICULES SPANISH PARTICIPATION IN RIFFIAN WAR

ADJIR, Spanish Morocco, Oct. 27.—The Spanish attack on Adjir and her invasion of the Riff country was ridiculed by Abd-el-Krim as nothing but a foolish attempt and intimated that France must have brought much pressure to bear on Spain to force her to go to war against the Riffs.

Spanish are Idiots.

"See what invincible idiots the Spanish are," declared Abd-el-Krim, as he pointed to the Spanish troops located on the bare rock of Moro Nuevo during an inspection tour of the Riff trenches, which were built during the Riff attack to prevent the landing of the 5,000 Spanish soldiers.

"They abandoned some of the most fertile parts of Morocco at a great cost in money and men, leaving behind in our hands an enormous wealth in war material. Then a year later, at the demand of the French, they return here to occupy the most barren rock on the whole continent of Africa!

France Exerts Pressure.

"I believe France must have exercised enormous pressure on Spain to induce her to commit such a ridiculous action. The French probably threatened to withdraw all of Spain's so-called 'rights' over Morocco. But what rights are those? The only rights that France and Spain have they derive from this country's weakness. That weakness will not last forever."

In speaking of the French viewpoint, Abd-el-Krim said:

Fear Moroccans.

"The French viewpoint I understand perfectly. France is devoured with imperialistic ambitions. She is a nation of tremendous military power and vast colonial aspirations. The French fear the Riff state because they know they are insecure in Morocca, Algeria and Tunis, and they are afraid to see us elevated into a position of leadership in Islamic Africa.

"France believes that she is a colonial power of the first rank. She knows better than any other European nation how to enslave subject populations and dominate men's souls. For this reason France fears us and has decided to destroy us.

Make Peace, or Lose Africa!

"If France is discreet she will make peace this winter. If she does not make peace she will lose all North Africa.

"We can withstand ten years of such attacks," said Krim referring to the fierce attack of the France-Spanish forces on Abd-el-Krim's men, when the combined fire of the battleships, fortress on Alcehumas Bay, artillery and airplanes failed to drive the Riffs back on Cape Moro Nuevo. "And we are willing to do so in the defense of our liberty and home."

A. F. OF L. REACTION CONGRATULATED BY THE MANUFACTURERS' ASSOC.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 27.—The American Federation of Labor was lauded today by John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, at the opening session of the association convention here for "refusing to cohabit with Communism and with Russian Sovietism."

Edgerton deplored the trend to attain pleasures and ease "without having earned them" and declared that much of the discord between employers and employes was caused by forces "outside of industry." He did not include the manufacturers' association, of course, in this category.

Fifteen Killed When Passenger Train Jumps Tracks Near Memphis

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 27.—From fifteen to twenty persons were killed when St. Louis and San Francisco passenger train No. 108, Birmingham to Kansas City, was wrecked near here.

It was said the baggage, express cars and two coaches left the rails. All Pullmans remained on the tracks. Ambulances and doctors are being sent to the scene of the wreck from Holly Springs.

HOSTILITIES BEGIN ANEW IN BALKANS DESPITE ULTIMATUM ISSUED BY LEAGUE CONFERENCE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Despite the ultimatum and the threats of the league of nations of an economic blockade, war has again broken out along the Greco-Bulgarian frontier according to advices arriving from Greece and Bulgaria.

While evacuation of the Greek troops from Bulgaria was under way, in accordance with the league of nations council ultimatum, a new clash occurred and indications are that fighting may be general.

A Salonika dispatch states that the Bulgarians attacked the Greeks who were evacuating. An immediate halt was called to the evacuation.

A Sofia dispatch states that the Greeks opened fire upon Bulgarians.

Passing The Buck

Thus dispatches from both countries confirm that fighting is again in progress, with both sides attempting to place the responsibility on each other.

Shelling of Towns Continue

SOFIA, Oct. 28.—Greeks continue to shell Petrich and have not withdrawn any of their forces.

A clash between Greek and Bulgarian forces occurred when Greek troops attempted to rush into Petrich and rescue the body of a dead Greek soldier.

It is reported that the village of Novolescvo, been burned by the Greek troops.

England Backs Greece

SOFIA, Oct. 28.—The sinister hand of England has been exposed in the Greek invasion of Bulgarian territory by the Belgrade Politica which shows in an Athens dispatch that the British government appealed openly to the Greek refugees in Asia Minor for mercenaries to employ against Turkey and secretly encouraged the invasion of Bulgarian territory.

The mercenaries which responded to the call of England 200,000 strong are being organized and may be used in the settling of the dispute with Turkey over the issue of Mosul. Many of these mercenaries participated in the Bulgarian invasion with arms supplied by England according to newspapers in Sofia.

The Chicago locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union are continuing to respond well to the call of the left wing in the elections taking place for delegates to the Philadelphia convention.

Tuesday night elections were held in two locals, Local 81 of the cutters, and Local 100 of dressmakers. Two delegates were elected by Local 81, one being a machine candidate and the other the left winger, Roy Glassman.

In Local 100, three delegates were elected, one machine candidate winning against a left winger by only seven votes, while the other two elected were both left wingers, P. H. Houser and B. Stein.

A. N. L. C. TAKES RAP AT GREEN FOR SLANDERS

Call Upon Organized Workers to Help

The American Negro Labor Congress, which is now in session at the Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles Ave., adopted the following resolution scoring the attack of President Green of the American Federation of Labor on the American Negro Labor Congress is being no different from the attacks of the open-shop bosses in America upon the Negro workers and appealing to organized workers in the American Federation of Labor to aid them in their fight:

"The attitude assumed by the president of the American Federation of Labor, William Green, towards the American Negro Labor Congress, in published statements is clearly erroneous, harmful and prejudicial to the best interests of the American labor movement.

"These statements alleging this congress to be 'an effort of Bolsheviks to stir up hatred between the races' are distinctly contrary to facts and can only serve the ends of the most reactionary oppressors of labor whose foul purpose it is to destroy every genuine attempt of workers to unite for their protection and improvement.

Use Open-Shop Tactics.

"Mr. Green must know that such tactics are the chief stock-in-trade of open-shop, union-hating labor-grinding bosses—the abuse and vilification of the striking miners of West Virginia who are fighting heroically for a decent existence is a clear example—and in resorting to these injurious tactics he helps to strengthen this pernicious anti-union propaganda which must prove a boomerang to the American Federation of Labor itself and to the entire organized labor movement of America.

"It is doubtful whether the author of these statements altogether grasps their full signficance for they imply logically that the only group in the American labor movement genuinely and sufficiently interested in the Negro workers to aid them in their struggles, and to undertake earnestly and practically to organize and unite them with their white fellow-workers is the very same Communist group which they denounce.

"A further implication, one which will be strongly resented by every intelligent, manly Negro worker is the insulting idea that they are fools and tools, that they lack sufficient intelligence and manhood themselves to realize their oppression and to initiate a movement for their emancipation.

Organized by Negro Workers.

"The truth of the matter is that the American Negro Labor Congress was organized by Negro workers who, while welcoming the co-operation and support of all sections of the labor movement reserve the determination of its policies and destiny wholly and

LEFT-WING LEADS STRIKERS' DRIVE ON INJUNCTION

Amalgamated Officials Show Bankruptcy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct., 28.—On Tuesday morning 500 clothing workers led by Ben Gitlow of Cutters' Local No. 4, succeeded in breaking the injunction taken out by the International Tailoring Co. against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. The officials of the Amalgamated showed their complete bankruptcy and inability to handle the situation.

It will be remembered that the injunction taken out by the International Tailoring Co. before the Tammany judge, Thomas Churchill, was of so sweeping a nature that it practically crippled all attempts to effectively picket this millionaire scab establishment. Under its provisions no representatives of the union are permitted to picket within ten blocks of the clothing factory.

Months have elepsed since the injunction was issued. Meanwhile hundreds of thousands of dollars have been drained from the coffers of the union while the union officials made feeble and superficial attempts to fight the combined forces of this giant corporation and the machinery of the state. The clothing workers of the International Tailoring Co. have been left penniless and without the means of earning their daily bread. It seems, however, that the membership could no longer tolerate this state of affairs. They could not tolerate this open defiance of their organization.

Militants Picket Plant

On Tuesday morning 500 militant clothing workers marched valiantly to the doors of the International Tailoring company on Fourth Ave. and 12th St. bearing banners with the slogan "International Tailoring Company on Strike. Injunctions Don't Make Clothes." They were led by Benjamin Gitlow of Cutters' Local 4, who is the Workers Party candidate for mayor, Sam Liptzin of Local 5 and L. Nelson. As soon as the pickets arrived in orderly formation at 12th St. and 4th Ave. they were set upon by the police who used their clubs freely on men and women alike. Fourth Ave. was filled with the screams of women and groans of the men as they backed away from the brutal assault of the bluecoats.

Sam Liptzin one of the leaders was seriously injured by the police and taken to the hospital. Not for a moment however did the pickets lose their morale or their compact formation.

When they were driven by the police from 12th St. they turned up again on 10th St. and renewed the picketing again before the building of the International Tailoring Co. As a result of their efforts 85 workers left the shop amid the cheers of the crowd.

As soon as they saw that the injunction had been successfully broken due to the courage and persistance of the militants, the Hillman gang, Patofsky, Risfman, Beckerman, Blumberg and Monat, who had been watching the proceedings at a safe distance from the policemen's clubs, they called out a number of pickets who had been held in reserve at Webster Hall.

SOVIET RUSSIA DEMANDS SEAT AT CONFERENCE

Chinese Want Stiffer Fight for Autonomy

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, Oct. 28.—Chinese opinion of the action of the Chinese delegation at the opening of the tariff conference in demanding autonomy, is not unmixed with criticism because the demand was not made forcefully enough. Moreover, Soviet Russia has demanded a seat and upset the imperialist equanimity again.

The National University at Peking, among other institutions, commercial and educational bodies, have adopted and printed manifestos urging "no compromise" with foreign imperialism and urging the delegation to press for immediate antonomy.

China's Five Proposals.

When the conference opened, Shen Jui-lin, the chairman, at once said that it was an anomaly that a sovereign power should be asking other powers what they would allow it to do in matters of its own tariffs, following which Ching Ting-wang made the following formal proposals:

First—The participating powers formally to agree to remove all tariff restrictions contained in existing treaties.

Second—China to agree to the abolition of the Likin simultaneously with the enforcement of the Chinese national law which shall take effect not later than Jan. 1, 1929.

Third—Before the enforcement of the said law there shall be an interium surtax of 5 per cent on ordinary goods, 30 per cent on wine and tobacco and 20 per cent no other luxuries, to be levied in addition to the present 5 per cent tariff.

Fourth—The collection of surtaxes shall begin three months after the date of signature.

Fifth—Decisions relative to the above four articles shall be carried

RAKOSI, WEINBERGER AND HAMANN ON HUNGER STRIKE

BUDAPEST, Oct. 28.—Rakosi, Weinberger and Katherine Hamann have been on hunger strike since October 5. Each day they are subjected to forcible feeding, at the same time chained and tortured.

Comrade Hamann is already unconscious.

All the accused are cut off from the outside world. They are allowed to see no lawyers for their defense. The cause of the hunger strike is the extraordinary process and refusal of lawyers. The public prosecutor in the process is the notorious fascist August Miskolczy. The governmental organs demand death sentence.

The Magyar Orszag writes the following about the examination of Rakosi which has started: "Today at 11 o'clock an extremely pale, unshaved prisoner, dressed in dark gray clothing, was led thru the prison accompanied by two wardens with fixed bayonets. No one present recognized in the prisoner, who moved froward with halting steps, the one-time people's commissar, Mathias Rakosi. He was being led to his examination in the room of the Public Prosecutor Miskolczy. The examination lasted approximately three hours"

GERMAN COMMUNIST UNITED FRONT PROGRAM GIVES LABOR MAJORITY OVER ALL PARTIES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Germany, Oct. 28.—Final results of the Berlin municipal elections of Sunday shows the Communists to have made the highest proportional increase. The number was increased from 20 to 43. The socialists were the next heaviest gainers, their number in the board of aldermen increasing from 46 to 75. In the Berlin elections a united front of Communists and socialists was created to unitedly challenge the bourgeois parties. The result was a clear victory for labor forces. In the municipal council the combined Communist and socialist vote will now be 118 as against 107 distributed among other parties.

This is hailed as a great victory against junkerism and is a rebuke to the Hindenburg-Luther-Stresemann forces. Altho the nationalists gained five seats, their Berlin allies, the peoples' party lost heavfly, their loss being a drop from 35 to 13.

Berlin's united front of Communists and socialists was created ten days before the elections and did not have official approval of the national leadership of the social-democratic party, which still opposes the Communist demand for a united front against the bourgeoisie.

So widespread and effective has been the Communist exposures of the leadership of the social-democracy being unwilling to fight for even the elementary demands of the working masses that the rank and file of the Berlin party forced a solid front in the municipal elections.

May Force Wide United Front.

The Berlin strategy has proved so effective in placing the city under control of the labor group that far-reaching effects are expected in the social-democratic party nationally. It may force the leaders finally to yield to the united front in order to save their faces. If they do not the Communists will make heavy inroads into their ranks, alienating from them the best proletarian elements. And if they do the fact that the Communists will put up a better struggle than the social-democrats will also cause a swing to the Communists. In any event the Communists will be the gainers.

Communists here are elated over their victory, not merely in increased number of seats, but in the fact that it is their tactics that made possible the victory over junkerism.

So astounded were the junkers and their supporters that they tried to withhold the results of the elections as long as they possibly could.

COOLIDGE TELLS LEWIS TO GO TO COURTS FOR AID

Miners' "Leader" Tries More Begging

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 28.—The efforts of John L. Lewis, instead of going to the members of his union and using the power of the combined forces of all districts in a national general strike of bituminous miners to compel soft coal operators to live up to their agreements and to force a settlement in the anthracite—are being directed to begging Coolidge, the strikebreaker president, to force the bituminous operators to abide by the contracts with the union.

As usual, sniveling and crawling have their reward in scornful rejection. President Coolidge has calmly observed in his polite manner, that, if the bituminous operators have broken their contract, Mr. Lewis may appeal to the capitalist courts for redress, and if relief is not found there, to take the matter up with the capitalist congress to obtain "remedial legislation.

Coolidge has not intimated how many dozens of years might go by before the miners' union could get any decision from such sources, or given any assurance that the decision of capitalist courts and congress would be against the capitalist operaters and in favor of the wage working miners.

MITCHELL ON TRIAL BEFORE COURT MARTIAL

Hero of the Militarists Scores Points

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Colonel Billy Mitchell, the stormy petrel of the army air service, started off his court martial today with a trio of victories.

On the ground that three of the generals sitting as his judges were prejudiced against him, personally and officially, he successfully challenged their right to sit in judgment upon him, and they retired. One of them was Maj. Gen. Charles Summerall, the presiding officers of the court; another was Brig. Gen. Albert Bowle., and the third was Brig. Gen. F. W. Sloden.

Bowley went first, after some consultation among the 12 generals comprising the court.

Reid challenged Summeral for "personal prejudice" at Mitchell's personal direction.

This prejudice, Reid contended, was due to a report Mitchell had made while assistant chief of the army air service condemning Summerall's handling of aviation while in command of the Hawaiian department. In his report, Mitchell said, Summerall "knew nothing of aviation."

Summerall immediately arose, admitted he had criticized Mitchell and asked to be excused from the court.

Third Technical Victory

A few minutes later, Mitchell ran his string of tactical victories to three by peremptorily challenging the availiability of Brig. Gen. Fred W. Sladen, commandant at West Point, to sit, and Sladen was dismissed without further ado.

The retirement of Gen. Summerall made Maj. Gen. Robert L. Howze the presiding officer of the court.

Array of Judges

As finally constituted, Mitchell's jury included: Major General William S. Graves, commandant of the sixth (Chicago, Ill.) corps area; and Major General Benjamin A. Poore, commandant of the seventh (Omaha, Neb.) corps area.

With the court reorganized, Reid arose to make a motion challenging "the jurisdiction" of the court. Reid read, as a part of the record the long statement given out by Mitchell at San Antonio, Texas, last September, in which he charged army and navy heads with "an almost treasonable administration" of aviation, with "openly distorting facts or telling untruths" about aviation and with a "disgusting lack of aircraft knowledge." It was this statement, which led to Mitchell's court martial.

Mitchell looked his judges over carefully while Reid's voice droned out the charges. The jury of generals held a scattered array of poses.

War Lords Pose

Howse, McCoy, and Winans watched Reid, MacArthur, the debonair, left his eyes on Mitchell. Graves and King, old "war-dogs," were bored by the speech.

After finishing the statement ,Reid added: "We contend there is nothing in this statement which violates any military law or any article or war."

At the request of the court, Reid then gave way to Lieut. Col. Joseph I. McMullen, assistant judge advocate, who read the formal charges and specifications against Mitchell.

"Let the defendant arise," said Gen. Howze.

Mitchell arose and remained standing while McMullen droned out the charges again.

Raise Free Speech Issue

Frank R. Reid, of Illinois, chief of Mitchell's civilian counsel, charged the military court had no power to try Mitchell on the charges brought in the citations ordered issued by President Coolidge. All the charges, Reid said, were based on two statements issued by Mitchell while at San Antonio, Texas last September.

"The first article of the constitution provides that congress can make no law abridging freedom of speech," said Reid. "And Colonel Mitchell was entirely within his constitutional rights when he issued these statements."

properly to the congress in session assembled.

"The congress would not have been surprised to be denounced by the enemies of labor but certainly did not expect to be denounced by the responsible head of a great labor organization which includes in its ranks the largest number of organized Negro workers and which thereby had the power, if it desired, to have the largest delegation in the congress thru which to guide and shape the policies of the congress in session.

Try to Destroy Movement.

"Such an attack upon the congress, therefore, cannot fail to be interpreted by the majority of Negro workers as an unwarranted attempt to destroy their first nation-wide effort to find their place in the organized labor movement and will tend to confirm their suspicions of the sincerity of those labor organizations which do no more than pass paper resolutions about unity of black and white workers.

"The American Negro Labor Congress, therefore, deeply deplores this erroneous and harmful attitude and calls upon the American Federation of Labor to correct this misleading characterization of this congress and to co-operate with it whole-heartedly to realize in fact that unity of the black and white workers of America which alone can incur their protection, advancement, and emancipation."

(SEAL)

At yeseterday's session, the following resolution was adopted by the American Negro Labor Congress on race discrimination and social equality in which the Negro workers demand that all forms of race discrimination, whether they be residential, union affiliation or scholastic be abolished and demand that the Negro workers be given the same benefits and privileges that the white workers are entitled to. The resolution follows in full:

"The so-called democratic society in the United State of America is so organized that a distinction is made between races. Regardless of written laws, political and civil rights are not given to the Negro in the same degree as to persons of the white race. Especially in the southern states nearly all rights as men and citizens are taken away from the Negro. It is a fundamental custom of public life to treat the Negro as an inferior caste both in the North and in the South.

Segregation.

"The Negro people are confined to the most miserable residence districts as an outcast people who cannot choose their place of residence among the general population. We are segregated in miserable separate railroad cars as tho we were cattle unfit to mix with human beings. In many cases we are segregated in separate labor unions, or denied the right to organize at all. In employment we are generally segregated, being confined to the hardest and most disagreeable kinds of labor. Our children are in many places not permitted to attend the general public schools, but begin life as a segregated caste. Negro teachers are not permitted to teach according to their ability in most of the public schools. In hotels, restaurants, theaters and such places of public resort for the general population, we are usually excluded and driven away at the cost of much inconvenience, suffering and humiliation.

"These social customs which degrade our people to a place of inequality in the nation, either legalized or established by traditions show that a racial caste system is a fundamental feature of the social, industrial and political organization of this country. This social degrading of our people, which has become as consciously a part of the political system that a late president of the United States publicly declared a political principle 'Uncompromisingly against every suggestion of social equality'—this social regarding is not a question of relationships between individuals, but a question of relationships of classes. It is an attempt to create and perpetuate a permanent class of doubly exploited workers at the bottom of the social system. Intent upon holding down the workers of all races as a general lower class, our masters wish to make us a lower class within a lower class. The white worker must be made to realize that this discrimination against the Negro worker comes back against him ultimately. To reduce the Negro worker to a lower level, tends to drag the whole working class down to a similar level; and in the South where the caste system is most extreme the condition of the poor white people is the proof.

Social Equality.

"The first American Negro Labor Congress solemnly believes that the Negro workers and farmers of this country will abolish the system of race discrimination. We declare that race discrimination, degradation and general inequality of racial groups—the whole caste system—must be absolutely and completely abolished.

"We demand the full equality of the Negro people in the social system of the United States and everywhere. Against social inequality we raise the standard of social equality. We unqalifiedly refuse to regard our people as inferior in any respect.

"We demand the abolition of all laws which openly or by subterfuge discriminate against our people, or which in any way recognize a distinction of races. To champion this demand, not only for our own race, but also for all other races, yellow or brown. We declare that all claims of an inherent difference between races are ignorant and unscientific if not pure hypocrisy. We demand:

"1. The abolition of all laws which result in segregation.

Abolish Jim Crow Cars.

"2. The abolition of all Jim Crow laws.

"3. The abolition of all laws which disfranchise the Negroes, or any working people, on the basis of color or race or place of birth, ancestry, the lack of a permanent home, the lack of property, or for any other reason.

"4. The abolition of all laws which forbid the intermarriage of persons of different races.

"5. The abolition of all laws and public administrative measures which prohibit or in practice prevent colored children or youths from attending the general public schools or universities.

"We also take notice of those established customs which discriminate against Negroes in practice, altho not written into law. We demand:

No Discriminations!

"1. The abolition of the right of landlords and real estate agents to discriminate against the colored race in renting or selling homes and to this purpose we demand that the

POLISH POLICE USE FIENDISH METHODS TO GAIN CONFESSIONS FROM WHITE RUSSIAN PEASANTS

MOSCOW, Oct. 28.—In spite of all the measures taken by the police at the borders of Poland for concealing the fact that White Russian peasants have been totured, the executive committee of the International Red Aid recently succeeded in obtaining particulars from the Bielostok district. Thus it is finally established that the judiciary examination was conducted not only by the border police, but also the Bielostok public prosecutor, Klink, personally.

During one day alone, August 29, the following peasantst were totured:

The bailiff of the village Grabovetz, Lounin community, Bielski district; Golous Nestor, village Kozly, Vassilkov community, same district; Konrad Savchinski, Biechik community; Goloub P., town of Bielsk; Remoulski, Bielsk; Krashko D., village of Grabivetz; Miserski; Ossipchouk M., village of Augoustovo, and Bogdan Jan.

The above mentioned peasants were tortured by suspension from iron bars, and the pouring of hot urine thru the nose.

The police then stripped the arrested women and among other tortures they poured alcohol on their sex organs and then set fire to them.

HUGHES ON STUMP FOR WATERMANN IN N. Y. ELECTIONS

Workers Forgotten in Campaign Talk

(Special to The DAILY WORKER.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 28. — Charles Evans Hughes, secretary of state under Harding and for a time under Coolidge, entered actively into the municipal elections here last night by advocating the election of Frank D. Waterman on the republican ticket. Waterman is the proprietor of the notorious open shop establishment manufacturing fountain pens that bear his name. There is no such thing as union recognition in his factories and he is a typical industrialist, paying starvation wages to many of the girls and women in his industry.

In the "Oil" Cabinet.

Mr. Hughes, who was the most prominent cabinet member in the infamous oil cabinet that included Albert B. Fall, Harry M. Daugherty and Edwin Denby, assailed Tammany Hall and Governor Smith as incompetent and proposed a Waterman "business administration." Banners carrying the legend "Say It With Shovels" were conspicuously displayed thruout the hall. This is the slogan of Waterman, who says that he will build subways if elected.

Hughes' talk was a typical harrangue and ignored the pressing problems of the workers of New York, whose interests are voiced only by Ben Gitlow and the Workers (Communist) Party, the campaign of which is arousing many working class sections with red night rallies.

SILK WORKERS ON STRIKE AGAINST SPEED-UP SYSTEM

Build Mill Committees to Unify Struggle

By ALBERT WEISBORD.

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 28.—About 300 workers employed in the Hillcrest Silk Co. plant in West New York, N. J. have gone out on strike. The workers used to work two looms for a certain rate. Now they will be forced to work three and four looms at a much lower rate with the result that they will be really forced not only to work twice as hard but even after their harder work will have less money in their pay envelope to show for it.

A committee of the workers went to see the boss yesterday, Friday, but the boss said there was nothing to change, nothing to negotiate about. Before that the company official tried to fire one of the most active and spirited of the workers, fellow worker Martin. A discussion ensued at the end of which all the workers in the place walked out.

Call Out All Workers.

The central bureau of the United Front Committees of Textile Workers in the person of its secretary, Albert Weisbord, immediately took charge of the situation. A strike vote was taken Friday evening and with great enthusiasm it was unanimously decided to strike the plant until the company gives in.

All of the workers in the plant will be called out whether they belong to any union or not and a real united front presented to the bosses. One of the demands of the workers will be now that the boss recognize their committee permanently. A mill workers' organization will be effected and the organization linked up with the United Front Committee of Textile Workers.

Unity Based on Mill Committees.

The United Front Committee of Textile Workers is an organization that has for its purpose the amalgamation of all unions in the textile industry on the basis of shop councils and mill committees. It raises the demands of organization of the unorganized and goes into unorganized territories creating united front committees from the workers themselves. It is not another union, but strives to weld unions together.

The workers of West New York have raised the alarm for the rest of the silk workers. Fight against wage cuts! Fight against the speed-up! Fight for real mill committees and one union in the textile industry! A united front of the workers against the united front of the bosses!

Two Big Meetings in New York on Soviets' Eighth Anniversary

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 28—C. E. Ruthenberg, general secretary of the Workers Party, will speak at the Central Opera House, New York, and at Miller's Grand Assembly Hall, Brooklyn, on Nov. 6 at the two big mass meetings to be arranged in New York City to celebrate the eighth anniversary of the Russian revolution and to pledge the solidarity of the American workers with the Russian workers' republic.

Other speakers will be Gitlow, Krumbein, Manley, M. J. Olgin, S. Don, Stachel, Lifschitz, Pruseka, Wolfe; chairmen, Weinstone and Rebecca Grecht.

The Freiheit Gesangs Ferin has been secured for the Central Opera House meeting and will give a program of revolutionary songs. Gregory Matisevich, concertinist, has also been secured for the same meeting.

Admission is 50c and tickets can be secured from the district office or any of the Workers Party branches.

Left Wing Leads Strikers' Drive in Bosses' Injunction

These followed the lead set by the militants earlier. It is expected that the fight against the International Tailoring Co. will continue to be led by the left wing.

Official Bar Militants

The pickets were then ordered to report at Webster Hall. But at the door the officials barred the left wing. When these workers protested against being excluded from an official meeting, Patofsky called for the aid of the same police which had been used against them on the picket line and with their assistance kept out the left wing elements.

A number of locals have declared their intention to demand the repeal of the injunction which is a dangerous threat against the entire labor movement of this city and to protest against the brutality of the police.

Natives Marvel at Airplane.

MOSCOW, Oct. 28.—The Soviet airplane cruising over Kirghiz has made 20 circular flights, meeting with enthusiastic reception everywhere by the natives, who are seeing an airplane for the first time in their life. The flights have been organized by the Siberian branch of the "Friends of Aviation."

Communists in Germany "Go to the Masses" and Make Big Forward Stride

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the figures finally arrive on the municipal elections held in Berlin last Sunday showing that the Communist Party made the biggest gains. This fact accounts for the silence of the cables that bring "foreign news" to the editorial sanctums of the capitalist dailies. Maintenance of complete silence was their chosen method of keeping this information from the workers of the United States.

• • • •

It is well to remember that this is the same kept press that gave much publicity to the declarations of the German "socialist" trade union delegation of fifteen, that attended the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor, and is now touring the country, that the strength of the German Communist Party is rapidly waning. Here is the answer to the profit press and to the visiting German "socialists."

• • • •

But the Communist victory in Berlin, in more than doubling its representation in the municipal parliament, goes hand in hand with the successful carrying out of a united action with the socialist rank and file in this electoral struggle, over the heads of the Berlin "socialist" officialdom. On the basis of the workers against the bourgeoisie, the Communists and socialists carried on a united fight that has put a labor block of 118 members in the city council against 107 for all bourgeois parties, a clear majority. The victory of this united front is the success of the German Communists in developing contact with the socialist masses still under the leadership of the social-democratic traitors, the worst enemies of the workers. This the German Communists failed to do in the last presidential poll, resulting in Hindenberg's election, suffering isolation as a result.

• • • •

The results of the Berlin elections indicate that the social-democratic masses are in no way satisfied with the Dawes' plan and the Locarno "security pact," both accepted by the Scheidemanns, the Loebes and the Breitscheids as the foundation stones of the new capitalist "peace." Growing unemployment, bitter conditions of work, and of life generally, are developing a new left ferment that should get beyond the control of the socialist bureaucracy, with its vicious anti-Communist grip upon the German trade union movement.

It is not inconceivable that the same upheaval from below in the British trade unions, that sent an Arthur A. Purcell as fraternal delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention demanding world trade union unity on the basis of the Anglo-Russian negotiations, may soon find its powerful counterpart developing out of the misery and struggle of the German working class.

The Berlin elections indicate that the German Communist Party is better prepared than ever before to take advantage of such an encouraging development. It is this apparent swing to the left that will make the Von Hindenberg-Luther government hesitate before dissolving the present reichstag and calling for new elections, as it is being forced to do largely on account of the Locarno affair.

• • • •

This success of the German Communists to develop contact with the social-democratic workers should be an inspiration to Communist parties in other lands, especially in the United States. Thru the labor party in this country the left wing will tighten its grip on those working class elements, growing in numbers, that the reactionary A. F. of L. officialdom, thru its non-partisan policy, is trying to hold in line for the capitalist parties. Repeated victories for the demand of the Communist International to "Go to the Masses!" in many countries, as in Germany, indicate the triumphs that may be won in those lands where it has not yet been put effectively into force.

"AN ALL-IN INTERNATIONAL OF TRADE UNIONS," SAYS PURCELL, "WILL TURN WORDS INTO DEEDS"

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 28.—The Trade Union Committee for organizing the Purcell meeting which is holding its next conference at Beethoven Hall on Sunday, Nov. 1, at 3 p. m., has just released a statement by Arthur A. Purcell on the British Trade Union Congress at Scarborough.

Commenting on the proceedings of that memborable meeting, he says:

The Report at Scarborough.

"The long process of discussion culminated in the detailed and well-ordered report on the whole international unity negotiations which the general council presented to the congress. That report told the whole story, from the discussions of our delegation to Russia with the representatives of the Russian unions in Moscow last November to the Anglo-Russian conference in April, and the subsequent Anglo-Russian agreement.

"In introducing the report, Fred Bramley made a most masterly speech, which received the unanimous approval of the congress, and the natural consequences was the whole-hearted and enthusiastic endorsement by congress of the general council's attitude and actions.

Complete Unanimity.

"I cannot recollect any instance in the annals of the trade union movement in which, on a subject arousing so much feeling, and against which such a bitter campaign had been waged, there has been so remarkable a display of unanimity. Yet nothing must blind us to the fact that this is only the first step. We have still a long journey ahead of us.

"A general cry of 'Agreed!' hailed the resolution calling for an all-in trade union international, and instructing the general council to do all in its power to bring this about. That cry, expressing the undoubted determination of congress, will, I am sure, act as an urge to the new general council to go full steam ahead and not slacken their efforts till international unity has been achieved."

Get Down to the Job.

In closing, Purcell says: "Scarborough has put heart into us all. Now we have to get down to the job of turning our words into deeds."

Rookies Opearted S-51 Insists Boat Captain

BOSTON, Oct. 28.—"Three Rookie officers were in charge—student officers trying to learn how to run a submarine."

That was what one of the three survivors of the submarine S-51 told Captain John H. Diehl of the steamship City of Rome after they were rescued, according to the captain's story as told by himself this afternoon to a naval board of inquiry.

"What did they mean by crossing my bow without light?" Captain Diehl said he asked the survivor.

"They're rookies," replied the man from the undersea boat.

Senator Leaves $90,000.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 28.—The late Senator Samuel M. Ralson of Indiana, left $90,000 estate, it was revealed when his will was filed for probate here today.

Of the total $75,000 was listed as real estate and $15,000 personal property, all of which was left to the widow and surviving children.

Julian C. Ralson, a son, was named executor.

Dakota Bank Fails.

SIOUX FALLS, S. Dak., Oct. 28.—The First State Bank here failed to open its doors today and has been taken in charge by the state banking department. The deposits shown in a recent report totalled $681,000. John Cleaver, president of the institution, suffered a paralytic stroke last night.

SMALL'S FAMOUS GRAFT TRIAL IS AGAIN DELAYED

Governor's Case Up in December

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 28.—No decision in the suits against Gov. Len Small will be reached at least until the December term of the supreme court. That was apparent today when the court adjourned the October term without action on Small's appeal from the decision of the Sangamon county circuit court holding him liable for an accounting of approximately $1,000,000 interest alleged to have been received on state funds. Small, while state treasurer, was charged with loaning to the Grant Park Bank during the war, which in turn was said to have been loaned to big meat packers at a high rate of interest.

The state contended the Grant Park Bank a "dummy" institution, organized for the one purpose of obtaining state loans which were to be reloaned at high interest rates for the profit of those fathering the bank.

Acquitted in One Court

The civil proceeding against Small was instituted at the close of the criminal prosecution in Waukegan in 1922. At that time Small was indicted for conspiracy and embezzlement growing out of alleged irregularities when he was state treasurer. A change of venue shifted the case from the Sangamon circuit court to Lake county. After days of terrific legal clashes the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

Convicted in Civil Court

When litigation in the civil suit opened in Sangamon county, Small met defeat for the first time. Judge Frank W. Burton held that he and his associates must make an accounting to the state of wartime interest paid on the famous "packers notes." The sum was estimated at close to $1,000,000.

Small's attorneys immediately took an appeal to the supreme court, protesting that Judge Burton's decision should be reversed.

Attorney General Carlstrom, newly installed in office, called upon his predecessor Edw. J. Brundage, who instituted both the criminal and civil proceedings to handle the case in the higher court.

The combination of Charles S. Deneen, former governor and now U. S. senator, and Edward J. Brundage, known as the Deneen-Brundage faction are after the scalp of Small. The fact that Small was elected by Wm. Hale Thompson caused him to break with Deneen in spite of the fact that Small served as state treasurer during the time Deneen was governor of the state.

Charles W. Hadley, former state's attorney of Dupage county and other Brundage aids were placed in active direction of the prosecution and prepared the final brief and argument.

The decision of the court when it comes, is expected to have a far-reaching political effect, possibly deciding a third term candidacy by Gov. Small.

Jurisdictional Row on Between an Irish God and a Polish God

By REGINA MYROSKI

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Oct. 28—When we Reds disagree on some issue it is not to be wondered at, as we do not claim to be infallible, but when the catholic church, which does claim to be infallible and not capable of doing any wrong, disagrees, then there is something at which to wonder.

In this town there are two catholic churches, one Irish and one Polish. But it develops that they have different ideas as to what constitutes sin. The Irish catholic church believes that it is a mortal sin and an abomination of the holy Sabbath day to indulge in such social pastimes as dancing on Saturday nights and that anyone who practices it is barred from the kingdom of heaven.

The Polish catholics on the other hand not only think it proper and innocent fun but the priest goes so far in his approval as to give public dances himself and advertise them as given by the Polish catholic church.

The question before the house is: "Are the Polish catholics to be sent to hell by an Irish catholic god?"

DELAY TRIAL OF 38 COMMUNISTS HELD IN GREECE

Prosecution Is Seeking "Better Evidence"

the republic," to crush the labor movement in Greece and especially the Communist movement, which has gained great influence over the masses of workers, peasants and refugees.

Introduce Faked Document.

In its desperate effort to crush the Communists, the prosecution on the last day of the trial, which had lasted for three days, produced a document, supposed to have been sent to the Greek party by the Communist International in 1922, and tried to have it read into the records of the trial as evidence against the Communists. This document had not been included in the original charges and the defense protested the admission of the documents as evidence on these grounds. The court martial judge was forced to rule in favor of the Communist defenders and the trial has been postponed for an indefinite period, until the prosecution can produce "better evidence" and submit before the court all the documents beforehand that will be used as evidence.

Fear Communists.

It is not necessary to state here that the "evidence" in the form of "documents" which the prosecution intends to bring before the court, have much the same origin as the much-heralded "Zinoviev letter" to the English Communist Party. It is only by such means that the state will be able to build up its case against the Greek party and gag the mouths of those comrades who dare to raise their voices and expose before the Greek masses their rulers and the system they represent.

The Trial Charges.

The charge against the Communists was that "at the end of last year a secret conference was held in Athens, in which the majority of the defendants along with representatives of the Communist International, and the Balkan Federation decided to carry on a wide campaign for the autonomy of Greek, Serbian and Bulgarian Macedonia. An executive committee was elected to carry on this campaign in Greece in which many of the defendants participated. This committee published a series of articles in Rizospastos, a Communist daily, and the Communist Review, a monthly. They issued many leaflets and caused to be published thousands of manifestos addressed to the reserves, veterans of Grecian wars, soldiers, sailors and to the working masses and peasants of Greece, advocating the necessity of the Macedonian autonomy for the triumph of the proletarian struggle. The committee as well as the other defendants, not members of this committee, did their best to execute the decisions of the secret conference thru lectures, mass meetings and other methods."

Before the examination of the witnesses took place, the lawyer for the defense requested a postponement of the trial, claiming that Premier Pangalos, the head of the military dictatorship, had given an amnesty to the defendants. The document to this effect was in the archives of the First Army Corps and the lawyer for the defense requested that this document be presented to the court.

Prosecutor Ignores Amnesty.

The prosecuting attorney denied all "official knowledge" as to the existence of such a document. "In any case," he said, "it cannot influence this trial."

The trial then continued to hear evidence until the prosecuting attorney overstepped himself and tried to introduce "evidence" that was not in the original charges.

Build New Port.

LENINGRAD — (Tass)—Oct.28. — The northwestern department of the people's commissariat of foreign trade has decided to build a new commercial port at the river Luya on the Baltic Sea. There will be erected warehouses and all necessary accomodations. The port may be opened in August, 1926.

The A. F. of L. and the Unorganized

By William F. Dunne

THIS is the second of a series of articles on the proceedings of the A. F. of L. convention, which deals with "The A. F. of L. and International Relations," "The A. F. of L. and the Unorganized Workers," "The A. F. of L. and the Class Struggle," "The A. F. of L. and the Left Wing," "The A. F. of L. and Militarism," etc. This is the second installment of "The A. F. of L. and the Unorganized Workers."

ARTICLE II.

ONLY one resolution calling for a general organization campaign was introduced in Atlantic City. It was signed by J. H. Fitzsimmons, representing the Canton, O., Central Labor Union. Fitzsimmons is a left winger and his resolution is important enuf, in the light of the facts cited in yesterday's article concerning the organizational status of the American Federation of Labor, to be printed in full:

> Whereas, Only a small percentage of the great working masses are as yet members of the trade unions, great numbers being still unorganized in nearly all the industries, and
> Whereas, This state of affairs not only militates against the unorganized, who are helpless, but against the organized as well, who find themselves severely handicapped in their struggle for better conditions by the ever present army of unorganized; and
>
> Whereas, The organization of these great masses of unorganized workers is fundamentally necessary in order to strengthen the unions to resist the bitter onslaughts of the capitalists in their great "open shop" drive to destroy every semblance of trade unionism in every industry in the country; therefore, be it
>
> Resolved, That the American Federation of Labor in convention assembled, calls upon all its affiliated organizations to immediately launch a general campaign for the organization of the unorganized; and, be it further
>
> Resolved, That in order to initiate and supervise this campaign a general conference shall be held during this convention of the heads of all the international unions to organize campaigns to unionize the unorganized in the respective industries; and, be it further
> Resolved, That the Central Labor Councils and local unions thruout the country be instructed to immediately establish active organization committees and to start at once a vigorous campaign of organizing the unorganized.

HERE is a resolution that deals with elementary trade union policy and tactics. No one could successfully deny that the facts stated are correct or that the measures proposed were anything more or less than those necessary for a trade union body that wished to carry out its function as the organizer of the workers for their immediate needs.

But this resolution, the only one of its kind introduced at Atlantic City, was never passed upon on its merits. The recommendation of the committee on organization was to "refer it to the executive council." This recommendation was carried.

ONE more illuminating instance of the suspicion with which all organization demands are viewed and the jealous barrier of craft rights that intrudes itself everywhere.

The International Association of Machinists' delegation introduced a resolution dealing with the organization of auto mechanics: The resolve made very modest demands:

> That the officers and members of the A. F. of L. be and are hereby instructed to give every assistance in this campaign, both by their cooperation and that they request all state federations to lend all assistance possible to the end that mechanics employed in this industry may be organized.

THE committee on organization recommended concurrence but Vice-President Wilson of the Executive Council, a member of the Patternmakers' Union, was not fully satisfied. The minutes of the convention at this point are interesting:

> Vice-President Wilson: I suppose they mean the people employed in garages who properly come under the head of that organization.
> Secretary Mugavin (for the committee): The introducer of the resolution appeared before the committee and that was the idea he conveyed to the committee.

With this understanding i. e. that the Machinists' Union would take in no garage workers other than machinists, the resolution was endorsed. By mistake if no instructions were given, they might accidentally organize some electrical workers, blacksmiths or just unskilled laborers. It is far better, from the official standpoint, that these workers remain unorganized than that they get into some union whose charter does not give it jurisdiction over them.

BUT A. F. of L. conventions do more than exhibit inertia towards organization of the unorganized. They do deliberately things which disrupt existing organizations and always these acts are against unions which have some tendency towards industrial unionism and in favor of the narrowest and most reactionary occupational unions.

The high crime of this character at Atlantic City was the decision of the convention against the Brotherhood of Railway & Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes and in favor of the Teamsters' Union.

BY the expenditure of much effort and money, the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, etc., has succeeded in bringing the express wagon drivers into the union. Lacking an industrial union in the rail transport industry, the express wagon drivers belong logically in a union with railway clerks, steamship clerks, freight handlers, express clerks and drivers.

BUT the Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers in the person of President Tobin, whose deals with the bosses are a scandal even in A. F. of L. official circles, claims jurisdiction over the express wagon drivers and is granted it by the convention by a per capita tax vote of 23,845 to 3,895.

The Railway Clerks were given 90 days to surrender the express wagon drivers to the Teamsters or be expelled from the A. F. of L. This action is taken at a time when when a secession movement is threatening to disrupt the Railway Clerks' Union.

THE action of the convention will result in this:

The Railway Clerks' Union will lose its charter. The Federated Press correspondent states:

> Suspension from the American Federation of Labor will be accepted by the grand executive council of the Brotherhood of Railway & Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express & Station Employes rather than submission to the A. F. of L. decision giving the Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers jurisdiction over railway express drivers, the delegation of the Railway Clerks to the annual A. F. of L. convention believe. E. H. Fitzgerald, president of Clerks, D. W. Harper, L. E. Wooten, G. H. Nicholson, C. A. Weber and E. A. Badley, the Clerks' full delegation, gave this opinion in a written statement to the press after the 45th annual A. F. of L. convention had approved the report of its committee on executive council's report providing that the Clerks' Union shall be suspended by the A. F. of L. if the Clerks' executive board does not within 90 days take steps toward turning organized express drivers over to the Teamsters.

The secession movement will be strengthened.

Tobin will make war on both the Railway Clerks and the seceding members' organization.

He will compel a few express wagon drivers to join his union but the vast majority will cease paying dues to any organization and the total amount of organization in this branch of the rail transport industry will be lessened.

Here is a concrete example of how the A. F. of L. afficialdom not only refuses to do any organizing but actually destroys union already in existence.

THE percentage of wage earners organized in unions, classified by industry in the United States is as follows:

Extraction of Minerals	41.0
Manufacturing Industries	23.2
Transportation	37.3
Building Trades	25.5
Stationary Engineers	12.4
Stationary Firemen	19.9
Trade	1.1
Professional Service	5.4
Clerical Occupations	8.3
Domestic and Personal Service	3.8
Public Service	7.3

(Figures of the National Bureau of Economic Research).

THE total percentage of organization among the wage earners of the United States, averaging the above figures, is 16.83. These figures are of 1920 but as we have already seen there has been an actual decrease in the membership of the A. F. of L. since that time.

But the actual situation is even worse than the figures indicate for the reason that outside of coal mining, rail transport and the building industry, the organization of workers in basic industry is negligible.

IN the steel industry for instance the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the only union in the industry, had 11,100 members in 1924.

The Longshoremen have 30,500.

The Seamen have 18,000.

The Timber Workers, the only A. F. of L. organization in the lumber industry, have passed out of existence.

In the metal mining industry the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers has 9,100 members.

In the Food Industry the Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen have but 11,500 members.

In steel, lumber, marine transport, metal mining and food industries there are net enuf organized workers to give the capitalists a minute's worry. Decisive groups of workers are almost completely unorganized yet at Atlantic City the only resolution calling for a general organization campaign is "referred to the executive council," that charnel house of labor's shattered hopes, without endorsement.

TO sum up:

1. The Atlantic City convention shows that the A. F. of L. leadership not only prevents and sabotages organization of the unorganized but that it consciously and deliberately follows a policy of disrupting existing unions.

2. That the only attempts made at the convention to start real organization campaigns, locally and nationally, were made by delegates from central labor unions and state federations of labor—delegates who are close to the dues-paying membership.

3. This shows that there is a real desire among the union membership for militant organization drives, that they want to bring the unorganized into the union.

4. The final conclusion to be drawn is:

That the best, or at least one of the best slogans for the left wing is "organization of the unorganized" and that with constant emphasis on this basic need of the labor movement, a big progressive bloc can be built up against the crooked officials whose policy is one of destruction.

So simple and elementary is this slogan and so apparent the stubborn opposition of the bureaucrats to its application that every honest trade unionist can be brought into the left wing struggle on this issue alone.

If you want to thoroughly understand Communism—study it.

NATIONAL CITY CONTROLS BIG ITALIAN FIRMS

Many Big Investments in Industry

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Oct. 28.—American banking capital is pouring into Italy for the purpose of financing the rapid industrial development that is taking place. In addition to the Ford-Fiat combination, which is known to be outside the regular Wall Street combination, the National City Bank of New York is also investing heavily in industries here.

More than $3,600,000 is being invested in the development of a great hydro-electric plant to be constructed in Milan. Another $1,000,000 is invested in textiles. Both of these concerns are to be dominated by the National City Bank, through loans.

Mussolini Sheet Elated.

The newspaper, Populo de Roma, formerly the Populo de Italia, launched by Mussolini in 1915 and still his personal organ, is enthusiastically in favor of the inroads of American capital. The only financial support of the paper comes from the industrialist group in Italy.

This signifies the rise of American financial capital over Italian industry and gives Wall Street greater incentive to aid in maintaining the Mussolini dictatorship.

DAILY WORKER RESCUE FUND BOOSTED TO $16,000.00 NOTCH

To four Workers Party branches who raised enough money to buy print paper for Tuesday's and Wednesday's DAILY WORKER, this issue is dedicated: Finnish Br., Grand Rapids, Mich.; Finnish Br., Cleveland, O.; Armenian Br., New York; Northwest English Br., Chicago.

One Man Can Do It If He Will!

Comrade John Kasper has moved to New York and thereupon hangs a moral. Last year Comrade Kasper didn't live in New York, but in a smaller place comparatively conservative. This smaller place was made conspicuous by John Kasper. It was he who said at a public meeting: "I'll raise $100 to insure The DAILY WORKER or I'll sell my overcoat." But he didn't have to—he raised the money.

Others, however, didn't have to go without overcoats, nor did they send money. The result was that The DAILY WORKER was not insured for 1925; that scarcely more than half the necessary amount was raised, and that now the paper faces the possibility of disaster.

And John Kasper moved to New York.

New York is a city of "live wires." There are many John Kaspers there. But one more counts. And he is heard from very shortly. He is now in the Armenian branch of the Workers Party. Previously this branch had failed to participate in The DAILY WORKER drive. Suddenly it comes to life. First a check for $105.00, then for $5.00, for $10.00, for $50.00—to Save The DAILY WORKER.

John Kasper has moved to New York.

And it makes a h—eaven of a lot of difference!

BISHOP BROWN SPEAKS BEFORE NEGRO CONGRESS

Calls For Unity of All Workers

renting and selling of homes shall be taken out of the hands of all private persons and be made a matter of public administration with the first applicant served regardless of race.

"2. We demand the full and equal admittance of our people to all theaters, restaurants, hotels, railroad station waiting-rooms, and all other places of public resort, and no separation or recognition of color distinction, and that heavy penalties be imposed against persons who discriminate.

"We regard these political and social demands as embodying the demand of full social equality for the Negro people."

Bishop William Montgomery Brown, recently expelled by the house of bishops for heresy, in a speech before the American Negro Labor Congress at the Tuesday evening session, spoke on International Labor Defense.

In his speech the bishop ridiculed the idea of supernatural gods and called upon the workers of all colors to unite in the common cause to wipe "gods from the skies and capitalists from earth."

In speaking of saints and sinners Brown provoked much mirth by saying:

Workers Greatest Saints.

"Bishops and preachers are sinners and you are the saints. They do no useful work, that is why they are sinners. You do lots of work. Every strike is a saintly act. That is why you are saints. uHman acts depend upon work. He who works hardest to make a living is the greatest saint."

When he described how he came to leave the orthodox viewpoint following the world war he expressed his then arising doubt as to the function of supernatural gods in the following words:

Gods Fight Wars.

"A great war came along. I knew nothing about the facts. I was too busy attending to what has been told me. I was supposed to believe that a christian god had sent this war to punish the imperialism of Germany and give the world democracy. The Germans thot that the christian god has sent the war to punish the democracy of America and to give the world imperialism.

"America came out of the war with lots of imperialism to burn. It has been devolved into despotism.

"Twenty million young lives were crushed out and the world flowed with blood, before the quarrel of the gods in the sky and the capitalists on earth came to an end.

Can't Depend on Gods.

"As long as we look to the gods for help we shall be in a hopeless plight. I thought that if these gods were real they were gods so cruel that a decent man could have nothing to do with them."

In speaking of the International Labor Defense, he said:

"The International Labor Defense is the greatest of all subjects.

"The greatest religious movement is the international labor movement.

"When a man goes to work, he gives himself to society more completely than mere philanthropists. The philanthropist gives his money and goes to play golf all day. The capitalist makes his investment and then starts a trip around the world. But when the worker contributes his labor, he has to give himself. He cannot send it by special messenger, he has to go with it himself and stand by it thru every minute of his working hours, every day and every year."

Must Overthrow System.

He described the mission of the workers under capitalism in the following words:

"Your purpose is to overthrow this system which impoverishes you. They believe that you are at war with society, simply because you are trying to liberate it from ignorance."

He ended his speech amidst a great ovation with the slogans of "Down with Jim Crowism!" "Long live the Riffians in the fight for independence!" and "Long live International Labor Defense!"

NEW HAVEN WORKERS PARTY ISSUES PLATFORM TO BE USED IN CITY ELECTION CAMPAIGN

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 28.—Local New Haven of the Workers (Communist) Party has printed 10,000 copies of its election program, in the present city elections. The program condemns the present democratic administration for the poor condition of the workers, referring to the decrease in real wages, to high cost of living, high rents, and poor education. It points to the waistmakers' strike of a few years ago, when pickets were arrested, to the recent College St. theater building strike, where police were used. The Schleifer case, (where an organizer for the Machinists' Union, and strike leader was convicted of violation of a criminal syndicalist law, during the strike, on evidence which a superior court has ruled out, thus allowing Schleifer a new trial) was pointed out as a classic example of the use of courts to break strikes, by convicting strike-leaders.

It charges that "while either capitalist party has been in office, the workers of the New Haven have been compelled to work in huge 'prisons,' under spy systems, under the open shop, at inhumanly low wages. Both parties approve of these conditions."

Condemns Non-Partisan Policy.

The non-partisan policy, is condemned, which in New Haven takes the form of throwing most of labor support to the democratic party. So intimate are the ties, that the chairman of the Trades Council, John Murphy, has been chairman of the board of aldermen, and only a few days ago was rewarded with the position of town chairman of the democratic party. The effect of the non-partisan policy has been "to tie labor leaders to the capitalist chariot which crushes the workers, and obtain the blessing of these misleaders." The call is made for a labor party.

The Issues.

While advocating the full measure of the Communist program, the platform gives our demands on the immediate needs of the workers, covering the question of injunctions, public utilities, housing the cost of living, unemployment, schools, etc. A demand is made for the repeal of the criminal syndicalist law.

Not Forgetting the Betrayers.

The platform does not close without paying its respects to the socialist party, which has candidates in the field in this city, for its betrayal of the workers thruout the world.

The platform ends with an appeal to the workers of New Haven to support the program and candidates of the Workers (Communist) Party, who are as follows:

For mayor, R. S. Kling; controller, Abraham Horwitz; treasurer, Joseph Schlossberg; city clerk, Rose Markle; tax collector, Joseph Joffe.

Before this campaign is over, thousands of workers in this city will know more definitely what it is that the Communists want.

PAINLEVE AGREES TO FORM NEW FRENCH CABINET; CAILLAUX WILL BE OUT; HERRIOT MAY COME IN

PARIS, Oct. 28.—M. Painleve, who yesterday resigned with his cabinet, tonight accepted the invitation of President Domergue to form a new cabinet.

M. Painleve, it is understood, will include in his new cabinet many of the members of the body which resigned yesterday, but of course M. Caillaux, whose policy as finance minister caused the downfall of the cabinet, will not be included.

It is probable that M. Herriot, former premier, whose criticisms of Caillaux, contributed largely to the situation which led to the cabinet's resignation will be invited to join the new cabinet.

Soviet Russia Asks Seat in Chinese Tariff Conference

into effect from the day of signature.

Laugh at Imperialists' "Generosity."

The Chinese are openly scornful of the word "generosity" so frequently used in the replies of the imperialists when they mention their attitude toward the demands of China for autonomy. Ching Ting-wang flaunted his disbelief and that of all China in the faces of the delegates when he came out with a statement which, in part, is as follows:

"The powers," said the Chinese tariff expert, Dr. C. T. Wang, "are repeating their policy as revealed at Paris and at Washington. They are beating around the bush, seeking to bewilder China in her aspirations and so confuse her that they will be enabled to maintain their special privileges. The powers are seeking to bind China tighter, while the desire of all the Chinese people is for more freedom.

Cannot Force the People to Buy.

"It is like a number of strong men speaking to one who is being pinned down by them and asking him why he does not get up. The powers say they will do so and so when disorders and anti-foreign agitations that embitter feelings are put down. If they mean they will treat us fairly when China suppresses the boycott against a certain country (Great Britain) then in the name of justice and fairness I say this is entirely uncalled for.

"In commercial transactions no one can compel another man to buy or sell against his wish. There is no law nor convention by which the people may be forced to buy what they don't want. If the cause of the boycott is analyzed and removed you will find that the boycott will stop by itself. On the other hand, if the powers insist upon upholding the inequality between China and foreigners and the continuation of special privileges in China, I am afraid the feeling of the people will become more intense and the result may be more undesirable, to the detriment of China and the foreign powers as well."

Soviet Russia Wants Entry.

The imperialists are also in hot water over the rumored intention of Soviet Russia to demand a seat at the conference in the near future as an interested nation on account of the fact that the conference aims to take up the question, not only of tariffs at the seaports and on the Korean border, but on the Munchurian border, where the whole of Sino-Russian trade passes.

Unless Soviet Russia is admitted to the conference it contends that the tariffs on these borders cannot be changed without her consent, and since the imperialist powers are running China's affairs, Soviet Russia will not discuss the question with China alone, but will insist on being admitted to the conference, altho the nine powers had carefully left the Soviet Union out of the invitations, on the ground that it was not a party to the Washington conference—regardless of the fact that it asked to attend but was denied.

If not admitted to the Peking conference, Soviet Russia declares that it will not be bound and may place prohibitative tariffs on Chinese imports.

Arrest Rail Clerk in Booze Graft Quiz

The first formal arrest in the investigation of the $9,000,000 beer ring centering in Chicago, was made when a warrant charging conspiracy to violate the prohibition law was served on Alfred Borener, chief clerk for the New York Central railroad at Elkhart, Ind.

Borener, brot yesterday to the district attorney's office by his Chicago superior, has been held by the federal authorities since. Agents working on the case, said he had made a detailed confession.

Important Section Membership Meeting

SECTION THREE

(CENTRAL MANUFACTURING AREA)

All party members belonging to the following party units: Lithuanian No. 5, Lithuanian No. 41, Lithuanian No. 93, Ukrainian South Side No. 5, Polish South Side No. 23, Czecho-Slovak Town of Lake, Slovak Town of Lake, MUST attend the general section membership meeting to be held at

VILNIS, 3116 South Halsted Street
WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1925, 8 P. M.

At this meeting all the party members belonging to the above branches will be registered for the purpose of being assigned to the new proper party units in the reorganization of the Workers (Communist) Party into shop and street nuclei.

EVERY PARTY MEMBER BELONGING TO ANY OF THE ABOVE BRANCHES WHO WANTS TO RETAIN HIS OR HER MEMBERSHIP IN THE WORKERS (COMMUNIST) PARTY, MUST BE PRESENT AT THIS MEETING AND BE REGISTERED.

NEW YORK SECTION MEETINGS START MONDAY, NOVEMBER 16, TO CARRY OUT REORGANIZATION

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Fifty-three out of a total number of sixty-five branches were represented at the section meetings of branch functionaries held here on Sunday and Monday as the first step in the program of reorganization as laid down by the Central Executive Committee for New York City. To this it must be added that the branches absent, altho twelve in number, represent only about 5% of the membership, they being mostly branches of no more than ten members, whose existence at times assumes a doubtful character.

The meetings were held in six different sections, Down Town, Harlem, Bronx, Williamsburg, Brownsville and South Brooklyn. The Bronx Section carried off the crown by having 100% attendance.

Material Distributed.

The Reorganization Commission of the District decided that registration is to be taken up in the branches. The section meetings of branch functionaries therefore had for their major tasks in addition to an explanation and discussion of the entire plan of reorganization, the instruction of the branch functionaries how to proceed to get a complete registration of the membership of their respective branches, and the mobilization of the membership for the new section membership meetings which will be called according to the place of employment of the members. Each functionary received a complete set of instructions, together with the necessary material for the branch registration. This included the following material:

(a) a form upon which immediately to furnish the District with a certified list of the membership on the books together with the standing of each member.

(b) Enough letters signed by the General Secretary of the District to send to every member notification of a special meeting of the branch for the purpose of taking the registration.

(c) A list of the new sections according to working areas together with the place and date when each member is to report, according to the place of employment as shown by the registration.

(d) Registration cards.

(e) A set of complete instructions how to proceed in every step from the time of the beginning of the registration up to the time of the new section membership meetings.

In addition to the branch functionaries who are in charge and responsible to the District Executive Committee for the complete registration and delivery of every member from the territorial branch to the new units, a commission of three was appointed for each section to be in charge of the work of the section.

Ready for Reorganization.

The comrades present displayed an extraordinary eagerness to proceed as rapidly as possible with reorganization. The questions asked were mostly how to proceed with the reorganization, and how the new units will function. Also who can be formed into a shop nucleus and what will happen to those who are unable to be formed into shop nuclei was frequently asked. A good portion of the questions dealt with the functions of the language bureaus and the disposition of federation property.

As a whole the questions and discussion showed that the party was ready both ideologically and organizationally for the new form of organization. That the problem now was not to proceed slowly so that the membership can gradually become accustomed to the new form, but on the contrary to see to it that the reorganization proceeds as quickly as possible in order not to cause disappointment among the membership who are eager and in many cases even impatient for the reorganization.

Second Step for Action.

Now that the first step in the reorganization has been successful we are concentrating all our energy for the registration which takes place in the branches beginning October 23rd up to November 8th. For this purpose special meetings of every branch are called, and a representative of the District Executive Committee sent to every meeting to help take the registration. Each branch will organize special comrades to visit the homes of those who do not attend the branch meetings regularly and bring them down to the special registration meeting. Every member must make it his or her business to register during the above period. Section headquarters will be open every night so that those who for some reasons failed to attend the special branch meeting will have another opportunity to register.

From November 8th to November 16th the registration cards will be classified according to the place of employment and the new working area sections.

On November 16th the NEW SECTION MEMBERSHIP MEETINGS will begin.

The following is an instruction sheet that every member will receive prior to the section membership meetings, according to the new working areas, giving the time and place as well as any other information necessary:

Where and When to Report.

You are to report absolutely to one of the following section membership meetings in the sections listed below according to your place of work.

All employed shop, factory, and office workers go to the section membership meetings in the section in which the place of their last employment is located.

Building trade workers (for the present time) will attend the section meetings in the section in which their contracting shop is located.

The following sections meet at:

1—Battery to Houston Street, East and West, 105 Eldrige St., Thursday, November 19th.

2—Houston to 14th Street, E. & W., 66 E. 4th St., Thursday, Nov. 19th.

3—15th St. to 23rd St., E. & W., 108 E. 14th St., Monday, Nov. 16th.

4—24th St. to 34th St., E. & W., 301 W. 29th St., Monday, Nov. 16th.

5—35th St. to 59th St., E. & W., Bryant Hall, 6th Ave. & 42nd Street, Friday, Nov. 20th.

6—59th St. to 129th St., E. & W., 664 E. 104th St., Friday, Nov. 20th.

10—Brownsville (all), 1844 Pitkin Ave., Wednesday, Nov. 18th.

11—South Brooklyn, Bath Beach, Boro Park and Coney Island, 764 40th, Brooklyn, Sunday, Nov. 22nd, at 3:00 p. m.

Night workers will attend the meeting at 108 East 14th St., Monday, Nov. 16th, 2 p. m.

All those working in Jamaica will attend meeting in Brownsville.

All those working in Astoria will attend meeting in Bryant Hall.

All those working in Staten Island will attend meeting at 108 East 14th (Sec. 3).

The following will attend the meetings at the above sections in which they reside:

All housewives.

All domestic servants.

All tradesmen, retail dealers, small business men, etc.

Doctors, dentists, lawyers, etc.

Salesmen, agents (who have no steady place of employment).

All section meetings to be held at 6 p. m. sharp with the exception of section 11.

At the section meetings temporary section committees will be formed, and the work of the new sections will begin. All those who up to that time will still be outside of the new units will be followed up both thru the old branch and the new section committees under whose jurisdiction they will be according to their place of work.

Every member must register.

Every member prepare for section meetings.

Stockholders Fight Bankers

Four stockholders of the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, with holdings amounting to $23,000,000, have sought from Fed. Judge James H. Wilkerson permission to file an entervening petition allowing them to enter bankruptcy proceedings on the road. The stockholders object to certain features of the Kuhn-Loeb reorganization plan for the road.

Studebaker Nucleus Has 40 Members in South Bend, Ind.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 28—In South Bend, Ind., the Workers (Communist) Party is now completely organized on the shop nucleus basis. The comrades are enthusiastic about the possibilities for real Communist work. There are about 40 members at present in the Studebaker nucleus, but the comrades are confident of getting many more. At a meeting with the Executive Committee on Friday, Oct. 23, Comrade Martin Abern, district organizer, took up the question of shop activitity, printing of a shop paper, workers' correspondence, etc.

South Bend will participate in the district educational circuit and expects to get a large turnout for the lecture course to be conducted by Comrade Carlson.

Prepare Mass Meeting.

The South Bend comrades are making preparations for a large mass meeting on Soviet Anniversary Day. The meeting will be held October 8, 1925, 2 p. m., at Hungarian Hall, 316 South Chafin St. Comrade Lovett Fort-Whiteman, organizer American Negro Labor Congress, will be the main speaker, and a special leaflet is being got out to reach the numerous Negro workers of South Bend.

South Bend is a strongly concentrated and heavy industry town, the Studebaker Motor corporation and the Oliver Chilled Plow Co., being the oustanding industries exploiting thousands of wrokers. The party, organized on the shop nucleus basis, expects to make good headway among these workers.

Waukegan Listens to Report on Party Trade Union Tasks

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Oct. 28.—The Workers' (Communist) Party in Waukegan, Ill., is getting on the job with the formation of Communist fractions in the labor unions. Comrade Oliver Carlson spoke before a membership meeting of the party on Thursday, October 22, on the subject of trade union work and took up in detail the campaign the Chicago district is conducting to get all party members to join a labor union. As a consequence, a committee of nine, two each from the carpenters, chauffeurs and teamsters and one each from the other unions, painters, molders, musicians, barbers and steamfitters, represented at the party meeting, was appointed to push the trade union work and to build a local unit of the Trade Union Educational League. This committee is responsible for the formation of Communist fractions in these and other unions. This preliminary work is now being conducted.

Progressive and radical elements are being gotten together in order, at an early date, to hold a general meeting and form a Trade Union Educational League unit. Fifty members were present at the meeting, which also took up other important party matters, such as shop and street nuclei reorganization.

Springfield Is Now Fully Reorganized on Shop Nuclei Basis

Local Springfield, Ill., Workers (Communist) Party has been full reorganized on a shop nucleus basis, making an addition to the party units that are being swiftly organized in the Chicago, District No. 8 on the new form. To date, the following units are on a shop and street nuclei basis in District 8: Chicago, 14 nuclei, including Pullman, Section 1 and isolated nuclei; West Frankfort, three shop nuclei, rest of the party being reorganized; Dowell, Ill., entirely; South Bend, Ind., entirely; Zeigler, Ill., entirely; Gary, Ind., entirely; Springfield, Ill., entirely. The approximate membership organized into shop nuclei is 300; into street nuclei, thirty.

Klan Jury Complete.

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Oct. 28.— A jury to try D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana ku klux klan; Earl Gentry and Earl Klinck on a charge of murder as a result of the death of Miss Madge Oberholtzer was completed here late this afternoon.

TION, SLAVERY, SPEED-UP, Y SYSTEM, WAGE CUTS AND THE BLACKLIST IN PASSAIC MILLS

By LOUIS KOVESS.

ARTICLE I.

C, N. J., Oct. 28.—A few months ago the textile barons decided to ntry-wide wage cutting offensive.

ttack started in the New England states, and since then the waves reductions traveled from east to west. The toiling slaves of the de have now come to a crossroad where they have to choose, either against wage reductions, or nder and allow more present ure wage cuts.

The Passaic Situation.

Botany Worsted Mills and Gar- Worsted Mills under the control he Botany Consolidated Mills, en- ced a ten percent wage reduction rting October 5, 1925. The 25 per- ent overtime bonus was reduced to 10 percent. With this order the wages of 6,200 workers were cut down.

In the mills of this corporation the usual week is 48 hours, but at present the average is only 28 hours a week. Before the wage reduction the new employes received 45 cents an hour and the old employes received 50-52 cents per hour, which meant a very "big wage."

The Pitkin Worsted Company on Oct. 10 announced a 10 percent wage reduction for 300 workers.

The Passaic Spinning Company also reduced the wages of 1,200 workers 10 percent.

Gera's Bright Trick.

The Gera Mills lays off its old employes who worked for 45-48 cents per hour and then takes them back to work for 38 cents per hour. Besides this, the company makes such changes in its shift system, by which only the profits of the company are increased and the exploitation of the workers is intensified. The following companies, Forstman & Huffman, New Jersey Worsted Spinning Co. and Samuel Hird & Sons for the time being deny their preparations for the same wage reductions.

But the signs undoubtedly show that the wage reduction will be carried out in every mill, but not at one time, for the reason that the united action of the Passaic knitters would be that much harder.

Starvation Campaign.

This series of wage cutting was preceeded by a starvation campaign in the fullest sense of the word.

One company after another reduced its work, so that the army of those out of work should scare those yet at work.

One mill after another started the part-time work system and without exception the time and earning of the workers was reduced to one-half of their regular earaings.

Thus the wage reduction of the Passaic mills was prepared by the textile barons that the workers being frightened and fearing to lose their daily bread should submit themselves, without revolting to this attack.

Espionage System, Slavery.

Many remember yet the revelation of the espionage system enforced in the textile industry made by Miss J. W. Wise.

Miss Wise writes in the April 6, 1925, issue of the New York Times: "Passaic and other Jersey mill owners blacklist the workers."

If one who looks like a worker gets off the railroad at the Passaic station with a hand bag in his hand he is followed by the spies of the textile barons. These spies often wedge themselves into the homes of the workers and report to their masters.

I found many families where the women worked from 7 o'clock in the evening till 5 o'clock in the morning and the man from 5 o'clock in the morning till 7 o'clock at night.

If somebody is thought suspicious in one of the mills he cannot get any more work in any of the mills in Passaic.

The central office of the textile barons, the Woolen Council, is at the same time the centre of the blacklisting.

This situation remained after the above revelation was made, only the bosses became more careful and as a result some of the textile barons formally dropped out from the Woolen Council.

Child Slavery.

In the Passaic knitting factories, 15-year-old children work in the "good days," that means in the time of long working hours for 8-10 dollars, and now for 4-5 dollars a week.

Distress, wage reduction, espionage system, slave conditions,—no wonder that the Passaic knitters feel that the measure is filled.

Rebellion Brewing.

The Passaic knitter is no longer that humble slave who can quietly endure everything as in the past years after the union was broken. Today he is dissatisfied and he will not keep this a secret. He revolts and begins to realize that he can not lose anything but his chains.

The Passaic knitters have learned that they have to organize themselves. But how should they organize?'

This question we will answer in our next article, this being the first article of a series on conditions in the Passaic mills.

PHILIPPINES ARE WITH CHINA AGAINST POWERS OF WEST, SAYS QUEZON

MANILA, Oct. 28.—Manuel Quezon, president of the Philippine senate in discussing a Chinese immigration bill being considered by that body today, urged the elimination of anything antagonistic to the friendship of China. "The treatment being accorded the Chinese by western peoples is offensive to us," Quezon said. "We, too, are orientals."

Legion Bill Demands Universal Draft for Next Natl. Emergency

WASHINGTON,—Universal draft of the man-power and material resources and industrial organizations of the United States, in time of national emergency, is proposed in a bill which the American legion, thru its national legislative committee, announces it will offer in congress in December.

"The bill gives to the president the authority to take the necessary steps to stabilize prices of commodities," the legion says. "It will draft into the service of the United States all persons between the age of 21 and 30 or such other limits as may be fixed, without exception on account of industrial occupation, and will proclaim the material resources and industrial organizations of the country under government control during the period of the emergency.

"During the last session of congress such a bill was introduced in the house by Rep. Royal Johnson of So. Dakota and in the senate by Sen. Capper of Kansas. These bills will be again introduced and every effort made to secure their enactment into law."

Debt Settlement Wrecked

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The tentative Anglo-French debt settlement plan has been wrecked by the fall of the Painleve cabinet, according to official opinion here. It is not believed that the status of the Locarno pacts will be affected.

Plan Wage Cut for Teachers in Chicago

SUPERINTENDENT WILLIAM McANDREW has drawn up a new salary schedule for teachers which he has presented to the board of education.

The schedule has not as yet been adopted by the school board because of the greater financial burden it would place on its already depleted treasury. Consequently deductions were formed and stories began to circulate that the schedule calls for an increase in teachers' salaries. In that role it is being exploited by McAndrew and his whole retinue of boosters from the Chicago Tribune, the mouthpiece of big business, to the civic clubs with their representatives of big business, the very same business interests which imported McAndrew to Chicago to do their bidding on the school board.

The hypocritical arguments advanced by McAndrew and echoed by this group is that teachers' salaries must be raised to meet the higher cost of living. McAndrew takes on the role of champion of the teachers' cause. McAndrew, who has robbed the teachers of their councils, who has denied them the right to receive notices of their federation meetings, who has burdened them with rules that harrass them at every turn, dons the cloak of teachers' benefactor and goes forth begging for more humane consideration of the teachers' needs.

Will He Get Away With It?

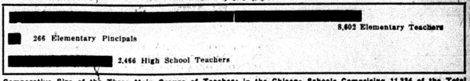
Already McAndrew has succeeded in causing the division in the teachers ranks which he is working for, and the principals take the position of boosting the schedule disregarding entirely the fact that by this move they are placing themselves on record of favoring a cut in wages for the large bulk of teachers. He has used them to work upon the mayor of Chicago and upon various organizations, getting them to write letters and to make personal calls to talk up the schedule.

Story Told by Figures.

The figures of this schedule are given in full in the latest number of the Teachers' Bulletin and they carry an entirely different message to the teachers of Chicago. Instead of the promises of fatter envelopes at the end of each month, the teachers will be greeted with the direct opposite, a cut in wages. These figures show that the various divisions of teachers will be given a direct cut in wages until the seventh year of teaching when there are recommendations for an increase. In other words the money will be taken from one division to be given to another. For this increase other changes in the school system will be affected. For instance the size of classes will be increased and that change will affect all teachers, those receiving a cut in wages even more than those who are to be favored with an increase. These economies will help increase the salaries of a small aristocracy of the staff, thus creating a division of interests.

There are 11,334 teachers in the Chicago schools. Out of this group there are 8,602 elementary teachers, 266 elementary principals, and 2,466 high school teachers. If the proposed McAndrew schedule is adopted by the board of education it means that the large bulk of teachers will have their wages docked and in many cases a very serious cut in wages as will be seen from only a glance at the tables which we reprint at the end of this article.

The Chicago Teachers' Federation has gone on record as being opposed to this salary schedule. Their protest should, however, carry with it definite recommendations for an increase in wages which would include all the teachers so that they would be able to meet the increased cost of living. And this recommendation should also carry a demand for decrease in the size of classrooms to enable the teachers to give more attention to the children individually.



Comparative Size of the Three Main Groups of Teachers in the Chicago Schools Comprising 11,334 of the Total 12,102 Members of the Education department.

GENERAL LEVEL OF EMPLOYMENT TEN PER CENT BELOW 1923; BUT TWO PER CENT OVER A YEAR AGO

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Employment gains between August and September meant a return to work for upwards of 75,000 factory workers in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, according to reports from the state labor departments. As these states employ over a quarter of all factory workers in the counrty the reports indicate the usual fall revival.

The reports, however, show the general level of employment in these states fully 10 per cent below average employment in 1923. Fully a quarter million workers who had employment in the factories of these states two years ago are not on the payrolls today.

Not So Much As Last Year.

New York reports a gain of 2 per cent in the number of factory workers in September compared with August. The gain between August and September a year ago amounted to 4 per cent, but according to the state labor commissioner, industry was then pulling out of a worse depression. He notes that this September the level of employment is also 2 per cent over a year ago.

Pennsylvania reports a gain of 1.3 per cent in factory employment between August and September. In this state the improvement compared with a year ago amounts to more than 5 per cent. In New Jersey the gain over August was 5.5 per cent and 4.5 per cent over a year ago.

But the apparent gains in these states compared with last year indicate steadier employment rather than more employment. More employment in the summer and early fall has been secured at the cost of employment in the winter. This appears in the following figures showing average employment in the first nine months of 1924 and 1925 expressed as a percentage of the average number employed in 1932:

First 9 months Employment in	Percent of 1923 1924	 1925
New York	91.6	89.9
New Jersey	89.3	85.8
Pennsylvania	90.2	86.7

So far in 1925 employment has averaged nearly 2 per cent below 1924 in New York, 4 per cent below 1924 in New Jersey and 4 per cent below in Pennsylvania. The level is 10 per cent below 1923 in New York, 14.2 per cent below in New Jersey and 13.3 per cent below in Pennsylvania.

Meanwhile wages stay up with employers asserting that they must not at present be reduced but that foreign competition must be met with efficiency and still more efficiency. As efficiency means among other things reductions in wage costs thru getting production with fewer employes, a return to anything like boom employment is remote. The danger is that a slowing up of the overdone building boom will bring another period of serious unemployment and wage deflation.

Germans View Calmly French Cabinet Fall

BERLIN, Oct. 28.—German foreign policy will undergo no revision as a result of Painleve's resignation, the German press agreed today. This belief seemed consistent with Paris advices, which reflected the opinion there, that Aristide Briand would continue as foreign minister.

Collapse of the franc and Caillaux's failure to conclude an American debt settlement were the causes seen by the German newspapers for Painleve's resignation.

GENTLE JEWELERS' REWARD FOR DEAD ROBBERS A SUBSIDY GIVEN TO POLICE FOR USELESS MURDER

By CARL HAESSLER (Federated Press Editor).

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—(FP)—It's four times more profitable to kill a man outright under certain Chicago circumstances than to have him arrested and tried by the courts. It will be net you $1,000 to choke or club or shoot a man to death under these circumstances. It will net you only $250 if you inform the police and he is convicted.

$1,000 Reward If Dead.

The circumstances are laid down by the Chicago Jewelers' Assn. and displayed on bright purple and gold posters. The posters promise that the jewelers will "pay the sum of $1,000 in cash to any peace officer or to any employe or agent of any jeweler in Cook county, Ill., who shall kill any person robbing or attempting to rob said jeweler, provided, however, that such killing shall be necessary and justified under the laws of the state and take place while said peace officer or employe or agent of said jeweler is resisting the robbery of said jeweler's store or stock of merchandise or effecting the arrest of such robber or is attempting to prevent the escape of such robber."

The designation jeweler includes jewelry, clock, watch and silverware manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers, and diamond importers and dealers in Cook county.

Only $250 Reward Alive.

At the same time, the poster continues, "a cash reward of $250 will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone participatng in a robbery with a gun, or attempted robbery with a gun of any regular established jeweler in Cook county."

In each case not only robbery but "attempted" robbery will whip a vision of $1,000 before the excited eyes of underpaid jewelry clerks who will feel authorized to use their guns in crowded stores, not only against robbers, but against people whom they consider as would-be robbers attempting to escape.

The temptation to save life and catch the supposed robber will be just one-fourth as strong. The same is true of the police or deputies who will get only $250 for possibly risking their lives in making arrests but will get $1,000 for risking the lives of the public or of possibly innocent suspects.

RUSS POLITICAL PRISONERS UNDER CZARIST RULE PROTEST AGAINST HORTHY PERSECUTION OF RAKOSI

MOSCOW, October 28.—The association of former political prisoners consisting of Bolsheviks, mensheviks and social revolutionaries who fought against czarism, held a protest meeting against the white terror in Hungary. The Moscow branch of the association has 1,620 members who total 10,063 years of hard labor in sentences received from czarist courts. This branch has adopted the following resolution:

"We have in our ranks veterans of the Paris Commune, the 'Narodni Volya' and the 'Semlia and Volya.' Many of us do not belong to the Russian Communist Party. Despite the differences of opinion amongst us we point unanimously to the experience of all revolutionary struggles, that if the sword of reaction falls upon the leaders of the revolutionary parties, then the whole people is struck. We therefore raise our voices in protest against the white terror in the bourgeois countries, against the Horthy bandits who intend to place Rakosi, Weinberger and the other Hungarian comrades before an extraordinary court. We appeal to all workers and peasants and honest persons of all shades of political opinion, to thrust aside their differences and undertake everything possible to save the lives of Rakosi and his comrades.

"Hands off Rakosi and the other Hungarian revolutionaries!

"Fight for the freedom of the struggling workers!"

Mitchell's Attorney Demands General Be Excluded from Jury

WASHINGTON, Oct., 28.—The defense of Col. Mitchell, who went on trial here before a military court on a charge of "conduct prejudicial to military dicipline" struck the first blow by challenging the right of Brig. General Albert J. Bowley, commandant at Fort Bragg, N. C., to sit upon his "jury of generals."

The challenge was made by Rep. Frank Reid, civilian counsel for Mitchell, who declared Gen. Bowley had shown prejudice to the flying colonel in a speech made before the American legion meeting at Greenville, S. C., on Oct. 20, 1925.

Roumanian Royalty and Roumanian Peasants

Queen Marie of Roumania writes for the Hearst papers. She is given a special department in which she advises her suffering sisters as to the best way in which to maintain their pulchritudinous charm.

In a recent issue she says:

> When you are very tired or worried drop the thought of peace, rest and contentment into your mind, relax your body, forego all unnecessary food and activity—and see how it helps.
> We eat too much anyhow. This has been said so often it is trite, yet we go on eating, overeating. Try my recipe occasionally—soup, bread and fruit—plus relaxation.

In the same issue of the Hearst sheet in which this inspiring queenly advice is furnished, there is a news story which reads as follows:

> KISHINEFF, Oct. 26.—The trial before military court-martial of 300 Bessarabians for their share in the Communist disturbances at Tatar Bunar in September, 1924, promises to last until the end of the year. The trial is grimly set in the court yard of the old turreted prison overlooking the town. The general public is admitted and many peasant women listen to their husbands being cross-examined. The prisoners are most peasants, young and middle-aged, belonging to Russian, Roumanian, Bulgarian and Albanian nationalities.

These peasants have been in jail for more than a year, suffering all the tortures which the cleverly cruel bloodhounds of the landlords' government of Roumania could devise.

Their crime?

Trying to get back the land which the landlords, aided by the Roumanian monarchy, had deprived them—trying to divide up the big estates so that each peasant and his family might have enough to make a living.

"Many peasant women listen to their husbands being cross-examined."

These peasant women and their children have been without the support of their husbands for more than a year. They have listened outside the prison walls, until driven away by the blows of the military, to the groans and cries of their husbands under the torture. Their huts have been burned by the soldiery and whole villages driven into the wilderness. They are all half starved and many more have died of starvation.

But, says the Roumanian Queen Marie, "we eat too much anyhow. Try my recipe occasionally—soup, fruit, bread, plus relaxation."

Another Queen Marie, with the additional name of Antoinette, advised the French peasants, if they had no bread, to eat cake. A king of France—the country whose ruling class finances the Roumanian army and entertains its queenly commander—told the peasants to eat grass.

Queen Marie Antoinette's head rolled into the bloody basket under the Paris guillotine. The workers and peasants stuffed the dead mouth of the dead king with grass, in memory of his advice to them.

In Roumania and all thru the Balkans history is setting the stage for a successful revolt of the town workers and poor peasantry. Only with the aid of the imperialist powers have these revolts been crushed. The great powers have come to the aid of monarchy in Roumania just as in an earlier period they came to the rescue of the French rulers.

A queen writes for the foolish women of the middle class and adds thereby to the subsidy paid to her royal entourage by the enemies of the workers and peasants.

They, the imperialists and the monarchs, fear the new force that inspires and aids the bleeding peasantry—the force of which Lenin spoke:

> The Soviet republic sends into the villages armed detachments of workers (in the first place the most advanced) from the capitals, who carry socialism into the countryside, rally to their side the poorer elements, organize and enlighten them, and help them to SUPPRESS THE RESISTANCE OF THE BOURGEOISIE.

The tide of working class revolt rises all thru Europe once again. The murder bands of the ruling class have not even crushed the will to freedom among the Roumanian peasantry.

Queen Marie will do well to stay in Dinard and Deauville lest the outraged peasant women give her a dose of her own medicine—apply to her the queenly advice about overeating—without the soup, bread, fruit, and relaxation.

LaFollette—Unknown Quantity

Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., who administered such a salutary defeat to opposing candidates in the special senatorial election held to fill the vacancy created by the death of his father, is the object of much concern on the part of the old guard supporting the republican administration.

Coolidge's stalwart supporter, Butler, along with Senators Edge, Ernst and virtually every other supporter of the regime at Washington, have voiced personal friendship for "young Bob." They are trying to persuade him, on promise of committee assignments, better offices and an increased number of clerks, to abandon the insurgent tactics of his father, and enter the regular republican ranks as an independent. They do not ask him to enter the old guard, but will be satisfied if he will enter the Borah independent group.

This is a desperate attempt to create a real working majority out of the paper majority the republicans have had for the past six years. The former insurgent bloc has been reduced to three members—Senators Brookhart of Iowa, Frazier of North Dakota and Shipstead of Minnesota. If young LaFollette decides to go "insurgent" it means that the republicans will be in a minority against the coalition of insurgents and democrats.

This situation represents a paradox. In domestic politics a coalition of democrats and republican insurgents will fight the Coolidge-Mellon tax proposals in the interests of the petty bourgeoisie, as a means of maintaining an issue to go before the country at the congressional elections next year, while in foreign affairs there will be a coalition of Coolidge republicans and democrats representing the interests of finance-capital against the Borah bloc of independent republicans supporting the industrialists who oppose the world court.

Thus will the democratic party palliate its southern and middle west petty-bourgeois elements for the sake of a united party, and at the same time carry out the foreign policy of its eastern section representing the House of Morgan.

The Propaganda of Marxism and Leninism

By Herman

The A. B. C. of Capitalist Profit.

THE essential character of capitalist exploitation, or in other words the nature of capitalist profit, must be explained clearly, and in a manner easily comprehensible, in the theoretical material at the disposal of Communist agitation and propaganda. Until we have such an explanation constantly at hand, and until we have learnt to make it known everywhere, the last hour of reformism will not have struck in the labor movement. Sometimes it seems as if this aspect of Marxist enlightenment has been placed too much in the background since the labor movement has become older. Are not these things long familiar? We forget that young proletarians are joining the movement every day, and that these have still to learn this A. B. C. of economic Marxism. Its theoretical substantion never becomes superfluous, tho the history and literature of the labor movement have already thrown every possible light on the problem.

If we further remember that new economic phenomena are replacing those of the older theoretical conception, rendering a certain adaption of our former agitative formulas necessary, it becomes the more comprehensible that an increasing aversion is felt against theoretical generalizations. Such generalizations are one of the causes of the regrettable tenacity with which reformism is rooted in the proletariat. And reformism is our most dangerous and obstinate opponent. Capitalism would have been overthrown long since if reformism had not taken it under its protective wings of economic illusions, and thus prevented great masses of the proletariat from joining the revolutionary class war. Reformism does not recognize capitalism itself as the enemy, but merely protests against certain of the regrettable shady sides and excrescences of capitalism. Reformism is willing enough to have these removed with the aid of heaven. Higher wages, shorter working hours—these are demands which may be put forward within the confines of the capitalist system, without attacking the system itself. Appeals are made to the "short-sighted" or to the "socially far-seeing" employer, and the latter is shown that even higher profits will be the reward of his reformist obligingness. Wages and profit are not regarded as the extreme poles of antagonism, but are made to appear as if derived from entirely different sources. But if no antagonism exists here, then no class antagonism exists at all! Thus we arrive at the theoretical substantiation of civil peace and joint action between capital and labor.

It is an urgent necessity to oppose economic shallowness of this kind by a perfectly clear conception of the nature of capital income and labor income!

Following Marx with the utmost closeness, we shall endeavor to draw the fundamental outline of the source of profit.

WE do best to begin with the formula of the circulation of capital; the capitalist buys with money (M): raw materials, machines and labor power for the production of commodities (C), and sells these commodities for which he obtains more money, in which is contained the surplus value (M+S). This process may be represented by the following formula: M—C—M+S.

This is the journey made by money to capital. For money is not capital itself; it is solely the money which passes thru the process to surplus money which becomes capital, "a value breeding surplus value." The whole of the decisive fundamental sources of profit must be demonstrated by this capital formula: M—C—M+S.

M—C is an act of purchase, the purchase of all the prerequisites necessary to production: the purchase of means of production (raw and auxiliary materials, machines, etc.) and of living labor power. Whether we are concerned with purchase or with exchange, in both cases equal values only are offered for one another, or it is simply a matter of cheating or of usury. We here mean "cheating" the underpayment of goods (the seller of the goods does not receive their equivalent). By "usury" we mean the overvalued price of goods (the buyer does not receive the equivalent of the purchase price). Marx assumes that equal values are exchanged. He does this for the purpose of clearly exposing the actual character of capitalist (industrial) profit, which cannot be said to be based in general on any trickery in trade. The development of capitalism during the age of "free competition" tended obviously to the increasing exclusions of deceptible maneuvers and trickery in trade. M—C opposes the producer of goods, or his selling agent, who may of course as succh be an independent merchant, to the future producer of goods. It is clear that we cannot assume the money owner—the buyer, who will later on be "seller" again—to be in possession from the beginning of an economic ascendancy placing him in a position to cheat the commodity owner (the seller).

BUT there is the seller of the commodities known as labor power. He has no capital at his disposal. On the contrary, his absolute lack of means, his proletarian poverty, force him to the constant compulsory sale of the sole possession left to him, his only commodity, his labor power. If we add to this the fact that in the course of capitalist development the proletariat has increased in numbers far exceeding the total demand for workers, so that the "industrial reserve army" (the army of the unemployed) hangs like a chain round the limbs of every proletarian offering his labor power in the market, then it becomes clear that an underpayment is not merely possible, but highly probable. Full payment would mean wages enabling the labor power sold to the capitalist, and expended in the process of capitalist production, to be fully replaced and restored.

We see that wages have nothing to do with the "yield of labor." It has only been necessary to grant the proletarian sufficient wages to enable him to purchase the amount of food required for the maintenance of his standard of life at the customary social, historical and geographical level. As soon as this is not the case, as soon as his real wages (expressed in the actual commodities purchasable with the wages) sink, then the payment has become an underpayment. The worker is cheated of his wages. Wherever there is impoverishment, there the capitalist gains his profit by cheating. There is no doubt that this particular source of profit has again increased to a frightful extent of late. During the period of the decline of capitalism we may observe the stage of "absolute impoverishment" as clearly as we observed during the honeymoon days of capitalism, when it was first putting its household in order. We must remember the words of the Communist Manifesto (1848):

"The laborer becomes the pauper, and pauperism increases even more rapidly than population and wealth."

THE profit thus swindled out of the workers could be pressed out of the capitalists again to a certain extent by means of a comprehensive, energetic and purposeful trade union struggle. If only the workers were fighters—and not social democrats! On the other hand, the gradual lowering of the proletarian standard of life is an essential part of capitalist development, and is only retarded temporarily, and for certain categories of the proletariat, during periods of rapid and greatly increased economic prosperity. Taken all in all, profit gained by cheating is also inevitable as part of the development of capitalism.

Let us observe the process, by which the profit, peculiarly characteristic of capitalism, the "surplus value" is produced. In doing so we set aside for the moment every other source of profit. The capitalist may have paid for the labor power at its "full value." The capitalist may not have earned any special profit on the sale of commodities. He may buy and sell everything at its real value, without trickery or cheating. A capitalist with a stainless white waistcoat! Can he possibly earn any profit?* Of course he can. But this profit is so deeply embedded in the nature of the capitalist method of production that the naive spectator does not observe it at all; it is a profit forming the normal life of capitalism, it is the backbone of all capitalist profit. It might be designated as the "normal profit" of the capitalist, to distinguish it from the strongly contrasting cheated profit or from the monstrous "usury profit" with which we shall deal later. This is the profit which Marx called the surplus value, and to the elucidation of which he devoted the greater part of his economic researches.

In this place we can only deal as briefly as possible with the production of surplus values. The actual exchange value of any commodity is imparted to it by the amount of "socially necessary labor" incorporated in it, that is, the amount of work necessary for the production of the commodity (from the beginning to the end of the process), given the socially normal conditions of production, and the socially average degree of skill and intensity in working. The amount of labor stored in the commodity can only be estimated by the time consumed, by the duration of the expenditure or activity of the whole of the necessary working powers. It is thus labor alone which creates value, and labor—as labor power—is in itself a certain unit of value, determined by the socially necessary amount of labor required to produce the food needed to replace the amount of labor power expended.

"AT a certain stage of human productivity however, the value of the product of a day's labor is greater than the cost of a day's labor power."

The worker creates a greater value than he requires for his subsistence. (Just as the ox can pull a cart containing more hay than it needs as fodder!) And this difference, which under capitalism naturally falls to the commodity buyer of the fortunate represented by labor power, to the capitalist, is the surplus value, the "normal profit" gained in any case, even when no extra profit is won by cheating. (In this world the four legged oxen can however much more certainly expect to receive their necessary ration of fodder!)

After the process of production is completed, the capitalist has received with the value of the commodities produced at the same time surplus value, for the value of the commodities, less the wages paid and the value of the means commodities production consumed, is equivalent to the surplus value. But the capitalist has first to realize this surplus value, to convert it into money, and this is only accomplished by the sale of the commodities (C minus M plus S.)

It is however also possible that the capitalist sells the commodities at a price exceeding their actual value.* In this case the capitalist earns a usurer's profit at the expense of the buyer (consumer). With this we come to the third source of profit: the usurer's profit. In order to render this accessible, the capitalist has however first to attain a prerequisite which is in itself the product of a long capitalist development; he must be able to keep down competition. For "free competition" has naturally the tendency to deprive the individual sellers of their extra (usurer's) profit again, that is, so long as competition is free, the prices tend to approach the actual values.

SHOULD the buyer

During the youthful days of ism the role played by cheated (in addition to the surplus val normal profit) was a very impor
one; as capitalism matured its imp ance lessened. The bouregois sc tists told fables on the "rise of t working class." Now, in the old of capitalism, usurer's profit is added as a leading factor, and all three sources of profit flow into the pockets of the capitalists:

1. The profit cheated out of the workers by means of miserable wages.
2. The normal profit (surplus value) resultant on the purchaseability of labor power.
3. The usurer's profit resultant on monopolist domination of the markets.

Besides this, the real wages of the proletariat can again be reduced by way of usurer's profit, the necessities of existence of the purchasing proletariat being increased in price. Here the cheated profit is again swallowed by the capitalist in the veiled form of usurer's profit.

A fundamental knowledge and a conceptional differentiation of these three forms of profit are the necessary premise for further theoretical enlightenment on the increases, divisions and shiftings of profit under capitalism.

---

* The reverse is equally possible, and can be a source of profit. Should for instance the degree of productivity in some enterprise exceed the social average, the workers employed by this undertaking create an extra surplus profit proportionate to the monopoly of productivity created by the equality of their work. The capitalist realizes this extra profit by not selling the goods at their "individual" value, the value corresponding to the amount of labor required for their production, but at the "socially" determined value. He can, however, sell his goods under their general value, for even then the real "individual" value is realized. In this case the price demanded is under the socially determined value, and the consumer receives a present, so to speak (as for instance under Henry Ford's successful business methods.) But this "extra profit of productivity," in contrat to the actual "usurer's profit" of the organized market monopoly is being based solely on the increased exploitation of the worker, and is generally very short lived, since competitors speedily catch it up.

 We do not deal here with the modification of value with relation to the price of production, caused under capitalism by the equalization of rates of profit. The object of the present article is to first give a popular outline.

In the Fire of Civil War in Soviet Russia

By PAVEL DOROKHOV.
(Fragment from the Soviet Russian Novel "Kolchakovstchina.")

VERA GNEVENKA is with the Western division.

She has a rifle and carries over her shoulder a bag with bandages and lint, medicine bottles and cotton wool. She keeps pace with the division five days and five nights long. She attends to the wounded under the enemy fire. She does it lovingly and with great care.

Every Red Army soldier is like a son to her. She is never tired and knows neither hunger nor fear.

"Comrade Vera, you should rest."

She would not even look up, but would shake her head.

"No time for that."

Vera has a glorious voice. There are few voices like hers.

"Then comrades come rally, let us face the last fight," sweeps like an electrical wave thru the ranks.

"Hurrah! Let us face the last fight."

The red banner is swaying in Vera's hands. Its soft folds cling to her small but erect figure. There is untold charm and inspiration in the words:

"The International unites the human race."

"Hurrah! Unites the human race," the soft girlish voice repeated.

In the Hospital.

IN a corner of the ward, on a rough bedstead, Solomon lies—his head all in bandages. His face is as white as chalk. Vera is beside him. She is Solomon's betrothed. She holds his hand in hers, strokes it gently and sings in an undertone as if lulling to sleep a child:

"Sleep on, little one, sleep,
May the sweet slumber come to you."

Vera called Petruchin; she whispered something to him. He went to the door and called thru the glass door:

"The superintendent, please."

A fishy eye was pressed against the window pane.

"What do you want again?"

"There is a woman here, let her come out."

"She can use the utensil."

"But listen, it is a woman."

"Woman or man, is not that the same to you? With you all are equals."

He caught a glimpse of Vera thru the glass door.

"Do not make any fuss, darling; there is a utensil in the corner."

The Farewell.

SOLOMON'S voice was sorrowful.

"It is not for my sake, Vera, but for yours. I am sorry for the life you have to lead. Your life could have been so beautiful."

"Darling, it is beautiful even now. And there is even happiness—happiness in the struggle and happiness in our personal life."

He pressed Vera's hand gratefully.

"Darling!"

In the evening she cut off her thick, flaxen plait.

"Comrades, those who come out of this alive, please take this to my mother."

IN the night loud steps were heard in the prison passage.

The heavy bolts of the cell door were pushed back. The prison governor had a list of names in his hands.

"Solomon Lobovsky, Alexei Petruchkin, Vera Gnevenko, get ready."

Solomon felt Vera's hand trembling in his.

She embraced him and whispered.

"I am calm, good-bye."

She tore herself away from him.

"Let us go."

She took Solomon and Petruckhin by the arm.

Facing the Executioner.

THEY went as if for a walk, with a light and elastic step. At the outskirts of the wood, surrounded by soldiers, they said good-bye. Vera kissed everyone, and lingered a little longer with Solomon.

They were drawn up in a line, at an interval of two steps from each other, and were face to face with their executioners.

In front of them the muzzles of the rifles, behind them graves. The officer's word of command is clear, distinct and steady.

"Aim at the first. One—two—fire!"

Vera is the third in the row.

"Aim at the third. One—two—" and then he waited.

And seemed to take delight in protracting the agony.

"Hold back."

Her heart beat irregularly, madly. He took breath.

"Aim at the third. One—two—"

Again a pause. A second can be an eternity. The soldiers stood at attention, holding their rifles rigidly.

"Hold back."

Vera understood the joke. Her eyes flashed, she felt elated and the sounds of "The last fight let us face" filled the air.

"Stop the noise of that wanton. Fire!"

She threw up her arms as if they were wings, rose up from the ground, light and airy, and floated away.

"It Was Here."

ONE night two people came to the border of the forest, a man and a little old woman all in black.

They stopped near a tall birch tree.

"It was here," said the man, and went away.

The old woman remained alone.

She knelt down on the downtrodden ground and moaned softly:

"Vera—Vera—my daughter—"

A long time, until dawn, she lay with the face buried in the ground and gave herself up to her motherly grief.

"Vera—my darling—"

She rose, put a little of the soil in her handkerchief and hid it carefully in her bosom. Then slowly and almost breaking down under her grief she went into the town.

"I Will Come Again."

THE little old woman all in black cannot sleep at night. She sits at the window and looks into space during these sleepless nights. She is waiting.

"Vera—my daughter—"

Steps approach the window; there is a soft knock on the window pane.

She jumped up, rushed to the window and opened it wide.

From the street there came a whisper:

"Do not be frightened; I am Vera's comrade."

"I am coming, I am coming."

She rushed into the passage, her feet caught in the folds of her dress, her trembling hands could hardly unbolt the door.

"I was in the same cell with Vera. That evening she asked me to give you this. Here it is."

He gave her a little parcel and when she opened it she saw the golden locks of her child.

"Vera—my darling—"

She buried her slim hands in the silky hair, pressed it to her face, and her whole body shook with sobs.

"My daughter—my darling—"

She took the big man by the hand trustingly.

"You were with her, tell me."

He talked a long time. When he arose, she took his head into her trembling hands, bent it down and kissed him on the forehead.

"You will come again? You are near and dear to me, for you were Vera's comrade."

"I will come, of course, I will come."

When he came out into the street, he raised his hands to his head and merely said, "Alas!"

He ground his teeth, raised his enormous fists threateningly against the sleeping town and vanished in the dark lane.

MR. ROCKEFELLER, SR., IS GRATEFUL

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Sr., is 86 years old. Not like a poor man—a worker—he is spending his years at Tarrytown, N. Y., in leisure. He plays golf and lounges about the spacious, luxurious grounds of his mansion.

Rockefeller has sent a mesage to the world. "Mr. Rockefeller is well and full of good cheer, and is full of gratitude for all the blessings that the coming year holds out for him."

At the Rockefeller plants, tetraethal is being manufactured and is killing off the workers. But it means profits for Rockefeller. That is one of the "blessings" that the year holds out for Rockefeller. Rockefeller's oil wells and refineries are bringing him in millions; his railways and mines mean more millions of profits per year; his steel mills mean added millions. At least $150,000,000 a year is quite a "blessing" for Rockefeller, for which he may well be "full of gratitude."

But how about the workers? No regular unions—either no unions at all or company unions controlled by Rockefeller. The Colorado Fuel and Iron Company owned by Rockefeller has a company union, which the Russell Foundation declares the workers do not want. It has failed—and yet this "industrial democracy," as it is called, is forced upon the workers in lieu of real unions. This helps to ensure the profits of Rockefeller, since the workers are kept from a real struggle for the improvement of their conditions.

This is another of the "blessings" that Rockefeller feels "gratitude" for.

Rockefeller is engaged in vast exploitation of foreign oil fields, and gets the undivided support of the United States government. Mosul, Mesopotamia, Mexico—these are the "interests of American individuals" that impel the United States government to forcefully protect "American rights."

Rockefeller has every good reason to feel grateful for the blessing that he enjoys. His blessings will go on even after he is dead—and his son and grandchildren will continue to enjoy them—unless the workers act in the meantime.

Socialists Assail Communists for War on Strikebreakers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

STOCKHOLM Oct. 28.—When the Communists of Sweden called upon the workers to form a strong labor against the Society of Communal Service, organized by the middle classes of Sweden to carry on strikebreaking activity the social-democrats and their press viciously assailed the Communists.

The Society of Communal Service, consisting of 16,000 business men, professionals and students, and other organizations of a similar nature have been formed in Sweden to assist the government in breaking strikes. The Communists pointed out the danger of these strikebreaking organizations and called upon all workers to form strong labor guards to protect strikers against atacks of these strikebreaking agencies.

The social-democrats and the reactionary labor leaders of Sweden, instead of joining the Communists in their demand for a defensive workers' organization, viciously assailed them.

BITTER-END WARFARE DECLARED BY BOSSES ON ANTHRACITE MINERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 29—Members of several miners' unions in this section in discussing the latest statement of Chairman Samuel D. Warriner, of the anthracite coal operators, in which he declared for an agreement which would include a clause to prevent future strikes in the anthracite fields, have agreed that his attitude indicates that there will be an all winter strike as they have no intention of approving such an agreement.

Statements by operators in the Schuylkill region showed almost unanimous backing of Warriner's position. "There will be no agreement made until the miners are willing to sign a 'no strike' clause for the future," declared several operators.

AMALGAMATED BANK HEADS FIRE SHAFIR

The officials of the Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank, a "labor" bank, has fired Joseph Shafir, a left wing bank clerk, for introducing resolutions at the American Federation of Labor calling for the recognition of Soviet Russia and world trade union unity and denouncing class collaboration.

Joseph Shafir was expelled first from the Bank Clerks' Union at the instructions of the bank head, Mariempietri to Duane Swift and Max Tulchin, for "violating the union constitution." When Shafir demanded that Duane Swift produce the article in the American Federation of Labor or bank clerks' constitution which he violated all Duane Swift could do was read an article in the Federation News attacking Shafir.

When an article exposing the collusion of the bank heads and a number of hirelings who were in the move to drive Shafir out of the union was printed, Mariempietri told Shafir, that if he "acted right" he could stay until January 1. Shafir instead of remaining quiet and allowing his expulsion from the union to quietly pass by, published a statement telling of the conspiracy to get rid of him from the union and the bank.

A few days later, a meeting of the bank's board of directors was held, where the question of Shafir's expulsion from the union was discussed and his discharge from the bank decided on.

Wednesday, fifteen minutes before quitting time at the bank Mariempietri called Shafir to one side and Sam Levine, one of the heads of the bank, head of the Chicago joint board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and general executive board member of the union, discharged Shafir after a well-memorized piece of slap-stick oratory, beginning with, "there comes a time in the life of humans when they must part—(and then after his five-and-ten oratorical demeanor and voice played out)—you're services are no longer required."

He refused to give Shafir any reason for the discharge.

NEGRO LABOR MEET ATTACKS KU KLUX KLAN

Calls for United Action of All Workers

During the Wednesday business session of the American Negro Labor Congress, now meeting at 3118 Giles Ave., in a strong resolution attacking the ku klux klan and showing the class character of the government which brings into being and protects such organizations as the klan called upon the workers of all races and nations to unite in a struggle against the klan.

In the measures taken during the past two or three years against the foreign-born worker—restrictive immigration, proposed laws to fingerprint immigrants—the American Negro Labor Congress sees the working out of the klan ideas with respect to workers who are not necessarily of another color, but who belong to the class which the American government is interested in keeping down. The resolution adopted by the congress follows in full:

Ku Klux Klan.

"The ku klux klan declares its purpose to preserve white supremacy meaning to keep the Negro permanently out of his rights of equal citizenship and degraded to the conditions of a wild animal to be persecuted, hunted, tortured and burned at the pleasure of white individuals or mobs not content with the legal means of suppressing the Negro under 'democratic' government, which are bad enough.

"The ku klux klan forms itself into a criminal band for illegal murder, coercion and terrorization assuming to act as a secondary government. The klan directs its venom, criminality and bigotry not only against the Negro but also against other hard-working people who happen to have been born in other countries and brot here to do the hardest labor of the industries of this country and also against religious liberty.

"This criminal organization shares the authority of the government in many places; it is semi-officially recognized in some states and has complete control of other state governments. Not only does the federal government fail or refuse to act against the band of bigotry and crime, but the influence of the ideas of the klan can be seen in refusal of congress to enforce the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments; and can also be seen in legislation recommended to congress, including the proposals which seek to force all foreign-born working people to carry passports and be registered with the police and to be segregated in special residence districts as the Negroes are segregated. Therefore,

United With All Workers.

In a resolution attacking the exclusion of the Negro from the jury in trials where Negroes are tried, was decried as an attempt to prejudice the Nero and to sentence him long before he is really tried. The congress in the following resolution makes some of its demands that a belief in "white supremacy" be made a bar to anyone who is to be impanelled on a jury:

Juries.

"It is a general custom of police and criminal courts to accord to every white defendant a jury composed of white persons, but at the same time to exclude Negroes from juries to try Negro defendants in important cases. This custom is based on the theory that the white man alone proves the presence of race prejudice in every such trial; therefore, be it

"Resolved, By the American Negro Labor Congress that as long as the principle of white supremacy exists a Negro cannot get a fair trial before a white jury or a mixed jury; and we demand that a belief in 'white supremacy' shall be a legal bar to anyone serving on a jury to try a Negro; be it further

"Resolved, that no Negro owes any respect or obedience to the decisions of any court in which he is discriminated against."

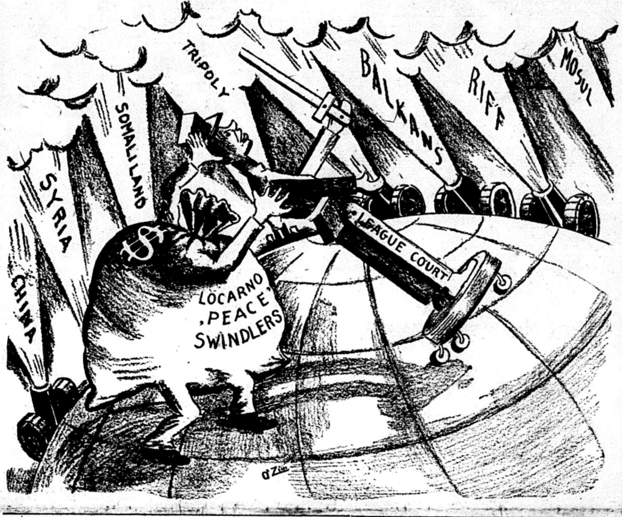
KEEPING UP THE FRAUD



U. S. PROTESTS ENDANGERING OF AMERICAN LIVES

Not Worried About the Natives in Damascus

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, October 29.—The United States government has lodged a protest against the action of General Sarrail, who notified French inhabitants to leave Damascus but failed to notify American and British oil magnates and church "missionaries," for unnecessarily jeopardizing American lives during the bombing of Damascus in which thousands of Arabs were killed.

To Be Used Against Druse

Two American destroyers that were sent to Alexandria to be used against the Druse tribesmen in case they should have taken Damascus, are now held in readiness to aid the American magnates who were jeopardized by the French General Sarrail.

The American position was laid before the Paris government by Ambassador Hendrick, who was instructed to inform the French foreign office that this government expects France to safeguard the lives of the Americans in Syria while she carries on operations against the Druse tribesmen.

SOVIET-BUILT SHIPS LAUNCHED IN LENINGRAD; ORDERS FOR MORE WILL BE GIVEN FOREIGN SHIPBUILDERS

LENINGRAD, Oct. 29.—The first two steamships to be built under the Soviet regime were launched here. Leonid Krassin, commissioner of foreign trade, spoke at the launching ceremony. These two steamers are to be used for the exportation of timber. It was announced that orders for two steamers for the Soviet's Far Eastern trade will be placed soon with German and Italian shipbuilders.

BELGIAN MINERS TO STRIKE MONDAY FOR 5 PER CENT RAISE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Oct. 29—The Belgian coal miners threaten a general strike next Monday if the government does not grant by that time the demand it has so far refused—a wage raise of only five per cent to cover the far greater increase in the cost of living.

The government gives the same excuse that is given by all mine operators in all countries—foreign competition. It proposes to buy 50,000 tons a month of Belgium coal for the state railways as a relief measure, as heretofore the railways have been using reparations coal produced by the German miners enslaved under the Dawes plan.

21 Die in Wreck.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 29—The death toll in the wreck of the Sunnyland, 'Frisco flier, near Victoria, Miss., today reached 21, with the death in a hospital here of Frank Anderson, 19, of Hollywood, Tennessee. Fifty-four persons injured in the wreck were still in Memphis hospitals today but all are expected to recover.

Panaman Students in Organization Move to Fight Imperialism

In the midst of the news of the slow and temporary retirement of American military forces from Panama comes word that the Panama students have taken the first step toward an international Latin-American student's federation to fight American imperialism. According to information made public in this country by the All-America Anti-Imperialist League the students' congress called by the Panama Students' Federation will meet in the City of Panama, June 22, 1926. Students' organizations thruout Latin-America and in the Philippine islands have been invited to send delegates.

CHARGE $350,000,000 STOLEN FROM COTTON GROWERS OF THE SOUTH

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—In the face of criticism and threats of a congressional investigation of the methods of the crop reporting board in estimating the cotton crop, officials of the department of agriculture today remained silent, refusing to comment on the charge made by Senator T. H. Caraway, democrat, of Arkansas, that the last cotton report "cost southern cotton planters $350,000,000."

The board caused a sensation by predicting a cotton crop this year of 15,226,000 bales, which knocked the bottom out of the cotton market for the second time within the month.

While declining to be quoted members of the board showed considerable resentment at the charge made by Caraway that their report "had enabled speculators to clean up in the market."

WHO SET FIRE TO TRUCKLOAD OF PARCELS?

Do Bosses Seek for Strict Injunction?

A truck load of parcel post shipments, that were being carted from the International Tailoring company, 847 Jackson Blvd., to the postoffice, were destroyed by fire under most peculiar circumstances.

What Did the Driver Do?

According to the story told by the police and the company heads, a truck as it passed 727 W. Van Buren street, was stopped by a number of gunmen, gasoline poured over the parcels and then a match applied. The gunmen then sped away and the driver unhitched the horses from the burning wagon. The company officials blame the burning onto the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' members, who are now on their eighteenth week of their strike.

Where Were the Police?

The most peculiar thing about the burning is that this company always has police accompany all its scabs and shipments out of the shop. This time the driver went alone.

Another Frame-up.

The strike leaders claim that this was nothing more than another attempt to blame the union for crimes which company hirelings commit. The International Tailoring company has an injunction against the strikers, but under the new Illinois law, picketing is permissable as long as it is carried on peaceably. The company lawyers are trying to get a more stringent injunction against the union, which will prohibit the union from having effective picket lines in front of the shop by proving that violence is being used.

The company has hired men to smash windows, according to affidavits at Mr. Cunnea's office, and the bombing of Ray Reeder's home, the throwing of the "acid" bomb, which later turned out to be a bottle of citrate of magnesia, a laxative, and the act of violence committed now are undoubtedly done by hirelings who will most likely be used by the company in its attempt to get an injunction prohibiting picket lines around its plant and will be used as an excuse to frame a number of active union leaders and strikers.

M. PAINLEVE'S NEW CABINET CANNOT LAST

Rapid Fall of Franc Spells Doom

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Oct. 28.—Premier Painleve has succeeded in forming his new cabinet today. The only marked change from the one which was dissolved Tuesday is the absence of the former finance minister, Joseph Caillaux.

Aristide Briand is to remain minister of foreign affairs in the reorganized Painleve cabinet. Painleve will take the portfolio of finance minister, instead of the ministry of war, while that post will go to Deladier.

A new portfolio has been created—minister of the budget. This will be filled by Georges Bonnet and will remove some of the burdens of the finance ministry from the shoulders of the premier.

Temporary Makeshift

Close observers contend that the new cabinet is merely a temporary makeshift. Painleve is to go before the chamber of deputies today, but without a definite program. Then the cabinet will adjourn until Monday to give the political leaders time to devise a financial scheme as a substitute of the ill-fated ventures of Caillaux. Meanwhile the decline of the franc continues.

The new financial program will probably be adopted in the cabinet but when it reaches the chamber it will probably go down in defeat before the bloc that has already been organized and is girding for battle under the leadership of the deposed minister, Caillaux, who is an effective floor leader and has among his supporters some of the most powerful in that body.

Briand Next Premier

The present political muddle and the rapid fall of the franc has placed the stamp of death upon the second Painleve cabinet before it is really organized. Aristide Briand, whose policy is swinging far more toward Britain than ever before will be the next premier. He is striving to prevent France falling under the dead weight of a Dawes plan and realizes full well, possibly better than any other bourgeois politician of France, the growing antagonism in every part of the world between Britain and America. His diplomacy will be directed toward utilizing that antagonism to get the support of England to resist the impending disaster that will ultimately place France in the same semi-colonial position in relation to American banking capital as is Germany today.

Washington Optimistic

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Formation of a new French cabinet by Premier Painleve, without Joseph Caillaux, is not expected to materially affect the debt negotiations between France and the United States, it was said by treasury officials today.

The new cabinet is expected, it was said, to appreciate the advantages of settling the debt, and to realize that without such settlement French credit and exchange will continue to be embarassed thruout the world.

GERMAN LABOR BEGINS REVOLT AGAINST DAWES

Scattering Strikes Grow in Volume

By LEN DE CAUX.

BERLIN—(FP)—That German labor is not submitting to coolie conditions without a protest is indicated by a survey of the labor field. There is no dramatic mass protest to compare with the united front achieved by British labor, no national strikes or threats of strikes, but if we examine the situation industry by industry we find an increasing volume of local and sectional unrest. In Berlin the whole transportation system may be tied up if the wage demands of the transport workers are not granted, and the gas, water and electricity workers are threatening action if their demand for a 2½c an hour raise is not granted.

In the mining industry in lower Silesia the employers have given notice to 31,000 miners, in an attempt to sabotage the arbitration award of a 7 per cent raise in wages. The miners of the Ruhr, who were refused a raise so as not to interfere with chanvention of the lignite miners of cencellor Luther's attempts to lower prices, have renewed their demand for a 15 per cent raise. The recent contral Germany registered a threat to take action against an award which legalizes the 12-hour day.

Disputes in other industries include the lockout of 30,000 glass workers in Brandenburg and Silesia, a lockout of 10,000 building workers threatened in Westphalia, and a lockout of metal workers in Hohenlimburg. Serious discontent is felt among the longshoremen who have been compelled to submit to the 54-hour week; and on the railroads the union is renewing its wage demands as the advertised reduction in living costs has not taken place.

Unemployment in Germany is on the increase. The number of registered unemployed in receipt of relief is now 251,000.

Hungarian Legation Astonished at U. S. Protest on Rakosi

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Protests from American liberals and from Americans of Hungarian birth or descent, against the threatened wholesale execution or imprisonment of alleged plotters against the Horthy dictatorship in Hungary, have made an impression on Budapest. This is indicated by the anxious attitude of legation officials who refuse to discuss the situation. They appear astonished that the arrest and reported torture of prominent radicals and socialists in Hungary should become known in the United States and should lead to public discussion.

Negro Labor Hits Ku Klux Klan

and assamblage, and in the following resolution condemns these acts as a tyrannous infringement on the rights of the working people:

Free Speech, Press and Assemblage.

"The constitution guarantees the freedom of speech, press and assemblage, but in recent years certain reactionary groups which succeeded in winning political power in various sections of the nation, have robbed the poorer class of people of the above mentional rights. Therefore be it

"Resolved, That the American Negro Labor Congress condemns such acts, whether legislative or otherwise, as a tyrannous infringement on the rights of the working people."

Following the adoption of the resolution on free speech, press and assemblage, the congress adopted the following resolution condemning the actions of the United States war and navy departments for the segregation of Negro soldiers and sailors and denies the right of any power to conscript members of the race for military service as long as those members of the race are denied social equality:

Army and Navy.

"Be It Resolved, That this congress demands that the war department and navy department of the United States government abolish all Jim Crow distinctions in the army and navy; and be it further

"Resolved, That we demand that congress pass a law forbidding the army and navy to make or keep any record whatsoever making any distinction of Negro and white in the military, air and naval forces in time of peace or war or in any way to segregate the races in these services, and be it further

"Resolved, That we deny the right of any nation to conscript any Negro while such nation holds our race and class in subjection and inequality."

Brother C. W. Fulp, a delegate from the United Mine Workers, Local 2012, was chairman of the evening session and after a few introductory words introduced Lovett Fort-Whiteman, national organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress.

Lovett Fort-Whiteman read the following answer to the telegram sent by the American Negro Labor Congress to Dr. Ossian H. Sweet, who is to be tried the latter part of the month with 10 co-defendents for the murder of a hoodlum killed in an attack on the Sweet home in Detroit:

"We, Dr. O. H. Swet and ten co-defendants thank you for your sympathy and support. With such people we cannot fail to fight to establish the right of any American citizen to buy and live in homes commensurate with their means and aspiration."

Another telegram was read from the striking Polish miners of Shamokin, Pa., who expressed their solidarity with the purpose of the American Negro Labor Congress and to unite with the workers of all races to fight against the common foe.

"The capitalist white and Negro press said that the purpose of this congress was to promote race prejudice," declared Lovett Fort-Whiteman, after he had read the telegrams, in denouncing the attacks of the press on the congress. "Here each night we see workers, black and white, meeting together in a common cause. Workers who are fighting for a common cause regardless of clime, color or nationality."

With a few introductory words he introduced the speaker of the evening, George Wells Parker.

"It was five or six weeks ago that I learned of the American Negro Congress. When I read the article by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, warning the Negro to stay away from this congress because he said it was directly connected with the Soviets of Russia, the moment I read the article I became interested in the congress," said Parker. "There was a time when they said freedom was bad for the Negro. They also said education was bad for the Negro. They said association with whites was bad for the Negro. No matter what the Negro wants, what he desires, it is a bad thing for the Negro. So when Mr. Green said this congress was a bad thing for the Negro I became interested."

Parker then began to show the relation of the Negro to the ku klux klan. In decrying the attempts of many Negro workers to ignore the klan issue, he said:

"The klan is not dying. The klan is going ahead by leaps and bounds. I receive at my desk fifteen different klan papers. They are organizing chapters in every hamlet and town. They have set 1935 as the year when they shall take government.

"The members of the klan who wear the nightshirts are the dumb-heads. They are pawns in the game. The men who are ruling the klan, the higher-ups, they are brilliant, they are wise, they are adopting measures to rule the world. The only thing they fear is Communism.

"The future for the Negro in America is dark. The stars of hope in your sky are gradualy being blotted out one by one.

"The order has gone into the steel mills to hire the Negro last. The klan is behind this."

Parker then read a part of the ku klux klan ritual which follows, in which the klan shows that its purpose is the spreading of the idea of race inferiority in attempting to keep the white worker and the black worker divided:

"'The social chasm between whites and blacks is greater now than it has ever been and it must still be made greater by teaching the inferiority of all races excepting the white. We must not only constantly teach that they are inferior and destroy all facts that might prove otherwise, but we must suit our actions to these teachings so that they will forever believe in their inferiority.'

"When I read to you another part of the klan ritual it will be an explanation to you why Mr. Green is afraid of this congress.

"When the workers of the world clasp their hands, I care not if they are of the red sands of Syria or of the Riff country of Morocco, if they say let us form an international workers' organization and let us work it out together, if the workers of the world believe that, then Negroes that is your salvation. That is what Mr. Green and the klan fear."

He then read another part of the ritual which follows, showing the aim of the klan was the division of those who opposed them in order to crush each group much easier:

"'A world coalition of malcontents could cope with us temporarily, but

ANITA WHITNEY CASE ROUSING WIDE DISSENT

Victim of C. S. Law Won't Ask Pardon

By MIRIAM ALLEN de FORD.

SAN FRANCISCO—(FP)—The decision of the U. S. supreme court which sends Anita Whitney to San Quentin has caused a furore in the district where she has years been known and loved. People who vaguely approved of the California criminal syndicalism law as "a good restraint on those I. W. W.'s" are now shocked and distressed by its workings. It is possible that her martyrdom—for to a woman in frail health, past middle age, and unaccustomed to hardship, it will be no less—may prove the final blow to this law.

Will Not Ask Pardon

"I will make no effort to secure a pardon from Gov. Richardson," says Miss Whitney, "I have done nothing to be pardoned for. He has had a long time to pardon the others, the poor men without influence, who are in San Quentin on the same charges that I am found guilty of. Let him release those men from prison, and not concern himself only with a woman who has the thousands of influential friends that I have."

With these words Anita Whitney replies to the state and nationwide movement to secure her pardon. Richardson refuses to discuss the case with a delegation from the American Civil Liberties union and has made no reply to the hundreds of letters and telegrams from sources as diverse as the W. C. T. U., the Y. W. C. A., Negro Progressive club of Oakland, and Upton Sinclair.

Destined for San Quentin

Miss Whitney's only hope of freedom lies in a new appeal to the supreme court for a new hearing. Pres. Coolidge, even if he could be approached, has no power of pardon in the case of a state law. Owing to legal technicalities, it may be a month or six weeks before she is actually ordered to San Quentin. Although the ostensible reason for the conviction was her membership in the defunct Communist Labor party, she would not have been molested had she not, while under indictment, insisted on making a speech before a club on the Negro question.

Her arrest occurred as she was leaving the hall. Coincidently with the court's decision (tho purely by accident), a new protest strike has broken out among the criminal syndicalism prisoners at San Quentin. At this writing 18 men are in solitary and three in the dungeon. A letter smuggled out from the prison states that the strike followed arbitrary punishment of P. Mellman and Joe Varella, criminal syndicalism prisoners, because they were physically unable to speed up to the new tasks demanded in the prison jute mill. The men claim also that they are not receiving even the meager prison ration, and that prison rules are being violated daily.

It is to the overcrowded women's department of this prison that Anita Whitney is to be sent for from one to fourteen years for telling the truth as she saw it.

I. L. D. Warns That Whitney Case Shows Attack on All Labor

CHICAGO—(FP)— The U. S. supreme court decision refusing to intervene in the jailing of Anita Whitney under the California criminal syndicalism act, indicates a tendency to outlaw all associations of workers, warns the International Labor Defense. "At present the enemies of labor are devoting their main attention to the radical wing of the movement," the national office in Chicago of the defense body states, "but they mean to destroy every organization of the workers that interferes with their rule"

Whitney Case Bares the Betrayal by Union Heads of Class War Prisoners

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, an echo of the refusal of the recent American Federation of Labor convention, to come to the defense of the class war prisoners, is heard in resolutions adopted by the San Francisco Labor Council on the fiendish one to fourteen year prison sentence against Charlotte Anita Whitney.

To be sure, the San Francisco central labor body, grudgingly consented to join in asking a pardon for Miss Whitney from Governor Richardson. Pleas for pardons are practically confessions that the capitalist law was right in winning its conviction, and Miss Whitney's alleged crime was making a speech, five years ago, in conflict with California's vicious criminal syndicalism law.

But at the same moment that it advanced its pardon plea, the Frisco A. F. of L. officialdom expressed its opposition to the release of seventy members of the Industrial Workers of the World, now caged in capitalism's hell hole at San Quentin, held guilty of the same offense charged against Miss Whitney. It is certain that Miss Whitney, staunch fighter in the cause of the labor, did not lend herself to this double-crossing of imprisoned workers. Yet it is typical of labor leadership of San Francisco.

• • • •

The luke-warmness with which some of these labor officials rallied to the support of Tom Mooney and Warren K. Billings, while others actually undermined the fight to save these heroic labor fighters from the threatening gallows, accounts for the fact that these class war prisoners are still behind bars.

• • • •

Just as the whispering campaign of "guilty," charged against these labor heads, helped create an environment in the employers' courts, that made it easy for a hireling judge to sentence Mooney and Billings to prison for life, so San Francisco's Labor Council now openly proclaims that the master class had a right to sentence Miss Whitney, frail and past middle age, to prison for a long term, because it holds the I. W. W. members justly imprisoned. The best reply to this cowardly outfit is contained in courageous words by Miss Whitney herself as follows:

> "I will make no effort to secure a pardon from Governor Richardson. I have done nothing to be pardoned for. He has had a long time to pardon the others, the workers without influence, who are in San Quentin on the same charges that I am found guilty of. Let him release those men from prison, and not concern himself only with a woman who has the thousands of influental friends that I have."

• • • •

Miss Whitney's own words are a challenge to the whole left wing of American labor. The American Federation of Labor regime, now in the hands of the Greens, the Duncans, the Wolls and the Tobins, may desert Sacco and Vanzetti, whose lives are again in the balance before a Massachusetts court next month; may turn their backs on Mooney and Billings, Ford and Suhr, Schmidt, McNamara and Kaplan, while openly betraying the I. W. W. members, but that only means that the fight of labor's militants for their brothers in chains must grow in volume and determination.

• • • •

When California labor permitted its most valiant fighters to go to prison, in the days before the war, it paved the way for the passage of the present oppressive criminal syndicalism law during the after-the-war labor-baiting hysteria. There is no doubt that the labor bureaucracy was glad to see the fighters of the I. W. W. imprisoned. It made it easier for them to act their comfortable role of class collaborators. The logical development of this treason now results in the prison gates opening to receive Anita Whitney. Right here California labor must make its stand:. Against the imprisonment of Anita Whitney, for the release of the members of the Industrial Workers of the World, for the repeal of the criminal syndicalist law, for the liberation of all other class war prisoners now held in the exploiters' dungeons, including the two military prisoners, Paul Crouch and Walter Trumbull. In this battle they can arouse the workers of the nation for new struggles for all America's labor victims of the growing class struggle.

CAPITAL TRYING TO GET FARMERS FOR OPEN SHOP

Alliance Attempted with Rural Region

A new attempt to organize an alliance between anti-labor employers and conservative farm organizations is seen in the plans for a conference in New York, Nov. 18-19, under the auspices of the Natl. Founders' Assn., whose president Wm. H. Barr, has made war upon the molders and other metal trades unions for many years past. Recently Barr's own company was in financial difficulties, which the American Federation of Labor charged to his anti-labor policy.

This proposed conference is announced by Henry Harrison Lewis, former editor of American Industries, an openshop propaganda magazine which died in 1924. He is now styled "executive director of Better Understanding Between Industry and Agriculture." His list of members of the advisory council for this Better Understanding includes national and state officers of the Grange, the Farm Bureau federation and minor state groups of reactionary farmers. Conspicuous officers of the enterprise are C. A. Dyer, legislative agent, Ohio Farm Bureau federation and Ohio State Grange; W. J. Thompson, former chairman national executive committee of the Grange, and Sherman J. Lowell, former master of the national Grange.

American Legion Is After You Already for the Next War

WASHINGTON—(FP) — Universal draft of the man-power and material resources and industrial organizations of the United States, in time of national emergency, is proposed in a bill which the American legion, thru its national legislative committee, announces it will offer in congress in December.

"The bill gives to the president the authority to take the necessary steps to stabilize prices of commodities," the legion says. "It will draft into the service of the United States all persons between the age of 21 and 30 or such other limits as may be fixed, without exception on account of industrial occupation, and will proclaim the material resources and industrial organizations of the country under government control during the period of the emergency."

Minimum Wage Law Holds No Terrors for Calif. Bosses

SAN FRANCISCO—(FP)—The supreme court decision in the Arizona minimum wage case imperils the California minimum wage for women, of longer standing than in any other state. It is possible that the California minimum of $16 a week for experienced women workers may be maintained, since it is by constitutional amendment, and the wage is fixed by the industrial welfare commission, not directly by the state as in Arizona. California employers favor the law as they contend that if invalidated the result would be intensive unionization of women workers. They believe the present law holds this in check.

WORKERS NAIL SCAB 'ADS' IN UNION JOURNAL

Bureaucrats, as Usual, Pass the Buck

(By Worker Correspondent)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 29.—At the last meeting of the Pittsburgh Central Labor Council the officials passed around a sort of "scab" catalog in the form of a year book, supposed to have been published by the working class of Pittsburgh. When the regular order of business, consisting of nothing but petty gossiping, had ended, Vice-President Miller called for "Good and Welfare" discussion and report.

A delegate from the Miners' Union named Hughes got up and inquired who got the ad for the year book from the Pennsylvanian Steel Co., the scab company responsible lately for the death of Fannie Selins.

And the vice-president's answer was a lot of raving about it not being his fault because Beaty, a former spy, went around to get the ads and forced everybody to give him an ad regardless of whether it was a scab or union firm.

Delegate after delegate got up to show that all those firms that advertised in the "labor" year book were hostile to organize labor. Especially one delegate must be mentioned. That is Gordon of the bakery workers. This young fellow pointed out that the year book has a kick coming from both sides. Not only has it to be criticised for its ads, but for its composition in general.

"What do you find here," he asked, "except articles by four labor officials? Where does it tell you how the workers of Pittsburgh live, how many were killed in the past year, how much profit the master class piled up?"

He made a fine speech, but the only result of it all was that a motion was adopted that hereafter all ads collected be referred to the executive committee.

AUTO WORKERS' MASS MEETING IN PHILADELPHIA

Local 14 Issues Call for Organization

(By Worker Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 29.—Join an industrial union and beat Ford and the General Motors Co. at their own game!

This is the slogan that Local 14 of the United Auto, Aircraft and Vehicle Union of America has raised in Philadelphia for their mass meeting Monday night, Nov. 5, at their hall, 1534 Ridge Ave. Thousands of leaflets have been distributed in the auto factories factories calling on workers to join Local 14, which is an industrial union open to all auto workers.

The leaflets point out that the only way for the auto workers to meet the miserable conditions that are being forced onto them in the shops is for them to join this union and oppose the bosses with a united front of all crafts. Special protest is to be made against wage cuts and speed-up devices.

The meeting will be hald at the union headquarters of Local 14, where business sessions take place the first and last Thursdays of every month.

Rail Telegraphers on Strike for Increase Against U. S. Board

WASHINGTON—(FP)—Reports received by rail labor officials in Washington from division points along the Atlantic Coast Line indicate that the strike of the 1,200 members of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers on that road, begun Oct. 19, is effective. From Richmond to the tip of Florida traffic has been crippled.

The issue is a demand made by the men last February for an increase in wages of 7 cents an hour, together with a two weeks' annual vacation with pay. The U. S. rail labor board rejected both demands, and then tried to avert the strike by an inquiry into possible adjustment of individual wage inequalities. This inquiry has now been abandoned. The Atlantic Coast Line is advertising for agents, telegraph operators and signal towermen to take "permanent positions."

Now Pickets Must Warn Anybody But Prospective Buyers

WASHINGTON — (FP) — Police judge McMahon has reversed police judge Schuldt, who in September held Dorothy Ferguson guilty of violation of the police regulations when she picketed a downtown clothing store as unfair to organized labor. Henceforth, pickets will assume that the passer-by whom they warn were not intending to make purchases. McMahon held that picketing is still lawful, under the Clayton act, as claimed by the lawyers employed in this case by the American Federation of Labor.

EVEN TAMMANY CANNOT STAND MAJOR BERRY

Issues Statement as Names Confuse

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—So notorious has become the strikebreaking, scabherding record of Major George L. Berry, president of the International Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America, that even the most degraded political machine on earth, Tammany Hall, objects to even the taint of Berryism.

Tammany has as one of its leading candidates on the Walker democratic ticket in the municipal elections, an individual unfortunate enuf to be known as Major General Chas. W. Berry. Many people who have heard of the notorious George L. have confused the two. This confusion endangered whatever chances the Tammanyite might have had, so he hastens to disassociate himself from the great (?) labor leader.

I'm Not the Man

Major General Berry wants it known that he is in no way connected with or related to Major Berry. The following letter explaining this fact has been sent to every labor organization and every unit of organized labor in Greater New York. This particular one was received by the chapel (shop) chairman of one of the publishing houses in New York:

> October 20, 1925.
> Dear Mr. President:—
> Frequently during the campaign my name has become confused with that of Major George L. Berry, whom you know much better than myself. Realizing that it is not fair to the major for me to profit by his national reputation I am taking this means of informing you that our families are no way connected and that Major Berry and myself are not related in any way.
> My own record speaks for itself and my sympathetic attitude toward organized labor is well known to all.
> Any support which your chapel feel they can give to me at the coming election will be greatly appreciated.
>
> Very truly yours,
> Charles W. Berry,
> Major General.

Although Charles W. does not openly attack George L., one familiar with Tammany politics can read between the lines and recognize the fact that he wants it made plain that he is not the man with a "national reputation."

If the reputation of George L. were such that it would attract votes among the trade unionists, the Tammany candidate would remain discretely silent hoping he would profit by his name being confused with Major George L. It is because he knows the members of his own organiaztion have many times repudiated Major Berry overwhelmingly and that no intelligent trade unionist would vote for him that the Tammany candidate corrects any misunderstanding that may prevail.

One must be rotten indeed when even Tammany washes its hands of him. And it should not be forgotten that the major himself is a member of the democratic party.

Labor Delegations Visit Soviets to See for Themselves

BERLIN—(FP)—The stream of labor delegations from European countries, whose workers want to see for themselves how Russia fares, continues unabated. Delegations from Czechoslovakia, Norway and Austria are at present in Russia and a Finnish trade union delegation is ready to start if it can make the Finnish government withdraw its veto. Franco-Belgian, Swedish, British and German labor delegations have visited Soviet Russia recently.

The A. F. of L. and the Class Struggle

By William F. Dunne

TWO ARTICLES—PART I.

> THERE is no need for revolution in America, no need for the class war, no need for the class struggle. Here every citizen is a sovereign and every sovereign a citizen.
> (William Green, during the course of his speech on the labor party resolution at Atlantic City.)

> THIS is the third of a series of articles on the proceedings of the A. F. of L. convention, which deal with "The A. F. of L. and International Relations," "The A. F. of L. and the Unorganized Workers," "The A. F. of L. and the Class Struggle," "The A. F. of L. and the Left Wing," "The A. F. of L. and Militarism," etc. This is the first installment of "The A. F. of L. and the Class Struggle."

"NO need for the class war."

"No need for the class struggle."

"Every citizen is a sovereign."

Uttered by a small town banker a proprietor of a corner grocery or by Elbert H. Gary, the above sentiments would be manifestly appropriate—for the first two, because they would believe them, and for Gary because they are part of the stock in trade of one who plays the role of captain of industry and leading propagandist for the ruling class. In such mouths they arouse only aversion.

UTTERED by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor and ex-secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, whose members have been shot down by the gunmen of coal companies and the armed forces of the bosses' state in a thousand bloody strikes, they become a treasonable protocol which the masses of workers—organized and unorganized—must repudiate and prepare to fight or accept and hold out their wrists for the very real shackles of which Green's statements are the verbal expression.

CLASS collaboration was the keynote of the Atlantic City convention as it has been of all recent A. F. of L. conventions. But at Atlantic City class collaboration, like the international policy of the A. F. of L., took definite form.

The yellow thread of a united front with the bosses to increase production in return for preferential treatment for privileged groups of the working class, runs thru all of the proceedings at Atlantic City. In some instances the increased reward for labor in the form of higher wages is forgotten completely in the mad scramble to be more loyal to American capitalist institutions—the wage system included—than the capitalists themselves.

NOWHERE, not even in the feverish 100 per cent patriotic speeches of Green and Woll, is this tendency more evident than in the report of Spencer Miller, Jr., representing the Workers' Education Bureau. The Workers' Education Bureau is the child of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy. It received official recognition at El Paso and since that time 42 national and international unions have affiliated with it.

It specializes in "broad education" that is, it specializes in debauching the organized labor movement with a doctrine of class collaboration. The term "class struggle" is sufficient to bring a velvety white froth to the delicately chiseled lips of Spencer Miller, Jr., who sole function is similar to that of a well-dressed manikin placed in the show window of a shoddy shop.

I RECALL Spencer Miller at the Portland convention. He had not as yet lost all of his honesty and was what might be described as a demi-virgin. But from the status of one who was flirting with the libertines of the A. F. of L. bureaucracy, he has descended to the level of a common prostitute, openly and willingly flaunting his shame before the multitude.

What part the class struggle plays in the education dished up to the union man and woman of America by the W. E. B. can be judged best by culling a few blossoms from the intellectual bouquet with which Spencer Miller, Jr., presented the Atlantic City convention.

The unctuous Mr. Miller, it appeared, had been lecturing abroad during the summer at the schools established under the auspices of the Amsterdam International. He was enthusiastic over the reception accorded him and the work of the schools. He had, it seems from his report, chosen "American history and institutions," and "the ideals and achievements of the American labor movement" as his subjects

SPEAKING of these schools he said:

> The schools, in a word then, are the symbols of a tolerance in both our domestic and international relations, about which PRESIDENT COOLIDGE SPOKE YESTERDAY IN OMAHA WITH SUCH POWER AND CONVICTION.—(Emphasis, Mine—W. F. D.)

I do not want to do the enthusiastic Mr. Spencer Miller, Jr., an injustice, but would we be far wrong if we concluded from the above that he was in Europe as a propagandist for the Dawes' plan?

I think not.

There is additional evidence to support this conclusion and these quotations are entirely germane to the subject of the attitude of the A. F. of L. toward the class struggle. Miller, Jr. continues:

> There is a second observation which I believe will interest you because it means much for the peace of the world. It is the growing spirit of reconciliation between the peoples of Europe—a desire to come together, and live and work together for a better future. The historic decision which was taken yesterday by representatives of England, France and Germany at Locarno on the pact and Germany's entrance into the league of nations marks, I believe, a new chapter in European relations if sustained by the home governments.

ACCORDING, then, to this bellwether of the thirsty flock of trade unionists which he is leading to the Pierian spring, it is the representatives of capitalists governments and the robber league of nations that will bring peace to Europe. The Locarno pact, not world trade union unity as proposed by Purcell, will heal the wounds of one and prevent new miseries for the workers from another imperialist war.

In what way does the education offered the workers by an institution guided by this type of mind differ from the poisonous brew given to workers' children in the capitalist controlled and openly anti-working class public schools?

Only that given a dash of labor coloring it is all the more insidious and subversive of every spark of militancy in the minds of its victims.

ONE of the best ways of determining the combination of eel- and leech-like characteristics possessed by and actuating the purveyors of spurious education to the workers is the liplicking manner, accompanied by an abnormal flow of saliva, with which they invariably enumerate the various methods by which the savings of the wage-earners can be sequestrated and auriferous chunks corraled by the fraternity of the itching palm, in which the liberal intelligentsia with a statistical bent and the thick-necked labor officialdom are full-fledged members.

Spencer Miller, Jr. qualifies in all respects; we quote again:

> When it is reported that the Federation Bank of New York has increased its capital resources to $12,500,000 in a little over two years, we face an economic fact of importance. When we realize in the thirty odd labor banks in America there are capital resources of over $150,000,000 we face an economic fact of the first significance.
> When, in addition, we include in this picture the vast increase in savings by workingmen in the past ten years which amount to over ten billions of dollars distributed among more than 25,000,000 workers, we witness another economic fact of the first importance.
> And, if we begin to examine the distribution of life insurance policies we discover according to one authority that more than two-thirds of these are held by wage earners, which means that of the total amount of 83 billions of dollars of insurance for more than 60 billions, that two-thirds are held by workers. As a noted economist has pointed out, this amount is greater than the estimated wealth of our country in 1890. Taken with the increases in building and loan associations, and you are facing an economic fact of an importance equalled perhaps only by the vast diffusion in stock ownership which today in this country represents many hundreds of millions of dollars.

OBSERVERS in attendance at Atlantic City report that as the above juicy figures rolled from the lips of Spencer Miller, Jr. in an ecstatic stream, a joyous moan, similar to that heard during the period of the religious orgasm at a methodist campmeeting, arose from the convention, while the labor officials present, with drooling mouths, followed the words of the speaker. They had a vision of entering the combination of the cave of Monte Cristo and King Solomon's mines which he pictured and which the magic key of class collaboration would open.

THAT this is held by Spencer Miller, Jr., avatar of official A. F. of L. policy, to be the key to the solution of the problem of the relationship of capital and labor which has remained unsolved by weaker intellects, is shown with convincing completeness by his quotation from a recent work on the subject by Prof. Carver.

Said the intellectual leader of the A. F. of L. in speaking of the advances of labor banking, labor insurance schemes, the B. & O. plan, etc.

> Indeed, so significant is this whole economic change that it has been properly characterized as an economic revolution by students of our economic life. Professor Carver in a recent illuminating discussion of this matter writes:
> "The only economic revolution now under way is going on in the United States. It is a revolution that is to wipe out the distinction between laborers and capitalists by making laborers their own capitalists and by compelling most capitalists to become laborers of one kind or another, because not many of them will be able to live on returns from capital alone. This is something new in the history of the world."
> This higher strategy of American labor based on the solid ground of capital ownership represents the determination of labor in this country. "NOT TO WAGE A CLASS WAR, BUT TO CONQUER THE CIRCUMSTANCES THAT GIVE RISE TO CLASS WARFARE." (Emphasis Mine—W. F. D.)

TO destroy the circumstances that give rise to class warfare without waging a class war impresses we feebler spirits as a task that most of us would approach with some fear and trembling. But to the giant intellects of the A. F. of L. Workers' Education Bureau its presents no difficulties at all.

And why?

Because, stripped of all the balderdash of the middle class pseudo-economists who cluster around the pay-windows of the A. F. of L. unions, the class struggle is to be liquidated by the surrender of the workers to the bosses. This is their goal.

AS Lenin said of Kautsky and his followers:

> "We" recognize the class war, as it is recognized by the liberals: that is, without the overthrow of the bourgeoise.

We have dealt above with what might be termed the A. F. of L. bureaucracy's theoretical justification of their class collaboration policy. That it is really a system of thought propagated consciously is shown by the report of the representative of the Workers' Education Bureau.

Its practical application will be shown in the next article.

SCIENCE BLOOMS ONLY UNDER RULE OF PROLETARIAT

Science Progresses Under Soviet Power

LENINGRAD—(FP)—"The proletariat in power, as an organized class, is the natural friend of science and technical progress," said Soviet education commissioner Lunacharsky, speaking at the 200th anniversary of the Academy of Sciences in Leningrad. "In the last two years," he stated, "the state budget grants for public educational purposes steadily increased and the day is not far distant when the increased resources of the country will enable us to prove to the world that nowhere except where the toilers have been completely emancipated is it possible to develop such widespread educational activity for the benefit of the masses of the people."

One of the educational grants of the soviet government is an authorized increase for the Academy of Sciences, which makes the estimates for 1926 nearly double 1925. The wage and publishing funds are more than doubled. The academy has 7 research institutes, 4 biological laboratories, a bureau of eugenics, 6 large museums and 18 commissions. During its existence it has published over 15,000 volumes. The library contains about 4,000,000 volumes, and the museums and exhibitions are visited by more than 150,000 people annually.

REPORT SEAMEN STILL STRIKING IN AUSTRALIA

Meeting with Owners Ends in Failure

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

SYDNEY, Australia—(FP)—There is no change in the strike of British seamen in Australian ports. A conference between the shipowners and the seamen's strike committee Sept. 23 failed. The seamen on strike refuse to consider any proposal unless the shipowners agree to no victimization, immediate release of imprisoned strikers, payment at old rates for the period of the strike, payment of the old rate prior to the reduction of $5 per month, until their return to home ports in the United Kingdom.

On Sept. 15 nearly 60 vessels were tied up in Australian ports. The idle tonnage totals 481,883, while 5,000 seamen are on strike. Thirteen vessels with a tonnage of 102,644 are tied up in New Zealand ports.

The Australian agents of the Shipping Combine have had about 1,000 seamen sent to jail for short terms of imprisonment, but in some cases the men have been harshly dealt with.

The Australian unionists are feeding the strikers. In most cases the men have been lodged in the homes of unionists, while the remainder are quartered in union halls. Australian unionists have subscribed large relief funds.

Arbitration Proven Failure, New Zealand Labor Builds Unions

WELLINGTON, New Zealand—(FP)—Throughout New Zealand there is discontent among the wage workers, organized and unorganized. This is due to bad conditions of employment and low wages. The minimum wage, just increased by 2 cents per hour, now is $19.36, $20.24, and $21.12 for a 44, 46, and 48-hour week.

Recently the New Zealand Alliance of Labor demanded a higher basic wage, but the government refused to appoint a commission, contending that a higher basic wage was not workable. Since arbitration seems to have failed them, the New Zealand workers are devoting more attention to organization on industrial lines.

Austrian Workers in Mood for Strikes; Big Vote in Federal Union

VIENNA—(FP)—A wave of strikes involving 30,000 workers has hit Austria. Most of the strikers are metal workers, but further strikes or lockouts are anticipated. The ballot of the federal employes, who number 94,000, showed a record vote and a majority of 92.8% in favor of a strike. The hotel workers and the food workers generally have started agitation for wage increases.

British Imperialism Mobilizes Its Press

MELBOURNE—(FP)—Aristocratic owners of influential tory newspapers in Britain and the dominions are now in Australia to attend the empire press conference at Melbourne. Nominally a conference to improve newsgathering, the empire press conference is in reality an imperialist propaganda stunt.

Something Different in the Line of Labor Banks—Think It Over!

PARIS—(FP)—The latest in labor banks is the Workers and Peasants bank founded in Paris by the French Communist party. It has a capital of 8,000,000 francs (1 franc, 5c.) and is to be used solely for financing labor organizations and enterprises. "The Workers and Peasants bank," says l'Humanite, official Communist daily, "will render useful service in aiding labor organizations, cooperatives, labor temples etc. to bring about the Communist regime which will put an end to capitalist disorder and anarchy."

"The word 'bank'," says Marcel Cachin, Communist leader, "usually evokes the idea of super-exploitation, speculation, indirect theft; and the use made by capitalist bankers of the money entrusted to them thoroughly justifies this evil reputation." He bases his plea for support of the new labor bank on an exposition of the stranglehold over enterprise which the control of credit gives to the capitalists.

NEGRO LABOR MEET ATTACKS KU KLUX KLAN

Calls for United Action of All Workers

we are insured against this by roots of dissension amongst them so deep that they cannot be torn out. We have created antagonisms between the personal and national interests of these people by arousing religious and race hatreds which we have nourished in their hearts for centuries.

"'We might fear the combined strength of intellectuals of vision with the blind power of the masses, but we have taken all measures against such a possible contingency by raising a wall of mutual antagonism between these two forces.'

"This klan is drawn up so true," declared Parker, "so deep (psychologically) that it is not possible to circumvent them except by organization."

He then finished his speech with a rousing cry to the Negro to know more of his own race and rid himself of the inferiority complex which he suffers and called upon him to unite with the workers of all lands in the common struggle against the common foe.

B. B. Moore, of the Ethiopian Students' Alliance of New York, followed Parker. He called upon the Negro workers not only to tell of the things they are going to do, but also to do them.

In speaking of the future that America holds for the Negro, he said: "The United States is the darkest place in the world for the poor man. When we look to the east, we see the dawn, the rise of a new movement that is taking hold of the minds of men. It is not a golden dawn, but a crimson dawn."

He then began to describe the accomplishments of the workers of Russia, who thru mastering the principles of organization were able to overthrow the most despotic government in the world, and the Jew, whom he described as the Russian Negro, today is safe from pogroms and has been armed by the Bolsheviks in power to prevent recurrences of pogroms.

In decrying the present Negro leadership of doctors, lawyers, etc., who have always betrayed the workers of the race, Moore said:

"You Negroes have to develop a new type of leaders. He must come from the workers, one who will not bend the knee."

Army Recognizes That Workers Are Patriotic Only to Job and Eats

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—The recruiting sergeant doesn't look for patriotism in the hungry and unemployed and he doesn't make any patriotic appeal in the new posters that are set up in likely places to catch the eye of the out-of-work.

These posters abound on the Bowery and East 14th street and wherever employment offices are found and they make a direct job and stomach appeal.

Fifteen arguments why you should join the khaki and Munson last brigade are given by number and not one says anything about service to your country. Even the travel and education baits have been dropped to the second half of the list.

The leading arguments all are that the army job is a sure job, with steady pay, three meals and a doctor.

The size of the pay that is so steady—now $22 a month—is not mentioned nor the possibility that a diet of army rations may well lead you to the doctor.

BUSINESS IS GOOD IN NICARAGUA AS WALL ST. IMPERIALISM WINS OUT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Oct. 29—U. S. imperialism is consolidating its forces after overthrowing the Nicaraguan government a few days ago, with the convenient Chamorro clique taking over control of the cabinet with the "consent" of the U. S. minister. This little matter of overthrowing duly constituted government was the business of two Wall Street banking houses, the Brown Brothers and Seligman and company. These gentlemen are now assured complete control with the Nicaraguan army under the command of Colonel Carter, whose Nicaraguan ancestry dates back as far as the entry into Nicaraguan affairs of the New York bankers. "Business is normal," says a government statement.

KU KLUX TRIAL AT NOBLESVILLE FINALLY OPENS

Mother of Dead Girl First Witness

"with the most convincing evidence."

Witness Called.

It was believed that the first witness on the stand today would be Mrs. George E. Oberholtzer, mother of the dead girl. Others expected to follow her on the stand include Mrs. Eunice Shultz, a lodger at the Oberholtzer home; Dr. John K. Kingsbury, who treated the dead girl shortly before she died and Miss Beatrice Spratley, the girl's nurse.

Grand Goblin Grins.

The story of Madge Oberholtzer's departure from home on a fatal night last March in excellent spirits and her return a short time later in a dying condition from poison was told by her mother, Mrs. George Oberholtzer, from the witness stand.

Mrs. Oberholtzer was the first witness, and, sobbing bitterly, recounted the circumstances of her daughter's death.

Mrs. Oberholtzer answered questions put to her by William Remy, prosecutor, leading up to the night the dead girl left her home with a promise to be "right back."

"When did you see her?" Remy asked.

The witness' voice broke and she sobbed uncontrollably.

"Take your time, Mr. Oberholtzer," the prosecutor said.

Finally she said she saw the girl again a few days later in a dying condition, her body covered with wounds and bruises.

Stephenson divided his time between writing furiously and surveying the elderly woman with a sardonic grin. Klinck was in jovial mood and seemed on the point of laughter several times. Gentry alone seemed concerned and worried.

Kluxer is Identified.

Mrs. Eunice Shultz, a roomer at the Oberholtzer home, was the second state's witness of the day and she identified Earl Klinck, one of the defendants, as the man who brot the girl into her home and put her on her bed in her room in a semi-conscious condition.

Mrs. Shultz said she was preparing lunch in the kitchen when she heard groans at the front dor. "That man there,"—pointing to Klinck—"sitting in that seat, brot Madge in. He said his name was Johnson, of Kokomo, and that Madge had been hurt in an automobile accident," she testified.

STRIKE CALL BRINGS GREEK FURRIERS OUT

Militant Mass Pickets Under Left Leaders

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 29.—Tuesday night at a mass meeting of the Greek fur workers, the New York joint board of the Furriers' Union announced that the long awaited general strike of Greek fur workers was to begin Wednesday morning. The large hall was packed to the doors with Greek furriers who were eagerly awaiting the news. All the members of the New York joint board and all the officers of the New York union were present at the meeting. The announcement of the general strike, made by B. Gold, manager of the joint board, was received with a tremendous outburst of enthusiasm and with shouts of approval.

Mass Picketing.

Wednesday morning at 6 o'clock hundreds of Greek strikers gathered at the union office and from there marched to the center of the Greek fur shop district, where they picketed en masse the Greek shops. By 8 o'clock these picketing lines were swelled by hundreds of Greek workers who joined the strikers, instead of going up to work. Scores of policemen came to the aid of the bosses against the workers while hundreds of Jewish workers fell in line with the pickets. The street was filled with strikers and sympathizers.

When the policemen saw that the strikers were gaining ground they began to handle the strikers roughly and freely used their clubs whenever strikers approached a worker who was headed for work. But the Greek workers were defiant in braving the clubs of the police. They rushed every scab they recognized.

Arrest Sx Strikers.

The police seized six militant strikers. When these arrested strikers were led away the remaining strikers and sympathizers hissed and booed the police and continued the mass picketing. The old furriers declared they have seldom seen such a demonstration.

The first morning of the general strike created a strong impression in the fur market. A number of bosses have already announced their willingness to settle.

The offices of the union declare that the general strike of the Greek fur workers is of great importance because since the organization of the Furriers' Union the manufacturers have succeeded in creating a division between the Greek and the Jewish fur workers. During the strikes of 1912, 1916 and 1920, the bosses succeeded in using the Greek workers against the Jewish and always held the Greek workers as a club over the head of the union whenever a new agreement had to be concluded.

Greeks Badly Treated.

The Greek workers were miserably exploited by their manufacturers. They were forced to work for wages much lower than those received by the Jewish workers who are members of the union, and there was no limit to the hours they were compelled to work. Such conditions not only made the lfe of the Greek workers miserable but also were a standing menace to the organized workers.

At every one of the conventions of the International Fur Workers' Union resolutions have been passed instructing the officials of the union to organize the Greek workers, but these resolutions were a mere pious wish. Right wing officials did not seem to care very much about the desires and instructions of conventions.

The fur workers of New York therefore brushed aside the right wing officials and last May elected in their places left wing representatives. These left wing functionaries immediately worked out plans for a Greek organization campaign. This campaign was launched a few weeks ago with the aid of a group of militant Greek fur workers. After a number of shops were forced to settle with the union, and seeing that the sentiment of the Greek workers was strongly in favor of the union, the joint board decided to call a general strike.

The joint board officers declared that due to the favorable conditions in the trade, and the strong determination of the Greek workers, the strike will be short, and will end in a decisive victory for the workers.

Penty of Tobacco.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Tobacco manufacturers and dealers held 1,754,595,720 pounds of leaf tobacco on October 1, compared with 1,724,767,418 pounds in 1924 and 1,874,224,526 pounds on July 1, 1925, the census bureau announced today. The amount of unstemmed tobacco on hand on October 1 was 1,630,937,807 pounds, while the amount of stemmed tobacco on that date was 123,657,913 pounds.

Catch Eagle Stealing Hog.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Oct. 29—Two hunters brot down a large and beautiful specimen of American eagle which was carrying a 25-pound hog in its claws near here today. The bird was only slightly injured and will recover. It appears to be of an ancient vintage.

DANISH CITIES GET BIG LOAN FROM THE UNITED STATES BANKS

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Oct. 29—So pressing is the problem of unemployment in Danish cities that the combined municipalities have applied to New York banking interests for a loan to allow public works to relieve the jobless.

Altho the Danes expected to get only $4,500,000, they were granted a loan of $7,000,000 by Brown Brothers—one of the two firms whose imperialist interests in Nicaragua has led to the recent uprising there.

The repayment on the loan is supposed to begin at the end of five years, and to continue for twenty-five years, with interest at five and a half per cent.

May Recall Sarrail

PARIS, Oct. 29.—Premier Painleve and President Doumergue of France held a hasty conference where they discussed the recalling of General Sarrail in order to save the face of France since England, the United States and other nations are sharply criticizing the action of General Sarrail in bombarding the city of Damascus without giving adequate protection to the American and English subjects that were in the city. Nothing is said of the thousands of natives that perished in the brutal assault of the French armored tanks, airplanes, artillery and infantry.

Iowa Farmers Facing Bankruptcy in Appeal to Washington for Aid

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Farmers of Iowa, one of the most productive corn states of the country, are facing bankruptcy, and must place heavy mortgages upon their property in order to survive. But conditions are so bad that money on farm mortgages is difficult to obtain in sufficient quantities to relieve them.

An urgent plea for federal aid for the farmers of the Iowa corn belt was laid before President Coolidge today by J. G. Mitchell, counsel for the Iowa farm bureau. Mitchell was accompanied to the white house by Senator Albert B. Cummins, of Iowa, who asked that federal farm loan banks and the interstate credit banks be instructed to extend immediate credit to the farmers of his state.

Department of agriculture investigators will be sent to Iowa "to look over the situation"—meanwhile the farmers will get on as best they can.

The once independent farmers of the entire corn belt are being reduced to the level of the most miserably paid wage workers and will soon be, for the most part, in the position of tenants, paying tribute to the bank combine for the privilege of existing.

Tough on the Carp.

A huge quantity of liquor—$3,000,000 worth, the government estimates—will go into a sewer here late today, to the demoralization, perhaps, of the carp that inhabit the Illinois river which receives sewage.

THREE DAILY WORKER RESCUE PARTIES HELD IN NEW YORK TONIGHT

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 29—This Saturday evening friends of The DAILY WORKER will gather in three different halls in various sections of New York to hold Rescue parties to help save The DAILY WORKER. Every reader of The DAILY WORKER in New York should bring his friends to one or another of these affairs.

In the HUNGARIAN HOME, 350 East 81st Street, the general dance will be preceeded by some special Hungarian dances in costume. Those that saw the Hungarian dancers at the Press Pageant last spring will certainly want to see them again.

The affair at the WEST SIDE WORKERS' HALL, 301 West 29th Street will be a special Halloween Party, guaranteed to make the shivers run up and down your back.

At the EDUCATIONAL ALLIANCE, 76 Throop Ave., Brooklyn, there will be same music and an entertainment that will make you forget that you're broke.

All three affairs will wind up in dancing in the wee small hours of the morning. Take your choice, but DO CHOOSE ONE. Attend a Rescue Party this Saturday and thereby help to keep our daily.

WORKERS PARTY ARRANGES FOR SHOP CAMPAIGN

Open-Air Meetings Held Before Factories

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 29.—The Workers Party, Local New Haven, conducted a shop meeting before the Clock Shop, where several hundred workers heard District Organizer Simons speak on the local campaign.

Before going into the issues of the campaign, Comrade Simons pointed out that the Workers Party was the only political organization that fought the wage cut drive of the employers, not only thruout the country, but even in the Clock Shop. He showed that the lack of solidarity on the part of the workers had caused a cut of 7% in two departments.

Republicans Nominate Manufacturer.

The local Ullman machine in the republican party won out in the convention last night over the Willard faction representing the upstate republican Roraback machine which controls the state legislature.

Last year the Willard machine took control of the town committee, but this year the Ullman machine won out in 26 out of 33 wards. Ullman is a corset manufacturer, paying his workers starvation wages.

John T. Tower, candidate for mayor, is the head of the Hickox company, and has been a partner in manufacturing enterprises for many years. Beebe, candidate for registrar of vital statistics, operates an automobile top and trimming shop. Blinn, for city clerk, is a partner in an insurance firm. Barnes, for controller, worked for the New Haven Gas Light Co. for 13 years. Stanford, for collector of taxes, was the clerk of the city court for 15 years, and is now a lawyer. Harry V. Whipple, formerly president of the Merchants' National Bank and formerly vice-chairman of the chamber of commerce, is candidate for treasurer, Massa, for town clerk, is in the real estate business.

This aggregation of well-to-do has been put up to serve the will of their masters—thru the republican party.

Against these the Workers (Communist) Party has put up a slate of workers from the shops and factories, on a program opposed to the present system system of greed and profit. And in the meetings held the class nature of the opposing parties is being explained by the Communist speakers.

Party Union Fraction Activity Stimulated in Milwaukee, Wis.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 29.—At the Milwaukee membership meeting of the Workers (Communist) Party on October 26, Communist fraction work in the labor unions was reviewed by Comrade Oliver Carlson, representing the Chicago District No. 8. A general fraction was formed from members of the following unions: machinists, carpenters, journeymen tailors, general laborers, blacksmiths.

The party has the task of gettting over 50% of the members to join a labor union and then to participate actively in a major work of the party. The small number belonging to the unions are alive to their duties.

The matter of shop nuclei reorganization was also taken up. The city was divided into four sections and plans laid for actual reorganization meetings.

Twenty-one comrades signified their intention to join the circuit educational classes to be conducted by Comrade Carlson.

So. Bend Shop Nucleus Starts Out Full of Pep

The South Bend, Ind., shop nucleus is definitely on the job and promises action. The following are excerpts from a report to the District office No. 8:

"... Please send regularly copies of the Negro workers' paper, The Negro Champion. I could notify you that our first meeting of the shop nuclei is showing fine success and beginning of real life. The International Labor Defense has been accepted by all members of the party and actions are in process. I for one have received besides six new members into the I. L. D. the first day after the meeting.

"These are the beginnings of real action for the cause and I could say that South Bend, Ind. will surprise you in general work in the class struggle in the future.

"The party school has been accepted and the members have joined. Many also promised to send their daughters and sons to the Workers' School. The secretary will send you money for the school members."

When that argument begins at lunch time in your shop tomorrow—show them what the DAILY WORKER says about it.

Shop Nucleus Started in Automobile Shop in Hamtramck, Mich.

Shop Nucleus No. 4 has been organized very recently in Hamtramck, Mich. in one of the automobile plants in that city.

This shop nucleus has already elected its officers and promises to do effective work in enlisting in its place of work, many new fighters for the cause of Communism.

This is the fourth shop nucleus to be organized in the Detroit district recently.

Forward to shop nuclei!

LAKE COUNTY PARTY NUCLEI ARE ORGANIZED

One Street and Six Shop Nuclei Formed

WHITING, Ind., Oct 29.—The basis of six shop nuclei and one street nucleus was laid at the membership meeting of Lake county on Sunday, Oct. 24, at which Comrades Manuel Gomez and Max Salzman were present for the Chicago district committee No. 8. Four of the shop nuclei are being organized in the different steel mills, one shop nucleus in a railroad repair shop and another shop nucleus in the Oil Refining company.

A street nucleus is being organized of the remaining party members not working together at present in large enough numbers to form shop nuclei. About forty-three members will be in the six shop nuclei organized, but an organization drive for new members will be undertaken.

Temporary secretaries for each shop nucleus and street nucleus were elected, and arrangements were laid for full meetings of each nucleus at which regular officers will be elected and work laid out. Comrade F. Buckley, sub-district organizer, is visiting each of the nuclei in connection with this work.

The Lake county territory, which for the party takes in such points as Hammond, Ind., Whiting, Ind., Indiana Harbor, East Chicago, Ind., and other points is an industrial region heavily saturated with huge steel mills, oil refineries, Portland cement works, railroad shops, etc. Party reorganization will tend toward stressing the work of the party directly in the shops and factories.

Bulgarian Educational Club of East Hammond Decides to Join I. L. D.

EAST HAMMOND, Ind., Oct. 29.—At a meeting of the Bulgarian Educational Club of East Hammond, Comrades Boris Steichcoff, secretary of the Bulgarian Labor Defense group of Chicago, and Cris Keteff spoke on the role of the International Labor Defense in combatting the white terror and defending the working class victims. The audience was much impressed with the work of the I. L. D. and very sympathetic. Four members joined at once. The meeting decided to consider affiliating collectively at the next meeting. Copies of The DAILY WORKER and other literature was sold.

NEW JERSEY YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE TO HOLD CONFERENCE SUNDAY IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Sunday, Nov. 1, 2 p. m. sharp, a conference of the executive committees of the New Jersey branches of the Young Workers League will be held at 108 East 14th St., New York City.

The District Executive Committee of District 2 is calling this conference for the purpose of organizing a sub-district committee for New Jersey.

New Jersey is one of the most industrial sections of the country. Thousands of young workers are exploited in the big factories in New Jersey. The Young Workers League must build a mass organization in this territory.

The organization of a sub-district for New Jersey will help us greatly in increasing our influence among the young workers of New Jersey.

BANKERS PAINT STORM SIGNALS A BRIGHT SHADE

Debt Collection Has Double Meaning

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Service.)

What signs of the storms which will mark the crisis of the present age of exploitation and presage its collapse? One is the gradual assembling of tribute-gathering machinery in the guise of debt collection. This will mean a greater concentration of the country's spending power in the hands of an arrogant upper class and corresponding increase of dependent workers whose honorable employment has been stolen, leaving their subsistence subject to the parasitical interests of the masters.

This simultaneous process, resulting from the determination of American capital to lay tribute on the world is hidden in an analysis of the debt-funding problem by Morgan's Guaranty Trust Co. It says:

"The payment of foregn debts must inevitably be largely made by the export of goods from the debtor countries. This injects into the domestic markets of the creditor country foreign competition. Moreover, the extensive loaning of American funds to other nations for the purpose of economic readjustment and the stimulation of production means increased competition for American goods in both domestic and foreign markets. That there must be hardships upon individual industries in this process of debt payment and readjustment is clear."

This hardship will fall chiefly upon the wage earner in loss of employment and pressure to accept reduced standards, The bank does not show this, but describes debt payment as a process in which the foreign governments deprive their peoples of purchasing power by taxation and transfer it to the U. S. government which passes it on to its people either by reducing taxes or by repaying the internal debt.

This process is going on, but proposals for reducing taxes aim largely at sparing the incomes of the rich while the bulk of payments on the internal debt go to the same investing class. Instead of increasing the purchasing power of the American people, enabling them to buy the foreign products poured in to pay the debts and still to provide a market for American products, this process only increases the investing power of the upper class.

Barring the uncertainties of a new world war, with the debtor nations allied to end the tribute, this will end in a small imperial clique riding on a tribute-paying world proletariat. But before that is completely realized decay will have eaten away the roots of the system.

"MINERS DON'T NEED YOUR ADVICE," CAPPELLINI TELLS DEBS AND MAURER

By AUGUST VALENTINE.

THO the socialist party is dead as a door nail (I guess that's why) it made the reactionaries here feel very spookey.

On October 16 Gene Debs and Jim Maurer spoke at a mass meeting in Scranton. Despite the fact that the coal strike is on, hardly any mention was made of it. Both of them sang the same old song they have been intoning for 20 years—no realism, no understanding of today's struggles—just sentimental bunk.

The Debs meeting in itself is not so interesting as the reaction to it. Days before the meeting was held the "Paul Reveres of the American constitution," as they called themselves, were preparing for a counter-demonstration. The mayor of Wilkes Barre saw in the socialists a "disturbing element," and how close they were linked with the Communists. Wow!!!

At this counter demonstration against the Debs-Maurer meeting spoke Charles E. Clark, who has the word "Honorable" attached to his name, and who is assistant corporation counsel of New York; William B. Healy of Wilkes Barre, former vice-commander of the American legion; Reverend Joseph M. M. Gray, pastor of the Elm Park church, who vulgarly referred to Gene Debs as a "stray dog who instinctively sticks his tail in every tin can he comes to," and Harold Lord Varney, renegade I. W. W., now of the American Constitutional League. This was a fine bunch, but would not be complete without "Reno" Cappellini, so he chipped in.

OUR "Reno" took a crack at all kinds of "isms" and said that the Debs meeting was not authorized by the United Mine Workers of America. (But the meeting went on just the same, with a thousand people present, despite of the fact that "Reno" urged the miners to attend the counter demonstration.) The counter meeting had only about two hundred present. Listen to this wise crack of "Reno's." He says: "At a time when the miners are struggling for better wages, James H. Maurer had no business coming to Scranton to talk about the coal problem," and with a high tone he "advised" Debs and Maurer that the officials can handle the situation themselves.

THE chairman was Congressman Watres. After taking a rap at the socialists and Communists, he introduced Joseph P. Kamp, representative of the Constitutional Educational League. This bird threw so much bull that all the cows are widows around here.

Clark saw in Debs a dangerous person. "Our growth and prosperity are due to the protection afforded us by the law and the constitution," said Clark. Then he goes on to tell while the boys were across fighting, Debs mounts the platform where President McKinley was born and rediculed the government, told his audience that Wall Street was responsible for our entrance in the war, etc., which bringe me back to an editorial in the Scrantonion of October 18, in which it has the following to say about the "Reds": "The average Communist, British, German, Russian, or American, has the intellectual consciousness of a child of ten years of age. To him history is a sealed book, etc., etc." Well, we might not know all the history, but we know enough to tell the "Paul Reveres" that McKinley was not born in Canton, Ohio.

Healey urged the public to support the legion, and said if anyone does not support the government, tag him with a yellow card and send him back to where he came from. This idiot is anxious to deport anybody and everybody who disagrees with him.

Harold Lord Varney, former radical, who cowardly recanted in the "Red Raids" saw in Debs' philosophy a menace to the community.

Negro Longshoremen Handed a Wage Cut; Others Get a Raise

NEW ORLEANS—(FP)—Longshoremen at Gulfport, Miss., have been granted a scale of 70c an hour, an increase of 15c, to conform to Mobile and Pensacola, with time and a half for overtime owing to the scarcity of labor. Agents in New Orleans have notified the colored longshoremen that the scale will be reduced from 80 to 65c an hour. Eight hundred members of the colored longshoremen union have sent a protest to the shipping board. It is thought a strike will result.

Four Years of Life Darkened by Prison, Says Note to I. L. D.

From the state prison in Thomaston, Maine, a class war prisoner writes to the International Labor Defense, after having served four years of his term: "The world has moved so swiftly these four years of my confinement that I am sadly out of touch, I having stood still if not receded, being denied all the knowledge, the action, the hope, knowing only the fear and the pain. I stand bewildered, blind in the darkness. . . ."

Farm Workers Put on Labor Market by the Use of Power Machine

Labor saving machinery has been displacing farm workers at a rapid rate in the last generation. A study of power on farms by C. D. Kinsman, agricultural engineer attached to the U. S. department of agriculture, shows that about 19,000,000 more workers would be required on the present farms if only the tool power of 1850 were available. These millions have been turned into the great pool of undifferentiated labor from which the employing class draws its working forces.

Agriculture in the United States now uses practically as much primary power as all manufacturing and central station plants combined. Kinsman estmates the amount of power used annually on farms as close to 16,000,000,000 horse power hours. The cost of this power under 1924 conditions is about $3,000,000,000.

Fire Fighters' Union Puts Kibosh on Habit of Hogging Two Jobs

HIBBING, Minn.—(FP)—Organized city firemen who use their statutory time off duty to rob the unemployed of a job will receive the unfriendly attention of their union, the Hibbing Fire Fighters' union, an American Federation of Labor organization.

"Whereas the Fire Fighters are receiving a living wage and it is not necessary to get extra work in order to make a living," reads the union resolution, "Be it resolved that we will exert our utmost influence to put a stop to this practice by reporting any member who does any offshift job to the officers of the union who shall call a special meeting to handle the case."

THIS IS A STORY OF LEGISLATORS AND OTHER DOGS

Making Alien Workers Pay State Expenses

By REGINA MYROSKI

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., October 29.—West Virginia is a wealthy state, but its wealth is not enjoyed by either the workers or some of the law makers. Some members of the state legislature seems impoverished—in fact, so poverty-striken that its members cannot afford to buy pedigreed dogs for themselves, their wives or flapper daughters, or countless other relatives, to fondle. So they passed a law, a law which forbids aliens the right to own a dog on penalty of a heavy fine.

Now, although the members of the state legislature may be short of cash they are not lacking in cunning. They thought, and thought, until they could think no more, how best to get the most fines and the most dogs. If the law was made public the poor working foreigners would dispose of them. So a plan was finally concocted which would insure plenty of dogs and, therefore, plenty of fines.

The residents of West Virginia or some of them, at least, were unpleasantly surprised about six or seven weeks ago by the wholesale arrest of foreigners owning dogs. They were indignant. What was the matter anyway? Surely, there was no law forbidding the aliens that privilege, if privilege it be.

But it developed that there was such a law, passed at the last session of the state legislature, without being made public or advertised. It paid so much better to introduce it by wholesale arrests. This law hits the workers. Most of those arrested are striking miners. True, very few are striking now—the strike being practically lost.

One of the "dog catchers" upon being questioned what was the purpose of passing such a law, stated that it was to force all aliens to become citizens! Not exactly the right way to proceed to secure the best citizens, is it? Even those who have their first citizenship papers cannot own a dog, it developed.

The "dog catcher" in this section is also one of the most active prohibition officers. He is very successful at his trade. It always takes a thief to catch another thief, and a bootlegger to get another bootlegger. His name is William Burkett and he certainly has a splendid record as a drunkard.

What puzzles all the workers is how he retains his job considering the many times he is arrested for habitual drunkenness, driving a car while intoxicated, etc. But, then, are we to question the morals of our law enforcers? So long as they are successful in arresting the alien workers, striking miners, pickets, etc., what else is required?

Surely, this law must be most pleasing to the coal operators—especially the way it is introduced. It is such a simple way of getting back at the impoverished striking miners.

Russian Grain Crop Larger Than Pre-War

MOSCOW (Tass.), Oct. 29.—According to calculations of the people's commissariat of agriculture, the whole crop of this year amounts of 4,100,000,000 poods. Since 1911 there was no such crop in Russia. It surpasses the crop of last year by 1,400,000,000 poods. The whole production of agriculture in 1925 is estimated at 9,257,000,000 rubles and, in comparison with 7,800,000,000 rubles of the last year, it shows an increase of 19 per cent.

COMMON LABOR'S AVERAGE WAGE 38 CENTS AN HOUR; POST WAR "NORMALCY" CUT WAGES IN TWO

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

The base on which wages thruout American industry rest is revealed in U. S. department of agriculture figures on wages of common labor thruout the country since 1915. The figures show how wages of unorganized labor are determined by supply and demand without reference to the needs of these workers and their families.

The average rate for common labor, taking the country as a whole today, is 38 cents an hour. This has been the yearly average for the last three years altho there has been considerable variation from month to month as the surplus looking for employment varied up or down. It means $3.04 for an 8-hour day or $3.80 for a 10-hour day. Under the best possible circumstances working 10 hours a day every work day in the year, the common laborer in the United States cannot make $1,200.

Taking uncertainties of employment into account the average annual earnings of unskilled workers, the real index of the condition of the working class, falls considerably under $1,000, probably under $900.

Wages of common labor vary widely, touching a low of 25 cents an hour in the south and a high of 52 cents on the Pacific coast. These wages by regions for 1915, 1920 1922 and July, 1925, were:

Hourly pay of Common Labor	Average in Cents 1915	1920	1922	1925
New England	20	49	39	47
Middle Atlantic	20	50	36	43
South Atlantic	14	37	21	28
East So. Central	12	32	20	25
West So. Central	16	40	24	26
East No. Central	21	53	31	36
West No. Central	25	62	31	35
Mountain	26	55	37	48
Pacific	26	60	48	52
U. S. average	20	49	32	38
U. S. Steel rate	20	46	32	40

The wartime demand for labor, coupled with the operation of sundry government wage boards aiming to stabilize the labor market by lip service to the living wage, lifted the average wage of common labor 145 per cent above 1915. The return to normalcy left unorganized common labor a commodity with rapidly diminishing demand. In 2 years the average wage fell 35 per cent.

Increases since 1922 have only partially restored the wages of common labor and the average is still 22 per cent below 1920. The average varies from 4 per cent below the peak in New England to 44 per cent below in the West North Central region. Similarly, with the average 90 per cent above 1915, we find New England 135 per cent above prewar while the West North Central states average for common labor is only 40 per cent above prewar.

Ohio Workers Answer Need for Class War Defense: Build I. L. D.

Fred Biedenkapp who is touring the state of Ohio in behalf of the International Labor Defense reports that considerable success is attending his efforts in the organization of new branches and stimulating activity in those already organized.

In Dayton a branch of the I. L. D. was organized. After electing officers the branch decided to hold a mass conference on November 16 to which representatives of working class organizations will be invited.

Seventeen members joined up in Mansfield and $12.50 in dues was collected on the spot. Great enthusiasm prevailed and a mass conference was arranged to be held on November 15.

In Columbus, a branch with nine members was organized after listening to Comrade Biedenkapp explain the aims and objects of the International Labor Defense. A tentative date—November 17 or 18—was set for the calling of a mass conference.

What Price Glory?

WASHINGTON— The above describes the case of Capt. Nathan Williams, who has just undergone his 27th major operation for rotting bones, in Walter Reed hospital, Washington. He is suffering from bayonet and gunshot wounds received in France. His son, who got into the navy at 13 years of age, is a permanent "total disability" invalid in a Colorado hospital maintained by the government. If Williams ever gets out of the veterans' hospital he must get a job, as he has a wife and he will get no retirement pension. He was only an emergency officer; pensions go to regular officers.

Before he enlisted and went to France, Williams was employed in the government bureau of engraving and printing, in the capital. Now he appears at least 50 years old, altho he is but 37. However, he has another operation ahead before he need worry about getting a watchman's job. Most of his leg is already cut away.

Buffalo Bandits Get $93,000

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Bandits held up two messengers of the Marine Trust company, one of the city's largest banking institutions today, shot and killed one of the messengers, Charles Clifford, and escaped with $93,000. The other messenger, Joseph Meyers, was wounded.

MOSCOW, (Tass)—Oct. 29.—The council of people's commissaries has decided to give to Ukrainian authorities 4,000,000 roubles for the next year in order to aid them in the campaign against drought and its ruinous consequences.

GREAT BRITAIN MOBILIZES 300 PLANES FOR WAR

England Determined to Keep Mosul

BAGDAD, Mesopotamia, Oct. 29.—England is not letting any grass grow under her feet in the row with Turkey over the question as to who will get the oil fields of Mosul. England is preparing an air fleet of 300 planes that will carry 1,500 bombs which will completely destroy the Turkish bases and their water-wells, according to Sir Harry Dobbs and Air Commander Dowding of the British air service.

The officers in command of the Hinaidi base, which is seven miles in circumference and holds 8 airplane squadrons as well as infantry and armored cars, boast of the effective bombing which they carry on. At this base they have an album of pictures showing the "before and after" effects of airplane bombing.

Systematic bombing of native village and homes of chieftains are carried on at the least provocation for practice, boasted one of the air officers.

Coal Miners Here and in Russia

The coal miners in the anthracite region of the United States are fighting to maintain a condition under which it is possible for them merely to exist. They are not demanding more than just enough with which to obtain the coarse food that will enable them to recuperate from day to day the energy they give the mine barons, just enough of the coal they themselves mine in order to keep their families from freezing in the miserable shacks which they inhabit.

Against the unions in this struggle stands the mighty anthracite industrial combine. This combination has as its loyal defenders the official machine of the United Mine Workers of America, the union to which the miners pay dues and from which they have the right to expect protection to the very limit of its power and resources. Instead of protection they have the degrading spectacle of Rinaldo Cappellini, head of the organization in the anthracite playing the role of a police agent and assisting the state of Pennsylvania to jail the militants who demand a real fight against the coal barons.

In addition to this betrayal Cappellini uses his powers as district president to expel from the union the militants.

It is against this alliance of mine owners, labor fakirs and the power of the state government, with the menacing threat of intervention by the United States government always hovering over them, that the miners in the United States must struggle.

Here in the United States the miners struggle against overwhelming odds to maintain even an existence. Contrast this with the condition of the miners in Soviet Russia. The Miners' Union in Russia is not fighting against wage cuts. Instead, while there is a crisis in coal mining in every other country in the world, the Russian miners have just received a wage incease of 25 per cent. The Chicago Examiner, in commenting editorially upon this, observes:

> Another thing that keeps the Russian miners quiet, or tends to do so, is the friendly attitude of the government in time of trouble. While a miner is in the hospital, where he is treated free, he receives 40 per cent of his wages, if he is a bachelor, and 75 per cent if he is married. He also, on account of more severe conditions, works six hours instead of the usual eight. There is a month's vacation with pay. That sort of sympathy has its effect.

This contrast between the condition of the miners in the United States and Russia sheds a blaze of light upon the depraved designs of the Cappellinis and Lewises. No wonder these creatures oppose Communism. No wonder they strive to befoul with their mendacity the achievements of Soviet Russia!

When they state that Soviet Russia stands against everything that the leadership of American labor stands for, they are right. In Russia the government exists for the purpose of defending the interests of the workers, instead of crushing them. A labor official who would dare attempt to sell out the interests of the rank and file would not escape by mere discharge—he would be shot. Instead of placing the risks of capital above human life, the Russian Soviet government places human life first of all.

The official bureaucracy of the United Mine Workers know what they are about when they fight against Communism—they are fighting to perpetuate their jobs as agents of the capitalist class.

On the other hand the miners will eventually come to know that their only hope lies in the direction of Communism, of the revolutionary overthrow of the capitalist power and the establishment of their own rule.

Wall Street Government

Another brazen imperialist venture in the interest of Wall Street was the recent disgraceful performance of the American minister of Nicaragua who aided the chief of the landowners and militarists, Emiliano Chamorro, seize power over the duly elected president, Salorzano. Chamorro was for many years dictator of Nicaragua and is the vassal of Seligman & Co. and Brown Brothers, Wall Street bankers.

Secretary of State Kellogg is placed in a difficult diplomatic position by this recent coup. He cannot consistently recognize Chamorro, because he has enunciated the Hughes policy of withholding recognition to governments unless they are in power by "constitutional means." The state department uses this excuse against Ecuador, as it has long notoriously used it against Soviet Russia, in spite of the fact that that government rests upon a far more democratic constitution than the United States government.

The opposition senators in the republican party stand ready to make an issue of any recognition extended Chamorro, and as the next session of congress is soon to convene, the state department dare not follow up its military victory with official recognition.

Possibly the astute terrorists carrying into effect the imperialist policies of the United States in Central America will arrange to stage a fake election under democratic forms and proclaim the dictator, Chamorro, the unanimous choice of the people. In which event Kellogg will proclaim to the world that the government has liquidated the civil war in Nicaragua and brought to the people the blessings of civilization.

Recent events in that part of the world indicate a growing resentment among the masses of the Central American "republics" at the practice of the United States forcibly imposing rulers upon them.

It is to be hoped the events of the past week in Nicaragua will inflame the masses in that nation to such an extent that they will expel both Chamorro and the American minister from their shores in such an emphatic manner that they will never return.

The veteran clown of the socialist party, Mr. Oscar Ameringer, who writes Brisbanalitics in the first column of the first page of Victor Berger's Milwaukee Leader, thinks that if the United States and other "democracies" recognize Soviet Russia that will be the shortest way of getting rid of the Bolsheviks. In the same article he says, "It's the nature of military victories that they hurt the victors more than the vanquished." Then he states it was not the red army that defeated the invading allies in the early days of the revolution, "but land hunger." He concludes the same article with the observation that the Bolsheviks are there to stay. Will some enlightened socialist please tell us what Oscar is talking about? Military victories hurt the victors more than the vanquished: the [illegible] were defeated in Soviet Russia, yet the government is go- [illegible]. As a historian and logician Mr. Ameringer is a good saxaphone player.

IN THE CAMP OF OUR ENEMIES - By PAUL FROEHLICH

Kautsky Incites to War.

SIX years ago, Kautsky saw a picture of Bolshevism: a gorilla with a knife between its bared teeth. At that time it was posted up by hundreds of thousands at all street corners in Germany, in order to inspire the German man in the street with fear of Spartacus, and to prepare him for the blessings of the Noske regime. It was published by the Anti-Bolshevist League which was a direct descendant of the National League against social democracy, but was then used by Ebert and Scheidemann as a weapon against the German working class and kept going with government money (home service!).

Since Kautsky became childish, this bogey has pursued him in his dreams. Thousands and thousands of German proletarians may be slaughtered—even amid the thunder of the guns, Kautsky will preach alliance with the Noske party. In Hungary and in Italy the bloodiest terror may reign, the Esthonian and Bulgarian peoples may be driven to despair—Kautsky will have no word, no thot left against blood and terror. Tho Germany be turned into a national penitentiary in which only the national bands of murderers enjoy the protection of the republic, tho Hindenburg mount Ebert's throne—Kautsky will crow: it is a joy to live! Tho the whole German people be enslaved, tho the whole world be threatened by American trust capital with plunder, war and subjugation, Kautsky will have but one aim: Death to the Bolsheviki!

HE has now again raised this cry in a pamphlet: "The International and Soviet Russia" (published by I. H. W. Dietz' Successors, Berlin). It ought to be possible to publish the whole pamphlet so as to expose its author to the derision and contempt of the whole world. For it is one huge tissue of lies, so shameless, that they need only be pronounced to be exposed as such. There is no recent inflammatory article against Soviet Russia which is so impudently and stupidly mendacious.

If we are to believe Kautsky, the Russian proletariat is sighing under the heavy yoke of its own party, it dreams of nothing but liberation from this yoke, being prepared to sell its soul to the devil; but again and again it is routed by machine guns. Further even now that the civil war is ended and the Koltchaks, Kaledins, Wrangels and the boon companions of the mensheviki are defeated, Russia is tearing at full speed towards disaster, and everyone who has witnessed the contrary with his own eyes is either a deceiver or deceived. Further, Russia is ruled by "a small clique," "strong enough to serve the interests of no single class (a splendid Marxist, this Kautsky!), to treat every class as its docile tool," "a conspiracy against the Russian people, against workers and peasants as well as against the intellectuals and the remains and beginnings of a capitalist class." A clique "which has now got so far that it lives by ruling and exploiting the proletariat," "has for years chiefly been engaged in subjugating, corrupting, enervating and blunting the intellect of the proletariat within and without Russia," which "has become the most dangerous enemy of the proletariat itself" so that "the proletariat of the world is hopelessly prevented from developing its full force as long as Russia is governed by the modern methods of Bolshevism." Briefly: in Kautsky's eyes, Bolshevism continues to exist as an anti-Bolshevist poster.

HAVING painted Bolshevism, Soviet Russia and in the way the Communist International in such colors, Kautsky easily arrives at a conclusion. He who, since 1908 (since the publication of the "Way to Power") has carefully avoided being consistent, who adopted no other attitude towards imperialism, the war, the counter-revolution than one of disgusting quietism, is for once consistent: Soviet Russia must be annihilated! Of course Karl Marx must be called as witness, he who in the "inaugural address" preached war against "the encroachment of the barbaric power which has its seat in St. Petersburg"—the Soviet government of course, is a still worse "barbaric power" which indeed "no longer has its seat in Petrograd but in Moscow, further from Europe, nearer to Tartary." Since the Bolsheviki consummated the will of Karl Marx as regards czarism, the will of Karl Kautsky as regards the Bolsheviki must be consummated.

But why is that? Kautsky examines in detail how it could be done. The result of his inquiry is recklessly contradictory, but just for that reason it leaves no doubt as to what he means, as we shall see. At first he inquires into "peaceful means." His answer is "it is simply hopeless to try to exercise moral influence on them (the Communists!)" "Like every other military despotism, like the military monarchies of the Romanoffs, the Hapsburgs and the Hohenzollerns, it (Bolshevism) will probably only be overcome by force."

PREPARE then for armed insurrection! But that is a delicate matter. First of all there is no prospect of success against a good army. Secondly, the Bolsheviki understand the matter too well and their police are too good. It is therefore better for MacDonald, Vandervelde, Adler, Scheidemann and Abramowitsch to keep their fingers out of the pie.

"Peaceful means" again then. Yes indeed! And now Kautsky is theorizing at random. What wrecked czarism? The fact that it had to increase traffic, to promote business for the benefit of its military system. Thus it prepared the ground for its fall. Now indeed, according to Kautsky, the Soviet State is doomed to steady decline, which destroys all prospects for democracy. But perhaps the Bolsheviki want nevertheless to improve the economic position of Russia. They give concessions, they try to obtain loans, they develop the system of traffic. According to Kautsky, the Soviet regime is still in power because the proletariat is weak. If the economic situation improves, the proletariat will become strong and can then cast off the Soviet system, that bloodthirsty rule of the "clique." Kautsky's opinion therefore, the anti-Bolshevist International should by no means oppose international loans to Russia, but should on the contrary encourage them. But it should demand as a condition for these loans the promise of "reforms," which is also good because these "reforms" are demanded by the international stockjobbers.

KAUTSKY himself apparently only believed implicitly in his bogey of Bolshevism and in the despotism of the "clique" over the Russian proletariat when he was in a condition of complete mental derangement. For that reason he is now secretly doubting whether it is reasonable to build his hopes on the Russian proletariat becoming stronger. And it is thus that he arrives at the idea which is most elaborately developed in his article, which forms its core.

Not preparations for armed insurrection but—speculation upon a general, spontaneous revolt. Kautsky suddenly discovers that he had counted on revolts of this kind "which would put an end to the three military monarchies of east Europe." More than that! He knows that the majority of social democrats have refused to hope that "we should by gradually increasing in strength, imperceptibly grow over the head of military monarchy and into a republic." In Germany, Austria and Russia this has happened (as is well known against the majority of those social democrats). Why should it then not happen again—in Russia?

But how is a spontaneous revolt of this kind possible in Soviet Russia? By a severe shock to the state, by its being defeated in war. Kautsky is building on this foundation, and he discusses whether the menshevist international should take part in such a revolt. And he answers this question very decidedly in the affirmative. "It might be disastrous," he says, "were our international to condemn armed putch against Bolshevism as counter-revolutionary action and forbid its members in Russia to take part in such an insurrection, on the ground that it, the international, had refused to have anything to do with the armed putch against Bolshevism."

THE fact that reactionary elements would make use of such a revolt to serve their own purposes should not deter, but rather stimulate "the social democrats to strive with all their power to gain a decisive influence in the revolt—certainly not to frustrate it." Even Kautsky must have learned enough from the history of the last eight years to know that when it comes to deeds, the mensheviki could only gain such an influence in the revolt against the Bolsheviki by allying themselves with reaction or rather by unreservedly submitting themselves to the counter-revolutionary generals. But even this makes no difference to him, for he considers that "everything that is possible in the way of reaction in Russia, is already practiced by the Bolsheviki in such a measure that it cannot be surpassed." He accepts the worst whiteguardist reaction, he is prepared to promote it and, with this end in view, he speaks of revolt almost like a Bolshevik.

All this, Kautsky asserverates, it is true—whether it be hypocrisy or relapse into old Kautskyism—that he preaches neither intervention against Russia, nor revolt, but peaceful means only. But his pals, the leaders of the Second International, will quite well understand. As is his intention, they will speak in favor of credits to Russia if their capitalists expect that it would be to their advantage. They will not however, for one moment, delude themselves into believing, that they can overthrow the Soviet power by furthering the general economic development of Russia. They know that better than Kautsky with his idee fixe. But they will be thankful to learn from Kautsky's article that a weapon against the abhorred Soviet Russia and the Communist International has been found in the world war against Soviet Russia and in the subsequent rising of the whole counter-revolution from the pretender Romanov to Tchernov and Abramovitch.

KARL KAUTSKY'S sermon came just at the right moment. Kautsky's article was published immediately after the English conservative government had compelled the capitalist powers to form a holy alliance against Soviet Russia, at the moment when the crusade against the land of revolution is again to the fore. In these circumstances this pamphlet has a definite political significance. Brifly expressed, it is: Gentlemen of the second international, be on the watch! Your corn is beginning to ripen. You have once more the opportunity to win laurels in helping the cause of the capitalists in all countries. The coterie of international exploiters is anxious for war against Soviet Russia. Make yourselves useful to them, for that is your business!

Kautsky will not have to tell them twice. It will not be long before they will resolve to carry out what Kautsky demands of them today: resolutely and with all the means in their power to work for the defeat of Russia in a war, resolutely and with all determination to take part in a general rising against the Soviet state in alliance with the reactionary powers and, in order to hasten this ardently longed-for opportunity, to facilitate the attack of the capitalist powers, to inaugurate a systematic campaign against Soviet Russia in the social democratic press of the whole world.

IF this demand of Kautsky's is fulfilled, if social democracy now enters on a campaign of agitation against Russia, let us see that the workers of the whole world understand its true significance: a war of the whole counter-revolutionary world against Russia the workers' and peasants' state! It is a good thing that Kautsky has already let the cat out of the bag as to where the second international would be if the capitalist campaign against Russia would materialize. The workers of the whole world should learn their lesson from this, they must been their guard against any surprise and should, without a moment's delay, start a campaign against not only the danger of war, but also against the social democratic war mongers and for the workers' and peasants' Soviet republic!

"White Cargo"---A Bourgeois "Success" - By Robin E. Dunbar

HERE is a typical bourgeois drama; it bears all the ear-marks of bourgeois ideology; and it has met and is meeting the approval of bourgeois playgoers in London, New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco and other towns and cities of the capitalist world. Needless to say it hasn't struck Moscow, nor is it likely to from present accounts.

Let us see what its peculiar merits (?) are, that it should meet with such wide approval from those who form the backbone of theater audiences. The upper class patronizes grand opera, and dramas with stars in 'em of the first water; very seldom does it lower itself by showing its royal presence at a common theatrical performance. Royalty now means the new rich, the war profiteers, and the beneficiaries of the trusts and monopolies.

WE sat and sweltered in the gallery, while the actors melted in the Congo. It was a mercurial martyrdom all around. The plot of the drama hinged on the fact that the fresh young fellows sent out from England by the Rubber Co. failed to get properly acclimatized. They must get their quota of rubber out and on board ship if they had to kill every "nigger" within a hundred miles. Ordinarily this would prove fascinating sport to the scions of English aristocracy, but the tropical heat made sport too much like work. Of course it would never do for an Englishman in Africa to lower himself by working, so after he had murdered a couple hundred "niggers" or so he usually settled down to watchful waiting, to brandy and soda, and to "mama palavering." He rather let the Rubber Co.'s interests go hang. This heralded the end; for without rubber the world can't roll. And so he sickened and another scion came to take his place and so on, ad infinitum, and ad nauseam.

Generally the returning hero was too sick or to drunk to board the boat of his own accord and had to be carried on as luggage. He returned as "white cargo" collect, uninsured and no damages for breakage en route.

OF course, as you can see, the rest of th plot doesn't matter: but the crux of the thing hinges on the fascinating expression, "mammy palaver." This seems to promise exotic and erotic excitement to the jaded sex tastes of the morbid members of the bourgeoisie, who form the bulk of the audiences: ages from 18 to 22, with a sprinkling of more mature and more debauched auditors.

This term simply means mating with a negress during the term of the exile; or for part time. Or mating with many, according to the whims of the white man, who is more or less fancy free in his marriages both in and out of Africa. The bourgeois white man, I mean of course. He takes his women where he finds them; white, black, red, yellow or purple. If he can't find women, he takes boys, or men or animals. He must take something along with his whiskeys in order to make life bearable, while he crushes the workers. If no living object can be reached for his libidinous pleasures, he becomes autoerotic.

MR. HARRY WITZEL, "the man who stays," threw a fit when his superior officer acquired Tondeleyo, the half-white maiden who went with the position. Harry thot it no crime to do the "mammy palaver" business, when onanism was so much cheaper and more respectable. So he raved about this moral crime, shrieked and acted as hysterical and neurasthenic as you please, and so did the big scene at the close of Act II.

And this is bourgeois art in the beginning of the second quarter of the twentieth century! What it will be at the close, one can only surmise. Let us hope the revolution will come ere that, and sweep all such filth and rot off the stage onto the rubbish heap where it belongs.

Not to put too fine a point on the whole matter, one can say with absolute justice the whole thing was fake art from start to finish. The orchestra made noise instead of music; the scene painters gave us a daub without inspiration; the actors whined, moaned, mumbled and drank when they didn't shriek; and all was as merry as a marriage bell without a clapper.

THE program states the thing was dramatized by Leon Gordon from the novel, "Hell's Playground" by Ida Vera Simonton. Fortunately I know nothing about either "artist"! Having made a bourgeois hit they are evidently raking in the shekels and storing them up for another search after local color. If so let me advise them both that after they have acquired that mythical million dollars all the bourgeoisie is so mad about, will they kindly take it and go to the site of the novel's locus,—leaving out the Playground? Judging from the morals and immorals of their joint masterpiece, they are bound to land there in time at any rate.

Lest some of my more timorous readers may shrink at my masculine conclusions and attribute them to jealousy or other unworthy motives on my part, rather than to a deep and burning love of high art and a shuddering disgust at fake art, let me call their attention to what real art is and should be.

Here are some random statements taken from Badouin's Studies in Psycho-Analysis—a sane work on an insane subject:

"A neurosis is an unsuccessful work of art; a work of art is a a successful neurosis."

"Intellectuals adapt themselves to the real; artists adapt th. real to themselves."

"Art is a synthesis of play and dreaming."

"The higher art is a dream which points out the way to mankind in search of a goal."

WHITE cargo is a neurosis; the climax of the play is plain hysteria.

Instead of purging the emotions thru fear and pity, it transfers them into nervous channels. Several members of the various castes have broken out into murderous attacks on their fellow troopers. Their nerves are put on edge by acting as neurosthenics. Like Harry Thaw they prefer fondling rabbits on their naked bodies rather than engaging in collectivistic activities. There will be no rush to Bolshevism amongst the authors, the owners, the actors or the auditors of white cargo. No drive to proletcult! On the contrary, they all loudly acclaim themselves to be one hundred per centers.

"INTELLECTUALS adapt themselves to the real." That is, under present capitalist society they join the crowd, get into the band wagon, and seek pay for their intellectualism, like professionals. Artists are braver and saner than that. They see that the real in themselves is a longing for brotherhood, not for sensualism; they join the revolutionists and make their works masterpieces of propaganda for collectivism; not for capitalism. They try to make their dreams come true. Their plays are means to an end. They know that the present goal of mankind is collectivist society; Communism, and their plays, paintings, poems, musical pieces, statutes, etc., all point to that goal. They are true men and honest, not cowardly scoundrels, adapting their talents to poisonous master class propaganda.

For what in one word is the goal pointed in White Cargo? Getting rich! That is what actuates the whole bunch. All go to the Congo as gold seekers. Not all succeed. That is inevitable under capitalism, where trusts and concessions gobble up all the opportunities, leaving only the barest pickings to the individual. He gets the small, soul-wrecking, mean and contemptible jobs. The jobs where the only consolations are whiskeys and mammies.

IT is told in Frank Shay's interesting article in the National Geographic Magazine for last February that it is customary for the whites marooned in tropical Africa to "marry" Negresses. They make no bones about it. They consort openly with them and point out humorously their half-breed children, as they meet them at the wharfs along the river. Livingston and Stanley tell the same story. In fact Stanley was bereft of many of his men thru their desertion to the black females along his route. A white man who has been nursed in infancy by a black mother acquires a Negro complex and reverts naturally to black consortium. That is one of the skeletons in the closet of our feudal southern society. Not that it matters much to sociological science; for miscegenation itself is an agent of progress. The contemptible attitude of whites towards their black offspring hurts the worst. Christian people are cruel enough towards white bastards; to black ones they are merciless.

"THE goal of mankind" . . . . What is that goal? Art has much to do it seems, and so has science . . . the science of politics . . . of revolution. One race, one language, one country, one class, one goal—the goal of universal brotherhood.

We can't trust the "intellectuals." They take on the color of their environment. The whites in the Congo will become blacks if they stay there long enough. Artists alone are the ones who try to make their dreams come true. Dreams are what you make them; if you look forward to a better society and work for its realization, your dreams will accompany your struggle.

For Communism is the goal of mankind.

The dreams of Pletnev in the proletcult theatres of Moscow are almost the only ones of our times which try faithfully to realize that goal. Others will soon follow.

White cargo with its black message will not always pollute the air. One of our first duties after the revolution is to sweep into the garbage pile such refuse. That alone promises a job worth while. We must destroy before we can create; and none of us is too insignificant to take part in destruction.

A bas bourgeois art! To hell with "hell's playground!" . . .

ZOLTAN WEINBERGER IS VICTIM OF AMERICAN-MADE HORTHY REGIME

A new victim has been torn out of the ranks of the Hungarian Communists, a young, fearless fighter, Zoltan Weinberger.

Weinberger is representative of that generation of the Hungarian proletarian youth, which having joined the revolution from an early age, went boldly into the fight fearing no punishments, serving intrepidly the cause of the revolution. Such a life does not know any rest.

Comrade Weinberger was born in 1903. He was only 16 years old, when the proletarian revolution was victorious in Hungary and then he was already an active worker in the youth movement. After the revolution he fled abroad. However, his energy during the emigration period has grown up and, being only 18 years old, he came back to Hungary and proceeded then to illegal party activity. In 1921 he was arrested and sentenced to 15 years' penal imprisonment. During his trial Comrade Weinberger, in spite of heavy penalty threatening him, shouted loudly "Long live the international revolution!" His steadfastness won him the sympathies of the other comrades and especially of the young proletarians who saw in him a representatives of their strong, fighting disposition, not the least weakened by the horrible terror.

Thru the efforts of the Soviet government he was set free from the Hungarian prison. He went to Russia in order to acquire knowledge in the school of the Russian Communist Party and Russian Youth League. He proved to be a good disciple: the great lesson of the Russian revolution and the experience of the Russian Communist Party raised still more his revolutionary energy and he came back to Hungary for work. Fearless of punishment threatening him Comrade Weinberger appeared again in the ranks of the revolutionary fighters of Hungary.

Now he has fallen into the hands of the Hungarian hangmen and is being submitted to the cruelties and tortures of the Hungarian police. The sympathies of the Hungarian proletariat and Youth League are with him. We take his hand and say before the face of the whole world proletariat: "Comrade Weinberger, you have acted rightly, in a Lenin-like manner!"

Baptist Children's Home Head in Jail for Criminal Assault

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Cringing, and on the verge of collapse, Wilson Johnson, formerly the trusted superintendent of the children's home of the Long Island baptist association, appeared in Coney Island court to answer to the charge of attacking young girls at the institution.

Twenty one girls at the institution have been attacked, Lester Bochover, agent for the society for the prevention of cruelty to children told reporters. He said this was established by admissions of the children and by physical examinations by a woman physician.

Johnson must remain in jail and increased his bond from $10,000 to $25,000.

CHICAG[illegible]KERS PROTEST USE OF AMERICAN AVIATORS IN FRENCH WAR ON RIFFIANS

At an enthusiastic protest meeting arranged by the All-America Anti-Imperialist League held at the Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles Ave., not only was a resolution passed condemning the state department of Washington for permitting American aviators to go to Morocco, and fight against the Riffians in their struggle for the independence of Morocco, but a local section of the Anti-Imperialist League was formed with W. B. Anderson as provisional secretary.

W. C. Francis, delegate from the International Alliance of Negroes of Pittsburgh to the American Negro Labor Congress, was chairman of the evening. After a few introductory words he introduced Lovett Fort-Whiteman, national organizer of the American Negro Labor Congress.

Imperialist Divide World

Lovett Fort-Whiteman in the course of his speech showed that the imperialists have divided the world of the darker races among themselves. That France, Belgium and England control more colonial peoples than there are inhabitants in their respective countries.

In his speech he showed that when imperialists have a surplus of gold which they cannot invest in home industries to make profits for them and in order to keep this gold producing more profit, investments are made in the colonial nations with the intention of exploiting the natural resources of those nations and enslaving the people living in those countries.

Want Zinc and Copper.

In describing the fight of the Riffs for the independence of Morocco, he stated:

"They want northern Morocco because of the deposits of zinc, of copper. They want to take and develop and make profit from these mines. That is why they are fighting.

"The sultan of Morocco is a French puppet. But in Morocco, they had a man, a leader, who did not fear the imperialists of France and Spain, who today is leading 30,000 Riffs against the combined military forces of the France and Spain and has won many victories."

Spanish Worker Speaks.

Following the speech by Whiteman, A. Rodriguez, a Mexican worker attending the American Negro Labor Congress as a delegate of the unorganized Mexican workers of Brownsville, Pa., described the conditions in Mexico of the workers under the domination of the American bankers and manufacturers. He showed the development of the Mexican industries and described how the worker is forever kept in ignorance and in debt.

Workers Must Fight Imperialism.

"The workers themselves must find ways and means to throw imperialism. Imperialism will not be abolished by the imperialist government but by the organized masses of working people," declared Rodriguez in closing his appeal for united action of all workers in the fight against their common oppressor.

Ukrainian Chorus Sing.

The Ukrainian chorus of Chicago cosisting of twenty voices, dressed in the colorful costumes of the land which they left, sang a number of songs in the Ukrainian that were enthusiastically responded to by the audience.

Richard B. Moore was then introduced. This leader of the Ethiopian Students Alliance of New York City spoke of the heroic fight that Abd-el-Krim has put up against French imperialists.

Krim Not Alone.

He showed that Krim was not alone in his fight against the French imperialists, but that a group of the or-

ANOTHER ACT OF OPPRESSION AGAINST HAITI

RockefellerGovernment Prevents Elections

(Special to The Daily Worker)

By JOSEPH FREEMAN

American imperialism in Haiti scored another triumph last week when President Louis Borno, puppet of the American military occupation, announced that there will be no legislative elections next year.

The Haitian constitution — forced on the republic by the National City Bank of New York and United States marines —provides that the president may order legislative elections on January 10 in an even - numbered year. This year President Borno has discovered that Haiti's population "is almost totally illiterate, ignorant and poor, is still incapable of exercising the right to vote, and would be an easy prey" for unscrupulous (i. e., opposition) politicians. He promised that some day a new electoral law would be put into effect when it might be "without danger to the republic."

Military Rule Supreme

Two years ago President Borno announced that no legislature would be elected in 1924. In the absence of a popularly chosen assembly, the legislative functions have been exercised since 1917 by the Haitian council of state. The council is an executive body of twenty-one members appointed and recalled at will by the president. This state of affairs has enabled the American military occupation to rule without the trouble of a parliamentary body which afforded expression to native leaders bitterly opposed to American domination.

Borno's refusal to call elections springs from the fact that the legislature, when convened, will choose Haiti's new president. Since 1917 the president has been elected by the American-controlled council of state. It was this executive body which elected Borno in 1922. His election was followed by mass demonstrations organized by the Union Patriotique d'Haiti (a nationalist organization) and by the Haitian Federation of Labor. As a result the presidents of both organizations were arrested by the American military authorities.

Kellogg Aids Tyranny

Borno's action last week did not come unexpectedly. Late in September a group of Haitian journalists wrote Secretary of State Kellogg requesting that the United States government see to it that legislative elections were called. The request warned Secretary Kellogg that "American officials and their Haitian agents plan to repeat the coup of 1922, and to have the president elected by the council of state." The request also called Kellogg's attention to "the systematic opposition with which Haitian requests have always been met by American officials in Haiti and by their Haitian creatures and proteges."

NICARAGUAN LIBERALS APPEAL TO UNCLE SAM FOR U. S. INTERVENTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Oct. 30.—The "liberal" party is living up to the stupidity of the liberals internationally, by asking the United States government to intervene to prevent the complete seizure of power by the Chamorro forces, who—under the guidance of two big Wall Street banks, Brown Brothers and Seligman and company—last week seized the Nicaraguan president, a liberal, held him prisoner and forced him to turn over the government under threats of execution if he failed to yield.

The troops of Chamorro, under command of one Major Carter, are continuing to occupy various centers in the western part of the country. Along the eastern coast, a separation movement is being begun in opposition to Chamorro.

A. N. L. C. TAKES STAND AGAINST COLONIAL RULE

Calls for International Race Congress

In a resolution that was adopted by the American Negro Labor Congress at one of its sessions meeting at the Metropolitan Community Center, 3118 Giles Ave., the attempts of the imperialists to enslave the workers of colonial countries was denounced and exposed.

It hailed Soviet Russia as the first power to establish race equality, socially, politically and economically. The congress also goes on record for the convening of an international race congress to discuss methods of combatting imperialism.

The following excerpts are taken from the resolution:

"Imperialism is the enslavement of the entire world by capitalist nations, bringing under their oppressive rule the 1,100,000,000 darker colored peoples in Asia, Africa, the Philippines, Mexico, Haiti, Porto Rico, San Domingo, Central and North America.

"From the colonies and semi-colonial regions the imperialist nations secure immense supplies of raw materials produced at a lower labor cost by reason of the inferior social, economic and political status forced upon the darker-skinned peoples.

"Here also they conscript recruits for the armies with which the imperialist nations wage war on one another, on Soviet Russia, on the colonial peoples themselves and on the working class.

"We hail the workers' and farmers' government of Soviet Russia as the first to bring into being the full social, political and economic equality for all peoples, white and dark-skinned.

"As a first step in connecting the struggles of our race in America with its world-wide struggle against imperialism, this congress of Negro workers and farmers instructs the National Executive Committee to convene a world congress of our race.

"It further instructs the American Negro delegates to this world congress to lay the foundations for a world organization of the workers and farmers of our race and to make this organization a leader and fighter in the liberation movements of all

BULLETIN

PARIS, Oct. 30.—General Sarrail was today ordered recalled from his post as high commissioner of Syria by the cabinet. No objections were raised as to his slaughter of the natives and non-christian inhabitants of Damascus, but his troops in their drunken orgy of slaughter ran amuk with their tanks and poured hot lead into houses of British and Americans.
